

978.3
R56h
v.2
1142444

M. L.

GENEALOGY COLLECTION

ALLEN COUNTY PUBLIC LIBRARY

3 1833 01066 7225

W. Richards
Huron Sd

HISTORY OF SOUTH DAKOTA

BY

DOANE ROBINSON

TOGETHER WITH

PERSONAL MENTION OF CITIZENS OF SOUTH DAKOTA

ILLUSTRATED

VOL. II.

1904
B. F. BOWEN & CO.
PUBLISHERS

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

1112141

A

Aaseth, John O.....	991	Bach, Christen J.....	1480	Billion, Thomas J., M. D.....	1454
Abeel, Orlin A.....	1711	Baer, Burnace W.....	1756	Bingham, George.....	1384
Abel, Edward L.....	1319	Baggaley, John.....	1369	Bird, William.....	1406
Abell, Gabriel W.....	1585	Bailey, Charles O.....	1819	Bischoff, Herman.....	1359
Abraham, Alfred.....	1453	Bailey, Dana R.....	1371	Black, Samuel C.....	1653
Abt, Frank.....	974	Bailey, George M.....	1649	Blackstone, Richard.....	1023
Adams, Francis D.....	1461	Bailey, Joseph M.....	1821	Blair, James C.....	1795
Adams, F. J.....	1433	Baird, John C.....	1159	Blair, Thomas C.....	1716
Adams, John E.....	1291	Baldrige, John.....	1597	Blake, Charles A.....	1777
Adams, J. F.....	1432	Baldwin, D. D.....	1548	Bliss, George W., M. D.....	1572
Adams, John Q.....	1535	Bale, George B.....	1520	Bobb, Earl V., M. D.....	971
Aisenbrey, Christian.....	1221	Barbier, Charles P.....	1102	Bockler, John H.....	1203
Alder, Alfred.....	989	Barkley, J. J.....	1842	Bolles, George.....	1453
Aldrich, Alva N.....	1600	Barlow, Edmund A.....	1509	Bonham, Willis H.....	1273
Alexander, Frank.....	1748	Barnhart, M. B.....	1322	Bonner, John R.....	1785
Alexander, Rudolph.....	1060	Barrett, C. Boyd.....	1282	Bonniwell, Phillip M.....	1723
Allen, Charles F.....	1443	Barrow, C. H.....	1902	Boorman, W. C.....	1890
Allen, Charles H.....	1288	Barth, Peter.....	1214	Bottum, Joseph H.....	1804
Amundson, Martin.....	1853	Bartlett, Clarence A.....	1399	Bottum, Roswell.....	1476
Anderson, C. J.....	1891	Bartow, Julius D.....	1519	Boucher, Lyman T.....	1745
Anderson, Henry O.....	1298	Basford, Orville S.....	1690	Boundey, J. E.....	1895
Anderson, John Q.....	1475	Baskerville, Marwood R.....	1120	Bouska, Very Rev. Em- manuel A.....	1213
Andrews, Nels C.....	1334	Baskin, James H.....	1079	Bowen, Wheeler S.....	1747
Andrews, Wellington J.....	970	Bassett, John C.....	1479	Bowler, John A.....	1188
Andrus, Henry C.....	1232	Bayne, William H.....	1202	Bowler, Michael F.....	1388
Apin, Frank P.....	1708	Beach, John N.....	1722	Bowman, Adelbert H., M. D.....	1361
Archambean, Lizziam.....	1150	Bean, John S.....	1003	Boyce, J. W.....	1900
Arneson, A. L.....	1867	Beatch, George.....	1163	Braatz, Carl.....	1717
Arthur, John W.....	1791	Beatty, John J.....	1556	Brakke, Nels J.....	990
Ash, B. C.....	1849	Beck, Elias S.....	1244	Brandon, Henry.....	1231
Ash, Henry C.....	1718	Beem, Isaac.....	1731	Brandt, Claus.....	1240
Atkinson, Samuel E.....	1415	Beem, Joseph.....	1634	Bras, Harry L.....	1171
Auld, Oliver P.....	1107	Beeman, Charles L.....	1015	Bratrud, Christen C.....	1192
Austin, Horace J.....	1088	Belding, John P.....	1293	Breed, George N.....	1437
Austin, Mrs. Rachel M. R.....	1089	Bell, John.....	1661	Bridges, Henry.....	1842
Avant, J. Franklin.....	1547	Bennett, David O.....	1523	Briggs, George C.....	1250
Ayres, George V.....	1313	Bennett, Granville G.....	1484	Briggs, Melville B.....	1763
Ayres, Thomas H.....	1421	Berdahl, Anfin J.....	972	Britzins, Jacob.....	1858
		Berg, Otto C.....	953	Brockman, N. J.....	1092
		Bibelheimer, John.....	1790	Brooks, John H.....	1589
		Biddle, William P.....	1843	Brown, Charles A., M. D.....	1001
		Biernatzki, Albert C.....	1096	Brown, Charles W.....	1635
		Biggins, Matthew.....	1816	Brown, Daniel.....	1351
		Billingshurst, Charles B.....	1446

B

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Brown, Hugh L.....	1634
Brown, John.....	1846
Brown, James M.....	1785
Brown, Richard F., M. D.....	1235
Bruell, William F.....	1562
Bruner, Vincent.....	1843
Buck, Edwin E.....	1567
Buckingham, George.....	1643
Buechler, C.....	1222
Buffaloe, Alonzo J., M. D.....	1110
Bullock, James L.....	1692
Bunning, Rev. Bernard H.....	1327
Burch, Herbert C., M. D.....	1296
Burdick, Frederick A.....	1815
Burgess, Lyman.....	1339
Burke, Charles H.....	1810
Burleigh, Walter A.....	969
Burnside, George W.....	1424
Burt, George K.....	1121
Burton, Silas.....	1051
Bushell, Thomas J.....	1146
Bushfield, John A.....	1796
Bushnell, William F. T.....	969
Butterfield, M. A.....	1571
Butts, C. M.....	961

C

Cabalka, Joseph.....	1355
Cahill, John C.....	1208
Cahill, Pierce.....	1126
Caldwell, Myron H.....	1677
Cale, Thomas.....	1834
Campbell, Albert W.....	1478
Campbell, B. F.....	1138
Campbell, Charles T.....	958
Campbell, Dyer H.....	1396
Campbell, James T.....	1229
Campbell, Malcolm C.....	1365
Campbell, Robert F.....	1497
Carey, Allen W.....	1553
Carlin, Douglas.....	1764
Carpenter, Aaron.....	1341
Carrigan, Denis.....	1721
Carroll, John H.....	1611
Catlett, Joseph W.....	1897
Cavalier, Louise.....	1838
Cave, Rev. W. A.....	1859
Chamberlain, Harry D.....	1462
Chamberlin, John.....	1053
Chandler, George T.....	1107
Chaney, Morris J.....	1381
Chap, Frank.....	1875
Chapman, H. N.....	1850
Chase, George J.....	1242
Chase, William H.....	1304

Chladek, Frank.....	1832
Christensen, Lars C.....	1048
Clagett, Moses H., M. D.....	1225
Clark, Arthur E.....	1779
Clark, James B.....	1416
Clark, S. Wesley.....	1744
Clark, William T.....	1390
Clarke, George A.....	1405
Clarke, William R.....	1228
Cleaver, John A.....	1380
Cleland, Peter C.....	1255
Clough, Alonzo E., M. D.....	1861
Clough, Solomon.....	1103
Clyborne, Louis H.....	1592
Cochrane, Wampler L.....	1277
Coe, Albert W.....	1362
Cole, Burnham W.....	1665
Coleman, Edwin G.....	1542
Cole, Jacob H.....	1205
Colgan, Arthur J.....	1549
Coller, Granville J., M. D.....	1799
Comstock, John F.....	1009
Conklin, Charles A.....	1802
Conklin, Sylvester J.....	1411
Connor, John.....	1836
Conway, Daniel J.....	1484
Conzett, James.....	1864
Cook, Edmund.....	1238
Coons, O. J.....	1860
Cooper, Henry T.....	1022
Cooper, Miles M.....	1302
Cord, George D.....	1000
Cordes, Henry C.....	1639
Corrigan, William F.....	1510
Cosand, Samuel W.....	1419
Cottle, Frank.....	1312
Cotton, Alonzo A., M. D.....	1378
Courts and Bar of the Black Hills.....	1123
Cowdin, Lafayette.....	1274
Cowen, E. D., D. D.....	1890
Coyle, Andrew L., M. D.....	972
Craig, Frank H.....	1161
Craig, William D.....	1511
Cramer, Isaac S.....	1734
Crane, Col. Frank.....	1316
Crary, Charles C.....	1724
Cross, Eugene E.....	963
Cross, Fred J.....	1715
Cross, Philetus N.....	1347
Cruikshank, Gregor.....	1301
Cull, Loomis S.....	1556
Cunningham, Michael.....	1838
Cunningham, Patrick.....	1869
Curran, Martin E.....	1377
Curtin, James.....	1652

Curtis, George W.....	1270
Curtis, Hiram H.....	1687
Cuthbert, Frederic T.....	1013

D

Dahlenburg, Frederick.....	1346
Dale, William T.....	1062
Daley, Rev. Charles M.....	1494
Dana, Ruel E.....	1083
Darling, Andrew D., D. D. S.....	1141
Darling, Floyd C.....	1266
Daugherty, John F.....	1838
Davis, Ivor D.....	1284
Davis, Park.....	1350
Day, Everett H.....	1681
Dean, Edgar.....	1013
Decker, John J.....	1226
DeMalignon, Henry R.....	1791
Dermody, Rev. Michael.....	1541
Derr, Chalkley H.....	1626
Derr, Chalkley W.....	1786
Dewell, Samuel G.....	1732
Dickerson, David.....	1613
Dickey, J. B., M. D.....	1851
Dickinson, Stanley B., M. D.....	1104
Dickson, James H.....	1074
Dimock, Warren.....	1222
Dirks, Peter B.....	1425
Dobson, John H.....	1320
Dodds, George A.....	1763
Doering, Gotthilf.....	1902
Dokken, O. C.....	1439
Donald, William R.....	1384
Donaldson, David W.....	992
Donnelly, James.....	996
Doolittle, William T.....	1826
Doten, Fred I.....	1267
Dott, Robert T., M. D.....	1321
Dougan, Allen D.....	1742
Dougherty, Michael J.....	1037
Douglass, James.....	1887
Douglass, Wesley.....	1095
Dow, Wallace L.....	1477
Doyle, J. M.....	1044
Drake, Frank W.....	1035
Dratzman, Joseph.....	1839
Dricken, Fred W.....	1402
Drips, J. V.....	1214
Driscoll, Robert H.....	985
duFram, Philip.....	1795
Duhamel, Peter.....	1647
Dunlop, Richard.....	973
Dunn, Aaron.....	986
Dunn, Christopher G.....	1326
Dutcher, Paul.....	1444

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Dwight, Theodore W.....1824
Dwyer, James H.....1380

E

Eakin, Charles L.....1569
Earl, Duncan.....1155
Eastman, David.....1353
Easton, Carroll F.....1344
Egeland, William.....1204
Elder, William S.....1363
Ellerman, John N.....1787
Ellis, William T.....1100
Elson, Joseph.....1768
Erlandson, C. A.....996
Everhard, William H., M. D. 1697
Everly, Louis.....1716
Everson, Ole W.....1254
Ewert, Adolph W.....1498
Ewing, James.....1209
Exon, James H.....1084

F

Fagan, John.....998
Fairbanks, David L.....1736
Farley, Luman B.....966
Fassett, Charles S.....1899
Faust, Emil.....978
Fee, James.....1837
Feeney, Andrew.....1787
Feeney, Michael.....1892
Feige, E. W., M. D.....1495
Feinler, Rev. Franz J.....1681
Felker, M. C., M. D.....1874
Fenelon, John J.....1758
Ferry, Henry L.....1342
Feyder, Charles.....1567
Field, Fredell E., D. D. S.....1517
Fierek, Rev. Edward M.....1145
Finch, Nelson L.....1201
Firey, John H.....1623
Fish, Adrian L.....1072
Fisk, Robert B.....1872
Fitch, Seymour N.....1725
Fitch, Thomas.....1127
Fleeger, Lewis L.....1685
Fleischer, Christian C., D.
D. S.....1187
Flynn, Rt. Rev. Thomas A.....1580
Foglesong, George D.....1494
Foley, Andrew P.....959
Folkhard, John J.....1305
Folkstad, Charles L.....1130
Foncanon, Charles B.....1210
Forest, Samuel E.....1379

Foss, L. William.....1137
Fossum, Albert W., D. D. S.....1262
Fossum, Andrew C.....1479
Fowler, Elijah P.....1069
Fowler, James W.....1318
Fowler, Oshea A.....1233
Fox, Marion L.....1574
Franklin, Harris.....1184
Fraser, Charles H.....1889
Frazee, John S., A. M., B. D. 1528
Frease, Milton.....1633
Freeman, John W.....980
Freidel, Henry.....1875
French, Rev. Calvin H., A.
M., D. D.....1760
Frier, Herman.....1333
Fry, Joel.....1536
Fry, William C.....1842
Fulford, George H., M. D.....1196
Fuller, Howard G.....1011
Fullerton, Thomas.....1707
Fulton, Rutherford H.....1217
Fylpaa, John A.....1770

G

Gaffy, Loring E.....1529
Gage, Luther E.....1030
Gallagher, Joseph P.....1565
Gamm, Edward C.....1139
Gannon, Frank B.....1469
Garey, Herman H.....1356
Gardner Brothers.....1033
Gardner, Milton D.....1016
Garvey, Thomas.....1870
Gerdes, Otto H., M. D.....1664
Getty, Daniel B.....1464
Geyer, I. M.....1880
Giddings, Calvin M.....1260
Giese, Augustus C.....1115
Gifford, A. James, M. D.....1179
Gifford, Oscar S.....1010
Gilbertson, Olaf.....1686
Girton, William W.....1578
Goddard, Thomas M.....1719
Goff, Joel W., A. M.....1063
Goldsmith, Delmont.....1031
Goodner, Ivan W.....1766
Goodrich, Frank D.....1532
Goodwin, James.....1866
Gordon, David S.....1164
Gordon, Robert.....1163
Graber, Joseph P.....1194
Graham, Rev. William I., D. D.....1832
Grantz, Otto P. T.....1291

Grattan, Orlando T.....1607
Gray, John.....1766
Graybill, Washington C.....1503
Green, Ansel T.....1285
Gregory, Thomas.....1025
Grier, Thomas J.....1248
Griffee, Abraham D.....1413
Griffin, Fred de K.....1410
Griggs, Clifton C.....1839
Gross, Cheney C., M. D.....1808
Gross, Evan F.....1806
Gross, John.....1227
Gross, Philip A.....1386
Grover, George.....1491
Grue, Crist.....1788
Guenther, Christoph.....1210
Gunderson, Carl J.....1206
Gunkle, Fred W.....1496
Guptill, Seymour A.....1017
Gyllenhammar, Frithiof
N. H.....1132

H

Haar, Frederick.....1219
Hacesky, Joseph.....1874
Hahn, H. W.....1504
Haines, Moses.....1275
Hall, James.....1694
Hall, J. L.....1610
Hall, Philo.....1485
Hall, William H.....1308
Halladay, J. F.....1429
Halley, James.....1643
Hamaker, J. E.....1103
Hamilton, George J.....1654
Hammerquist, Peter A.....1641
Hanschka, Edward O.....1660
Hansen, Niels E.....1436
Hansen, Torkel.....1538
Hanson, Olaus L.....1156
Hanstein, H. H., M. D.....980
Hanten, John B.....955
Hare, Joseph.....1398
Hare, Rt. Rev. William H.....1465
Harrington, Jerry T.....1667
Harris, Charles N.....1289
Harris, John L., M. D.....1714
Harris, T. J.....1198
Harris, Martin.....1151
Harrison, Charles M.....1666
Hart, John S.....1259
Hart, Thomas B.....1026
Hartgering, James.....1024
Hartly, Hugh.....1834
Hartmann, Christian.....1337

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Harvey, Albert S.....	1351	Hopkins, George S.....	1702	Jones, Daniel D.....	1253
Haskar, Henry	1052	Hopkins, James G.....	1397	Jones, Frederick A.....	1886
Hatch, Ira A.....	1734	Hopkins, Roy L.....	1807	Jones, Harry E.....	1207
Haugen, Nels	1678	Hoskin, Clinton D.....	1111	Jones, Henry M.....	1191
Hawkins, J. A.....	1865	Hove, John	964	Jones, Rev. Hugh H.....	1774
Hawkins, John R., M. D.....	1750	Howard, Charles A.....	1455	Jones, James G.....	1108
Hawkins, Robert C.....	1748	Howard, Charles K.....	1328	Jones, Morgan E.....	1251
Hayward, Clarence E.....	1896	Howard, Samuel M.....	1712	Jones, Richard R., M. D.....	1590
Hazel, C. J.....	1456	Howell, Samuel P.....	1789	Jones, Stephen V.....	1587
Hazeltine, Edward	1852	Hoy, Samuel A.....	1663	Jones, Thomas	1888
Headley, John S.....	1218	Huber, Joseph E.....	1050	Jones, William	1885
Healey, Patrick	1247	Hudson, E. E.....	1855	Judson, Havilah C.....	1561
Heath, Henry H.....	1249	Huff, Willard H.....	1241	Jumper, Samuel H.....	1467
Hedger, Samuel C.....	1474	Hughes, Richard B.....	1658
Hegeman Family	1398	Hulseman, John F., Jr.....	1518	K
Hegeman, Peter J.....	1489	Hunt, Daniel N.....	1728	Kaucher, Samuel	1870
Heidegger, Rev. James J.....	1708	Hunt, John E.....	1644	Kean, John T.....	1840
Heintz, Paul	1160	Hunt, George C.....	1637	Keeling, Charles M., M. D.....	1078
Hejl, Joseph	1029	Hunt, Washington J.....	1674	Kehm, Jacob L.....	1583
Helsted, Carl P.....	962	Huntington, Eugene	1487	Kelm, John	1783
Hemingway, E. E.....	1622	Huss, Frank	1882	Keith, Hosmer H.....	1177
Hemminger, Edward	1028	Hutchinson, George S.....	1759	Keith, I. A.....	1601
Heninger, Martin R.....	1283			Keliher, Maurice	1642
Henneous, A. H.....	1678	I		Kelley, Charles A.....	1792
Hepperle, Fred	1813	Ingalls, J. L.....	1860	Kenaston, Hampton R., M.
Herron, Frank G.....	1166	Ingersoll, A. H.....	1128	D
Herther, Philip H.....	1733	Ingerson, Jesse B.....	1033	Kennedy, Casper	1234
Hesnard, Theodore	1553	Inman, Darwin M.....	1693	Kennedy, Charles B.....	1581
Heston, John W.....	1628	Isaak, Salomon	1782	Kerr, Robert F.....	1620
Hickox, Jay R.....	1701	Irwin, Eugene F.....	1368	Kiley, J. W.....	1854
Higgins, Rev. J. R.....	1887			King, Mrs. Atlanta H.....	1550
Hinman, Delatus	1041	J		King, Charles C.....	1136
Hinseth, Stengrim	1332	Jackson, Franklin T.....	1481	King, John H.....	1117
Hill, Ira C.....	1172	Jackson, George S.....	1668	King, John H.....	1490
Hill, Robert, M. D.....	1776	Jackson, John H.....	1474	King, Patrick	1839
Hill, W. S.....	1093	Jacobs, Fred	1165	Kingsbery, Ira C.....	1671
Hoard, John G.....	1714	Jancik, John	1039	Kingsbury, Edgar J.....	1826
Hoattum, Henry	1865	Jarvis, George J.....	1756	Kingsbury, Rev. Lucius	1816
Hoebe, William	1325	Jennings, Rudolph D., M. D.....	1584	Kingsbury, Walter R.....	1518
Hoffman, George H.....	1771	Jewett, Charles A.....	1483	Kirsch, Nick	1112
Hokenstad, Ole	1837	Johnson, Alexander C.....	1489	Kiser, James A.....	1665
Holbrook, Dwight G.....	1751	Johnson, C. A.....	1878	Klindt, Henry	1215
Holcomb, Fred	1638	Johnson, Charles E.....	1331	Knicknerbocker, George C.....	1608
Holcomb, Algernon L.....	1646	Johnson, George F.....	1662	Koch, Herman	1836
Holcomb, Eugene	1866	Johnson, John O.....	1527	Koepsel, William	1054
Holden, R. H.....	1434	Johnson, Martin H.....	1304	Kohler, Alfred	1037
Holleman, William	1021	Johnson, P. S.....	1897	Korstad, Hans H.....	1445
Holman, John	1173	Johnson, Peter W.....	1877	Kozak, Frank	1869
Holmes, Albe	1751	Johnston, James M.....	1532	Kreber, Emil	1243
Holmes, Charles F.....	1470	Johnston, James W.....	1802	Kribs, P. D.....	1201
Holmes, Conrad L.....	1817	Johnston, William H.....	1119	Kroeger, Rev. William, M. D.....	1856
Holmgren, H., M. D.....	1893	Jolley, John L.....	1371	Krum, George W.....	1733
Holt, William H.....	1195	Jolly, Joseph	1644	Kubler, Joseph	1723
Holter, Jacob E.....	1034	Jones, Byron P.....	1106	Kutnewsky, John K., M. D.....	1511
Holter, Olaus E.....	1036			Kuhns, Albert J.....	1246
Hoover, Ben P.....	1514

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

L

Lacey, Rev. Ulysses G.....	1199
LaCraft, Orator H.....	1533
LaDick, Edward.....	1867
Lamb, D. L. P.....	1002
Lampert, J. George.....	1405
Landmann, Paul.....	1079
Lane, Thomas W.....	1574
Lane, Warren D.....	1278
Lange, Moritz A.....	1374
LaPlante, Louis.....	1704
Larson, Andrew.....	1352
Larson, Methias.....	1877
Lashley, Emory C.....	1268
Lattin, George W.....	1602
Laughlin, John W.....	1447
Laughlin, Lemuel B.....	1512
Laurin, Peter.....	1298
Law, Thomas J.....	1526
Lawrence, Aubrey.....	1435
Lawson, James M.....	1467
Lawyer, J. C., M. D.....	1101
Leandreux, Alexander.....	1737
Leaning, C. W.....	998
LeBlond, Horace W.....	1038
LeCocq, Frank, Jr.....	1710
LeCount, Wallace S.....	1198
LeMay, John H.....	1060
Lemmon, Thomas P.....	1529
Lennan, Charles E.....	1735
Leonard, Joseph P.....	1116
LePlante, Alexander.....	1048
Levinger, Ludwig.....	1505
Levinger, Moriz.....	1884
Lewis, Martin J.....	1018
Liddle, Charles T.....	1598
Liddle, John T.....	1599
Lien, Burre H.....	1818
Lien, Jonas H.....	1822
Lincoln, Isaac.....	1216
Lindley, S. M.....	1849
Lindquist, A. W.....	1176
Link, Rev. Lawrence.....	992
Linn, Arthur.....	1422
Lilly, William J.....	1410
Locke, Clayton W., M. D.....	967
Lockwood, Frank B.....	1564
Long, T. B.....	1887
Longstaff, John.....	1778
Lord, L. K.....	1379
Lostutter, L. L.....	1605
Loveland, Thomas Q.....	1630
Lowe, Wiley V.....	1566
Lum, Charles A.....	1393
Lucas, Sherman F.....	1800

Lund, John H.....	1397
Lundin, Andrew H.....	1272
Lundquist, D. E. A.....	988
Lvatos, Frank.....	1869
Lynum, Peter.....	1569
Lyon, Leander D.....	960
Lyons, R. F.....	1890

M

Mach, Vencel.....	1867
Madden, James.....	1591
Madill, Alexander.....	1568
Madsen, Truels.....	1400
Mallery, John E.....	1375
Mansheim, Henry.....	1844
Mariner, Frank C.....	1653
March, Douglas W.....	1502
Martin, Eben W.....	1575
Martin, Ezra.....	1657
Martin, John W.....	976
Martin, L. H.....	1891
Martin, Patrick.....	1878
Martin, Samuel H.....	1309
Martin, William H.....	1186
Marvick, Andrew.....	1131
Mason, Albert.....	1706
Mason, Walter F.....	1290
Masters, George E.....	1097
Mathews, Hubert B.....	1613
Mathieson, Richard W.....	1401
Mattison, Fay.....	1876
Maupin, Harry H.....	1348
Mawhiney, John J.....	1843
May, Ernest.....	1264
Maytum, Wellington J., M. D.....	1183
McArthur, Charles A.....	1477
McCain, Clarence O.....	1638
McCarthy, J. C.....	1861
McCaughey, John J.....	1387
McClure, Pattison F.....	1500
McColum, Mrs. Phoebe L.....	1502
McCormack, Samuel.....	1847
McCoy, James H.....	1276
McCrossan, Bernard C.....	1488
McDonald, Charles W.....	1156
McDougall, John E.....	1382
McDowell, Robert E.....	1493
McGaan, William.....	1452
McGee, Levi.....	1543
McGillivray, Duncan A.....	1677
McIntosh, Robert L.....	1878
McKeever, Patrick W.....	1145
McKibben, Joseph A.....	1896
McKinney, Charles E.....	1821
McLane, J. E.....	1861

McLaughlin, James H.....	1624
McLeod, Charles J.....	1480
McMillan, Andrew P.....	1632
McNulty, Frank.....	1137
McQuillen, James.....	1271
McVay, John C.....	1188
Meacham, H. T.....	1805
Meier, John.....	1045
Mentch, George W.....	1615
Mentele, Louise M.....	1857
Merager, Ole S., M. D.....	1901
Merrill, Charles W., B. S.....	982
Mesick, Oliver E.....	1414
Metcalf, Homer A.....	1138
Mettler, Christoph.....	1224
Meyer, William.....	1299
Meyers, Solomon D.....	1839
Michaels, John.....	958
Milburn, J. A., M. D.....	1863
Miles, Leroy D.....	1828
Miller, George W.....	1588
Miller, James J.....	1868
Miller, Joseph C.....	956
Millett, Charles L.....	1430
Milligan, Albert F.....	1478
Miner, Ephraim.....	1903
Mitchell, Benjamin M.....	1406
Mitchell, George T.....	1121
Mitchell, Thomas O.....	1020
Mitchell, W. S.....	1848
Mix, Frederic A.....	1684
Monfore, Elmer W.....	1081
Monson, Elias.....	1129
Montgomery, W. L.....	1900
Moody, James C.....	1364
Moore, David.....	1426
Moore, Joseph B.....	1499
Moore, William.....	1106
Moosdorf, Ernest A.....	1814
Morehouse, George.....	1544
Morgan, William H.....	1261
Moriarty, Maurice.....	1512
Morris, Frank A.....	1774
Morris, Henry S.....	1237
Morris, Silas E.....	1560
Morris, William A.....	1458
Morse, James W.....	1814
Moscrip, Edward.....	1178
Mulcahy, M. Vincent, M. D.....	1369
Muller, Henry A.....	1901
Munro, John A.....	968
Murdy, Robert L., M. D.....	1200
Murphy, Edward J.....	1205
Murphy, Francis M.....	1280
Murphy, Isaac.....	1883
Murphy, John F.....	1404

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Murray, William I.1892
Mussman, Henry C.1360

N

Nash, Newman C.1011
Natwick, Herman H.1230
Nedved, Joseph J.1030
Nelson, James C.1029
Newbanks, Noah1648
Nichols, Rev. D. B.1046
Nichols, Ira L.1375
Nielsen, Ole1347
Nikodin, Joseph1860
Nikodyn, Frank1872
Noble, Henry1267
Noble, H. B., M. D.1486
Noble, William I.1537
Norby, A. J.1236
Norton, Charles L.1825
Notmeyer, William C.1373
Notson, Rev. Gary T.1486
Null, Thomas H.1698

O

Oakes, James A.1893
Oaks, Herbert D.1565
O'Brien, William S.1366
O'Flaherty, Rev. C. E.1695
O'Gorman, Rt. Rev. Thomas.1133
Oldham, Charles T.1868
O'Leary, Daniel1208
Oleson, Andrew H.1666
Oliver, Benjamin N.1561
Oliver, Stephen1834
Olwin, Anthony H.1287
O'Neil, Patrick H.1803
Orstad, Henry O.1864
Osbon, O. M.1354
Ostrander, George C.1113
O'Toole, Laurence J.1115
Overby, Samuel O.1773
Oviatt, Samuel W.1899
Owens, Mrs. Delia H.1563
Owens, Matthew1420

P

Packard, Harlan P.1563
Paine, George T.1551
Palmer, George W.1502
Palmer, W. L.1349
Papik, Joseph1875
Parker, Joel W.1392
Parker, William H.1354

Parlman, Edwin1881
Parlman, Ralph W.1882
Parnley, Russell G.1463
Parr, George D., D. D. S.1769
Parrott, J. H.1848
Parrott, Richard G.1007
Paterson, David1054
Pease, Addison H.1041
Pease, Lucius A.1676
Pederson, Rasmus1039
Peek, Lewis V.1197
Peever, T. H.1140
Peirce, Henry A.1204
Pendar, Oliver S.1192
Perkins, Henry E.1294
Perley, George A.1157
Perry, DeLoss1850
Perry, George S.1263
Person, Robert S.1180
Peterka, Joseph1356
Peterson, Jans P.1870
Peterson, Nel's H.1471
Peterson, Rasmus1844
Peterson, Svenning1835
Petterson, Edgar B.1875
Pettigrew, George A., M. D. 1019
Petrik, Joseph M.1216
Pfatzgraff, Philip1181
Phelps, Dudley C.1495
Phelps, Harry E.1382
Phelps, Henry E.1019
Phelps, John A.1675
Philip, James1824
Phillips, David1523
Phillips, Josiah L., M. D. 1516
Phillips, Thomas E.1823
Philp, Peter1118
Pickler, Mrs. Alice M. A. 1618
Pickler, John A.1616
Pierce, Charles F.1833
Pierce, P. L.1879
Pierson, Josiah A.1835
Pilcher, Joseph E.1727
Pinsonnault, Charles P. 1269
Platt, James E.1531
Plunkett, Matt1027
Pond, James H.1257
Ponsford, Joseph1032
Pope, Nathaniel1407
Porter, Clement F.1134
Porter, John M.1863
Potter, John T.1403
Power, Charles1352
Pratt, James L.1520
Price, John J.1061

Printup, David L.1385
Pryce, Orville U.1701
Pyle, John L.1672

Q

Quilty, Rev. William F.1135
Quinn, Michael1645

R

Radway, Edwin M.1871
Ramsdell, William H.1535
Randall, Charles A.1273
Ransom, Albert W.1496
Rasmusson, Peter O.1541
Read, Abram L.1270
Reddick, John E.1554
Reed, John Z.1894
Reed, Thomas1603
Rees, John J.1391
Reilly, J. T.1835
Reinholt, Peter C.1841
Resner, Jacob P.1070
Rice, Benjamin H.1258
Rice, Harvey J.1775
Rice, William G.1670
Richards, Richard O.1576
Rickert, J. A.1132
Riley, Fred J.1640
Riley, James956
Ring, Eugene E.1757
Ringsrud, Amund O.1691
Ripperda, Benjamin1858
Ritter, Frederick1165
Rix, Fred C.1047
Rix, George S.1040
Robb, John M.1762
Roberts, A. C.1894
Roberts, Robert D.1252
Robertson, David1659
Robinson, A. P.1055
Robinson, DeLorme W., M.
D.1482
Robinson, Robert O.1700
Robinson, William J.1168
Rock, H. J., M. D.1894
Rodabaugh, Elmer E.1439
Roddle, William H.1469
Roe, Orvin J.1780
Rosenkranz, Henry1367
Roth, John1281
Rounseville, R. A.1853
Rowlands, William J.1452
Royhe, Adam1854

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Russell, John H.	1662
Russell, Samuel W.	1449
Ryan, Francis W.	1797
Ryburn, William L.	1086

S

Sanford, John H.	1073
Sawyer, John F.	1457
Schaetzel, Jacob, Jr.	1147
Schaffer, Frank J.	1841
Schamber, Fred W.	1754
Schamber, Philip	1845
Scherer, John	1245
Schlachter, Nicholas J.	1412
Schmidt, E. R.	1318
Schmidt, Isaac	1338
Schmierer, John, Jr.	997
Schnaidt, Jacob	995
Schneider, Lewis V.	1094
Schoen, A. M. D.	1845
Schoof, William	1492
Schoonmaker, Francis H., M.

D.	1596
Schultz, John W.	1155
Schwarzwald, Samuel	1269
Scollard, John	1275
Seaman, Fred A.	1776
Searle, John K.	1265
Sears, Frank	1552
Sears, Herman V.	1459
Secomb, Rev. Charles	1312
Sedam, Robert T.	1256
Sedgwick, John W.	1711
Seeley, Charles E.	1043
Seymour, Arthur H.	1058
Shanafelt, Thomas M., D. D.	1482
Shannon, Junius W.	1122
Sharp, William A.	1683
Sheldon, Edward T.	1211
Sheldon, John H.	1823
Sheldon, Josiah	1169
Shepard, James H.	1394
Sheridan, John S.	1240
Sherin, A.	1110
Sherwood, Carl G.	1539
Sherwood, Carter P.	1431
Shoun, Vest P.	1559
Shouse, Hiram C., M. D.	1376
Sikmann, Bernart	1349
Simmons, John C.	1625
Simpson, James	1738
Sinon, Martin G.	1885
Skilling, Irving R.	1895
Skillman, Ernest D.	993
Slowey, Bernard	1332

Slowey, Patrick	1333
Smith, Albert	1847
Smith, Carey W.	1619
Smith, Daniel H.	1473
Smith, Frank P., M. D.	1011
Smith, Ira J.	1018
Smith, Richard L.	1149
Smythe, Homer S.	1530
Snow, George W.	1793
Snyder, Charles W.	1059
Solberg, Halvor C.	1649
Solberg, James	1594
Solem, Berns J.	1896
Somers, Herbert W.	1647
Somers, R. H.	1506
Soper, E. B., Jr.	1900
Spackman, Harry L.	1175
Spafford, Fred A., M. D.	1901
Spargo, John A.	983
Sparling, John E.	1418
Spaulding, Justin L.	1775
Spitler, Zechariah	1481
Springer, Edward H.	1306
Spurrill, George	1167
Stainbrook, Isaac	976
Stanage, James	1351
Starcher, Edwin M.	1417
Stearns, Royal B.	1056
Stearns, W. F.	999
Stecher, Thomas F., D. D.	1549
Steele, Albert	984
Steere, Alton E.	1534
Steffens, Albert H., M. D.

D. D. S.

D. D. S.	1224
Stehly, Joseph J.	1765
Stenger, Edward	1726
Stephens, Charles A.	1886
Stephens, James H.	1846
Stevens, E. F.	1893
Stevens, Rev. S. H.	1777
Stevens, Thomas A.	1508
Stewart, James A.	1730
Stewart, James L., M. D.	1335
Still, Alfred H.	1685
Stillwill, Charles H.	1144
Stillwill, Charles M.	1142
Stokes, D. G.	1593
Stokes, William H.	1111
Stoller, John	1812
Stoughton, John C.	1008
Straks, Rev. Henry, A. M.	1448
Strater, John W.	1555
Strunk, Henry	1895
Stuart, Thomas M.	1390
Stuver, Aaron S.	1460
Sullivan, Boetious H.	1605

Sullivan, David F., M. D.	1505
Sumner, Gaylord E.	1709
Sutter, John B.	1307
Swartz, Orlando P.	1049
Sweeney, Thomas	1632
Swenson, Ole S.	967
Syverson, Emil A.	1525

T

Talsma, Rein	1343
Taubman, T. W.	1867
Taylor, Morrison A., M. D.	1099
Taylor, Thomas H.	1497
Teed, T. S.	1471
Tenneson, Alfred	1206
Thayer, Horace E.	1006
Thielman, Vale P.	1573
Thomas, D. C.	1862
Thompson, Charles K.	1153
Thompson, Elisha K.	1162
Thompson, Frank F.	1262
Thompson, John R., M. D.	1656
Thompson, Orville W.	1427
Thompson, T. J.	1862
Thompson, Thomas W.	1310
Thornby, William J.	1357
Thorne, Albion	1570
Thorp, Gustavus C.	1389
Thorson, Andrew	1476
Thorson, Thomas	1014
Thronson, John A.	1525
Throop, Albert E.	1441
Tidrick, Charles D.	1507
Tiffany Brothers	1266
Tiffany, Fred L.	1749
Tiffany, O. M.	1266
Tiffany, W. J.	1266
Todd, Isaac J.	1323
Todd, John B. S.	989
Tompkins, Walter F.	1538
Torrence, Chester C.	1071
Toy, Edward C.	1386
Tracy, Erwin J.	1193
Traverse, Barney	1902
Treon, Frederick, M. D.	1513
Trimmer, George M.	1680
Truman, Philetus C.	1612
Trygstad, Cornelius	1902
Tschetter, Jacob	1669
Tubbs, Newton S.	1741
Tucker, Henry C.	1005
Turkopp, William H., M. D.	1176
Turner, John L.	1076
Turney, Charles F.	1863
Turve, Anthony G.	1451

INDEX TO CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

Tyler, F. D.....1892
 Tyler, Lawrence S.....1329
 Tyler, Levi S.....1190
 Tyson, Frederick1895

U

Uecker, Carl1880
 Ugofsky, Michael1236
 Uhrich, John B.....1179
 Unruh, Rev. Heinrich P....1336

V

Valentine, William B.....1065
 Van De Mark, Frank E.....1674
 Van Metre, Arthur C.....1408
 Varnum, Rev. Joseph B.....1798
 Venecek, John1876
 Vetter, Anton V.....1694
 Vetter, John S.....1286
 Vincent, Christopher S., M.
 D.1689
 Voll, William1844
 Voorhees, Samuel T.....1295

W

Wade, N. M., M. D.....1898
 Wagner, Edward E.....1087
 Wait, Levi D.....1081
 Waldron, Charles W.....1472
 Waldron, George P.....1440
 Walker, Benjamin L.....1148

Walker, Delbert T953
 Wallis, S. R., M. D.....1889
 Walpole, William1317
 Waltner, Andrew J.....1227
 Walts, Cyrus1231
 Wangsness, Marcus H.....965
 Wangsness, Thomas964
 Ward, F. B.....1548
 Warren, C. P1898
 Warren, Rev. Henry K., M.
 A., I.L.D.....1066
 Watkins, Samuel P.....1651
 Wattson, Bert G.....1515
 Weaver, Archie959
 Weaver, John R.....1757
 Webb, Frank W1428
 Weddell, Charles1239
 Weedon, Charles K.....1272
 Wegener, Joseph1876
 Welsh, Mahlon1635
 Wenke, John G.....1297
 Wertherer, Joseph1880
 West, John E.....1257
 Westfall, John1851
 Wheeler, Foster F.....1888
 Wheelock, E. D.....1152
 Whitbeck, Almon C.....1462
 White, Norman D.....1042
 Whiting, Charles S.....1595
 Wickheim, P. F.....1091
 Wickre, Hans O.....1746
 Wicks, Frederick D.....1075
 Williams, Andrew G.....1408
 Williams, Morris M.....1762

Williams, Richard1655
 Williams, William H.....1817
 Williamson, George N.....1279
 Williamson, John H.....1577
 Williamson, Rev. John P....1702
 Willrodt, Lawrence H.....1183
 Willson, Mordecai, M. D....997
 Wilmarth, Albert W.....1696
 Wilson, Edward H.....1324
 Wilson, E. S.....1889
 Wilson, John E. C.....1522
 Wilson, James W.....1627
 Wise, Wilson1528
 Wipf, Andreas A., M. D....1219
 Wipf, Joseph W.....1220
 Witte, August C.....1558
 Wixson, Eli B.....1720
 Wolcott, W. B.....1679
 Wood, Chauncey L.....1557
 Wood, George A.....1692
 Wood, Lewis E.....1458
 Wood, Willis R.....1194
 Woods, James M.....1636
 Woods, Richard J.....1830
 Wyman, F. D.....1067

Y

Young, Sutton E.....1105

Z

Zietlow, John L. W.....1752
 Zitka, Joseph1143

A. A. Berg

CHAPTER CIII—CONTINUED.

PERSONAL MENTION OF CITIZENS OF SOUTH DAKOTA.

OTTO C. BERG, who is now serving his second term as secretary of state of South Dakota, is one of the prominent and influential citizens of the commonwealth and has here maintained his home for more than a score of years, so that he is entitled to the distinction of being classed among the pioneers of this favored section of our great national domain. Mr. Berg comes of stanch Norseland lineage and is himself a native of Norway, having been born in Brottum, Ringsager, on the 10th of September, 1849, and being a son of Christian T. and Christence Berg, who are both now dead. The subject secured his educational training in the excellent national schools of his native land and instituted his independent career by securing a clerkship in a general store at Lillehammer, later becoming bookkeeper in a wholesale establishment at Drammen. In 1873 he came to America and located in Wisconsin, becoming one of the prominent citizens of Norwalk, Monroe county, where he served as postmaster and also held the office of county clerk. In 1883 he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up his abode in Northville, Spink county, where he engaged in the general merchandise business, building up a prosperous enterprise in the line. For six years he served as clerk of the circuit and county courts, manifesting an active concern in public affairs and early becoming one of the leaders in the ranks of the Republican party of the state. In 1900 he was elected secretary of state and was chosen as his own successor in 1902, so that he is incumbent of this responsible and exacting office at the time of this writing. He is a leading Republican and takes a deep interest in the furtherance of the principles and policies of the party. His religious faith is that of the Lutheran church, while Mrs. Berg and family are devoted members of the Congregational church. Externally he is affiliated with Redfield Lodge, No. 34, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Redfield; Redfield Chapter, No. 20, Royal Arch Masons; South Dakota Consistory, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite Masons, in Aberdeen; and Northville Lodge, No. 36, Ancient Order of United Workmen, at Northville.

On the 1st of May, 1879, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Berg to Miss Edith O. Rowe, who was born at Coldspring, Jefferson county, Wisconsin, being a daughter of David R. Rowe, an influential citizen of that place. Of this union have been born three children, Edna Mathea, who died January 8, 1904, at the age of twenty-three years; Christine, who died in infancy, and Paul B., who is sixteen years of age at the time of this writing, in 1904.

DELBERT T. WALKER, superintendent of schools for Codington county and proprietor of the Watertown Commercial College, is a native of the Hawkeye state, having been born in Mount Auburn, Benton county, Iowa, on the 25th of July, 1867, and being a son of George H. and Julia S.

(Gillette) Walker, the former of whom was born in England and the latter in the state of Connecticut, while they were numbered among the pioneers of Benton county, Iowa, where they still maintain their home, the father of our subject having been formerly engaged in farming and in mercantile pursuits, while for nearly a decade and a half he has served as postmaster at Mount Auburn, being one of the honored and influential citizens of the county. He came to America in 1843, and was a resident of Iowa at the time of the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion. He signalized his loyalty to the land of his adoption, since, in 1862, he enlisted as a private in Company G, Thirteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he was in active service until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge. He participated in many of the most notable battles of the great conflict, having been a member of General Grant's forces at Chattanooga and Vicksburg, while later he took part in the Atlanta campaign and accompanied Sherman on the ever memorable march to the sea.

The subject, who is the only child of his parents, completed the curriculum of the public schools of his native town, being graduated in the Mount Auburn high school as a member of the class of 1887, while later he completed courses in the commercial and normal departments of the Cedar Rapids (Iowa) Business College, being graduated in each. He also was for a time a student in the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, but did not complete a course. Mr. Walker began teaching at the age of eighteen years, and in 1890 came to Watertown, to accept the position of principal of the commercial college here, retaining the incumbency for a period of five years; after which he was for one year principal of the Curtis Business College, in St. Paul, Minnesota. He then returned to his native town, where he was principal of the public schools for one and one-half years, when he resigned and returned to Watertown, purchasing the Watertown Commercial College, which he has since conducted, having greatly amplified the functions and usefulness of the institution and brought it up to the highest standard of excellence in all its departments. He was elected county superintendent of schools in 1900, and that his course met with popular endorsement was shown in his re-election, in 1902, without opposition. He is enthusiastic in his work, a careful and conscientious executive, and has done much to further educational interests in the county. He is a member of the board of trustees of the public library of Watertown and took an active part in securing the donation for the new Carnegie library, which is to be erected in the near future, at a cost of fifteen thousand dollars.

Professor Walker is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and fraternally is prominently identified with the Masonic order and the Knights of Pythias. In the former he has completed the round of the York Rite bodies, including the commandery of Knights Templar, while he has served as worshipful master of the blue lodge, and as recorder of Watertown Commandery, No. 7, Knights Templar, and keeper of records and seals of Trishocotyn Lodge, No. 17, Knights of Pythias, having held the latter office ever since he was constituted a Knight of Pythias with the exception of an interval of six months, while in 1893 he represented the local Masonic lodge in the grand lodge of the state, at Deadwood, and has thrice been a delegate to the grand lodge of the Knights of Pythias in South Dakota.

On the 25th of July, 1892, Professor Walker was united in marriage to Miss May A. Slattery, who was born in Ohio, being a daughter of David A. and Margaret (Jones) Slattery, the former now deceased and the latter is now a resident of Watertown, South Dakota. She had been a successful teacher in the public schools of South Dakota prior to her marriage. Professor and Mrs. Walker have two children, Blaine E. and Hazel M.

Watertown Commercial College was established in 1887. The school enrolls from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five pupils per year and is adding from fifteen to twenty per cent. increase each year. The courses are commercial, shorthand and typewriting, and normal.

JOHN B. HANTEN, an eminent attorney of Watertown, Codington county, is a native of Minnesota, having been born on a farm in Scott county, January 20, 1859. He is a son of Henry and Anna M. (Leas) Hanten, who were born in Luxemburg, Germany. Henry Hanten was a man of erudition and sterling character, and was for a number of years engaged in teaching, in colleges and public schools, while finally he engaged in agricultural pursuits in Minnesota, whence he came to Watertown, South Dakota, shortly prior to his death, which here occurred on the 28th of March, 1882, at which time he was fifty-two years of age. He was graduated in the institute at Luxemburg and later completed a four years' course of study in the university at Charles LeRoy, France. He was a son of Jean and Susanna (Thobes) Hanten, the former having been a prosperous farmer in Luxemburg, Germany, where he passed his entire life, his son, the father of the subject, having come to America in 1854.

John B. Hanten accompanied his parents to Germany when seven years of age, and in the excellent schools of that land received his early education, having been graduated in the gymnasium at Larochette as a member of the class of 1873, and thereafter taking a post-graduate course in Luxemburg, Germany, where he remained until 1874, when he returned to the United States and in 1878 located at Kranzburg, Codington county, South Dakota, where he was conducting a hotel until 1884, when he engaged in the hardware business in that town. In 1886 he was appointed clerk of the district court, and thereupon disposed of his business in Kranzburg and took up his residence in Watertown. He held this incumbency for six years, within which interval he had devoted much time to the reading of law, and in the fall of 1892 he was admitted to the bar of the state, having thoroughly grounded himself in the science of jurisprudence. On the 23d of December, 1893, Mr. Hanten was appointed receiver of the United States land office in Watertown, remaining in tenure of this office until March 17, 1898, when he resumed the practice of his profession, in which he has met with distinctive success. In the fall of the same year he was elected to represent his district in the state senate, serving one term, while he was the candidate of his party for a second term, in 1900, but met defeat which attended the party ticket in general throughout the state. He has ever been a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, in whose cause he has been an active and effective worker. Mr. Hanten is at the present time president of the Business Men's Union, of Watertown, and likewise one of its directors. He served four years as a member of the National Guard of South Dakota, being raised to the rank of sergeant, while later he was assistant chief of supplies, with rank of major, on the staff of ex-Governor A. C. Mellette. He is identified with the Catholic Order of Foresters, in which he is state chief ranger at the time of this writing, having held the office from the time of the organization of the order in the state, in 1900. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church, being members of Immaculate Conception church, in whose work they take an active interest. Mr. Hanten was one of the organizers of the Watertown State Bank, of which he is president, and he ever shows a deep interest in all that makes for the progress and material prosperity of his home city and state. In 1878 his father purchased a large tract of railroad land in what is now South Dakota, and several of his sons, including the subject, came here to do their part in settling and developing the country, encountering the varied experiences and vicissitudes of pioneer life on the plains.

At Kranzburg, this state, on the 25th of January, 1881, Mr. Hanten was united in marriage to Miss Margaret A. Kranz, daughter of Matthew and Margaretha (Ludwig) Kranz, both of whom were born and reared in Germany, whence they emigrated to Minnesota, and then to South Dakota, being numbered among the first settlers of Codington county, while the town of Kranzburg was named in honor of Mr. Kranz. Mrs. Hanten was born at New Trier, Dakota county, Minnesota, on the 2d of July, 1862. The subject and his wife are the parents of nine children, namely: Henry M., assistant cashier and bookkeeper in the State Bank; Margaret; Louisa; John H.; Mary; Helen; Matthew W.; Eleonora and Raphael E.

JOSEPH C. MILLER, the pioneer lumber dealer of the attractive city of Watertown, was born in the province of Ontario, Canada, on the 22d of July, 1847, being a son of Frederick and Catherine (Near) Miller, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in the state of Pennsylvania, his father having been a clergyman of the Lutheran church and a man of exalted character and marked ability. He died in 1881 and his devoted wife passed into eternal rest in 1845. The subject received his early education in the common schools of Wisconsin, whither his father had removed in 1849, and he then supplemented this discipline by a course of study in a business college in the city of Milwaukee, where he was graduated in 1865. Thereafter he was employed as clerk in connection with the great lumber industry in that state until 1867, when he removed to Minnesota, where he continued to be identified with the lumber business until 1878, when he came to Watertown, Dakota territory, where he opened the first lumber yard in the village, which then had a population of about twenty inhabitants. He has shown distinctive energy and enterprise, and the scope of his business has increased with the growth and development of the city and county, and has now reached large proportions, his yards being well equipped with all kinds of lumber and building material, while his trade extends throughout a wide radius of country tributary to the city of Watertown, which is now a thriving town of five thousand population.

Mr. Miller has ever been found staunchly arrayed in support of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose work he has taken an active part. He was elected to represent his district in the state senate in 1893, and made an excellent record in the general assembly, serving for the regular term of two years and to the satisfaction of his constituents and the public in general. He is at the present time a member of the board of education of Watertown. He and his wife are prominent and zealous members of the Lutheran church, and he is at the present time a member of its board of trustees, in which capacity he has served for six years.

On the 3d of September, 1873, at Winona, Minnesota, Mr. Miller was united in marriage to Miss Lena Kissling, who was born in that state, being a daughter of Jacob Kissling. Mr. and Mrs. Miller have six children, namely: Lottie, Walter, Joseph, Lena, Ella and Flora.

JAMES RILEY, one of the leading business men of Watertown and senior member of the firm of Riley & Cook, manufacturers and dealers in harness, saddlery, etc., is a native of Monmouth county, New Jersey, and the son of Bernard and Elsie (Keough) Riley, the father born in Ireland, the mother in New York, the latter a descendant of one of the old Dutch families of the Empire state. James Riley was born August 1, 1848, and at the age of six years was taken to Missouri, where he lived until a youth of fourteen, the meanwhile receiving a common-school education, and on leaving home in 1862 entered upon a three-years apprenticeship in Jefferson City to learn harness-making. After serving his time and becoming a skillful workman, he accompanied his parents to Omaha, Nebraska, and there followed his chosen calling until 1868, when he changed his location to Missouri Valley, Iowa, at which place he remained with his parents until their respective deaths. From Iowa Mr. Riley, in 1875, went to Yankton, South Dakota, and after working at his trade in that city for two years, came to Codington county in 1877 and settled on government land a short distance north of the present site of Kampeska, where he in addition to filing on a homestead also took up a tree claim. In 1880 he engaged in the manufacture and sale of harness at Watertown, his establishment being the first of the kind in the place. To this line of business he has since devoted his attention, although for a few years he resided on a farm, of which he is still the possessor, using it of recent years more as a summer resort than as a source of income. His business career has been eminently prosperous, he having secured an extensive patronage and his establishment is now one of the leading business stands in the city.

When Mr. Riley filed on his first homestead in Codington county the nearest town was Canby, fifty miles away, and he was obliged to travel over the modest distance of twenty-four miles to communicate with his closest neighbor, though C. C. Wiley and O. S. Jewell (now deceased) accompanied him in May, 1877, and all took land on Lake Kampeska. When the county was organized he was appointed sheriff, and it fell to him to make the first arrest, which was of the man who committed the first murder within his jurisdiction.

Mr. Riley has been actively identified with public affairs ever since the county's organization and has done much to advertise the advantages of his part of the state to the world and induce a substantial and thrifty class of people to make it their permanent place of abode. In addition to his large and steadily growing business in Watertown he has extensive real-estate interests in the county, owning four hundred acres of fine farm and grazing land, much of which is under cultivation, the rest being devoted to live stock. He is a leading spirit in the Odd Fellows fraternity at Watertown, having held every office within the power of the local lodge to confer and in addition to the title of past noble grand, which he now bears, he is also past chief patriarch of the order. He is a Congregationalist in religion, being a zealous member of the First church at Watertown and a trustee of the same.

Mr. Riley was married at Owatonna, Minnesota, March 6, 1884, to Miss Helen Coggsell, who was born in 1857, near Owatonna, when Minnesota was still a territory. Mrs. Riley is the daughter of Amos and Harriet (Clark) Coggsell and a descendant of old colonial stock that figured in the early history of New England and in the war of the Revolution. Her father was born September 29, 1825, in New Hampshire, was a lawyer by profession and for a number of years acted as attorney for the general land office at Washington, D. C. Subsequently he migrated to Minnesota, with the early public affairs of which state he became prominently identified, having been one of the leading members of the constitutional convention and in 1860 represented his county in the lower house of the general assembly. He served a number of years in that body, was speaker of the house from 1872 to 1875 inclusive, and later was elected to the senate, besides holding other offices, among which was that of probate judge of Steele county. He was a son of Francis Coggsell, also a lawyer, and the father of the latter was Col. Amos Coggsell, who held a commission in the American army during the war of the Revolution and who at one time was presented with a beautiful sword by General Washington, in recognition of his bravery in battle. This weapon is now in possession of Mr. Riley, who prizes it as a precious heirloom. Mrs. Riley and her sister, Abby, now the wife of M. T. McCrady, of Owatonna, Minnesota, located homesteads on the edge of Kampeska Lake, ten miles north of Watertown, in 1878, and lived on their respective claims for a period of five years and six months, proving up on the same and receiving patents from the government. They experienced many vicissitudes and hardships during that time, suffered much from cold in winter seasons, but, determined to hold their lands, they persevered in their purpose until, as stated above, deeds for the same were safely in their possession. Both Mr. and Mrs. Riley are descended from pioneer stock, their respective ancestors from the Revolutionary period to the present time having steadily moved westward and figured in the frontier history of many states and territories. They have had three children, only one of whom, a daughter by the name of Helen Irene, is living; the other two were Amos C., who departed this life at the age of six years, and James C., who died in infancy.

In politics Mr. Riley is a Republican and has long been one of the party's leaders in Codington county. While zealous in upholding his principles and untiring in his efforts to promote the success of the ticket, he is not a partisan in the sense of seeking office, being too deeply absorbed in his business affairs to devote much time to his own political interests.

CHARLES T. CAMPBELL, born Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, 1823. Served in Mexican war and Rebellion; was made brigadier general by President Lincoln for bravery in action. Came to Dakota in 1866. Prominent in Democratic politics. Lived at Scotland, and died in 1895.

JOHN MICHAELS, one of the prominent citizens and honored pioneers of Codington county, is a native of Mecklenburg, Germany, where he was born on the 29th of March, 1843, being a son of John and Minnie (Schroeder) Michaels, who passed their entire lives in the fatherland, the former having been there identified with agricultural pursuits during the major portion of his life. The subject received his educational training in the excellent schools of his native land, and thereafter followed farming there until 1866, when he severed the ties which bound him to home and fatherland and set forth to seek his fortune in the new world. On July 1st of that year he was united in marriage to Miss Lena Dahl, who accompanied him to America, and who has proved to him a devoted wife and helpmeet. He located in Dodge county, Wisconsin, becoming the owner of a good farm, but meeting with such reverses during the financial panic of 1873-4 that he was finally compelled to dispose of his property at a great sacrifice. In 1881, in the hope of recuperating his resources, he came with his family to what is now the state of South Dakota and located in Codington county, where he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of railroad land, twelve miles north of Watertown, which was then a mere hamlet of a few primitive houses. He was very successful in his efforts, in which he had the assistance of his sons, and in time became the owner of one and one-quarter sections of land, while he made the best improvements on the property and in time became one of the most prosperous and influential farmers and stock growers of the county in which he had settled as a pioneer. He has retained in his possession four hundred acres of his land, the remainder being now in the possession of his sons. Mr. Michaels continued to reside on his ranch until 1897 when he removed to Watertown, where he has an attractive modern residence, at 220 Elm street. Upon coming to town he became associated in the clothing business, as previously noted under the firm name of Nelson & Michaels, and they have a finely equipped establishment at the corner of Kemp and Maple streets, carrying a large and complete stock of clothing, men's furnishing goods, etc., and catering to an extensive and appreciative trade. The firm also have a branch store at Clark, in the county of the same name, and this also controls an excellent business.

Mr. Michaels is a man of sterling integrity, marked individuality and much business acumen, and he has ever shown a lively interest in the welfare of the county and state of his adoption. He served for six years as a member of the board of county commissioners, being an uncompromising Republican in his political proclivities, and in 1894 he was elected to represent Codington county in the state legislature, where he made an excellent record, being chosen as his own successor in 1896. Since that time he has been practically retired from public affairs, though he still manifests much interest in the questions and issues of the hour. He and his wife are prominent members of the German Lutheran church and take an active part in the various departments of its work.

Mr. and Mrs. Michaels are the parents of five children, concerning whom we offer the following brief data in conclusion of this sketch: Herman is a member of the clothing firm of Nelson & Michaels; Anna is the wife of Henry Stein, of Codington county; John R.; Max C., who married Miss Ella Weber, is a clergyman of the Lutheran church and is pastor of the churches at Henry, Grover and Carrollton; Frank B. is superintendent of the branch store maintained by the firm of Nelson & Michaels at Clark.

ARCHIE WEAVER, one of the pioneer merchants and highly esteemed citizens of Watertown, was born in Dayton, Ohio, on the 10th of December, 1855, being a son of Jacob and Louisa Weaver. The father died when the subject was but two years of age, and the latter secured his early educational training in the common schools of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin. He was early thrown on his own resources, so that he stands as the architect of his own fortunes, having gained success by worthy means and by close application and hard work. For some time prior to coming to the territory of Dakota he was engaged in general merchandising in the city of Grand Rapids, Wisconsin. He came thence to Watertown in 1879, becoming one of the early settlers of the town, and here he established a small general store, which figured as the nucleus of his present large and profitable business enterprise. He was one of the first merchants of the town, and has at all times shown a public-spirited interest in its progress and material prosperity. In politics he gives his support to the Democratic party, and fraternally is identified with the local organizations of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He has an attractive residence in the eastern division of the city, and is the owner of other real estate, including his place of business, which is a two-story structure of brick.

At twenty-five years of age Mr. Weaver was united in marriage to Miss Clara M. Clark, who was born in Iowa. Her father died when she was but a child, and her mother subsequently became the wife of D. C. Thomas, and now resides in Watertown. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver became the parents of three children: Guy died in infancy, and Florence E. and Franklin L. still remain at the parental home.

ANDREW P. FOLEY, one of the sterling citizens and progressive business men of Watertown, Codington county, comes of stanch Irish lineage and is a native of the beautiful capital city of Wisconsin, where he was born on the 13th of January, 1859, being a son of Matthew and Mary (Gahen) Foley, both of whom were born and reared in Dublin, Ireland. They came to America about 1849, and the father of Andrew P. Foley located in Dane county, Wisconsin, where he became a farmer, while his sterling characteristics made him one of the popular and honored citizens of that section. Both he and his wife died in Wisconsin, and they are survived by their four sons and three daughters.

Andrew P. Foley was reared to manhood in his native state, and received his educational discipline in the parochial and public schools. At the age of sixteen years he entered upon an apprenticeship at the blacksmith trade, becoming a skilled workmen. He continued to follow the work of his trade in Wisconsin and Minnesota until 1880, when he came to South Dakota and took up his residence in Watertown, which then had a population of about one thousand persons. Soon after his arrival he established a horse-shoeing shop, which he conducted successfully for several years. For the past three years he has also done an excellent business in the handling of agricultural implements and machinery, carriages, buggies, wagons, etc. He is endowed with the alert mentality and business acumen so characteristic of the race, and has so effectively ordered his affairs as to have attained a position of independence, being one of the well-to-do citizens of the county. He is the owner of about two thousand acres of excellent farming land in Codington and Hamlin counties, and derives good returns from his agricultural and stock-raising interests, while he also has a considerable amount of property in Watertown, including his place of business and also his fine residence, at the corner of Warner and Cottonwood streets.

In politics Mr. Foley is a stanch Democrat and takes an active part in forwarding the cause of the party of his choice. In 1890 he was elected sheriff of Codington county, in which capacity he served four years, giving a most able administration and gaining unqualified popular endorsement. In 1898 he was elected to represent his county in the lower house of the state legislature, serving during the sixth general assembly and doing all in his power to secure wise and effective legislation. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church, being prominent members of Immaculate Conception parish, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Catholic Order of Foresters and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On the 1st of November, 1888, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Foley to Miss Dora Rourk, who was born in Eden, Wisconsin, being a daughter of John and Mary Rourk. Of this union have been born seven children, namely: Francis died on the 18th of May, 1902, at the age of nine years; Thomas died January 19, 1904, aged nine years, and those surviving are Andrew, John, Marie, Catherine and Willard. Mrs. Foley also passed away on the 17th of August, 1903, after a brief illness.

LEANDER D. LYON, deceased, was a native of the state of Michigan, having been born in Hudson, Lenawee county, on the 9th of November, 1847, and being a son of Lyman J. and Amanda (Davenport) Lyon. His father was a soldier in the Mexican war and died when the subject was a child, so that the latter was early thrown upon his own resources, his educational advantages having been those afforded in the common schools of his native state. When but twelve years of age he entered a newspaper office and finally completed a full apprenticeship at the printing trade, becoming a very skilled workman. He proved the truth of the statement that the discipline of a newspaper office is equal to a liberal education, and became a man of broad information and distinctive intellectuality, while he gained recognition as an able and forceful writer. He was for a time editor of a paper in his native town, and later published a paper in Fayette, Ohio, from which place he removed to Circleville, Ohio, where he became editor and publisher of the Union Herald. He was also for some time identified with newspaper work in Detroit, Michigan, and Buffalo, New York. In the former city he was awarded a diploma for having executed the finest specimen of job printing among a large number of contestants, having been specially capable in this line, while throughout his life he ever aimed to attain perfection in all that he undertook. In 1882 Mr. Lyon left Circleville, Ohio, and came to the territory of Dakota, locating in Watertown, where he became associated with Messrs. C. G. Church and F. A. Barr in the publishing and editing of the Courier-News, which issued daily and weekly editions. He eventually purchased the interests of his two partners and continued the enterprise individually for a number of years. He then established here a paper to which he gave the name of Public Opinion, and made the same a powerful factor in the community. He was a man of strong individuality and decided views, and was fearless in the expression of his opinions through his paper, and thus he naturally created some enmities in his efforts to promote the best interests of the community and, though antagonism was created, his views were finally widely recognized and approved by the better element in the community and state, his paper becoming one of the most valuable and successful properties of Watertown. He finally sold the plant and business of the Public Opinion to the firm of Ransom & Corey, and shortly afterward became superintendent of the Watertown Water, Light and Power Company. At the time of his assuming this office the affairs of the company were in a deplorable condition and the service was far from what it should have been. Though new to the work, Mr. Lyon brought to bear his excellent business judgment and dominating energy and soon the effects became evident in the improvement of the system and in the placing of the business upon a profitable basis. Of this position he continued incumbent until his death. He served in various offices of local order, and in politics gave an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party. During the war of the Rebellion Mr. Lyon rendered valiant service in defense of the Union, having been a member of a regiment of Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and he ever afterward maintained a deep interest in his old comrades in arms and was a prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic. As his father was a soldier in the Mexican war, he also became affiliated with the Sons of Veterans, having served as colonel of the state organization of the same in South Dakota, while the camp of the order at Blunt was named in his honor. He was also affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, in which he attained the Knight Templar degrees, while he was a charter member of the lodge in Watertown. He was also a member of various other fraternal and social organizations, while he was one of the organizers of the Watertown Business Men's Union, of which he was secretary for a number of years. While he was publishing the Public Opinion his paper was the first in the state to suggest the name of Benjamin Harrison in connection with the nomination for President of the United States, and in recognition of this fact he received a most gracious and appreciative personal letter of thanks from Mr. Harrison. He was one of the most insistent advocates of the division of the territory of Dakota and did most effective service in securing the admission of South Dakota to the Union. Mr. Lyon was summoned into eternal rest on the 30th of January, 1903, after a brief illness, and his death came as a personal bereavement to the people of Watertown, while throughout the state the press gave high tribute to his memory and to the work which he had accomplished as a public-spirited and progressive citizen and as a man of exalted integrity. His funeral was one of the most notable ever held in Watertown, business being practically suspended at the time, while many of the prominent citizens from divers parts of the state came to pay a last mark of respect to one whose life had been altogether worthy.

In the city of Detroit, Michigan, on the 13th of August, 1866, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Lyon to Miss Anna R. Baker, who was born in Buffalo, New York, whose death occurred November 15, 1886. His second wife, who survives, was Miss Emma Anderson, of Janesville, Wisconsin. His daughter, Mirriam, is now the wife of W. J. McMath, who is the local representative of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company. They have three children, Ralph, Dwight and Miriam. Frank W., the younger of the two children, was born in Buffalo, New York, on the 13th of April, 1871, and is now a jobber and retail dealer in crockery, stone-ware, glassware, lamps, etc., in Watertown, being one of the progressive and successful business men of the place. For five years he held the office of sub-agent at the Standing Rock Indian agency, in North Dakota, and for three years had a similar incumbency at the Cheyenne agency, in South Dakota. He had previously been a traveling salesman for a leading wholesale crockery house in the city of Minneapolis. In politics he is a Republican, and is the present city treasurer.

On the 19th of November, 1895, Frank W. Lyon was united in marriage to Miss Imelda Marie McLaughlin, the daughter of Colonel James McLaughlin, who was chief inspector in the Indian service, having been appointed during the administration of General Grant. Mrs. Lyon passed away on the 14th of February, 1898, leaving one child, James R. S. On the 15th of April, 1901, at the Cheyenne River agency, Mr. Lyon married Miss Helen May Crane, who was born in Titusville, Pennsylvania, and who was at the time of her marriage in the government service, having charge of the hospital at the government agency mentioned, her professional training having been secured in one of the leading hospitals of the city of Cleveland, Ohio. Of this union were born two children, Elizabeth, who died in infancy, and Ramona Martha, born July 28, 1903.

C. M. BUTTS, son of Jacob S. and Malinda (Johnson) Butts, was born on a farm in Delaware county, New York, April 15, 1843, his parents also being natives of the Empire state.

In 1848 the family removed to Wisconsin, settling in Waupaca county, and it was there that the subject grew to maturity, spending the intervening years as his father's assistant on the farm and attending, as opportunities afforded, the public schools near the homestead. While thus engaged the great Civil war broke out and, fired with patriotic zeal, he enlisted, May 19, 1861, in Company D, Third Wisconsin Infantry, but by reason of being a minor was discharged the following July. Two years later, however, he was more fortunate in entering the service, being accepted in July, 1863, by the same company and regiment in which he had previously attempted to enlist, joining his command at the front in time to participate in some of the fiercest and most noted battles of the war. He shared with his comrades the vicissitudes of the Atlanta campaign, took part in several bloody engagements in the vicinity of that city, and later marched with General Sherman on the celebrated march to the sea. Mr. Butts served bravely and gallantly until the downfall of the rebellion, after which he returned home, and in the fall of 1866 removed to Olmstead county, Minnesota, where he purchased land and engaged in the pursuit of agriculture upon his own responsibility. After living in that county until 1878, he sold his farm and removed to the county of Watonwan, in the same state, where he made his home until 1891, at which time he disposed of his interests in Minnesota and changed his residence to South Dakota, locating in Garretson, with the growth and prosperity of which thriving city he has since been identified. For some years following his arrival in Garretson Mr. Butts was engaged in the drug business, but in 1895 he sold his establishment and turned his attention to real estate, in which he soon acquired an extensive and lucrative patronage. Being energetic and knowing how to take advantage of opportunities, he found himself in due time on the high road to prosperity, his business affairs having prospered and all of his investments proving fortunate. In the summer of 1901 he erected the Grand hotel, the largest and best patronized house of public entertainment in Garretson, and in addition thereto has put up other buildings from time to time, thus adding very materially to the growth and substantial improvement of the city.

Mr. Butts was married in Fillmore county, Minnesota, May 5, 1866, to Miss Katie M. Conan, a native of Canada, the union resulting in the birth of two children, the older of whom, Edith M., wife of Dr. C. W. Locke, died in the month of August, 1891; Maude, the second daughter, dying at the age of twelve years. Mr. Butts has served several terms as alderman, and as a member of the council did much to advance the interests of the municipality and promote the city's development. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln, a fact of which he feels justly proud, and ever since that time has been a pronounced Republican, zealous as a party worker and manager, and outspoken in the advocacy and defense of his principles. He has never been an office seeker, preferring to labor for the advancement of his friends' political interest rather than his own.

CARL P. HELSTED, who has already passed life's meridian and is now living in honorable retirement, is a sturdy son of Scandinavia. Born September 18, 1830, in the romantic and historic country of Sweden. His father being a farmer, he too was reared a tiller of the soil and followed that time-honored calling in the land of his nativity until 1868, in June of which year he took passage for America on the steamer "Great Eastern," and after a voyage of sixteen days' duration landed in the harbor of New York. From that city he went to Chicago, Illinois, thence, after a short time, to Michigan, where he spent about three months at railroad work, at the expiration of which time he transferred his residence to Iowa, where he was similarly employed for a limited period. From the latter state he went to Omaha, Nebraska, but after spending some six months in the railroad shops of that city, he removed to Plattsmouth, where for about one year he kept a boarding house. Mr. Helsted's next move was to Sioux City, Iowa, where he also opened a boarding house and after conducting the same with encouraging success until 1872, he disposed of the establishment and came to Minnehaha county, South Dakota, locating a homestead in Branden township, which in due time he improved and converted into a fine farm. Mr. Helsted made a judicious selection of land, having been among the early settlers of the county with excellent opportunities for looking over the country and comparing the relative merits of its different parts. He put up substantial buildings and, devoting all of his energies to agriculture and stock raising, succeeded in accumulating a competence of sufficient magnitude to enable him, in the fall of 1901, to retire from active life. He sold his farm that year and, purchasing a beautiful home in Garretson, moved to the same and since then he has been enjoying the fruits of his many years of toil and thrift in a life free from care and anxiety.

Mr. Helsted was married in his native land, and two of his five children were born and lie buried near his old ancestral home. One child died in Sioux City, Iowa, and the two surviving are Louise, the wife of W. W. Cole, of Clay county, and Frederick, who lives in Montana. Mr. Halstead served as constable of Branden township and, although a zealous and uncompromising Republican, he has never been an office seeker, having preferred the quiet life on the farm, and the simple title of citizen to any public honors within the power of his fellow men to bestow. He was reared in the Lutheran faith, and since an early age has been a faithful and devoted member of the Swedish Lutheran church, being at this time one of the pillars of the congregation in Branden township and one of its most liberal contributors. He was treasurer of his church for three years.

Cross, a farmer and stock raiser of that state and an estimable citizen of the community in which he resided. Shortly after the death of his father, young Cross was taken by relatives to St. Charles, Minnesota, but after spending a short time at that place, he went to live with his grandfather, near Iowa Falls, Iowa, in which state he grew to maturity and received his educational training. Reared on a farm, he early became accustomed to the varied duties of agriculture and, reaching manhood's estate, found himself well qualified by this training to face the future and to enter upon a career which from the beginning gave every promise of ultimate success.

In December, 1881, Mr. Cross came to South Dakota and engaged in the grain trade at Lake Preston, Kingsbury county, where he remained for a period of six years, during which time he built up a large and flourishing business, realizing from the same handsome financial profits. Later he took up a homestead in Clark county, but after living on his land about two years, removed to Palisades, where for a period of one year he operated the first hardware store in the town. From Palisades he came to Garretson, where he also engaged in the hardware business, being the first to bring a special line of that kind of merchandise to the city, and it was not long until he forged to the front as one of the most enterprising and public-spirited merchants of the place. He devoted his attention exclusively to hardware for a period of eleven years, at the expiration of which time, in March, 1901, he disposed of his stock and the summer following erected the handsome stone building now occupied by the Minnehaha State Bank, which institution he organized and in the management of which he has since been a leading and influential factor.

Mr. Cross has been president of the bank ever since its organization and under his able management and judicious control it has become one of the popular and reliable monetary establishments in the eastern part of the state, doing an extensive business in all lines of banking, and by its presence adding greatly to the high reputation Garretson enjoys among her sister cities of South Dakota. Mr. Cross is not only an accomplished business man as the term is generally implied, but having made a close and comprehensive study of monetary questions, he is especially well informed concerning the same, and may be considered an authority on all matters relating to finance and banking. He has been prominent in the public affairs of Garretson ever since becoming a resident of the same, has served with great acceptance as mayor of the city, and for some time past has been a member of the common council. Fraternally, he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, being a charter member of Lodge No. 74, at Garretson, and at different times an honored official of the organization.

EUGENE E. CROSS, of Garretson, president of the Minnehaha State Bank, was born in Juneau county, Wisconsin, August 13, 1859, and at the early age of nine years was left practically an orphan by the death of his father, Daniel P.

Mr. Cross has been remarkably fortunate in promoting his various business interests, being the possessor of a fortune of no small magnitude, including in addition to a number of valuable city properties and private capital, a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres, admirably situated in one of the richest agricultural districts of Clark county.

Mr. Cross was married at St. Charles, Minnesota, in the year 1890, to Miss Florence E. Blair, of that state, the union being without issue.

JOHN HOVE, an enterprising business man of Garretson, is a native of Fillmore county, Minnesota, where his birth occurred on the 25th day of September, 1864. Reared on a farm he was early taught the dignity of honest toil and, growing up with habits of industry deeply imbedded in his nature, was well qualified at the proper time to assume the stern duties of life. He enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education, and after remaining with his parents and assisting with the labors of the farm until attaining his majority, he left the home circle and in 1885 came to Minnehaha county, South Dakota, where he followed agriculture for some years as a renter. Later, in 1893, Mr. Hove purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Edison township, which he reduced to cultivation, improved with good buildings and stocked with cattle and other domestic animals, in due time converting the land into a fine farm, on which he made his home during the nine years following. In the spring of 1902 he turned his place over to other hands and changed his abode to Garretson, where one year later he effected a co-partnership in the hardware business with Mr. Munson, which, under the firm name of Hove & Munson, is now one of the leading mercantile establishments in the city. By close attention to business and by judiciously consulting the demands of the trade, these gentlemen have secured a large and lucrative patronage, and, although but recently established, their house has steadily come to the front until, as stated in the preceding paragraph, it is now one of the successful and popular places of business in a city where competition in all lines is lively and where only the capable and far-seeing succeed. Mr. Hove served five years as a member of the Edison township official board and also filled the office of assessor, in both of which capacities his course was creditable to himself and satisfactory to the public.

Mr. Hove has faith in the future of his city and county, and to the extent of his ability is applying his energies to the promotion of the welfare of each, being interested in whatever concerns the material prosperity of the community and a willing supporter of all enterprises having for their object the intellectual, social and moral well-being of the same.

Mr. Hove was united in marriage, in Minnehaha county, March 25, 1888, to Miss Lovisa Munson, who, like himself, is a native of Minnesota, both having been born in the county of Fillmore, that state.

THOMAS WANGSNES, one of the enterprising and progressive business men of South Dakota, having official connection with the leading monetary institutions of Minnehaha county, was born in Calmer, Winneshiek county, Iowa, on the 31st day of January, 1860, the son of Herman and Bertha (Tviedt) Wangsness, both parents, as the names indicate, being natives of Norway. The father, a farmer by occupation, is still living, the mother having departed this life in Worth county, Iowa, about the year 1900.

The subject of this review was a lad of twelve years when his parents moved from Winneshiek to the county of Worth, and he grew to young manhood in the latter county, his early life including the experiences common to the majority of boys born and reared amid the stirring and invigorating discipline of the farm. At intervals, during his minority, he attended the public schools near his home, and in the summer seasons assisted in cultivating the fields, harvesting the crops and looking after the other interests of agriculture with which country lads early become familiar. At the age of nineteen he severed home ties and, going to Winnebago county, engaged in general merchandising, to which line of business he devoted his attention during the ensuing twelve years, meeting with well-merited success the meanwhile. Disposing of his stock at the expiration of the period noted, Mr. Wangsness accepted the position of traveling salesman with a harvester company, which he represented on the road about three years, during which time he traversed a large area of territory, built up an extensive trade, and established an enviable reputation as a capable, far-seeing and thoroughly reliable business man. Severing his connections with the above concern, Mr. Wangsness, in 1893, came to Minnehaha county, South Dakota, locating at Garretson, where he invested some of his means very judiciously, erecting in due time the beautiful and imposing business house now occupied by the State Bank, of which he has been president ever since the organization of the institution, the year following his arrival. He was the leading spirit in establishing this bank and, under his executive management, it rapidly grew in public favor, in the course of a few years becoming not only the leading establishment of the kind in Minnehaha county, but, as already stated, one of the most successful and popular monetary institutions in the eastern part of the state.

The Garretson State Bank, which is backed by men of high character and large experience, has a paid-up capital of ten thousand dollars, with deposits many fold that amount, and in addition to general banking does a large and growing business in the matter of farm loans, also gives especial attention to collections, besides representing a number of the leading insurance companies of the United States and acting as an agency for various steamship lines. Its patronage in the various departments is large and far-reaching and its influence upon the material interest of Garretson has done more than any other agency to give the city the high reputation it has long enjoyed as an important commercial and business center.

In addition to his connection with the bank, Mr. Wangsness has been called at different times to assume other responsible trusts, among which was that of treasurer of the Garretson school board, which position he held a number of years, and he has also served several terms in the city council. He has a beautiful home in Garretson, over which a lady of refined tastes and varied culture presides with gentle grace and womanly dignity. Her name prior to her marriage was Miss Belle Aker, a native of Norway, and she is now the happy mother of two children, who answer to the names of Paul and Benjamin.

MARCUS H. WANGSNESS, merchant and leading citizen of Garretson, is a native of Norway, the son of Herman and Bertha (Tviadt) Wangsness, and dates his birth from September 8, 1846. When about eight years of age he was brought to America by his parents and during the ensuing two years lived in Dane county, Wisconsin, at the expiration of that time removing with the family to Winneshiek county, Iowa, and settling at the town of Calmer. After spending about four years at the latter place, the family residence was transferred to Burr Oak Springs, in the same county, and there the subject grew to maturity, the meanwhile receiving a good practical education in the public schools, also turning his hands to various kinds of employment. Mr. Wangsness spent about fifteen years at Burr Oak Springs, and at the end of that time removed to Worth county, where he followed agricultural pursuits until 1870, in connection with which vocation he also devoted considerable attention to the handling of farm machinery, in the sale of which he met with encouraging success financially. In the above year he left the parental roof and in the spring of the same year united in marriage with Miss Olena Olsen, a native of Chicago, but of Norwegian descent, and immediately thereafter settled at Northwood, Iowa, where during the ten years following he did a flourishing business in the handling of all kinds of agricultural implements and farm machinery. Discontinuing that line of trade at the expiration of the time noted, he resumed the pursuit of agriculture and followed the same in Worth county until 1877, when he came to South Dakota and took up a homestead and timber claim in the county of Moody, improving the former and living thereon for a period of seven years. Returning to Iowa in 1884, he became associated with his brother Thomas in the mercantile business, the firm thus constituted lasting about four years, at the end of which time they sold their stock, the subject shortly thereafter coming to South Dakota and locating at Palisades, Minnehaha county, where in due season he engaged in general merchandising. At the end of two years he removed his stock to Garretson, where he has since conducted a large and lucrative business, being at this time one of the leading merchants of the city with a patronage which is constantly growing in magnitude and importance.

Mr. Wangsness served a treasurer of Palisades township and since moving to Garretson has held the office of city treasurer, school treasurer and for several years has been a member of the board of education, in all of which positions he exhibited marked devotion to duty and a high order of business talent. He has been quite successful in the prosecution of his various interests, owning, in addition to his store and valuable city property, three hundred and twenty acres of fine land in Moody county, this state, and a quarter section in Palisades township, Minnehaha county.

Mr. and Mrs. Wangsness have eight children, the following of whom are living: Bertha, Ole, Helen, Ida, Perry and Milven; the two deceased are Ellen, who died in infancy, and another daughter, also named Ellen, who departed this life when a young lady of sixteen.

LUMAN B. FARLEY, proprietor of the leading drug house in Garretson, South Dakota, and a gentleman of high standing in social, as well as in the commercial and professional circles, is a native of South Dakota, and has spent all his life within its borders. His parents, L. T. and Carrie A. (Warner) Farley, came to South Dakota in 1868 from Rock county, Wisconsin, and settled in Lincoln county, where, entering land, the father engaged in farming and stock raising.

Luman B. was born on the homestead in Lincoln county, August 19, 1870, and grew up in close touch with nature, receiving his educational training in the public schools. In 1885, when a youth of fifteen, he took up the study of pharmacy and in due time, by close application and critical research, succeeded in mastering the profession, after which, in August, 1898, he engaged in business at Garretson, where, as already stated, he now owns a large and thoroughly stocked establishment, with a patronage second to that of no other drug store in the city. Mr. Farley's business career has been eminently creditable, prosecuting from the beginning a series of advancements which demonstrate not only a business ability of high order and superior professional training, but also a personal worth that has won him the confidence of the public.

Mr. Farley is a man of excellent habits, stands well with all classes of people and, being public-spirited and enterprising, gives his influence and, when necessary, his material assistance to encourage the growth and development of the city in which he resides. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic brotherhood, also belongs to the Knights of Pythias, and in politics supports the Republican party.

Mr. Farley is a married man and the father of two bright and interesting children, whose names are Wava and Roy. Mrs. Farley, formerly Miss Laura Christianson, a native of Iowa, lived for some years in Canton, South Dakota, at which place her marriage was solemnized.

CLAYTON W. LOCKE, M. D., of Garretson, South Dakota, was born January 24, 1862, near the town of Brockport, New York, where his father, Elisha Locke, also a native of the Empire state, had long been engaged in agricultural pursuits. The maiden name of the subject's mother was Sarah Way, a member of an old and well-known family of New York, who passed the greater part of her life on the home farm, near the place referred to above. The Doctor's childhood and youth, under the wholesome discipline of the farm, were similar in most respects to the experiences of the majority of boys reared in close touch with nature in the country, and he grew up strong in body and resolute in purpose. He received a pretty thorough mental training in the schools of his native place and after assisting his father with the work of the farm until his twentieth year, left home to take up the study of medicine, which he began in 1884. Subsequently he entered the Louisville Medical College, Louisville, Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1888, and immediately thereafter he came to South Dakota, in search of a favorable opening, locating in due time in Minnehaha county, where he practiced with encouraging success until his removal in 1890 to Garretson. Since the latter year the Doctor has risen rapidly in his profession and now takes high rank among the leading physicians and surgeons in the eastern part of the state, having a large and flourishing practice.

Dr. Locke prepared himself for his life work by rigid discipline and critical research, and during his preliminary study and collegiate course neglected no favorable opportunity to increase his knowledge and fit himself for the practice. He has never ceased being a student, and ever since opening an office of his own his leisure has been devoted closely to study and original investigation, the result being a continued advancement in all branches of the profession. While making every other consideration subordinate to his chosen calling, Dr. Locke has not been a passive spectator of current events in his adopted state, but with a commendable public spirit, he early became an active participant in the same. As an ardent Republican and leader of the party, he has made his influence felt in a number of local, district and state campaigns, and in recognition of his services he was elected in 1901 to represent Minnehaha county in the legislature of South Dakota. His record as a member of that body was eminently satisfactory to his constituents and to the people of the state, but, not desiring further honors in this line, his legislative experiences ended with the one term for which he was chosen. The Doctor served two terms as mayor of Garretson, and for several years has been a member of the city school board. By diligent attention to his profession and by the exercise of the business qualities for which he is also distinguished, he has been fortunate in a financial way, owning at this time in addition to his city property and the respectable fortune at his command, over nine hundred acres of fine land in South Dakota, which is increasing in value with each succeeding year.

Dr. Locke has been twice married, the first time in the fall of 1889 to Miss Edith Butts, of St. James, Minnesota, a union terminated by the death of the wife after a brief but happy wedded experience of one and a half years' duration. Subsequently, July 10, 1895, he contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Mary L. Conan, who has borne him the following children: Edith, Lillian, Clayton and Donald.

OLE S. SWENSON, the capable incumbent of the office of warden of the South Dakota state penitentiary, in Sioux Falls, and one of the highly honored citizens of the state, is a native of Hallingdahl, Norway, where he was born on the 9th of November, 1845, being a son of Swen and Julia (Moen) Swenson, both of whom were likewise native of Norway, though both families were of Scotch extraction in the respective paternal lines, both great-grandfathers of the subject of this sketch having been Scotchmen who emigrated from their native land to Norway. The father of the subject was engaged in farming in Norway until 1857, when he emigrated with his family to the United States, settling in Nicollet county, Minnesota, in which state he passed the remainder of his life, becoming a successful farmer. His death occurred in 1870, and the mother died in April, 1903. Of their six children five are yet living.

Ole S. Swenson was reared to the age of twelve years on the old home farm in Norway, where he secured his early educational training, and he then accompanied his parents on their emigration to America, being reared to maturity in Minnesota and there availing himself of the advantages of the public schools of Nicollet county. In 1863 he went to St. Peter, that state, where he secured a position as clerk in a general store. In 1876 he engaged in the hardware business there, but one year later he removed his stock to Grand Meadow, Minnesota, where he was successfully engaged in business until 1880, when he disposed of his interests there and came to Sioux Falls, arriving here on the 15th of September of that year. In this city Mr. Swenson established himself in the same line of enterprise, in which he successfully continued until 1893, when he sold out, soon afterward purchasing an interest in the flour mill at Valley Springs, this county, and with the operation of this plant he was successful until 1902.

Mr. Swenson has given an unfaltering support to the Republican party from the time of attaining his legal majority and has been an active worker in its cause. In 1886 he was elected treasurer of Minnehaha county, and was chosen as his own successor in the election of 1888, thus serving four years and giving a most faithful and able administration of the fiscal affairs of this important county. From 1898 until 1902 he was chairman of the Republican central committee of the county. He has attained a position of distinction in the Masonic fraternity, in which noble and time-honored institution he has advanced to the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, being also identified with the Mystic Shrine and enjoying marked popularity in the fraternity. In May, 1901, Mr. Swenson, upon the recommendation of Governor Herreid, received from the state board of charities and corrections the appointment of warden of the state penitentiary, in which office he has served with most perfect efficiency, proving a strict disciplinarian and able executive and showing that deep humanitarian spirit which is so essential in dealing with those of criminal instincts.

In 1870 Mr. Swenson was united in marriage to Miss Celia Thompson, of Nicollet county, Minnesota, who died in 1878, leaving two children, Arthur Ward, now residing in Winnipeg, Canada, and Josephine, who is at the present time in Europe. On the 20th of August, 1880, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Swenson to Miss Eliza S. Ranney, of Grand Meadow, Minnesota, and they are the parents of three children, William L., Norma and Ernest Stuart.

JOHN A. MUNRO, president of the Wilmot Land and Loan Company, of Wilmot, was born in Nova Scotia, October 18, 1853, the son of Donald and Nancy Munro, the father a native of Scotland and by occupation a stone-mason and contractor. John A. attended the country schools, and later pursued the higher branches in the Pictou Academy and took up the study of pharmacy under the direction of a druggist of his native place. After becoming familiar with the business, he went to Minnesota, where he followed his chosen calling from 1878 to 1879, and in the latter year came to South Dakota, and established a drug house at Big Stone City, which he conducted very profitably during the six years following.

In 1883 Mr. Munro was appointed clerk of court for Roberts county, which office he held for four years. In 1885 he removed to Wilmot, where he has resided ever since. During his term as clerk of court he devoted his leisure time to the study of law and was admitted to practice in 1888, but did not engage very actively in the practice, turning his attention rather to real estate and banking, which he found more to his taste and much more profitable. He is a director of the First State Bank of Wilmot, and to him is due the credit of organizing the Wilmot Land and Loan Company, of Wilmot, of which he is president at present, and which, as much as any other agency, has tended to the settlement and material development of Roberts county and other parts of eastern Dakota.

Mr. Munro ever since coming west has been actively identified with the affairs of Wilmot and Roberts county. He was sergeant-at-arms in the house of representatives during the legislative session of 1885, was largely instrumental in carrying his county and district that year for the Republican party, and as a politician his influence has been strong and far-reaching. As a citizen he is progressive and thoroughly up to date, lends his encouragement and material support to everything making for the public good and having faith in the future of his adopted state, is manfully doing his part to make it come up to his high ideal of what a commonwealth should be.

Mr. Munro belongs to the Masonic fraternity, in which he now holds office of junior warden, and is also an active member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being at this time district deputy of the last named organization. In the month of December, 1892, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Munro and Miss Carrie E. Phanso, of Pennsylvania, a union blessed with five offspring, namely: Kenneth Donald, Gladys Irene, Carroll Jean, Doris Ella and Myrtle Lucile.

WALTER A. BURLEIGH, second delegate in congress, born in Waterville, Maine, October 25, 1820. Was a physician and lawyer. Agent to Yankton Indians, 1861-65. Delegate in congress, 1865-69, several times member of territorial legislature and state senator. Died at Yankton, 1896.

WILLIAM FRANCIS TEEMAN BUSH-NELL was born at Peru, Illinois, December 3, 1857. At fourteen years of age his parents removed to Evanston and there he attended the Northwestern University for two years. He possessed great natural musical talent and much attention was given to his musical education both at Evanston and at home. At that period he hoped to make music his life work. His father was a government contractor in the construction of lighthouses and life-saving stations on the great lakes and at seventeen he was given charge of workmen upon these structures and for three years was so engaged upon his father's undertakings. At the age of twenty he set out upon his long cherished musical career, teaching, composing and publishing his compositions and giving concerts through Illinois, Iowa and Dakota, whither he came in 1884 and established himself at Huron. In his boyhood he had earned his first money in a printing office and that class of work still had some attractions for him and, finding the Dakota Farmer struggling for an existence, he took it up and soon became the owner of the property and under his management, though it required long years of untiring effort and unremitting industry, he made a splendid success of it. He was most discriminating in his efforts to secure for his journal a standing in the confidence of his readers and was tenacious in his purpose to exclude from it everything of a questionable or misleading character. Mr. Greeley relates a circumstance in point. It was during one of the hard years in the reactionary period following the boom. Times were everywhere hard and cash for ordinary expenses almost unobtainable. One morning Mr. Bushnell was opening his mail in Mr. Greeley's presence when a check for a large sum dropped from a letter. It was from a commission house of questionable standing enclosing an advertisement which it desired run in the Farmer. Mr. Bushnell promptly refused the advertisement and returned the check, although the advertisement of that firm at the very time was found in all of the leading farm papers of the country. He was of an intense and enthusiastic temperament and most of the great farmers' enterprises owed their promotion to his initiative. Among these are the State Agricultural Society and the state fair, the State Dairymen's and Buttermakers' Society, the Woolgrowers' Association, the Farmers' Alliance and kindred organizations.

From boyhood he was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and continued this relation throughout his life, ever foremost in every movement requiring effort and money. For twelve years he was superintendent of the Sabbath school and his musical talent made him an indispensable member of the choir and a leader in all musical functions of the church. He gave his time, money and energy unreservedly to missionary work and his charities were only limited by his means. He was intensely interested in the promotion of the great moral reforms, and especially in efforts looking to the suppression of the evils of the liquor traffic. In the campaign for prohibition accompanying the adoption of the state constitution he accepted the most burdensome position of secretary and field manager, and, practically setting aside his personal business, took hold with his tireless vigor, directing the movement of the speakers, the arrangements for meetings and all of the tiresome details of the campaign and the splendid victory at the polls was due in a large measure to the energy and enthusiasm with which he inspired the workers throughout the state.

Mr. Bushnell was married at Huron, on June 2, 1886, to Miss Blanche Van Pelt, of Indiana, who throughout the remaining years of his active life was his sympathetic assistant and advisor. To them three children were born, Paul, Frederick and Helen.

On August 16, 1900, almost for the first time in his persistent struggle to permanently establish the Farmer, having called his brother-in-law, N. E. Carnine, to assist him in the management of the rapidly growing enterprise, Mr. Bushnell felt that he was justified in leaving his post and taking his family for a short vacation. They started for the mountains of Colorado. At Omaha he was detained by an attack of appendicitis, but rallying after a few days went on to Colorado Springs, where he was again taken ill and died after a day of intense suffering, which he bore with the courage and fortitude of the true Christian. His remains repose in Riverside cemetery at Aberdeen. His memory will long be held in reverence by the people of South Dakota as a model of high Christian character and true manhood.

WELLINGTON J. ANDREWS, one of the well-known and honored citizens of Sioux Falls, is a native of the dominion of Canada, having been born near the city of Ottawa, on the 14th of April, 1865, and being a son of William H. and Eliza Ann (Johnson) Andrews, who were likewise born in Canada, where they continued to maintain their home until 1874, when they came as pioneers to what is now the state of South Dakota, locating near Scotland, Bon Homme county, where the father took up government land and developed a good farm, becoming one of the representative citizens of that section of the state.

The subject of this review received his rudimentary education in the common schools of his native county, and was nine years of age at the time of his parents' removal to South Dakota. Here he was reared to manhood under the sturdy discipline of the pioneer farm, the while continuing to attend the public schools until 1885, when he entered the academy at Scotland, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1886. Thereafter he continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until 1886, when, at the age of twenty-one years, he went to Parkston, Hutchinson county, where he was engaged in the agricultural implement business and dealing in live stock until 1893, when he returned to Scotland, where he opened a general merchandise store, building up a successful business and there continuing operations in the line until 1898, when he sold out and came to Sioux Falls, where he established himself in the grocery business, in which he has ever since continued, catering to a large and representative trade and having a finely equipped store. His establishment is modern in all its appointments, and the stock carried is exceptionally comprehensive and select, while he is recognized as an energetic and progressive business man and as one well worthy of the uniform confidence and esteem in which he is held. In politics Mr. Andrews has ever given an uncompromising allegiance to the Democratic party, has taken an active part in the promotion of its cause, having been a delegate to various state and county conventions, and having been called to serve in a number of minor offices, though he has never sought personal preferment in the line. Fraternally he is identified with Unity Lodge, No. 130, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons; Parkston Lodge, No. 99, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and Sioux Falls Lodge, No. 262, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On the 8th of February, 1899, Mr. Andrews was united in marriage to Miss Persis U. Tyler, who was born in Des Moines, Iowa, being a daughter of L. S. Tyler, who has been a resident of Sioux Falls since 1892. Mr. and Mrs. Andrews have one daughter, Edith Alice.

EARL V. BOBB, M. D., was born August 2, 1873, in Richland, Wisconsin, and is the son of Martin L. and Mary (Waffling) Bobb, the father a native of Pennsylvania, the mother of Wisconsin. Martin Bobb came to Dakota a number of years ago and settled in Davison county, with the public affairs of which part of the state he became quite actively identified; he served six years as clerk of the county court, took a prominent part in advancing the material interests of his community, and was a man of intelligence and wide influence and withal a most excellent and praiseworthy citizen. As a leader of the Republican party he became prominent in state as well as in local affairs and in the private walks of life enjoyed the esteem of all classes. He died in Davison county, in October, 1902, at the age of sixty years, leaving to mourn his loss a widow, who is still living, and six children, of whom the subject of this review is the second in order of birth. Dr. B. A. Bobb, the oldest of the sons of Martin and Mary Bobb, is a distinguished physician of South Dakota, practicing his profession in the city of Mitchell and at the present time he is president of the State Medical Association.

Dr. Earl V. Bobb was about nine years old when his parents moved from Wisconsin to South Dakota and since 1882 his life has been closely identified with the latter state. After attending the public schools for some years, he entered the University of South Dakota, where he finished his literary education, and then became a student of the Northwestern University at Evanston, from the medical department of which he was graduated with high honors in 1899. Preparatory to the general practice of his profession, the Doctor did a large amount of hospital work under the direction of some of the most distinguished medical talent of the day, after which he opened an office in Sisseton, South Dakota, where he has since built up a very extensive professional business, commanding at this time a patronage second in magnitude and importance to that of no other physician in the city or county.

Dr. Bobb prepared himself for his life work by careful study and critical research, and being a close student, he keeps in touch with the trend of modern professional thought, is familiar with the latest investigations and discoveries in the profession and possesses the discernment and tact to select what is most valuable of this knowledge and use it in his practice.

In addition to his professional labors, Dr. Bobb, since coming west, has been actively identified with the public and business affairs of Sisseton and Roberts counties, and at the present time is holding the office of coroner. He is staunchly Republican in his political views, manifests a deep and abiding interest in his party and has contributed not a little to its success in the county, district and state.

In the fall of 1902 Dr. Bobb purchased the leading drug store in Sisseton and is now conducting the same in connection with his practice and doing a very lucrative business. He is a member of the State Medical Society, the Aberdeen District Medical Society, and other organizations whose object is to promote a higher standard of efficiency in the medical ranks of South Dakota. He is also interested in secret fraternal and benevolent work, belonging to the Masonic lodge at Sisseton and the Knights of Pythias, in both of which orders he is recognized as an influential member and a zealous worker.

On September 25, 1900, Dr. Bobb and Miss Elizabeth Morton, of Chicago, Illinois, daughter of John Morton, of that city, were united in the bonds of wedlock. Dr. and Mrs. Bobbs have a beautiful and attractive home in Sisseton which is well known to the best society circles of the city, and both are popular with the people and have many warm friends and admirers, here and elsewhere.

ANFIN J. BERDAHL was born in Norway, December 12, 1852, and when about four years old was brought by his parents to the United States, from which time until 1860 he lived at the family home in Winneshiek county, Iowa. In the latter year he was taken to Houston county, Minnesota, thence six years later to Fillmore county, that state, where he remained until 1873, the meantime receiving his education in the common schools and his more practical training as an assistant on his father's farm. Leaving the parental roof in 1873, he came to South Dakota and the following year took up a homestead in Edison township, Minnehaha county, which he at once proceeded to improve and reduce to cultivation, and upon which he continued to reside until the fall of 1887, when he rented his farm and, returning to Minnesota, engaged in the mercantile business at the town of Pipestone. One year later Mr. Berdahl moved his stock to Jasper, in the same state, where he conducted a successful trade until the spring of 1890, at which time he returned to his Dakota farm and during the ensuing two years devoted his attention to agriculture and stock raising. Renting his land at the expiration of the time noted, he established a general mercantile business in Garretson, where he has since lived and prospered, building up a large and lucrative trade the meanwhile and taking distinctive precedence among the leading merchants of the city.

Mr. Berdahl's domestic experience dates from 1878, on March 10th of which year he entered the marriage relation with Miss Caroline Christianson, a native of Fillmore county, Minnesota, where her parents, both born in Norway, settled in an early day. To Mr. and Mrs. Berdahl five children have been born, one of whom, a daughter by the name of Christiana, died at the early age of four years; those living are Christian, Alfred, Clara and Elmer, who with their parents constitute a family of eminent respectability and high social standing.

Mr. Berdahl at different times has been called upon to assume responsible official status, having served as treasurer of Edison township, being the second man elected to the office in that jurisdiction, and he has also been identified for a number of years with the educational interests of Garretson, being at this time president of the city school board, besides holding the position of alderman. In the conduct of his business affairs Mr. Berdahl is prompt and methodical, not given to speculation, being satisfied with gradual advancement and sure gains. As a citizen he is enterprising to the extent of encouraging every laudable movement for the general good, and his deep and abiding interest in the social, educational and moral welfare of the community has resulted in substantial advancement along these various lines.

ANDREW L. COYLE, M. D.—Among the able exemplars of the medical profession in the state is Dr. Coyle, a young man of marked intellectual ability, thoroughly informed in the sciences of medicine and surgery, having had exceptional advantages in the prosecution of his studies in technical lines, while he has been established in the practice of his profession in Plankinton, Aurora county, since 1903, securing a representative support from the initiation of his labors here, by reason of his professional ability and genial and gracious personality.

The Doctor is a native of Jersey City, New Jersey, where he was born on the 15th of February, 1874, while he was thus reared under metropolitan surroundings and influences. After completing the curriculum of the public schools he was matriculated in Williams College, at Williamstown, Massachusetts, where he completed the scientific course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1894. He then entered the medical department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he was graduated in 1898, receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine. Immediately after his graduation he received the appointment of contract surgeon in the United States army, serving in that capacity for more than two years, when he resigned and made a tour of Europe, visiting England, France, Germany and other countries and availing himself of the advantages offered for study and investigation in the leading hospitals and colleges. After returning to the United States he made a trip to South America, where he remained about two years, at the expiration of which he came to South Dakota and established himself in practice in Plankinton, where he has since been actively engaged in practice. He is an independent in politics, and has not yet assumed connubial bonds. He is a member of the South Dakota Medical Association and the Phi Beta Pi college fraternity.

RICHARD DUNLOP, one of the pioneer mining men of the Black Hills, and now in charge of the Mineral Point stamp mill, of the Homestake Mining Company, at Central City, is a native of the city of Belfast, Ireland, where he was born on the 15th of February, 1855, being a son of James and Mary (Clark) Dunlop, who were likewise born and reared in that city, where their marriage was solemnized. In 1857 they came to America and after passing a short period of time in the state of New York came west to Iowa, locating in Scott county, where Mr. Dunlop continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in 1877, while his devoted wife passed away in 1892. They were folk of sterling character and commanded unqualified regard in the community which was so long their home. Their religious faith was that of the Presbyterian church, and in politics Mr. Dunlop was a Republican. Of the six children in the family all are yet living, the subject of this review having been the fifth in order of birth.

Richard Dunlop was reared on the homestead farm in Iowa and received his educational discipline in the public schools of his locality. In 1872 he went to Colorado, where he remained for a few years, devoting his attention principally to mining. In 1877 he came to the Black Hills, being numbered among the venturesome spirits who braved the dangers incidental to making the trip to this section, then isolated from civilization by many leagues of plains, infested by the warlike and implacable Indians whose originally was the domain. From Cheyenne, Wyoming, he came through by team to the Hills, in company with a party of other men, and they had little trouble with the Indians while enroute, reaching their destination in Deadwood, in March. There Mr. Dunlop engaged in placer mining for the Whitewood Flume Company, about five miles below Deadwood, a portion of the time working for himself, and he was successful in his efforts in both directions. In 1879 he entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, working as amalgamator and in other positions of responsibility, and in 1887 he was given charge of the Father DeSmet mill, owned by the company and named in honor of one of the heroic missionary priests of the Catholic church in the pioneer days in the northwest. He has since been the superintendent of this mill, which is now known as the Mineral Point, which is equipped with one hundred stamps and which is running to its full capacity since the completion of the auxiliary cyanide plant, in 1902. Since coming to the Hills Mr. Dunlop has given more or less attention to prospecting and has become interested in a number of promising properties. In 1892 he made a trip through Central America for the purpose, primarily, of looking over the mining properties in that section, and he has in his possession some fine specimens of gold-bearing quartz which he secured there. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he has attained the capitular degrees in the Masonic order and is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 18th of October, 1882, Mr. Dunlop married Miss Jennie Baker, who was born and reared in Michigan and who died in April, 1884, leaving one son, Richard F., who is now attending St. John's Military Academy at Delafield, Wisconsin. On the 26th of March, 1890, Mr. Dunlop was united in marriage to Miss Laura Davidson, who was born in Johnson county, Indiana, and who was a resident of Lead City at the time of her marriage. No children have been born of this union.

FRANK ABT was born in the kingdom of Bavaria, Germany, on the 28th of August, 1838, and is a son of Francis and Mary (Schneider) Abt, both of whom were likewise native of Bavaria, where the father followed the vocation of stone-mason until his death, the subject being a child at the time. In the family were two children, of whom he is the elder, his sister Katharine being deceased. Mr. Abt attended the excellent national schools of his fatherland until he had attained the age of fourteen years, and then entered upon an apprenticeship at the shoemaker's trade, becoming a skilled workman, while he also served the required term in the Bavarian militia. Each county furnishes its quota to the German army, and the selection is made by drawing lots from the various local military organizations. Mr. Abt drew the second highest number and thus was not called into active service. He was offered twelve hundred dollars for his chance, but refused the same, as he desired to come to America. Had he thus disposed of his exemption privilege he would have been required to serve six years in the army. In 1861 he bade adieu to home and fatherland and set forth to seek his fortunes in America, landing in New York and thence coming westward to Davenport, Iowa, where he was engaged in the work of his trade for the ensuing four weeks, at the expiration of which, on the 23d of June, 1861, in response to President Lincoln's first call, he gave significant evidence of his loyalty to the country of his recent adoption, by enlisting in Company E, Second Iowa Volunteer Cavalry, commanded by Colonel Elliott. With his command he proceeded to St. Louis and there they remained in Benton Barracks about four weeks, when they started for the front, having an engagement with the enemy near Paducah, at the mouth of the Ohio river. Thence they came up the river to Pittsburg Landing, where they remained some time, participating in the engagement at that place, after which they went on to Corinth, Mississippi, where, under General Rosecrans, they assisted in defending the city against the attacks by the forces under General Price. Their next engagement was at New Madrid, and at Tipton the command succeeded in surrounding the enemy during the night and captured thirteen hundred prisoners. Thence they proceeded to Nashville, Tennessee, where our subject was incapacitated by illness, resulting primarily from a wound received at Corinth, and he was sent to the marine hospital at Evansville, Indiana, where he received his honorable discharge in August, 1862. He then returned to Davenport, Iowa, where he remained until February of the following year, when he started for the newly discovered gold fields of Colorado, where he remained a brief interval and then started for Idaho, in company with a party of about one hundred men. They had a skirmish with the Indians while en route but lost none of their number, though a party three days ahead of them lost three men. He engaged in prospecting for gold in Idaho for several months and then came eastward into Montana, stopping in Bannock, the original capital of the territory, and thence proceeding to the chief mining camp, Virginia City, in Alder Gulch. The country was at the time infested with border outlaws and other desperate characters who were a constant menace to life and property, and it became necessary for the better class of citizens to take drastic measures for protection, resulting in the organization of the vigilantes, of which Mr. Abt became a member. It is unnecessary to enter into details in regard to the action justly taken by these bands of law-abiding citizens, who had recourse to severe means of dealing with the offenders, for all is a part of the written history of the locality and period, but it may be said that through their efforts many desperate characters were brought to expiate for their many crimes, Mr. Abt having personally witnessed the hanging of thirty-three men of this type. Each of the accused was granted counsel and a fair trial, and the vigilantes represented the very best element in the community, as may be understood when we state that in Virginia City their attorney was Colonel Wilbur F. Sanders, who later became United States senator and who still resides in Helena, Montana, a venerable pioneer and distinguished citizen.

Mr. Abt bought a placer claim in Alder Gulch, and worked the same at intervals during the ensuing year, and then removed to Silver Bow, where he remained about a year, being fairly successful in his mining venture there. He then returned to Virginia City and purchased a claim on German Flat, working the same until May 12, 1866, when the diggings were washed out by a severe flood, resulting from a cloudburst. On the 16th of the same month he started for Helena, where he engaged in the boot and shoe business, doing a prosperous business and there remaining until 1876, when he started for the Black Hills, coming down the Missouri river from Fort Benton to Bismarck, and thence proceeding overland with a party of more than one hundred men, who made up a large wagon train. The first night out they camped at Little Heart, and at three o'clock in the morning were attacked by Indians, who stampeded their horses, securing thirteen head. A party of fifty men started in pursuit and captured all the horses with the exception of two, returning at four o'clock in the afternoon of the succeeding day. That night they camped at Oak Hill, having a guard about the camp, as did they each succeeding night, but they had no further difficulty with the Indians and finally reaching their destination. In July Mr. Abt located at Gold Run, where he became associated with John Roberts, Thomas Bell and Frederick Istelhurst in the purchase of a placer claim, below the present town of Lead, for a consideration of three thousand dollars. They worked the claim successfully during that season, and thereafter the subject continued to give his attention to placer mining, in various localities, for the ensuing three years. He then located some quartz claims, of which he finally disposed, after which he engaged in the hotel business in Lead, conducting what was known as the Abt hotel, which was a popular resort in the early days. In 1882 he retired from the hotel business and resumed quartz mining, to which he devoted his attention until 1886, when he was appointed postmaster at Lead, serving four years, since which time he has lived practically retired, though he is still interested in a number of valuable quartz-mining properties.

Mr. Abt early became prominent in local affairs of a public nature, and has been called upon to serve in various positions of trust. He is a staunch Democrat in politics, and in 1890 he was elected a member of the village council, serving four years, while in 1900 he was chosen mayor of Lead, of which office he was incumbent two years, giving a progressive and business-like administration of the municipal government. Under his administration the city sewerage system was installed and the work of paving the streets initiated. Mr. Abt is a member of a number of fraternal organizations, having been the first grand vice-chancellor of the Knights of Pythias in the state; being at the present time senior saganore of his camp of the Improved Order of Red Men, and also commander of E. M. Stanton Post, Po. 81, Grand Army of the Republic, while he is also affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 4th of March, 1867, Mr. Abt was united in marriage to Miss Mary Distel, who was born in Germany and who came to Montana with her brother. She proved a true and devoted wife and helpmeet during the long period of thirty years, having been summoned into eternal rest on the 10th of March, 1899, only a few days before the thirtieth anniversary of their marriage. Of the children of this union we enter the following brief record: John is engaged in mining in Butte, Montana; Frank resides in Chicago; William is a civil engineer, with headquarters in Seattle; Annie, who became the wife of R. H. Purcell, died November 18, 1900, and Mary remains with her father in the pleasant home in Lead.

JOHN W. MARTIN, one of the representative citizens of Watertown, was born at Scales Mound, Jo Daviess county, Illinois, on the 9th of October, 1856, being a son of Henry and Keturah (Thomas) Martin, both of whom were born and reared in England, whence they emigrated to the United States at the age of thirty and twenty-four years respectively, he becoming one of the prosperous and influential farmers of the state of Illinois. Henry Martin died at Scales Mound, Illinois, February 15, 1900, while Mrs. Martin died April 30, 1894.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of his native country the subject of this review continued his studies in the German-English College at Galena, Illinois, and later entered the State Normal School at Plattville, Wisconsin, where he ably prepared himself for the pedagogic profession, to which he thereafter devoted himself, as a teacher in the public schools of Illinois, until August, 1885, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota, locating in Watertown and becoming identified with the real-estate and banking business. He was one of the organizers and directors of the Dakota Loan and Trust Company, of Watertown, and of the Watertown National Bank. In 1889 he was elected cashier of the Watertown National Bank, in which capacity he served four years, at the expiration of which he individually engaged in the real-estate business in Watertown, with which important line of enterprise he has since been prominently identified, his transactions having reached a wide scope, while upon his books are at all times represented the most desirable investments, including farm lands in various sections of the state, and also improved and unimproved town and city property.

From the time of attaining his legal majority Mr. Martin has been an uncompromising advocate and supporter of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and he has labored zealously for the promotion of its cause in South Dakota. He served for two years, 1891-92, as mayor of Watertown, giving a most able and business-like administration of the municipal government, and in 1900 he was one of the presidential electors of this state on the Democratic ticket. In 1902 he was honored by his party with the nomination for governor of the state, but in the ensuing election met defeat, in common with the party ticket in general throughout the commonwealth. Since 1900 he has been president of the South Dakota Business Men's Association, a strong organization and one which exercises most beneficent functions in furthering the best interests of the great state. Fraternally he is identified with Kampeska Lodge, No. 13, Free and Accepted Masons; Watertown Chapter, No. 12, Royal Arch Masons; Watertown Commandery, No. 7, Knights Templar; Tryschocoton Lodge, No. 17, Knights of Pythias; Watertown Lodge, No. 24, Ancient Order of United Workmen; Kampeska Camp, No. 2031, Modern Woodmen of America, and Lodge No. 838, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

ISAAC STAINBROOK. — Conspicuous among the leading farmers and prominent citizens of Hutchinson county, South Dakota, is Isaac Stainbrook, than whom few men in this part of the state are as well known or as highly esteemed. His father was John Stainbrook, a native of Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, and his mother, who bore the maiden name of Susan Keiser, was born in Westmoreland county, the same state. John Stainbrook was a farmer and millwright, in addition to which vocations he also manufactured spinning-wheels, made boots and shoes, worked at stone and brick masonry,—in fact was a mechanical genius who could turn his hand to almost any kind of skillful workmanship. He left his native state in 1845 for the west, migrating to Dane county, Wisconsin, where he purchased land from the government, developed a good farm and spent the remainder of his life on the same, dying in the year 1872. His widow subsequently came to South Dakota, where her death occurred, in March, 1880. Mr. Stainbrook was a man of considerable prominence in his various places of residence, and he was honored at different times with official positions, among which were those of justice of the peace, township treasurer and others. He was, with his excellent wife, a faithful, devoted and liberal member of the Methodist Episcopal church. The family of John and Susan Stainbrook originally consisted of ten children, four of whom are living at the present time, the subject of this sketch being the oldest of the survivors; the others are John, of Hutchinson county; Solomon, a resident of Hanson county, this state; and Samuel, whose home is in Clay county, South Dakota.

JOHN W. MARTIN.

1112114

Isaac Stainbrook was born in Meade township, Crawford county, Pennsylvania, on the 4th day of February, 1831, and there spent the first fourteen years of his life, removing with his parents to Wisconsin in 1845. His early educational advantages were limited and by reason of his time being required at home he had few opportunities to become acquainted with books. Reared to agricultural pursuits, he naturally turned his attention to the same after leaving home and beginning life for himself, and he continued to till the soil in Wisconsin until his removal to Iowa in 1875. After spending one year in Adair county, that state, he changed his abode to the county of Buchanan where he lived three years, at the expiration of which time he moved to Hutchinson county, South Dakota, and settled on the place where he has since resided and where he now owns a beautiful and well-improved farm of four hundred and forty acres, which has been brought to its present high state of cultivation principally by the labor of his own hands.

When Mr. Stainbrook came to Hutchinson county the country was comparatively wild, there being no roads, while the settlers were few and far between. He worked diligently to get a start, experienced the vicissitudes and hardships peculiar to pioneer life in the west, gradually reduced his land to cultivation, and at intervals made improvements as his means would admit until in due season he found himself the owner of a beautiful and well-tilled farm and a fine home, which in point of location and attractiveness is now considered one of the most desirable country residences in the county. His success in material things has resulted in a fortune sufficiently ample to place him in independent circumstances and insure a competence for the future, while his high standing among his neighbors and fellow citizens gives him a place in their confidence and esteem, such as few of his contemporaries enjoy. Mr. Stainbrook is a Democrat in politics, and as such was elected a member of the board of county commissioners, in which capacity he served very effectively for a period of three years, and in addition to this responsible position he also spent a number of years on the school board of his township. In religion he is a Methodist, in which church he was born and reared and the teachings of which have had a little to do in forming his character and shaping his life and destiny.

In the year 1854 the subject contracted a marriage with Miss Elizabeth Middleton, of Elkhart, Iowa, the union terminating in 1897. The fruits of this union were ten children whose names are as follows: Mahala, married and living in Hutchinson county; Rohenna, also married; Malvina, now Mrs. Carl Braatz, of this county; George W., who married Frances Klatz and is engaged in farming and stock raising in the same part of the state; Albert, also a farmer of Hutchinson county and a married man, his wife having formerly been Miss Anna Klatz; Harriett, wife of William Adams; Elizabeth, who married Charles Thompson; Emma, now the wife of Charles Michaelson, lives in Hutchinson county, as do also Andrew J. and John E., both of whom are married and the heads of families, the former choosing for a wife Mabel Harrington, the latter entering the bonds of wedlock with Miss Lorinda Biers.

EMIL FAUST, of Lead, is a scion of illustrious German stock, and is a native of Hessen Cassel, Germany, where he was born on the 11th of December, 1838, being a son of George and Lucia (Rodman) Faust, who were likewise born in the province mentioned, the maternal grandfather of the subject having been an eminent physician and surgeon in that section of the great empire. The paternal grandfather, Faust, was colonel of the Twenty-first Hessian Regiment, and served under Napoleon in Russia, while under General Blucher he participated in the historic battle of Waterloo, having received honorable mention for distinguished service under the great French emperor, the first Napoleon. The father of the subject was a man of prominence in his native province, having there served as state treasurer for the long period of fifty-two years and having wielded marked influence in public and civic affairs. He resigned the office mentioned during the revolution of 1848, but when the government again gained control he was re-appointed to the position. During the revolution he succeeded in concealing a large amount of government funds, which he returned upon the re-establishment of the stable government. Of the six children in the family the subject of this review was the second in order of birth, and of the number four are yet living.

Mr. Faust received his early education in the theological seminary at Fulda, which he attended from the age of ten years to that of fourteen, the work being that of a preparatory nature for the priesthood of the Catholic church, of which his parents were devoted communicants. He decided, however, that he had no inclination for the ecclesiastical life, and accordingly left school and went to Bremen, where he shipped on a sailing vessel bound for Melbourne, Australia, and in due time touched the ports of Hong Kong,

Yokohama, Honolulu, San Francisco, and thence passed around Cape Horn to South America, from which point the vessel came to New Orleans, Louisiana, where he took "French leave," deserting the ship. He remained in the Crescent City until the outbreak of the Civil war, when, in February, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Eighth Louisiana Infantry, commanded by Colonel Nicholson. He proceeded with his command to the Confederate capital, the city of Richmond, Virginia, and there the regiment was assigned to the army commanded by General (Stonewall) Jackson. Mr. Faust thus took part in the various battles in which that intrepid officer led his forces, including the battle of Fredericksburg, the seven days' battle about Richmond, and was present at Chancellorsville, where Jackson met his death, having been in the immediate proximity when the body of the valiant commander was brought in. General Ewell then assumed command, and the subject had by this time been made first lieutenant of his company, which he commanded in the battle of Gettysburg, the company entering this historic and sanguinary battle with a complement of one hundred and ten men, and forty lost their lives in this conflict, while thirty-two, including our subject, were there taken prisoners on the 3d of July, 1863. Mr. Faust had entered the Confederate service more in a spirit of adventure than one of conviction of the righteousness of the cause, and after being captured he manifested no reluctance in taking the oath of allegiance to the Union, and he then proceeded north to the city of Chicago, where, in October, 1863, he enlisted as a private in Company B, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, commanded by Colonel Davis, being finally promoted sergeant of his company. He continued in the service, in Tennessee, Louisiana and Texas, until the close of the war, taking part in no large battles within the interval, and received his honorable discharge in July, 1865, being in Texas at the time. He then joined a volunteer regiment under Colonel Williams, who is now a resident of Chicago, and was made captain of Company A. The command marched into Mexico and there joined the forces of General Diaz and engaged in bushwhacking service until Maximilian was taken prisoner, in 1867, when they were mustered out and returned to the United States. Mr. Faust came up the Mississippi river to St. Louis, and thence went to Oil City, Pennsylvania, where the oil excitement was at its height, but remained but a short time, going then to Omaha, Nebraska, and becoming one of the pioneers of that city. He located there in the fall of 1868, and was there engaged in the bakery business until 1872, meeting with marked success. He then disposed of his interests there and removed to Fremont, Nebraska, where he erected a flouring mill, at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars. Shortly after its completion the Elkhorn river flooded its banks and took the mill down stream, entailing a total loss. Mr. Faust then moved to Evanston, Wyoming, and in 1875 was among the first of the bold and adventurous spirits who made their way to the Black Hills. He started from Cheyenne in November of that year, and his party, comprising a mule train of about a dozen wagons, came through without trouble with the Indians, reaching Custer on the 24th of December, and there finding the "city" represented by a population of about twenty persons. Mr. Faust had brought supplies and there opened a general merchandise store, while he also planted ten acres of potatoes, which grew well and proved excellent provender for the grasshoppers, after whose visitation no trace of the growing vines was to be found. He also turned his attention to mining, locating some quartz claims, but being unsuccessful in the development of his properties. In the spring of 1877 he removed to Lead, where he had secured property early in the preceding year, and here he has ever since maintained his home, contributing to the upbuilding and progress of the town to a greater degree than has probably any other one man, and being one of the most public-spirited and enterprising of its citizens. After locating in Lead Mr. Faust established himself in the general merchandise business, building up a large trade and continuing the enterprise until 1896, when he sold out. From the start he also interested himself in mining in this locality. On the 24th of April, 1876, he located the Mammoth Tunnel, going in four hundred feet and being then compelled to abandon operations by reason of lack of funds. This is now one of the rich properties controlled by the Homestake Mining Company. He also located the Old Abe extension, which likewise went by default, as he was not able to continue its development, and the same now constitutes the richest ground owned by the Homestake Company. While a resident of Custer, in March, 1876, Mr. Faust took out the first shipment of gold to Cheyenne, amounting to about five thousand dollars. D. G. Tallent and James Allen were of the party, with their freighting outfits, and our subject also had a team and wagon. They were snow-bound for five days on Hat Creek, but finally reached their destination in safety. On the return trip, however, the party, comprising about forty men, were attacked by the Indians at Indian Creek, the band of savages numbering fully two hundred. In the conflict the party lost one man killed, and succeeded in holding the Indians at bay until Captain Egan came to the relief with troops from Fort Laramie, when the savages fled. Mr. Faust's army experience proved of great value to him and his companions in warding off the attacks of the Indians on this occasion. Mr. Faust located thirty-seven claims in Garden City, in 1894, and later sold them to the Penobscot Company, having applied to them the title of the Realization claims. He owns and is operating the Esmeralda group of claims in the Black Tail Gulch. In 1897 he erected the Faust block, a large and substantial brick structure, on Main street, and also the block known as the Dickerson corner, these being among the most modern and attractive buildings in the business section, and in 1902 he erected a fine modern block at the corner of Main and Seavers streets, the same being fifty by one hundred feet in dimensions and three stories in height. He has otherwise shown his public spirit in a way which has conserved the best interests of the community, and is always ready to lend his influence in the furtherance of worthy objects for the general good.

In politics, though never an aspirant for office, Mr. Faust is stanchly arrayed in support of the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with Stanton Post, No. 81, Grand Army of the Republic; is a charter member of Samaritan Lodge, No. 158, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Chadron, Nebraska, and is also a charter member of Chadron Lodge, No. 140, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of the same place, of which he is past grand master; and Dakota Lodge, No. 6, Knights of Pythias, at Lead City, of which he is past chancellor.

On the 4th of July, 1868, Mr. Faust was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Statler, who was born and reared in Pennsylvania, where the family was founded shortly after the war of the Revolution, the original American progenitor having been a soldier in the Hessian army during the struggle for independence. Mr. and Mrs. Faust have two children, William L., engaged in the drug business in Deadwood, and Maud, at home.

H. H. HANSTEIN, M. D., of Lead, is a native of Illinois, and the son of Herman and Emily Hanstein, the father born in Germany, the mother in St. Louis, Missouri. Herman Hanstein enjoyed the advantages of a liberal education in the land of his nativity, and when a young man spent eight years in various technical institutions in Paris, where he became a skilled artisan and achieved distinction as a maker of astronomical and various other kinds of scientific instruments. He came to the United States in 1875 and since that time has been superintendent of drawing in the high school, Chicago, standing high as an artist and having almost a national reputation as an instructor.

Dr. H. H. Hanstein was born in Chicago, August 26, 1877, and received his educational training in that city, graduating from the high school when a youth in his teens. He then began the study of medicine and, entering Rush Medical College, prosecuted his professional research until May 25, 1898, when he received his diploma, after which he served the usual term of hospital practice, under the direction of Dr. A. J. Ochner, one of Chicago's most distinguished surgeons. With a mind well disciplined by professional training and practical experience, Dr. Hanstein opened an office at Kenosha, Wisconsin, but after spending about one year in that city, he contracted with the Lead Hospital at Lead, South Dakota, and during the year and a half following was on the medical staff of that institution. Resigning his position at the end of the time noted, he opened an office in the Feiler Curnow block, and engaged in the general practice, which he has since prosecuted with most gratifying professional and financial success, commanding, in addition to a large city patronage, an extensive business in Lead City, besides being regularly employed by a number of mining camps in surrounding country. Few physicians of his age have achieved the prestige in medical circles which Dr. Hanstein enjoys, his career from the beginning presenting a succession of advancements that demonstrate a profound knowledge of the profession with the ability to apply the same to practice.

The Doctor is a close, critical student, seeking by every means at his command to increase his knowledge and usefulness, and the high esteem in which he is held attests the firm and abiding hold he has on the confidence of the public.

JOHN WILLIAM FREEMAN, surgeon of the Homestake Mining Company, and one of the distinguished men of his profession in South Dakota, is a native of Macoupin county, Illinois, born on the 13th day of December, 1853, in the town of Virden. Peter S. Freeman, the Doctor's father, was born and reared in the state of New Jersey, but in an early day moved to Macoupin county, Illinois, where he followed agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in the year 1874. Elizabeth Freeman, the mother, was a native of Kentucky and, like her husband, went to Illinois when that state was new, and there spent the remainder of her days, departing this life in the above county in 1886.

Reared under the wholesome but somewhat rigorous discipline of the farm, the early life of

Dr. Freeman was spent amid a ceaseless round of toil in the summer time, varied of winter seasons by attendance at the public schools. Subsequently he pursued his studies in the Virden high school and after completing the course of that institution he spent one year as a student in Blackburn University, in the city of Carlinville. The Doctor remained at home until his twenty-second year, assisting with the work of the farm, and in 1875 went to Jacksonville, where he began the study of medicine in the office of Dr. D. Prince, one of the leading physicians of that city, under whose direction he continued until entering the Miami Medical College, at Cincinnati. After attending that institution two years, he further prosecuted his studies and research in the medical department of the University of New York City, where he was graduated in 1879, after which he became assistant to Dr. David Prince, physician in charge of the Jacksonville Sanitarium. In September, 1881, Dr. Freeman severed his connection with the sanitarium to accept a position as assistant surgeon in the United States army, being sent to Fort Meade, South Dakota, where he remained in the active discharge of his professional duties until 1883. In June of that year he left the army service for the purpose of accepting the more lucrative post of surgeon of the Homestake Mining Company at Lead City, to which he was appointed on the 1st day of January following.

Dr. Freeman has looked after the medical interests of the above company for nearly twenty years, during which time he has discharged his duties in an eminently able and satisfactory manner, his career presenting a series of successes, which have added greatly to his reputation as a capable physician and skilled surgeon and given him much more than local repute in the line of his profession. During this period, he has exercised personal supervision over the Homestake Hospital, which under his able management has become one of the leading institutions of the kind in the state, and in addition to the pressing claims of his position with the company he also commands a private practice of no small magnitude. Dr. Freeman belongs to the most advanced school of his profession and has spared neither pains nor expense in preparing himself thoroughly for his exacting duties, taking advantage of every opportunity to increase his knowledge and by critical study, original investigation and research, keeping in close touch with modern medical thought. He served as superintendent of the Lawrence county board of health under the territorial government, having been elected to the position in 1885, and he also held the office a number of years after the admission of South Dakota to statehood. In 1887 he was elected president of the Black Hills Medical Society, and in 1890 was further honored by being elevated to the presidency of the Medical Society of South Dakota, the highest position within the power of the profession in this state to bestow. He is also a member of the state board of medical examiners and is a member of the American Medical Association and the National Association of Railway Surgeons, in both of which he has come into close contact with the eminent men of his profession in this country, among whom he is held in high esteem. In addition to the above relations, the Doctor has been and is still identified with enterprises outside his profession, having served for eight years as a member of the school board of Lead City, of which body he is now president, besides being a director of the First National Bank of this city, also a stockholder in the same.

Dr. Freeman, in common with the majority of enterprising men of all professions and occupations, is identified with the time-honored Masonic brotherhood, in which he has risen to a high rank, being past master of Central City Lodge, No. 22, Free and Accepted Masons; past high priest of Dakota Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons; past eminent commander of Dakota Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar; eminent commander of Lead Commandery, and past potentate of Naja Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. Politically he supports the Republican party, and while widely read and deeply informed relative to all great questions and issues of the day, national, international and foreign, the claims of his profession are such as to leave him little time or inclination to enter the domain of partisan politics.

Dr. Freeman was married at Lead City, September 10, 1885, to Miss Hattie Dickinson, who has borne him four children, namely: Carrie Erceldene, Marion E., John D. and Howard Freeman.

CHARLES W. MERRILL, B. S., of Lead, Lawrence county, was born in Concord, New Hampshire, on the 21st of December, 1869, and is a son of Sylvester and Clara L. (French) Merrill, the former of whom was born in Massachusetts and the latter in New Hampshire, while they now maintain their home in San Francisco, California. The paternal grandfather of our subject was a pioneer hat manufacturer in Methuen, Massachusetts, while grandfather French was prominently identified with the installation of stage lines in New Hampshire in early days, and also interested in the construction of the first railroad line in that state. In 1870 the parents of our subject removed to California, where the father established himself in the furniture business and where he and his wife still reside.

Mr. Merrill completed the curriculum of the public schools in San Francisco and then entered the University of California, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1891, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. After leaving the university Mr. Merrill passed four years in practical work with the United States geographical survey and with one of the leading metallurgical engineers of the world, whose specialty was the amalgamation of gold and silver ores by chemical processes. In 1895 Mr. Merrill installed his first cyanide plant, for the Standard Mining Company, at Bodie, Mono county, California, this being the first plant of the sort in that district. That the project proved a source of profit and the plant a significant success is evidenced in the fact that it paid for itself in six weeks after the plant was put in operation. Since that time a number of other plants have been erected in the same district and by the improved process it has been found profitable to re-open a number of previously abandoned mines, which are now yielding good returns. In 1896 Mr. Merrill erected a large plant at Harqua Hala, Yuma county, Arizona, this likewise being a pioneer cyanide plant, and it has netted the operating company a profit of ten thousand dollars a month on an investment of thirty thousand dollars. In 1897 the subject found his services in requisition in connection with the erection and equipping of the pioneer cyanide plant for the Montana Mining Company, Limited, at Marysville, Montana, the same having a capacity of four hundred tons per day and having been erected at a cost of one hundred thousand dollars. Up to the present time it has paid a full half million dollars in profits.

In the autumn of 1898 Mr. Merrill began a series of individual experiments in connection with treating the tailings from the mines of the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead, South Dakota, said tailings practically representing in valuation about half those with which he had previously experimented and had successfully treated. The attraction of such a low-grade proposition was due to the great ore reserves and large daily tonnage. However, the problem was one of exceptional interest and importance, and Mr. Merrill has not only added materially to his personal reputation through the success which he has gained in the connection, but has gained an economic and scientific victory as bearing upon the great mining industry of this section and other localities where similar conditions exist. The difficulties encountered were, first, to make a successful separation of the leachable portion of the tailings, owing to the fact that the battery process produces a very slimy product; and, second, to overcome the adverse condition involved in the fact that the ore carried a very high per centage of pyrrhotite, a very objectionable mineral element in connection with cyaniding, by reason of its marked affinity for oxygen, and its tendency to decompose considerable quantities of cyanide. The problem was finally solved on a profitable basis, and the economic treatment of the tailings on a large scale began with the completion, in April, 1901, of what is known as the No. 1 plant, at Lead, at a cost of three hundred thousand dollars, the plant having a capacity for treating, approximately, fourteen hundred and fifty tons a day, which makes it the largest of the sort in the world. It is earning, approximately, from thirty to forty thousand dollars a month, and the tailings treated are those secured from the great mills containing five hundred and forty stamps at Lead. In the year 1902 Mr. Merrill installed for the company its second plant, at Gayville, and this has a capacity for the treating of an average of eight hundred tons a day. This No. 2 cyanide plant treats the leachable sands from what are known as the North End mills, the Deadwood, Terra, the old Caledonia and the old Father De Smet, representing three hundred and sixty stamps. The tailings from these mills are materially lower in grade than those at Lead, though practically the metallurgical processes employed in the two cyanide plants are identical. The second plant is running at a fair profit, taking into consideration the low grade of material treated, maintaining a profit of from seven to ten thousand dollars a month.

In politics Mr. Merrill gives his allegiance to the Republican party, but has never desired official preferment, preferring to give his entire attention to his profession, of which he is an enthusiastic devotee. He is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers, the Institution of Mining and Metallurgy, of London, and the Chemical, Metallurgical and Mining Society of South Africa.

On the 9th of February, 1898 Mr. Merrill was united in marriage to Miss Clara Robinson, of Alameda, California, she being a daughter of Dr. William H. Robinson, a prominent dental surgeon and practitioner of that state, and of this union has been born a daughter, Beatrice, and a son, John.

JOHN A. SPARGO, master mechanic of the great Homestake Mining Company, was born in Polk county, Tennessee, on the 12th of October, 1853, and is a son of James and Mary (May) Spargo, both of whom were born in England. James Spargo, Sr., grandfather of the subject, was likewise a native of England, and there passed the closing years of his life, though he had spent a number of years as a resident of Cuba. In 1842 the father of the subject came to America to accept the position of mechanical engineer for a copper-mining company in eastern Tennessee, bringing machinery with him to complete the equipment of the plant. He remained in the employ of one concern for the period of thirty years and is now living retired, in company with his devoted wife, in Polk county, Tennessee, having attained the venerable age of eighty years. During the Civil war the mines with which he was connected were confiscated and worked by the Confederate government, and he continued in the same position until the original owners again assumed control.

John A. Spargo, the eldest of the three children, all of whom are living, secured his early educational training in private schools and thereafter continued his studies in the Henry Clay School, in Lexington, Kentucky, after which he took up the study and practical work of mechanical engineering under the able direction of his honored father. Later he served an apprenticeship of four years in the Corliss Engine Works, at Hamilton, Ohio, thereafter remaining there employed until 1873, when he was offered and accepted a position with the Silver Islet Mining Company on the north shore of Lake Superior, where he remained until 1878, when he came to the Black Hills. In November of that year he entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, working for a time as machinist and being promoted from time to time to positions of greater trust, until, in 1882, he was finally advanced to his present important office of master mechanic. Since that time he has had the supervision of all machinery in the mines and stamp mills and shops of the company, as well as of all construction work. When he entered the service of the company the mill was equipped with eighty stamps, and this has been increased to nine hundred, making it one of the largest and most complete stamp mills in the Union, while in the shops are made practically all machines and tools demanded in connection with the great industry. Mr. Spargo is interested in promising mining properties and is known as an able engineer and executive. In politics he renders allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 1st of April, 1885, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Spargo to Miss Ida Martin, who was born and reared in Wisconsin. She was summoned into eternal rest on the 10th of August, 1896, and is held in loving memory by all who came within the sphere of her gracious influence. She is survived by three children, Marion Clyde, Ellen May and Roger D.

ALBERT STEELE, who holds the responsible and exacting position of day foreman of the great stamp mills of the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead, is of Scottish extraction in the paternal line, though the name, in the form of Stahl, has been identified with the annals of Norway since the fourteenth century, when the original representatives in the far Norsesland immigrated thither from Scotland. The subject was born in Trondhjem, Norway, on the 6th of April, 1838, being a son of Roald and Kjersten Olsen. After coming to the United States the subject reverted to the English spelling of the name and the one which was undoubtedly the original orthography in Scotland. His father passed his entire life in Norway, engaged in agricultural pursuits, and our subject was thus reared as a farmer lad. At the age of fifteen years he accompanied a Lutheran clergyman to the northern part of Norway, where he passed four years, and he then penetrated still farther north, making three trips to Spitsbergen with Captain Carlson, whose stanch little vessel went forth for the hunting of walruses, seals and polar bears. Later Mr. Steele made a trip in a brig to Hammerfest, the most northerly civilized town in the world, and thence returned with a load of fish to Gothenburg,

Sweden, where the vessel was laden with lumber and proceeded to Hull, England, where our subject left the ship and went on a Russian brig, bound for Riga, Russia, and loaded with flaxseed for the market at Belfast, Ireland. The vessel was wrecked on the west coast of Scotland, and the members of the crew were picked up and brought into Glasgow, whence Mr. Steele shipped on the American vessel "Cornelia," of Portland, Maine, the same being bound for Brazil. When three weeks out from Glasgow the vessel was wrecked and went to the bottom of the sea, the crew and passengers taking to the boats and being picked up within twenty-four hours by a Welsh brig, and they were landed on Silly Island, whence Mr. Steele embarked on a steamboat for Penzance, Cornwall, England, thence to Red Ruth and finally to Falmouth, where he and his companions appealed to the American consul, who sent them on to Liverpool, via Dublin, where they were looked after by the same consul. There the subject sailed finally on a ship named "Henry Brigham," bound for San Francisco, and the voyage was an exceedingly rough one, necessitating the throwing overboard of one hundred tons of the cargo, while the vessel was greatly disabled, but finally dropped anchor in San Francisco in September, 1861. The vessel was here seized by the government, as it was owned in the south, then in rebellion against the Union. After being identified with the coasting trade for one year Mr. Steele went on the stampede of goldseekers to Alaska, but he immediately returned to San Francisco, where he remained until 1864, when he came to Idaho, where he was engaged in quartz mining for the ensuing three years. He then returned to California where he followed the same vocation until 1878, when he set forth for the Black Hills, arriving in February. On the 2d of the following month he entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company as a miner, and was soon afterward made foreman of the Highland mine, retaining this position two years, at the expiration of which the company gave further evidence of appreciation of his ability and fidelity by promoting him to the present office as foreman of the stamp mills, the capacity of the mills having been increased from three hundred and sixty to six hundred and forty stamps since he assumed his position as foreman. He has a pleasant home in Lead and is held in high esteem in the community. In politics Mr. Steele gives his support to the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with the lodge, chapter and commandery of the Masonic order, and also with the auxiliary organization, the Order of the Eastern Star.

In January, 1880, Mr. Steele was united in marriage to Miss Theresa Hienish, who was born in Germany, and who died in 1881, leaving one child, Theresa Marie, who is now a stenographer in the state auditor's office, at Lincoln, Nebraska. In February, 1884, Mr. Steele wedded Miss Mary Ann Leonard, who was born and reared in Pennsylvania, and they became the parents of six children, namely: Ellen, Caroline, Albert J., Agnes Catherine, John Leonard and Mary Cecilia. While out hunting September 5, 1903, Albert J. was accidentally shot by one of his companions and died a few hours later. He was a bright boy sixteen years old.

ROBERT H. DRISCOLL, who occupies the responsible position of cashier of the First National Bank of Lead, Lawrence county, was born in the city of Lowell, Massachusetts, on the 1st of July, 1857, and is a son of Cornelius and Catherine (Costello) Driscoll, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter in the city of Boston, Massachusetts. The father of the subject was a child at the time of his parents' immigration to the United States, the family settling in Massachusetts, where he was reared and educated. He was for a number of years engaged in hat manufacturing in the city of Lowell, and he and his wife now maintain their home in the historic old town of Salem, that state. Of their seven children four are living.

Robert H. Driscoll was about five years of age at the time of his parents' removal from Lowell to Salem, and in the latter city he secured his preliminary educational discipline in the public schools, being graduated in the high school as a member of the class of 1877. In the autumn of the same year (1877) he was matriculated in Harvard University, where he completed the classical course, being graduated in 1881, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then accepted the position of instructor in Latin and Greek in a private academy at Pittsfield, Massachusetts, retaining this incumbency one year, at the expiration of which he located in Spencer, Iowa, where he taught in the public schools for one year. He then, in August, 1883, came to Lead, South Dakota, and here passed the ensuing three years as principal of the public schools, in which connection he made an excellent record by greatly advancing the interests of the cause of education in his field of labor, systematizing the work and inaugurating methods which have continued in use ever since. In 1887 he was appointed the first auditor of Lawrence county, under Republican administration, and in the following year was duly elected to the office by popular vote. In 1889 he was appointed clerk of the county and circuit courts, these appointments throughout the territory having been made by the President of the United States, who selected all court officials during the territorial regime. The subject was incumbent of the office at the time South Dakota was admitted to the Union, and with other presidential court appointees, claimed the right to hold the position until the next general election, the clerks appointed by the county officials taking issue. Mr. Driscoll made a determined stand, and was the first to get his decision before the supreme court, said decision being favorable to him and thus settling similar contentions throughout the state. In 1890, the first regular election, he was chosen to fill the office, and in 1892 was re-elected, and that without opposition. In 1894 he resigned his office and accepted that of cashier of the First National Bank, of which he has since continued incumbent, having practically the executive charge of the affairs of the bank and having proved himself an able and discriminating financier. He is a member of the directorate of the Black Hills Mining Men's Association and also of that of the Lead Commercial Club, while he is also a member of the American Mining Congress and a life member of the Harvard Union, an organization of the alumni of his alma mater. Mr. Driscoll is intrinsically progressive and public-spirited and takes an active interest in all that makes for the advancement of the state of his adoption, being a loyal citizen and one who places true valuations on men and things. He is a stockholder and official in several mining companies. In politics he gives a stanch allegiance to the Republican party.

On the 16th of September, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Driscoll to Miss Catherine Barry, who was born in Houghton, Michigan, being a daughter of Thomas and Ellen Barry. Mr. and Mrs. Driscoll have two children, Robert E. and James Lowell.

AARON DUNN, one of the pioneers of the northwest and a prominent and honored citizen of Deadwood, is a native of the province of Ontario, Canada, having been born on the banks of the St. Clair river, a few miles from the city of Detroit, Michigan, on the 16th of February, 1851. His father, Aaron Dunn, was a native of England, and as a young man, in the thirties, came to America and took up his residence in New York, later going to Canada, where he was engaged in the lumber business until 1856, when he moved to Minnesota, becoming a pioneer of Mower county, that state, where he was engaged in lumbering and farming until 1870, when he repeated his pioneer experiences to a certain extent by coming to what is now the state of South Dakota, locating in the city of Sioux Falls, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1885. His wife, whose maiden name was Isabella Carnathan, was born in the north of Ireland, and her death occurred in 1870. They became the parents of twelve children, of whom three are living, the subject of this sketch having been the fourth in order of birth.

Aaron Dunn, whose name initiates this review, passed his boyhood days under the conditions of the pioneer epoch in Minnesota, and his early educational advantages were perforce somewhat limited, while he started forth for himself when but ten years of age. At that time he started for the Red river district of Minnesota, but the Indians were a source of constant menace at the time and the adventurous lad decided it better not to attempt to personally annihilate the savages, and accordingly turned about and went to the southern states, this being in 1862, in which year occurred the memorable Minnesota massacre, the Indians having gone forth on the warpath. The subject's brother, James C., was at the time a member of Company B, Fifth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and at the first outbreak of the Indians at Redwood Ferry, forty-eight of his company engaged in the conflict with the savages, and of the number only twenty returned, seven of them being wounded, while twenty-seven were killed, the other to complete the number engaged being the captain of the company, who was drowned while crossing the Minnesota river. During the war of the Rebellion the subject was in various southern states, from Missouri to Tennessee. He was too young to enlist in the Union service, but as a boy performed his part in forwarding the cause. He drove an ambulance for some time, carried dispatches and was employed in the sutler's department, and thus witnessed a number of engagements. In 1863 he was at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, at the time of the battle there, and he continued in the south until the end of the war, when he returned to the north and remained for a few months, when he went to Colorado, where he was employed for a time, thence going to New Mexico. In 1866 he made his way to Montana, making the trip via the Bozeman Cutoff and Forts Kearney and Smith. At Brown's Springs, on the dry fork of the Cheyenne river, the party of which he was a member had a conflict with the Indians, losing seven men, while afterward the party had several other conflicts with the savages, another member being killed. They arrived in Bozeman in the latter part of September, and thence Mr. Dunn proceeded to Virginia City, where he passed the winter. In the spring of 1867 he started forth on a prospecting tour, making his way into the now famous Coeur d'Alene district of Idaho and there meeting with fair success. He then went to Phillipsburg, Montana, where he took charge of the mill of the Imperial Silver Mining Company, which he placed under successful operation, while it had previously proved a failure. While under his charge eight and one-half tons of silver represented the product of the mill. He remained with this concern for a period of eighteen months and then removed to Rochester, Madison county, Montana, where he leased mines and operated the same for the ensuing two years, with good success. He then went to Trapper City, where he operated the Trapper mine for one winter, after which he went to the city of Butte, where he was offered a quarter interest and a salary of ten dollars a day to sink a shaft to a depth of one hundred feet in the Hattie Harvey mine. He accepted the proposition, sunk the shaft to the stipulated depth and then ran a level from the bottom a distance of one hundred feet, when he struck an immense body of ore running twenty-eight per cent. copper, but as thirty per cent. was the lowest that would at that time justify working, owing to the enormous charges for freight, the development did not proceed till some time later. It should be stated that this mine is now one of the most valuable portions of the great property of the Boston & Montana Mining Company, Limited. Leaving Butte, Mr. Dunn started for the Black Hills, in the summer of 1876. Upon reaching Fort Benton, then the head of navigation on the Missouri river, he found that he had arrived a few hours too late to secure the last boat for the season, and in company with one companion he purchased a skiff, in which they floated four hundred and fifty miles down the river, traveling most at night and seeing Indians almost daily, this being shortly after the great Custer massacre. At Carroll, Montana, they found a steamboat, on which they took passage to Bismarck, from which point the subject and his party came through with ox-teams to the Black Hills, arriving in Deadwood in October, 1876, and having managed to avoid attack from the Indians while enroute. He passed a month in mining in Deadwood Gulch and then joined the stampede to Wolf Mountain, but the prospects there turned out a failure and he returned in a few weeks to Deadwood. In January, 1877, Mr. Dunn secured employment in the first stamp mill erected and placed in operation in the Black Hills, the same being owned by M. E. Pinney and Robert Lawton, and being located on two cement claims, called the Alpha and Omega. This mill was started in operation the last day of December, 1876, and though there has been no little dispute as to the matter of the first mill to be put in operation, Mr. Dunn gives the assurance that this one is unmistakably entitled to the distinction. The Bald pulverizer had been started previously and run a short time, but was not a stamp mill. Mr. Dunn did the amalgamating in the stamp mill mentioned for the ensuing seven months, and he then engaged in prospecting and in speculating in mining properties, while for a time he ran the Standby mill, at Rochford, and was also identified with the operation of several other mills, at varying intervals. Since 1877 he has been interested in mining properties in Spruce Gulch, about two and one-half miles distant, by road, from Deadwood, and is there the principal owner in nineteen full claims. Up to the time of this writing about forty thousand dollars have been expended in the improvement and developing of these properties, while about three thousand tons of ore have been shipped to the smelter, the returns being from eight to twenty-three dollars a ton, while the ground is acknowledged to be rich. He also has interests in properties near Custer, where he has passed some time in prospecting within the past two years, and there he has found a belt five miles long and three wide, carrying all classes of silvanite and teluride ore hitherto practically unknown, while he predicts that the same district will equal the famous Cripple Creek district, in Colorado, in which latter he also has some interests. Mr. Dunn has made a careful study of mining, milling, etc., and is known as one of the best amalgamators in the Black Hills. In 1885 he looked over mining properties in Nova Scotia, Vermont and South Carolina for Boston capitalists and in 1890-91 performed for them a similar service in Colorado and Idaho. He now devotes practically his entire attention to the developing of his several properties, and is one of the prominent and popular mining men of the state. In 1902 Mr. Dunn made a trip to his old home in Minnesota, this being his first visit there in forty-one years. In politics he gives allegiance to the Republican party.

D. E. A. LUNDQUIST, the first settler of the thriving town of Irene, South Dakota, and in point of continuous residence its oldest inhabitant, is a native of Sweden, where his birth occurred on the 22d day of February, 1858. His father, A. G. Lundquist, a well-to-do merchant and landowner, also interested for a number of years in factories and various other industrial enterprises, departed this life in his native land in the summer of 1888. The mother, whose maiden name was Eva Wennerstrom, also born and reared in Sweden, is still living in that country, as are other members of the family, the subject and two brothers who reside in New York city being the only representatives in the United States.

Mr. Lundquist received a liberal education in the schools of his native place and after finishing the same, in the summer of 1872, took up the study of telegraphy, which in due time he mastered. For six years he had charge of a railway station in Norway, during which time he creditably filled the positions of operator, ticket agent and bookkeeper. At the expiration of the time noted he resigned his position and on December 4, 1879, left Norway for America, bound for Minnesota, reaching Delavan, that state, twenty-three days after bidding farewell to the shores of his native land. The winter following his arrival he attended a country school and after spending the next summer herding cattle, he accepted, in the fall of 1880, a clerkship in a general store in the town of Easton. During the ensuing five years he served as clerk and bookkeeper for different mercantile establishments in Faribault county, Minnesota, and in the fall of 1885 went to La Crosse, Wisconsin, as bookkeeper for a construction company which was building a branch line of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad to that city.

Severing his connection with this company, Mr. Lundquist subsequently returned to Minnesota and for some time thereafter held the position of bookkeeper and cashier in the bank at Wells, Faribault county, which place he resigned in the summer of 1887 and went to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, to enter upon his duties as bookkeeper for a contractor who was constructing into that city a section of the Illinois Central Railroad. When this work was done, he concluded to remain at Sioux Falls, and after spending five years there as bookkeeper in a wholesale house, he again turned his attention to railroading, engaging in the winter of 1892 with the Great Northern, which at that time was being constructed between the cities of Sioux Falls and Yankton. Since the completion of this work, in the fall of 1893, Mr. Lundquist has lived at Irene, with the history of which town he has been very closely identified ever since the place was located. Mr. Lundquist came to Irene before the town was laid out, locating on the present site April 15, 1893, shortly after severing his connections with the Great Northern Railroad. When the town was, in the summer of the above year, surveyed and platted, and the proprietor, Jacob Schaezel, Jr., of Sioux Falls, placed the lots on the market, Mr. Lundquist was appointed agent and continued as such until the fall of 1894, during which time he disposed of the greater number of lots, besides using his influence to advertise the advantages of the place to the world and induce a substantial class of people to locate in the new and rapidly growing town. He not only erected the first building in Irene and became the first permanent resident, but is also the father of the first child born in the town, besides being the first merchant, served on the first school board, was the first justice of the peace, and the first man in the place to be commissioned notary public. Shortly after locating at Irene Mr. Lundquist opened a general store, which he has since conducted with a large and steadily growing patronage.

Mr. Lundquist is a member of the Masonic brotherhood, belonging to Lodge No. 5, Sioux Falls, having joined the order at Blue Earth City, Minnesota, in 1885; he is also a charter member of Camp No. 2323, Modern Woodmen of America, with which society he united in June, 1894, and in addition to these fraternities, he has been identified since November, 1899, with Council No. 24, Ancient Order of Pyramids, besides belonging to the order of Home Guardians, Temple Lodge No. 1, at Canton, South Dakota, joining the last named organization in November, 1902.

On September 20, 1890, at Spirit Lake, Iowa, was solemnized the ceremony which united Mr. Lundquist and Miss Etta Capitolia Cassidy in the holy bonds of wedlock. Mrs. Lundquist was born August 4, 1860, in Missouri, and she has presented her husband with five children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Viva Rose, January 1, 1892; Vera Maud, September 19, 1893; Elsie Ruth, November 4, 1894; Esther May, June 9, 1896, and Eva Grace, April 20, 1899, all living, and all born in Irene except the oldest, who first saw the light of day in the city of Sioux Falls.

JOHN BLAIR SMITH TODD, first delegate in congress from Dakota, was a native of Kentucky, born April, 1814. Educated at West Point and entered regular army and served in Florida war, war with Mexico and the Rebellion. Delegate in congress four years, 1861-1865. Died at Yankton, January, 1872.

ALFRED ALDER, one of the leading citizens and most progressive and highly esteemed business men of Volin, Yankton county, claims the Empire state of the Union as the place of his nativity, having been born in the city of Buffalo, New York, on the 29th of August, 1846, a son of John and Mary A. (Rosenbach) Alder, of whose seven children five are living at the present time, namely: John, who is chief clerk in the Indian school at Lawrence, Kansas; Eugene, who resides in Eastman, Minnesota; Louisa, who is the wife of James A. Dickson, of Oklahoma, who was for many years superintendent of schools of Yankton county; Jennie, who is the wife of Charles Campbell, of Eastman, Minnesota; and Alfred, who is the immediate subject of this sketch.

The father of the subject was born in the city of Berwick, on the Tweed, in England, in 1817, and was there reared to maturity, having learned the trade of millwright and become an expert in the line, while he also served seven years in the English army. In 1843 he came to the United States and immediately enlisted in the army, in which he served one year. He then returned to Buffalo, where he was engaged in the work of his trade until 1857, when he came to the west, locating in Crawford county, Wisconsin, where he continued to be actively engaged in the work of his trade until his death, which occurred in 1880, while in 1871 he became the owner of a grist mill at Eastman, that state, continuing to operate the same successfully until he was called from the scene of life's endeavors, in the fulness of years and well earned honors. His wife was born in Germany, in the year 1811, and also is now deceased.

Alfred Alder, whose name introduces this sketch, secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of Buffalo, New York, being about ten years of age at the time when his parents removed thence to Wisconsin, where he was reared to manhood, learning the trade of millwright under the effective direction of his father and devoting his attention to that vocation until 1871, when he assumed a position in the mill owned by his father in Eastman. He continued to reside in Wisconsin until 1880, when he removed to Middle Branch, Nebraska, where he erected a flouring mill, successfully operating the same until 1886, when he disposed of the property and came to the city of Yankton, South Dakota, where he established himself in the mercantile business, carrying a general stock of goods. About two years later he came to Volin, and here he continued in the same line of enterprise until May, 1892, building up a large and prosperous business and being known as one of the most enterprising and reliable merchants in the county. In the month mentioned he sold out his mercantile interests and in the autumn of the same year he instituted the erection of the Volin flouring mill, which was completed the following summer, the same having proved of inestimable benefit to the people of this section, affording facilities for which there had been a recognized demand.

In politics Mr. Alder is a stalwart Republican, and it was his privilege to cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, while serving in the Union army and before he had attained his legal majority, since he was but eighteen years of age at the time. In March, 1864, he enlisted as a private in Company K, First Illinois Light Artillery, with which he served until August of the following year, when he received his honorable discharge, victory having crowned the Union arms and the rebellion been suppressed. His father also served with gallantry as a Union soldier, having enlisted, at the age of forty-seven years, in Company I, Fifth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he served for three years and four months, while his son John W. served for three years as a member of Company I, Third Wisconsin Volunteer Cavalry. The subject is at the time of this writing incumbent of the office of treasurer of the village of Volin, but he has never been ambitious for public office, though ever ready to do his part in forwarding the civic and general interests of his home town and county, to which he is signally loyal. Fraternally he is identified with St. John's Lodge, No. 1, Free and Accepted Masons, of Yankton.

On the 27th of November, 1873, Mr. Alder was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Finney, of Eastman, Wisconsin, and of their ten children nine are still living, namely: John, who is employed in his father's mill, being an able young business man; Eunice, who remains at the parental home; Bertha, who is a teacher in the public schools at Estherville, Iowa; Ephraim, who is engaged in farming in Yankton county;

Winifred, who is a teacher in the district schools of the county; and Alfred, Jr., Herbert, Bessie and Charles, who remain beneath the home roof.

NELS J. BRAKKE, who is now living retired in the village of Volin, Yankton county, where he holds precedence as president of the board of village trustees, was born in Norway on the 4th of July, 1844, and was there reared and educated. At the age of twenty-one years he emigrated to America and settled in Vernon county, Wisconsin, where he found employment during the ensuing summer, and in the autumn of the same year (1866) he came to Yankton county, Dakota, becoming one of the pioneers of the territory. He pre-empted one hundred and sixty acres of land four miles west of the present village of Volin, and some time later took a homestead claim five miles northwest of the town. He set himself earnestly to the task of improving his land and bringing it under effective cultivation, and he continued to reside on his homestead claim until 1901, when he removed to the village of Volin, where he has since lived retired from active business, though he maintains a general supervision of his fine farming property, which represents the results of his many years of earnest toil and endeavor. He came to America as a poor young man, having had but one silver dollar as the sum total of his financial resources at the time of his arrival in South Dakota, and it can not be other than gratifying to note the position which he today occupies as one of the highly esteemed and well-to-do citizens of our fine commonwealth. He was married in 1868, but has no children. In politics he gives an unwavering support to the Republican party and has been an active worker in its local ranks. He served three years as a member of the board of county commissioners. He is a member of the Lutheran church, is a man of inflexible integrity and is honored for his sterling character and for the ability which he has shown in winning his way to a position of independence. In 1901 he was elected president of the board of trustees of the village of Volin and is incumbent of the office at the time of this writing, having proved a most discriminating and faithful executive.

JOHN O. AASETH comes of sturdy Norse-land lineage, and was born in Norway, on the 3d of July, 1850, being a son of Ole Rise and Kare (Hestehagen) Aaseth, of whose seven children he is the youngest of the three survivors, the other two being Anna, who is the wife of Lars Hanson, of Yankton county, and Agnethe, who is the wife of Ole Gulbranson, who still resides in Norway. Both parents are now deceased, the father having been engaged in agricultural pursuits in his native land, where he passed his entire life. The subject of this sketch was reared on the homestead farm and his early educational discipline was such as was afforded in the schools of his native land, where he remained until he had attained the age of nearly twenty-two years. In the spring of 1872 he severed the home ties and set forth to seek his fortunes in America, whither he came as a stranger in a strange land and dependent upon his own exertions for a livelihood, since he had no capital as a basis of operations and was further handicapped in that he was not familiar with the language of the country. After landing in New York city Mr. Aaseth came forthwith to South Dakota, whose development was at that time in the initial stages, and located in Yankton county. His first employment was in rafting ties down the Missouri river for use by the Dakota Southern Railroad, which was then in process of construction. He was thus engaged during the first summer and upon demanding his salary, amounting to about one hundred and twenty dollars, he was unable to collect the same, having never yet received payment for his arduous labors in the connection. During the ensuing winter he found employment in cutting wood and during the summer of 1873 he was an employe on the steamboat "Western," plying between Yankton and Fort Benton, Montana, while during the harvest season he worked in the wheat fields. In the autumn of that year he secured a position as clerk in a general store in the village of Gayville, the enterprise being conducted by Iver Bagstad, and in due time he became thoroughly familiar with all details of the business, gaining the implicit confidence of his employer, as is evident when we revert to the fact that at the expiration of about five years he was admitted to partnership, while he has ever since been identified with the enterprise, which has grown from one of most modest order until it now represents one of the largest and most important mercantile concerns in Yankton county. In 1892 the business was incorporated under the laws of the state and at this time the title of the company was changed to its present form, that of Bagstad & Aaseth Company, while Mr. Aaseth was made treasurer of the concern, in which executive position he has since continued. The building utilized has received additions at various times, as the demands of the business required more ample accommodations, and an extensive space is now used for the accommodation of the large and varied stock, the trade of the company extending over a wide radius of country.

In politics Mr. Aaseth is stanchly arrayed in support of the Republican party, and has been an active and effective worker in its cause. He was for several years a member of the board of county commissioners, and in 1889 he was elected a member of the first legislature of the state of South Dakota, in which capacity he rendered efficient service to the state and was an able representative of the interests of his constituency. He takes an active interest in educational matters and for the past ten years has been a valued member of the school board of Gayville. He and his wife are prominent members of the Lutheran church, in whose work they take an active part. Mr. Aaseth received the appointment of postmaster of Gayville in 1902, and is still incumbent of this position, in which he is giving a capable and acceptable administration. He is well known throughout the county and is honored as one of its representative citizens and business man.

On the 14th of March, 1879, Mr. Aaseth was united in marriage to Miss Christina Welson, of Gayville, she likewise being a native of Norway, and of this union have been born eight children, all of whom still remain at the parental home, their names being here entered in order of birth: Oliver, Elmer, Carl, Julian, Lewis, Alma, Clara and Myrtle. The two next eldest sons are employed in the store with which their father has so long been identified and the family home is a center of hospitality and refinement.

REV. LAWRENCE LINK is a native of Germany, having been born in the province of Wurtemberg on the 5th of August, 1869. He received his preliminary educational discipline in the fatherland and at the age of fourteen years he came to America and passed two years with his relatives in Pennsylvania, and then came to Yankton, South Dakota, where he was under the instruction and episcopal guidance of Bishop Marty for one year, at the expiration of which he entered St. Thomas' College, at Marriam Park, St. Paul, where he completed his theological course, being ordained to the priesthood on the 2d of July, 1894, at Sioux Falls. His first charge comprised the towns of Hartford, Huntimer, Wellington and Garretson, this state, while he maintained his residence in Sioux Falls. In September of the same year Father Link was transferred to Tyndall, where he remained for a brief interval, at the expiration of which he was called to Yankton to assume charge of Sacred Heart church during the absence of the regular pastoral incumbent, Father Edward Jones, who was absent on a vacation. After the return of Father Jones the subject remained as his assistant until March 1, 1895, when the former was transferred to another charge and Father Link succeeded him in the pastoral charge of this parish, where he has since labored.

DAVID W. DONALDSON, an old and respected farmer and public-spirited citizen now living in honorable retirement in section 14, Spirit Lake township, Kingsbury county, was born April 1, 1826, in Orange county, New York, the son of James and Mary (Waugh) Donaldson, natives of Ireland. These parents came to America in an early day and after living in the state of New York until about 1829, they removed to New York city, where their son David W. spent the greater part of his early life and received his education. He is the fourth of six children, only one besides himself living at the present time, a sister, Mrs. Emile Clements, whose home is in Illinois. At the age of twenty-two, David W. went to Michigan; thence to Wisconsin and from the latter state to Iowa, locating at Dubuque, where he worked for some time as a miner. Leaving that city, he purchased a half section of fine Iowa land which he cultivated for eight years, and at the expiration of that time, in 1855, moved to Minnesota, where he continued to till the soil until the second year of the Civil war. On May 7, 1862, he enlisted in Company C, Twelfth United States Infantry, with which he served three years, during which time he participated in a number of sanguinary battles and minor engagements, including, among others, the second battle of Bull Run, Antietam, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Mine Run, and the bloody actions in the Wilderness. At Antietam the drum of his right ear was ruptured by the concussion of heavy artillery, causing partial deafness from which he has never recovered, and for years he has been obliged to use an ear trumpet to assist his sense of hearing. Mr. Donaldson was honorably discharged in 1865 with the rank of corporal, after which he returned to his Minnesota home and there carried on farming very successfully until 1882, when he disposed of his interests in that state and came to Kingsbury county, South Dakota, taking up a homestead in section 14, Spirit Lake township. He soon reduced his land to a high state of tillage; erected a fine residence and made many other substantial improvements, until his farm is now considered one of the best in the county of Kingsbury. He followed agriculture and stock raising very profitably until a few years ago when, by reason of the comfortable competence in his possession and the infirmities incident to advancing age, he rented his land and has since lived a retired life. Mr. Donaldson has always been a great reader, and takes much pleasure in his books and periodicals, his acquaintance with literature and his information relative to current, public and political questions being general and profound. He has always been a staunch Republican, remained true to his party when Populism threatened its disruption and has contributed greatly to its success in his township and county. He served a number of years as school treasurer, resigning the office in 1902, and was for six years clerk of the school board in the township of his residence. He is a charter member of the Grand Army of the Republic post at DeSmet, takes an active interest in all of its deliberations and has filled various official positions in the same from time to time.

Mr. Donaldson, in 1848, was united in marriage to Miss Mary Clark, who was born in Allegany county, New York, December 3, 1832, being the daughter of Joseph and Sarah (Bable) Clark, of that state. Mr. and Mrs. Donaldson have been married fifty-five years and are still hale, hearty and happy and seem to enjoy life much more than the majority of people. Their home is noted for its hospitality and all who know the excellent old couple esteem them for their many amiable qualities and sterling worth. They have nine children, whose names and dates of birth are as follows: Clara I., May 6, 1850; James, June 29, 1852; Elizabeth, February 3, 1855; Sarah J., February 6, 1857; Emily, April 11, 1859; Mary, January 23, 1861; Frances E., January 16, 1863; Ella, August 24, 1866, and George E., who was born June 23, 1870, all living but Clara and Frances, the former dying May 4, 1875, the latter on September 22, 1863.

ERNEST DUMONT SKILLMAN, cashier of the State Bank of Irene, Clay county, was born in Macon, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 11th of June, 1867, and thence his parents removed to South Bend, Indiana, in 1868, and from the latter place to Bethlehem, Albany county, New York, in 1872. In a country district school in the last mentioned locality the subject received his early educational discipline, while later he was there under private instruction at home. In 1883 the family came to the territory of Dakota, and the subject's education was here completed in the Sioux Falls University, where, with his brother, Willett R., now of New York city, he belonged to the upper classes in 1883-4.

Rev. William Jones Skillman, father of him whose name initiates this sketch, was born in New Jersey, in the year 1835, and was graduated in Rutgers College in 1860, while three years later he was graduated in the theological seminary of the Dutch Reformed church, at New Brunswick, New Jersey. He forthwith entered the ministry of his ancestral church, and he has been pastor of churches of that denomination as follows: Macon, Michigan, from 1863 to 1868; South Bend, Indiana, from 1868 to 1872; First Bethlehem church, on the Hudson river, near Albany, New York, from 1872 until 1883. In the last mentioned year he came with his family to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, as before mentioned. Here he organized the Presbyterian church, while later he served the Presbyterian churches of Dell Rapids and Flandreau, this state, the family in the meanwhile continuing to reside in Sioux Falls. Later Mr. Skillman held for a short time the position of professor of Greek in the Northwestern Academy at Orange City, Iowa, and finally, in 1886, he assumed pastoral charge of the Livingston Reformed church, of Sioux Falls, while he was also editor and proprietor of the Sioux Falls Journal. In 1894 he removed to the city of Philadelphia, where he was for a time pastor of the Talmage Memorial church, being now pastor of the South church (Reformed), of that city. Until 1902 he was also there associate editor of the "City and State." His wife, whose maiden name was Susie Eleanor Gilliland, was born in New York city, in 1841, and was reared and educated in the national metropolis, early becoming a teacher and later vice-principal of the leading public school of New Brunswick, New Jersey. The parents of the subject are both living and are hale and vigorous, worthy types of stanch ancestral stock and of noble manhood and womanhood.

The Skillman family is one of the oldest in America. All of the name in the United States descend from Captain Thomas Skillman, who was an English soldier and a member of the Duke of York's expedition, under command of Colonel (afterward Governor) Nicolls, to whom New Amsterdam surrendered in 1664, becoming known thereafter as New York. The subject of this sketch is of the eighth generation in direct line of descent from Captain Thomas Skillman. The family, however, is more Dutch (Holland) and Huguenot (French) than it is English, having a record, both direct and through inter-marriage, which shows such characteristic names as Petit, Aten, Van Alse, Quick, Runyon, Longstreet, Perrine, etc. It includes at least three families all the members of which bearing the name respectively spring from a common ancestor—the Skillmans, as noted, the Scudders and the Runyons. The same also may be said of all the rest except the first, though the lineage has not been worked out so closely and clearly as in the case of the three mentioned. The paternal grandmother of the subject bore the maiden name of Mary Scudder, she being the seventh by descent from Thomas Scudder, of Plymouth, Massachusetts, and later, in 1635, of historic old Salem. One of the great-grandparents of the subject was Catharine Runyon, the fifth by descent from Vincent Rongnion, who was born in Poitou, France, in 1640, and who was one of the Huguenots who fled their native land to escape the persecution incident to the revocation of the edict of Nantes. The Perrines, on the maternal side, were also Huguenots, and the maternal grandfather of the subject's mother was by birth a Spaniard, being an early resident of New York city. The Gillilands were Scotch-Irish and early became settlers of New Jersey, the mother of Mr. Skillman being of the fourth generation from John Gilliland, of the Spottswood neighborhood. His son David married Eleanor Perrine Willett, representing another of the oldest, most numerous and best known families of New York. There is English, Dutch, French, Scotch and Scotch-

Irish, Welsh and Spanish blood in the Skillman family as represented in the subject of this sketch, and so far as known, with a single exception, that of the Spanish great-grandfather on the mother's side, not one of the families thus interrelated has been in America for less than two centuries, while some, as the Scudders and others, have been established on American soil for nearly three centuries. Soldiers in the war for independence, both privates and officers, are found among the ancestors of the family in nearly all its component households.

Ernest D. Skillman accompanied his parents to South Dakota in 1883, and for the first four years after his arrival in the state he devoted his attention to farming, being associated with his brother, Willett R., in improving and cultivating his father's farm, about one and one-half miles northwest of Sioux Falls, the two brothers maintaining bachelor's hall during this interval. In January, 1887, Mr. Skillman secured a position as collection clerk for the Sioux Falls National Bank, in which he was eventually promoted to the officer of teller, retaining this incumbency until the 1st of November, 1893, when he resigned, to accept a position in the office of the treasurer of Minnehaha county, where he remained until the following June, when he resigned the office to accept that of cashier and manager of the State Bank of Irene, at Irene, Clay county, said institution having been organized in May, 1894, by Jacob Schaetzel, Jr., William A. Schaetzel and Mr. Skillman, who still remain the interested principals, while the subject has further continued to hold the chief executive office from the time of the organization to the present.

In politics Mr. Skillman gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and he was chairman of the board of trustees of the town of Irene for one year, his term expiring on the 1st of June, 1902, while for three years he was treasurer of the Irene school district, his term expiring June 1, 1903. He is clerk of Irene Camp, No. 2323, Modern Woodmen of America, having held this office for several years, while he has been correspondent of the Tri-County Homestead, No. 647, at Irene, since the time of its organization, in 1901.

His religious faith is that of the Dutch Reformed church, in which he was reared.

On the 4th of October, 1892, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Skillman to Miss Mary E. Schaezel, of Sioux Falls, she being the only daughter of Jacob Schaezel, Jr. She was born in Freeport, Illinois, on the 8th of January, 1872, and was but three years of age at the time of her parents' removal to Sioux Falls, where she was reared and educated. She was the first graduate in music in All Saints' school, in this city. Both her father and mother were born in Wisconsin, the maiden name of the latter having been Catherine Brenner, and all of her grandparents were native of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Skillman have two children, Roy Jacob, who was born at Sioux Falls, August 14, 1893, and Katherine Anna, who was born in Irene, February 10, 1895.

JACOB SCHNAIDT, one of the prominent business men of Menno, Hutchinson county, is a native of southern Russia, where he was born November 10, 1847, a son of Frederick W. and Salomea (Herr) Schnaidt, to whom were born two children, Frederick having died at the age of one year. The parents of the subject passed their lives in southern Russia, the father having there been engaged in agricultural pursuits during his active life, being a man of prominence and influence in the community, and having held for several years the office of mayor of the town of Cassel, in which he maintained his home. His father, Frederick W. Schnaidt, was born in Germany, whence he emigrated to Russia in 1807, and he likewise was mayor of Cassel for a number of years and wielded marked influence in public affairs of local nature. The subject of this sketch passed his youthful days on the homestead farm and secured such educational advantages as were afforded in the schools of the locality. Upon attaining maturity he continued his identification with agriculture, while in his native place he was married, in 1868, to Miss Catherine Mehlhaf. In 1873 they set forth to seek their fortunes in America, arriving in due time in New York city and thence coming to what is now South Dakota. Mr. Schnaidt forthwith took up a pre-emption claim in Bon Homme county, but a year later he removed to Yankton, where he secured employment as a salesman in the hardware establishment of the firm of Dudley & Hawley, with whom he remained about five years, at the expiration of which he engaged in the same line of business upon his own responsibility. Yankton being then the capital of the territory. In 1881 he sold his business and came to Menno, where he opened a hardware store, successfully conducting the same until 1887, when he disposed of the enterprise and engaged in the lumber business, this undertaking likewise prospering under his able supervision. In 1898 Mr. Schnaidt sold his lumber yard and purchased the hardware store and business which he had previously owned, and to the same he has since given his attention, controlling a trade which extends throughout the wide area of country naturally tributary to the town and being known as one of the county's most progressive and reliable business men. He is the owner of four hundred and eighty acres of valuable land in the county, and the same is well improved.

In politics Mr. Schnaidt gives an unflinching allegiance to the Republican party, in whose councils he is a prominent figure in the state. In 1882 he was elected county commissioner, serving two terms, while he was a member of the territorial legislature in 1887, serving one term. In 1890 he was elected to represent his district in the state senate, serving through the general assembly of the ensuing year and still farther proving his loyalty to and interest in the state with whose interests he has so long been identified. In 1901 he was appointed a member of the state board of charities and corrections and is incumbent of this office at the time of this writing. He and his wife are prominent members of the German Reformed church. They are the parents of thirteen children, namely: Jacob, Jr., who is engaged in the real-estate, loan and insurance business in Menno; Christoph, who is now a resident of Lodi, California; Emil, who is with his father in the store; Henry, who is a druggist in Groton, this state; Edward, who is preparing himself for the profession of dentistry; and Magdalena, William, Lydia, Helmuth, Martha, Herbert, Gideon and Theodore, all of whom remain at the parental home.

C. A. ERLANDSON, senior member of the firm of Erlandson & Johnson, general merchants, of Milbank, is another of the sons of the Northland who have contributed so materially to the industrial, business and civic development and progress of South Dakota. Mr. Erlandson was born in Sweden, on the 20th of August, 1847, and is the son of parents who passed their entire lives in their native land. The subject was educated in the excellent schools of Sweden and when but scarcely attained to manhood he set forth to seek his fortune in America. After several years he came to South Dakota and located in the newly founded village of Milbank, with whose upbuilding and business interests he has been identified, while he has attained a high degree of prosperity and is known as one of the reliable and straightforward business men and valuable citizens of the town and county in which he has made his home for nearly a quarter of a century.

JAMES DONNELLY, one of the leading farmers and stock raisers of Bon Homme county, was born April 19, 1851, at Black Earth, Dane county, Wisconsin, and is the oldest of a family of six children, whose parents, Frank and Nancy (Reegan) Donnelly, were natives of Ireland. Shortly after their marriage Frank Donnelly and wife came to America and settled in Dane county, Wisconsin, where they continued to reside from 1850 to 1861. In the latter year, with several other families, they started west and in due time reached Niobrara, Nebraska, where they made settlement and purchased government land, being among the first pioneers in that part of the state. Mr. Donnelly improved his land and lived on the same for a period of five years, at the end of which time he sold out and moved to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, locating in Running Water township, where he and his wife spent the remainder of their days, both dying in the year 1902, she in April and he in the month of October. By occupation Mr. Donnelly was a blacksmith, which trade he followed exclusively in his native country, but after coming to the United States the greater part of his attention was devoted to agricultural pursuits. As stated above, the subject of this review is the oldest of the children born to Frank and Nancy Donnelly, the others being Mary, widow of Michael O'Shea; Hannah, wife of William Rogers, of Bon Homme county; Margaret, who married James McKenna and lives in Yankton county; Frank E. lives in Nebraska, and John, whose home is in Alberta, Canada.

James Donnelly was ten years old when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Nebraska and he retains vivid recollections of the long and somewhat wearisome journey by ox-team to their new home in the west. He came with the family to South Dakota and at the age of twenty-two left the parental roof and entered one hundred and sixty acres in section 15, Running Water township, in addition to which he also took up the same amount of land in section 14, both of which tracts he at once proceeded to improve. After residing on his original purchase until 1885, he bought the quarter section where he now lives, but since then he has added to its area until the farm now includes four hundred and eighty acres of fine land, admirably situated in one of the richest agricultural districts of Bon Homme county.

Mr. Donnelly has brought his place to a high state of tillage, besides making a number of valuable improvements thereon, his elegant and commodious modern dwelling, erected in 1899, being one of the finest and most attractive country residences in the township of Running Water. While enjoying marked prestige as an enterprising agriculturist, he makes stock raising his principal business and since the year 1880 his attention has been largely devoted to this important industry. He breeds and raises a fine grade of Durham cattle, pays considerable attention to hogs and for some years past has made a specially of Percheron and coach horses, of which he keeps a large number and for which there is always a lively demand at good prices.

Mr. Donnelly is a man of progressive ideas and tendencies and to him as much as to any other individual is due the advancement of Running Water township along material lines and the prosperity of its people. In politics he has been a staunch supporter of the Democratic party ever since old enough to cast a ballot, but his inclination has never led him to seek office or aspire to leadership. Religiously he was born and reared in the Catholic church and still adheres loyally to that faith, belonging with his family to the congregation at Running Water.

In June, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Donnelly and Miss Kate Milligan, the latter a native of County Roscommon, Ireland, and the daughter of James and Mary Milligan. Mrs. Donnelly came to this country in 1870, her parents remaining in Ireland the remainder of their lives, the mother dying in 1894, the father in the year 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Donnelly are the parents of nine children: Frank, formerly a teacher in the public schools, but now his father's assistant on the farm; James E., also at home; Winnie, wife of Lawrence Wilson, of Running Water; Annie, who taught for five years in the county schools, but at this time runs a dressmaking establishment in the city of Yankton; Mary, Maggie, Katie, Zoie and Laura, the last five, with an adopted daughter by the name of Lillie Moore, a popular teacher of six years' experience, but now married to James Gayner, of Springfield, Bon Homme county, South Dakota, being members of the home circle.

JOHN SCHMIERER, JR., cashier of the German American Bank at Parkston, Hutchinson county, and recognized as one of the able young business men of this section of the state, was born in the southeastern part of Russia, being a son of John and Elizabeth (Becker) Schmierer, emigrating with his family to the United States, locating in Scotland, Bon Homme county, South Dakota, the state being at that time still a portion of the great undivided territory of Dakota. He established himself in the hardware and farm-implement business and there continued to be successfully engaged in business for several years. Subsequently he purchased the Parkston State Bank and reorganized the same, of which he has ever since been president, while the subject of this sketch was made cashier at the time of reorganization, the bank being one of the solid and popular monetary institutions of this section, while it is incorporated under the title of the German American Bank.

The subject of this sketch was still an infant at the time of his parents' emigration to America, and he has thus passed practically his entire life in South Dakota. After completing the curriculum of the public schools he continued his studies in the State University, and supplemented this by a course in the Bryant & Stratton Business College at Chicago, Illinois. After completing his work in that institution he was employed for one year by a business firm of that city, and was then compelled to resign his position by reason of a severe attack of illness. He then returned to his home in South Dakota, and for a while was employed in the Bank of Scotland, after which he was made cashier of the German American Bank of Parkston, of which position he has ever since been incumbent.

MORDECAI WILLSON, M. D.—The success achieved by this scholarly and enterprising physician and surgeon has won him recognition among the leading men of his profession, not only in the city of his residence, but throughout this section of the state, he being regarded as one of the most skilled surgeons in the northwest, while his success in the treatment of diseases peculiar to the female sex has gained him a prestige such as few attain.

Dr. Willson was born in New York state and spent his early years there, entering, as soon as old enough, the public schools, after which he prosecuted his studies for some years in an academy. Still later he entered an educational institution in Vermont, and there applied himself very closely to study, the meanwhile receiving special training on the violin, an instrument for which he early manifested a fondness. Leaving the above institution he continued his musical studies under the direction of competent instructors, making rapid advancement and becoming an accomplished violinist. He taught music and also played in a number of high-class concerts both in Canada and the United States.

During the latter year of his concert work Dr. Willson studied medicine and later entered the Detroit Medical College, from which he was graduated. Prior to his becoming a student of the above institution, he was united in marriage with Miss Helen Volser, and after his graduation removed to Kansas, where he practiced his profession very successfully during the following several years. He then located in Nebraska, where he did a large professional business, also erecting and maintaining a hospital.

Disposing of his interests in Nebraska, Dr. Willson came to Yankton, South Dakota, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession, devoting special attention to surgery and female diseases, in both of which lines his success has been such as to gain him much more than local repute. As a surgeon he ranks with the ablest in the state, having performed many difficult operations.

JOHN FAGAN.—The well-improved and valuable ranch of the subject is eligibly located, in Potter county, ten miles southeast of the thriving town of Gettysburg, and he is known as one of the energetic and successful farmers and stock growers of this section of the state.

Mr. Fagan is a native of Iowa, and his father emigrated from the fair Emerald Isle to America, first locating in the city of Philadelphia, and later becoming a pioneer of Iowa.

Mr. Fagan passed his youthful years in Iowa and Illinois, and his educational advantages were those afforded by the public schools. He came to South Dakota in 1884, and in the following spring he took up government land ten miles southeast of Forest City, Potter county, and there devoted his attention to farming and stock raising until 1900, when he disposed of his property in that location and purchased his present fine estate, which is one of the valuable places of this portion of the state, the same being equipped with substantial buildings and having excellent facilities for the raising of stock as well as for the raising of large crops of farm products best adapted to the soil and climate.

C. W. LEANING, a representative of the agricultural interests of South Dakota and one of the leading farmers of Yankton county, was born in Otsego county, New York, in 1853, and is a son of William and Phoebe A. (Thorn) Leaning. The father was born in Lincolnshire, England, April 16, 1825, and in 1851 was brought to America. He became a resident of New York, settling near Cooperstown, and there, when he arrived at years of maturity, he wedded Miss Thorn. In the year 1867 he came with his family to South Dakota, making his way to Denison, Iowa, on the train, thence to Sioux City by stage and from there coming up the river on the boat "Paragon" to Yankton, thus becoming identified with pioneer interests in this section of the state. There they resided in a house with five other families for three weeks. On coming to Yankton, Mr. Leaning secured one hundred and sixty acres of land, which he entered from the government and upon which he built a log house and began the development of a farm. Many perils and difficulties were to be borne by the early settlers. Not only did they fear Indian attacks, but their crops were destroyed by grasshoppers and all the inconveniences and difficulties of pioneer life were to be met. Mr. Leaning, however, persevered in his work until he attained success, becoming the owner of a valuable property here. At the time of the Civil war he strongly advocated the Union cause and joined the army. In 1863, while in his tent, he was wounded and lost one of his fingers. He was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and a genial gentleman of sterling worth, having the warm regard of many friends, taking pride not only in the progress of his own affairs but did everything in his power to aid in the development and upbuilding of his country. He died in February, 1903, while his wife passed away in November, 1902, and thus the country lost two of its most honored pioneers and valued citizens. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Leaning were born four children: Elsie A., Mary., C. W., and Alice, but the last named is now deceased. The daughter Elsie became the wife of George W. Owens and unto them have been born three children, of whom one died in infancy, while the son, Chauncy, and the daughter, Mary Alice, are yet under the parental roof. Their son loyally espoused the cause of his country in the Spanish-American war and became a member of Company C, First Regiment South Dakota Volunteers. He went as far as San Francisco and was there taken ill, after which he was sent home. He joined the army in May and returned in September. He was sergeant of his company and was popular with his comrades. An enterprising young business man of Yankton county, he is now engaged extensively and successfully in the poultry business, making a specialty of raising and breeding Plymouth Rock poultry.

C. W. Leaning spent his boyhood and youth in the Empire state and acquired his education in the public schools there. With the family he came to the west and has since carried on general farming in this portion of the country, becoming one of the successful and leading agriculturists of the community. He is now the owner of forty acres of good land, all of which is under cultivation and returns to him very desirable crops because of the care and labor he bestows on it. He has lived here since the days when antelopes were seen on the prairie and when there were many wolves and wild game.

On the 23d of May, 1892, Mr. Leaning was united in marriage to Miss Minnie E. Batchellor, a daughter of Watson and Elizabeth Batchellor, natives of Illinois. The father was a farmer and carpenter. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Leaning were born four children, a little boy, Mary A., Byron C. and Phebe, of whom all but the youngest died in infancy. Mrs. Leaning died in September, 1899, and Phebe, a girl of seven, is now with her father and aunt, Mrs. Owens, at the old home.

In his political views Mr. Leaning is an earnest Republican, keeping well informed on the issues of the day and giving his earnest support to his party. He belongs to the Congregational church, with which he has been identified since his removal to the west. Mr. Leaning also belongs to Modern Woodman Camp No. 1557, and in matters of citizenship is public-spirited and progressive, taking an active interest in everything pertaining to the upbuilding of his community.

W. F. STEARNS, treasurer of Douglas county, was born on a farm in Seneca county, Ohio, on the 15th of September, 1850, being the eldest of the four surviving children of John B. and Adaline H. (Kelly) Stearns. His brother Alden W. is a broker of mining stock, residing in Garden Grove, Iowa; Clara is the wife of J. D. Bartow, of Plankinton, South Dakota; and Grace is the wife of J. E. Vail, of Garden Grove, Iowa. The father of the subject was born in the state of New York, and when he was five years of age his parents emigrated thence to Ohio, becoming pioneers of that commonwealth, and there he was reared to maturity on a farm, securing a common-school education. He continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits in Seneca county until 1883, when he rented his fine farm, comprising three hundred and sixty acres, and came west, taking up a homestead claim in what is Beadle county, South Dakota. After proving up on his claim he returned to Ohio, where he remained one year, at the expiration of which he returned to South Dakota and located in the village of Plankinton, where he became prominently identified with the grain and live-stock business, continuing operations in the line until his death, which there occurred in 1890, at which time he was sixty-six years of age. He was a stanch Republican in politics, and though he never sought office he was an important factor in the councils of his party while a resident of Ohio, having been a close personal friend of ex-Governor Charles Foster, whose home was in Seneca county, and having been one of his able lieutenants in various campaigns. He was a member of the Methodist church and was a man of marked business acumen and sterling character, commanding the respect of all who knew him. His wife, who was likewise born in Ohio, is now living at Garden Grove, Iowa.

W. F. Stearns was reared on the homestead farm and secured his educational discipline in the public schools of his native county. Upon attaining maturity he assumed charge of the home farm, to whose management he continued to give his attention until 1877, when he came to the west, locating in Wilson county, Kansas, where he secured a tract of land and was engaged in farming about eight years. In the spring of 1885 he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and located in Plankinton, where he was engaged in the buying and shipping of grain until 1893, having built up a large and profitable enterprise in the line. In the year mentioned he removed to Armour, where he has since maintained his home. Here he established a general mercantile business, becoming one of the pioneer business men of the town and one of its leading citizens, and he continued this business until the autumn of 1902, when he disposed of the same, since which time he has given his entire attention to his official duties and to the supervision of his private interests.

Mr. Stearns is one of the wheelhorses of the Democratic party in this section, having been an efficient worker in its cause. In July, 1898, he was appointed to the office of county treasurer, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the regular incumbent, the late J. F. James, and in the election of November, 1900, he was returned to the office by popular vote, giving so able an administration as to lead to his re-election as his own successor in the autumn of 1902, so that he is now serving his third consecutive term as county treasurer. He was for a number of years a member of the board of education and at all times manifests a lively interest in all that concerns the welfare and advancement of his home town and county. Fraternally he is identified with Arcania Lodge, No. 18, Free and Accepted Masons; with Armour Tent, No. 18, Knights of the Macca-bees, and with Plankinton Lodge, No. 77, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 21st of October, 1875, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stearns to Miss Alice C. Iler, who was born and reared in Seneca county, Ohio, being a daughter of Conrad and Julia Iler, and the subject and his wife are the parents of four children: Pearl H., Lloyd A., Grace and Walter, all of whom remain beneath the parental roof-tree.

GEORGE D. CORD, one of the founders and builders of the attractive and thriving town of Delmont, Douglas county, and the president of the Security State Bank of Delmont, was born in Kaukauna, Outagamie county, Wisconsin, on the 8th of September, 1866, being a son of Charles and Mary (Knapp) Cord, of whose five children we enter the following brief record: Catherine A. is the wife of William Dyke, of Effingham, Illinois; Mary died March 24, 1904, and was the wife of Howard Parmelee, of Lincoln, Nebraska; Dr. Charles E. is a practicing physician at Chicago Heights, Illinois; Mark D. is a resident of Danbury, Iowa, having been engaged in the real-estate business, but being now retired; and George D. is the immediate subject of this sketch. The honored father was born in Lincolnshire, England, about the year 1835, and was there reared and educated, learning the trade of millwright. In 1854 he came to the United States, locating in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he was employed as a miller for a number of years, in different mills. Later he became the owner of a mill at Barton, that state, operating the same for several years, and while there residing his marriage was solemnized. He finally removed to Kaukauna, where he built a flouring mill, operating the same about five years, this being at the time of the Civil war. He had a large stock of flour on hand and at the time of Lee's surrender there was so great a depreciation in the value of this commodity that he met with great financial loss, being forced into bankruptcy. He then removed to Madison, Wisconsin, where he secured employment in the mills, continuing to be thus engaged until he had to a degree recouped his financial resources. He then removed to Anamosa, Iowa, where he erected mills, and in 1881 he located in Oakland, Nebraska, where he operated a mill about four years, and there he met his death as the result of an accident. He was preparing to clean a revolver, and in taking the same from a trunk the lid fell in such a way as to discharge the weapon, the shot causing his death within ten minutes. He was at the time preparing to come to the Black Hills district of Dakota, to take charge of milling properties. He was a man of excellent business ability and sterling character, was a Republican in politics, a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church and a member of the Masonic fraternity. His widow, who was born in the state of New York, now resides in the home of her elder daughter, in Effingham, Illinois, she likewise being a devoted communicant of the Episcopal church.

George D. Cord, the immediate subject of this sketch, was reared under the grateful influences of a refined and cultured home, and secured his educational discipline in the public schools, completing his studies in the high school at Anamosa, Iowa. At the age of sixteen years he secured a position in a job-printing office in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he remained one year, gaining an excellent knowledge of the "art preservative." He then entered the service of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railroad, in the capacity of station agent, remaining in the employ of this company for a period of about sixteen years, within which was located at various points on the line of the system, having been for thirteen years the agent at Coleridge, Nebraska. In 1899, at which time he was agent at Harrington, Nebraska, he resigned his position and forthwith came to South Dakota, locating in Delmont, Douglas county, the town having at the time a population of only eighty persons, and here he engaged in the real-estate business, bringing to bear in his operations the characteristic push and energy with which he is so eminently endowed. Mr. Cord has bought and sold much of the village property and also the major portion of the land for miles around, having been largely instrumental in bringing here a desirable class of settlers, who have developed rich and productive farms and have been signally prospered. It may be safely said that to him more than to any other one man is due this gratifying development of this section, while he has so ordered his course as to gain and retain the highest confidence and esteem of all. In January, 1903, he effected the organization of the Security State Bank, in which he owns the controlling stock, and he is president of this institution, which is ably conducted and which is accorded an appreciative support in the community. In politics he is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose cause he has been an active and valued worker, and during the campaign of 1902 he was a member of the state executive committee of his party, while at the time of this writing he is a member of the county executive committee. His religious faith is that of the Episcopal church, and fraternally he is prominently identified with the Masonic order, being affiliated with Arcania Lodge, No. 97, Free and Accepted Masons, at Armour; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons, at Scotland; St. Bernard Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, at Mitchell; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, at Yankton, and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls.

On the 20th of January, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Cord to Miss Carrie F. Jones, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and they have two sons, Charles B. and Arthur E.

CHARLES A. BROWN, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession at Armour, Douglas county, was born on a farm in Tama county, Iowa, on the 22d of January, 1868, and is a son of George and Sarah (Phillips) Brown, both of whom were born and reared in the state of Pennsylvania, where they were married. Soon afterward they removed to Iowa, locating in Iowa City, and later removing to Tama county, where Mr. Brown took up a homestead claim, to whose improvement and cultivation he continued to devote his attention until the early 'eighties, when he retired from active labor, taking up his residence in Waterloo, that state, where he now maintains his home, giving a general supervision to his landed and capitalistic interests. He is a Republican in politics but is a staunch advocate of the prohibition of the liquor traffic, which result he believes must be accomplished through the interposition of one of the dominating political parties. He and his wife are zealous members of the Baptist church.

Dr. Brown was reared on the homestead farm and after attending the district schools he entered the high school in Waterloo, where he was graduated. While still a student in the high school he began teaching, having been thus engaged three winter terms, and he simultaneously prosecuted his medical studies, under the preceptorship of Dr. A. L. Martin, of Clinton, Iowa, under whose direction he later continued to prosecute his technical study during his college vacations. In the autumn of 1888 the subject was matriculated in the medical department of the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, where he was graduated in the spring of 1891, receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine. For a few months after his graduation the Doctor was associated in practice with Dr. William Woodburn, of Spencer, Iowa, and he then established himself in practice at Lamont, that state, where he built up an excellent practice, remaining for a number of years. In January, 1898, he sold his practice in Spencer and came to Armour, South Dakota, and here he has gained prestige as one of the thoroughly skilled and discriminating members of his profession in the state. He is a staunch Republican in his political proclivities, and he is at the present time incumbent of the office of superintendent of the Douglas county board of health, according no nominal service but making it a point to insure the best possible sanitary conditions throughout his jurisdiction. He is a member of Arcania Lodge, No. 91, Free and Accepted Masons; Armour Lodge, No. 25, Knights of Pythias, in whose affairs he takes a particularly active interest; Armour Camp, No. 2475, Modern Woodmen of America, and Armour Tent, No. 18, Knights of the Maccabees. He is medical examiner for the two lodges last mentioned and also for several of the old-line insurance companies having local representation.

On the 19th of August, 1893, Dr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Helen M. Stewart, of Lamont, Iowa, and they have four sons, George L., Charles E., Otho S. and Leland.

D. L. P. LAMB.—Judge Lamb is now serving his third term as county judge in Charles Mix county, maintaining his residence in the town of Geddes, and merits consideration as one of the able members of the bar of the state. He is a native of the Wolverine state, having been born in Hillsdale county, Michigan, on the 15th of June, 1852, and being a son of John and Virginia (Newkirk) Lamb, of whose nine children all save one are still living. The father of the subject was born in Pennsylvania, where he was reared and educated, having grown up under the sturdy discipline of the farm. His parents came to the United States from Holland and located in the old Keystone state, where they passed the remainder of their lives. As a young man John Lamb removed to Ohio, settling near Lancaster, Fairfield county, where his marriage occurred, his wife having been a native of Westmoreland county, West Virginia, where her father was a wealthy manufacturer and slaveholder, while eventually she and several of her brothers became residents of Ohio. John Lamb was engaged in farming in Fairfield county, Ohio, until about 1850, when he removed to Michigan and settled in Hillsdale county, where he continued in agricultural pursuits, becoming one of the substantial farmers and honored citizens of that county, in which he passed the residue of his life, his death occurring in 1881, at which time he was seventy-two years of age, while his devoted wife passed away in 1903, at the age of eighty-four years.

both having been consistent members of the German Reformed church, while he was a Democrat in his political adhesion.

Judge Lamb was reared on the homestead farm and his early educational advantages were such as were afforded in the public schools of his native county. In 1875 he came west to the western part of Nebraska, where he spent about a year on the ranch of his uncle, returning home in 1876, while he continued to devote his attention to study as opportunity presented, having gained much through his well-directed application. In 1880 he came to Fort Randall, Dakota, where he secured employment in a trader's store and also secured contracts for supplying wood. In 1882 he came to Charles Mix county and entered timber and pre-emption claims, in Jackson township, proving up on the same in due time, and in the spring of 1885 he located in the village of Wheeler, this county, where he was soon afterward appointed deputy sheriff, serving one year in this capacity, and at the expiration of that period, in July, 1886, he was appointed to the office of clerk of the district court by Judge Bartlett Tripp, retaining this incumbency until the admission of South Dakota to the Union, retiring from the office in November, 1890. In the meanwhile he had continued his study of the law, and was admitted to the bar of the territory in June, 1889, since which time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession to a greater or less extent. The winter after his retirement from the office of clerk Judge Lamb engaged in the abstract business, in partnership with Frank Adams, whose interest in the enterprise he purchased in 1892, and he still conducts an abstract business in Wheeler. In 1894 he was elected to the office of state's attorney, on the Democratic ticket, serving two years, and in 1896 the financial policy of the Democracy failed to meet his approval and he transferred his allegiance to the Republican party, being an active worker in the presidential campaign of that year. In 1896 he was the candidate of his party for the office of county judge and was elected by a gratifying majority, but in the election of 1898 he was defeated for the same office, while in 1900 he was again elected to the bench and was chosen as his own successor in 1902, being now on his third term and having proved a most impartial and fair-minded member of the judiciary of the state. After the town of Geddes was platted and its settlement was instituted, in 1900, Judge Lamb removed from Wheeler to the new and enterprising town, with whose phenomenal progress and growth he has been thus identified from the start. He was appointed United States commissioner in January, 1902, and is still incumbent of this office, being one of the most prominent and influential citizens of the county in which he has so long maintained his home and in whose welfare he has an abiding interest. While a resident of Wheeler he served as postmaster during both administrations of President Cleveland, while for several years he has held the office of notary public. He and his wife are members of the Congregational church, and fraternally the Judge is identified with Geddes Lodge, No. 135, Free and Accepted Masons, and Mitchell Chapter, No. 16, Royal Arch Masons.

On the 6th of May, 1890, Judge Lamb was united in marriage to Miss Caroline McLain, of this county, and they are the parents of four children, Charles E., Fred, Daniel L. P., Jr., and Iril C.

HON. JOHN S. BEAN is a native of the old Granite state, having been born in Warner, Merrimac county, New Hampshire, on the 16th of February, 1839, a son of James and Marinda (Stewart) Bean, and the old homestead in which he first saw the light of day was likewise the birthplace of his honored father, who there passed his entire life, which was devoted to agricultural pursuits. He lived to attain the venerable age of eighty-two years and traced his lineage back to one of two brothers, John and David Bean, who were born in Scotland, whence they went to England, from which "tight little isle" they emigrated to America in 1668, settling near historic old Plymouth, in the colony of Massachusetts, whence their descendants later scattered through various parts of New England. The mother of the subject was likewise born in New Hampshire, whither her parental grandparents came from Ireland. She died at the age of thirty years, and of her three children the subject is the only one living at the present time. James Bean became a member of the Know-nothing party at the time of its organization and later became a radical Republican, and while he never sought official preferment he was called upon to serve on the town board for many years and also held other offices of local trust.

John S. Bean was reared to the sturdy discipline of the New England farm and his early educational training was secured in the common schools, and supplemented by a two-years course in the New Hampton Academy. It was his desire to be graduated in this institution, but his financial resources reached so low an ebb that he was compelled to withdraw at the end of two years, and he then, at the age of nineteen, began teaching in the schools of his native state, devoting his attention to the pedagogic profession for three winters. In March, 1861, he left the ancestral home and set forth upon his independent career, being dependent upon his own resources in facing the battle of life. He came west to Wisconsin, where he called upon his uncle, C. K. Stewart, whom he found confined to his bed with an illness which promised to be protracted, and under these conditions he was pressed into service and took charge of his uncle's farm. The Civil war commenced in April of that year and the subject was most anxious to at once tender his services in defense of the Union, but he was not able to leave his uncle until the 22d of October, 1862, when he enlisted as a private in Company D, Sixteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he proceeded to the front, the regiment being assigned to the Army of the Tennessee. The regiment was in Prentice's division at the memorable battle of Shiloh, and this division was captured by the enemy, our subject having escaped this fate by reason of the fact that he had been wounded on the morning of the same day and thus incapacitated for service. He was in the hospital at Savannah, Georgia, and Mount Vernon, Indiana, about three months, after which he returned to Wisconsin and was detailed to recruiting service, being located in turn at Columbus, Beaver Dam and Madison. In February, 1863, Mr. Bean rejoined his regiment, at Lake Providence, Louisiana, but the effects of the wound in his arm were such that he could not handle a gun, and he was thus detailed as clerk of courts martial and the quartermaster's department, serving in this capacity for three months, at the expiration of which the court was disbanded and he was then detailed to the quartermaster's department alone. He was finally made chief clerk under the contraband bureau. After serving three months he went with his regiment to Vicksburg, but did not take part in the engagement there, and the winter was passed in Redbone, Mississippi, whence they returned to Vicksburg in the spring, Mr. Bean's company at this time reorganized and Mr. Bean was commissioned as second lieutenant in a colored company, with which he later took part in the ten-days siege before Blakely and the fourteen-days siege of Mobile. Still later the regiment embarked on a transport for Selma, Alabama, and while enroute learned of Lee's surrender. The subject was thereafter on provost duty for several months, and the command was finally sent to Baton Rouge, where they received honorable discharge on the 4th of January, 1866. Before this he had been promoted to first lieutenant. Mr. Bean then visited his old home in New Hampshire, and shortly afterward went again to Wisconsin. At the time of his discharge he was importuned to remain in the south as a member of a regiment which there continued in service two years after the close of the war, and though he was offered a commission as captain he did not deem it expedient to accept the overtures.

After his return to Wisconsin Mr. Bean engaged in farming, in Dodge county, becoming the owner of a good property, and there he remained until May, 1882, when he came to Douglas county, South Dakota, taking up a pre-emption claim four miles northeast of the present village of Armour, the county seat, where he continued to devote his attention to the improvement and cultivation of his farm until the autumn of 1890, when he took up his residence in Armour. In November of the same year he was elected a member of the state senate, serving one term, and in the fall election of 1892 he was chosen to represent his district in the lower house of the legislature, in which he likewise served one term. He then engaged in the real-estate and insurance business in Armour and later also became identified with the undertaking business here, having now retired from the two former enterprises. He served one year as township treasurer and three years as township clerk, while his was the distinction of having been elected the first county clerk and register of deeds after the reorganization of the county. He was incumbent of the office of justice of the peace for several years and since 1895 he has held the office of weighmaster at Armour. At the present time he is a member of the board of county commissioners. His religious faith is that of the Free-will Baptist church, but as there is no organization of this denomination in Armour he attends the services of the Baptist church. He is a charter member of Arcania Lodge, No. 97, Free and Accepted Masons, of which he was the first worshipful master, serving three years, and he is an honored member of O. P. Morton Post, No. 51, Grand Army of the Republic, of which he is now serving for the sixth consecutive year as commander.

On the 26th of October, 1864, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Bean to Miss Ellen C. Eastman, of Warner, New Hampshire, who proved to him a devoted wife and helpmeet until she was summoned into eternal rest, on the 19th of August, 1890. They became the parents of two children. Mabel died at the age of twenty-two years, and Jennie, the wife of George E. Sanders, of Armour, with whom the subject now makes his home.

HENRY C. TUCKER, of Geddes, editor and publisher of the Charles Mix County News, was born in New York, on the 30th of October, 1854, being a son of Samuel and Martha (Crumb) Tucker, of whose seven children four are yet living. The father of the subject was born in Madison county, New York, whither his father removed from Massachusetts, while the father of the latter was a soldier under General Putnam in the war of the Revolution. In one of the battles in which he took part his hat was almost shot to pieces, and General Putnam presented him with a new hat, recognizing the bravery which he had displayed in thus becoming a mark for so many bullets. Upon attaining manhood the father of our subject engaged in farming and hop growing in his native county, having planted the first field of hops in that section of the state, and in connection with this line of enterprise he became very successful, being one of the substantial farmers and honored citizens of Madison county at the time of his death, which occurred in 1888, at which time he was sixty years of age. His widow still survives him and resides on the old homestead farm. He was a Democrat in politics and ever took a deep interest in public affairs, though he never sought official preferment.

Henry C. Tucker was reared on the homestead farm and early began to lend his aid in connection with its cultivation. After attending the public schools of the locality he continued his studies in the DeRuyter Institute and the New York Central Conference Seminary, an institution conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church. In 1875 he came to the west and located in Shelby county, Iowa, where he bought a tract of land and engaged in agricultural pursuits, while he also invested in a ditching machine, which he operated throughout that locality for several years, being one of the pioneers in the locality and finding his machine in much demand. In 1883 he disposed of his interests in Iowa and came to Charles Mix county, South Dakota, being numbered among the first settlers in the county. He filed on a claim in Jackson township, but after one year sold his relinquishment to the same, and in July, 1884, in company with Charles W. Pratt, he purchased the Charles Mix County News, a weekly paper, which was at that time published in the village of Darlington, its founding dating back only to the preceding November. In October, 1884, they removed the plant to Edgerton and shortly afterward our subject purchased his partner's interest in the enterprise and thereafter continued the publication of the paper in Darlington until 1900, when he removed his plant to the new town of Geddes, his office building having been the third building erected in the town and his paper the first to be published in the town. The office of the News is well equipped with modern machinery and other accessories, the old hand presses originally utilized having been replaced by those of modern design, while the paper has an excellent circulation through the county. Mr. Tucker is one of the town's most enthusiastic and loyal citizens and is at the present time president of the village council, and while a resident of Edgerton he acted as postmaster of the place. He is a stanch Republican in his political adherence and has made his paper an effective exponent of the party cause. Fraternally, he is identified with Geddes Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, and Signal Camp, No. 444, Modern Woodmen of America, of which latter he is venerable consul.

Mr. Tucker was united in marriage to Miss Victoria Ashby, of Shelby county, Iowa, and they are the parents of four children, Maud, who is the wife of William Fowler, who is engaged in the lumber business in Geddes; Roy, who is in the office with his father; Bert, who remains at the parental home, and Ella, who is the wife of Charles Zink, of this county.

HORACE EUGENE THAYER, mayor of Canton, Lincoln county, was born at Blissfield, Lenawee county, Michigan, on the 28th of February, 1859, being a son of Andrew J. and Phoebe A. (Hill) Thayer. His father is of the ninth generation of the family in America, being a lineal descendant of Thomas Thayer, who settled in Braintree, Massachusetts, in 1630, as one of its original colonists, having come to the new world from Braintree, Essex county, England. Andrew J. Thayer was born in Cameron, Steuben county, New York, on the 12th of February, 1829, and his vocation in life has been that of farming. He is a veteran of the war of the Rebellion, having enlisted on the 27th of February, 1863, as a member of Company K, Eleventh Michigan Volunteer Infantry, which was attached to the Second Brigade of the First Division of the Fourteenth Army Corps, and he served until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge. He is now a resident of Hampton, Iowa, and his cherished and devoted wife is also living. She was born on the 8th of April, 1839, at Petersburg, Lenawee county, Michigan, her parents having been numbered among the earliest settlers of that county, whither they emigrated from Vermont, in the year 1830, nearly a decade before Michigan was admitted to statehood.

Horace E. Thayer received his early educational training in the public schools of Allamakee county, Iowa, and when seventeen years of age he began teaching in that county, being thus successfully employed for eight terms. He then entered the telegraph office of the Iowa Central Railroad at Mason City, Iowa, in 1883, and there he devoted a period of six months to learning the art of telegraphy. In August of that year his marriage was solemnized, and immediately thereafter he removed to Mason City, Iowa, where he was given the position of night operator in the station of the Iowa Central Railroad, retaining this incumbency until the autumn of the following year, when he received promotion from the hands of the company, being made railway billing clerk at Hampton, Iowa. This office he filled until the autumn of 1886, when he resigned from the employ of the Iowa Central Company and returned to Mason City, where for six months he held the position of night agent in the general offices of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, being then promoted to the position of billing agent and two weeks later to that of cashier, in tenure of which responsible office he there continued for the ensuing five years, at the expiration of which, in 1891, he received the promotion, over several older employes, to the position of agent for the company at Canton, South Dakota, where he entered upon his executive duties on the 2d of July of that year. He retained this position for the long period of eight years, his service being most acceptable to the company and gaining him still further commendation, but his health had in the meanwhile become somewhat impaired and this fact, coupled with a desire for a change of occupation, led him to resign his position on the 1st of May, 1899. He then entered into partnership with his brother-in-law, Thomas S. Stinson, and engaged in the general merchandise business in Canton, the firm securing most eligible and attractive quarters in the two-story stone building known as the Postoffice block, while to the new store was given the name of the Enterprise, a designation which is most consistently applied. The concern has taken a foremost position by reason of the progressive ideas and correct methods brought to bear, and the business controlled at the present time is second to none of similar character in the county, while both of the interested principals command the unqualified confidence and regard of all who know them. The entire business and stock of the Enterprise was purchased, February 8, 1901, by Horace E. Thayer, the enterprise being now conducted under the firm name of Horace E. Thayer.

In politics Mr. Thayer has ever given a staunch allegiance to the principles of the Republican party and he has shown a deep interest in all that concerns the welfare and progress of his home city and county. He has served three terms as a member of the board of aldermen of Canton, having been first elected in 1893, while he was chosen as his own successor in the following year, being again elected to the office in 1900. In 1902 he was elected to the mayoralty of the city, for a term of two years, and he has given a most able and business-like administration of the municipal government and has gained unequivocal endorsement as a progressive and public-spirited executive. Fraternally, he is identified with the Knights of Pythias and the Masonic order. He became affiliated with the lodge of the former in Mason City, Iowa, in 1890, and in 1892 transferred his membership to Canton Lodge, No. 52, in Canton, of which he is past chancellor commander. In June, 1902, he was initiated as entered apprentice in Silver Star Lodge, No. 4, Free and Accepted Masons, in which he was duly raised to the master's degree.

At Eldora, Iowa, on the 8th of August, 1883, Mr. Thayer was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Bell Young, of Ackley, that state, she being a daughter of Joseph H. Young, who was a valiant soldier in the Civil war, in which he served as a member of Company H, One Hundred and Eighty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, enlisting in 1863 and receiving an honorable discharge at the close of the great conflict which determined the integrity of the Union. Mr. and Mrs. Thayer have three daughters: Neva Bell, who was born in Mason City, Iowa, on the 1st of April, 1884; Vera Luella, who was born in Canton, South Dakota, July 31, 1894, and Nila May, who was born in Canton, May 26, 1897.

RICHARD G. PARROTT, postmaster of the thriving town of Pollock, Campbell county, is a native of the city of Chicago, where he was born on the 22d of November, 1864, being a son of John and Sarah Parrott. He was reared to maturity in the great western metropolis, receiving his early educational training in the public schools and learning the trade of moulder in his youth. In 1883, at the age of nineteen years, Mr. Parrott, in company with his widowed mother, his five brothers and two sisters, came to what is now Campbell county, South Dakota, this being nearly a decade before the admission of the state to the Union, and after a few months he returned to Chicago, where he remained until the spring of the following year, when he came once more to Campbell county, and shortly afterward entered claim to a tract of government land near the present village of Pollock. He began the improving of this property and also conducted farming and stock growing. When the line of the Sioux Railroad was built through Pollock, in the autumn of 1901, he located in this village. In January of the following year the postoffice was here established, replacing those at Flint and Lagrace, and he was made postmaster in the new town. Members of the family have served as postmaster in each of the towns mentioned, as well as at Rusk, and all have been discontinued since the establishment of the office at Pollock, from which point also is served the former postoffice of Vanderbilt. His religious faith is that of the Presbyterian church, of which his wife likewise is a member, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, being a member of the lodge at Herrick, South Dakota. He still retains possession of his farm of three hundred twenty acres, and he has contributed his quota to the development and upbuilding of this section of the state.

On the 23d of November, 1891, Mr. Parrott was united in marriage to Miss Florence Benkart, who was born in Iowa, whence her father, John C. Benkart, came to South Dakota in 1883, becoming one of the pioneers of Campbell county, but being now a resident of Carthage, Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Parrott have three children, Bertha, Robert and Mabel.

JOHN C. STOUGHTON, the popular postmaster of the thriving little village of Geddes, was born in Ionia county, Michigan, on the 13th of July, 1844, and is a scion of a family which has been identified with the history of the United States from the time of the Revolutionary epoch. His parents, Samuel E. and Emily H. (Park) Stoughton, were both born in the state of New York, and of their ten children only two survive, the subject of this sketch and his brother, Charles J., who is a resident of Howard City, Michigan. The father of the subject was born on the 17th of April, 1814, and his devoted wife was born on the 20th of February, 1816, and both were children at the time when their respective parents removed from the old Empire state and became pioneers of Michigan, settling in the vicinity of the present beautiful city of Detroit, and in that state both were reared to maturity, their marriage being solemnized May 21, 1835. After he had attained manhood Samuel E. Stoughton purchased a tract of government land in Ionia county, Michigan, where he developed a farm from the virgin forest, becoming one of the substantial citizens of that section and ever retaining the high regard of all who knew him. On the old homestead farm which he had reclaimed for the wilderness he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in 1872, while his wife passed away in 1883. Mr. Stoughton identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization and ever afterward remained a staunch advocate of its principles, and while he was never ambitious for political preferment he was called upon to serve in various offices of local trust. His father, Dellucine Stoughton, was a veteran of the war of 1812, and his grandchildren recall that in his later years he found pleasure in entertaining them by singing the old army songs. He was a son of Amaziah Stoughton, who came with his parents from England to the United States about the time of the Revolution, the family settling in the state of New York, with whose annals the name has long been identified, and thus the subject of this sketch is of the fifth generation of the family in America.

John C. Stoughton, whose name initiates this review, was reared to the discipline of the old homestead farm in Ionia county, Michigan, and after availing himself of the advantages of the common schools he entered, in 1865, Kalamazoo College, in Kalamazoo, that state, where he continued his studies for two years. His financial resources then reached a low ebb, and he accordingly left college and devoted the following year to teaching in the schools of his native state. He then removed to Kansas, where he continued his pedagogic labors, in Atchison and Leavenworth counties, for the ensuing four years. His father's death occurred in 1872, as before noted, and he was appointed administrator of the estate, returning home to settle up the affairs of the same. He was married the following year and decided to remain in Michigan, where for a number of years he devoted his attention to teaching during the winter terms, while farming constituted his vocation during the remaining months of the year. In 1883, in company with four others, Mr.

JOHN C. STOUGHTON.

Stoughton came on a prospecting trip to South Dakota, with a view of selecting a permanent place of residence. The party came by railroad as far as Plankinton, where they purchased a mule-team and wagon and set forth to look over the country to the west of that point, and three of the number, of whom our subject was one, finally filed claims to a quarter section each of land in Charles Mix county, Mr. Stoughton securing an excellent claim seven miles northwest of the present village of Geddes, whose site was unmarked by any habitation at that time. He settled on his claim and in September of the following year his wife joined him in the new home. He later purchased an adjoining quarter section, and during the intervening years he has brought his fine farm of three hundred and twenty acres under most effective cultivation, has made excellent improvements on the same and has been successful in his efforts. In the spring of 1900 Mr. Stoughton was appointed postmaster of the new town of Geddes, to which he forthwith removed with his family, taking charge of the office in June of that year, and having since remained incumbent. He is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party and has taken a lively interest in the promotion of its cause. In the autumn of 1883 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners, in which capacity he gave most efficient service, retaining the office three years. It may be said that the postoffice at Geddes was established in June, 1900, in which month our subject assumed control, and further data in the connection will indicate the rapid upbuilding and substantial increase in population of the town. In April, 1902, only one year and nine months after the establishing of the office, it was placed on the list of presidential offices, the salary of the postmaster being at the time raised to eleven hundred dollars a year, while three months later it was raised to twelve hundred, in accordance with the increase of business, while in July of the present year (1903) a further increase to fourteen hundred dollars was made. Mr. and Mrs. Stoughton are members of the Congregational church, and he was one of those prominently concerned in effecting the erection of the church of this denomination in the village of Jasper, the property being later sold to the Methodist Episcopal society, who now own and occupy the edifice. Mr. Stoughton was initiated in the Masonic fraternity in 1869 and has been a charter member of two lodges in Charles Mix county, this state, being now affiliated with Geddes Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons.

On the 4th of March, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stoughton to Miss Selena V. Bovee, of Greenville, Michigan. She was born in Lenawee county, Michigan, being a daughter of M. and Julia Bovee, and of her marriage has been born one son, Elmer B., who was assistant postmaster at Geddes. He was born in Greenville, Michigan, on the 14th of April, 1870, and after attending the public schools entered Ward Academy, in Charles Mix county, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1898, after which he was for one term a student in Yankton College, having later been engaged in teaching for a short time. He has recently (1904) resigned his position in the postoffice and has removed to Lyman county, South Dakota, where he has taken up a homestead, on which he expects to make his future home.

JOHN F. COMSTOCK, now holding the responsible position of government farmer on the Cheyenne Indian reservation, maintaining his headquarters at Whitehorse Station, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in Columbia county, on the 13th of October, 1861, and being a son of George W. and Teresa Comstock, natives of the state of New York. When the subject was about ten years of age, in 1871, his parents removed to Benton county, Iowa, where they remained until the spring of 1885, when they came to South Dakota and took up their abode near Highmore, Hyde county, where the father has since been actively engaged in agricultural pursuits. All of the five children in the family are living at the present time, the subject of this sketch having been the third in order of birth.

J. F. Comstock secured his early educational training in the public schools of Iowa, and accompanied his parents on their removal to South Dakota, being independently engaged in farming in Hyde county for a number of years. In 1892 he removed to Pierre and was there engaged in teaming until 1894, when he was elected county auditor of Stanley county, in which office he served two years. In 1898 he was appointed to his present position as government farmer on the Cheyenne reservation. He is impressed with the fact that the Indians will not attain any great degree of success as farmers here, partially owing to the condition of the reservation land, much of which is not available for cultivation. The Indians have shown a greater aptitude and predilection for stock raising and many of them have been prospered in connection with this industry, some of them having more than one hundred head of cattle. In politics the subject is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party.

On the 6th of October, 1885, Mr. Comstock was united in marriage to Miss Laura Moore, daughter of David Moore, a well-known resident of Fort Pierre and the subject of an individual sketch on another page of this work. Mr. and Mrs. Comstock have one child, George, who was born on the 4th of August, 1886.

OSCAR SHERMAN GIFFORD, superintendent of the Hiawatha Insane Asylum, at Canton, South Dakota, was born October 20, 1842, at Watertown, New York. While yet young he accompanied his parents upon their removal to Rock county, Wisconsin, but subsequently lived with his maternal grandfather, David Resseguie, in the Adirondack mountains in New York. In 1853 he removed with his parents to Boone county, Illinois, and in October, 1871, he settled in Lincoln county, Dakota, where he has since resided.

Mr. Gifford received a common school education, which was supplemented by attendance at the Beloit (Wisconsin) Academy. During the war of the Rebellion the subject evinced his patriotism by entering the service of his country, serving one and a half years in the engineer corps and one year in the Elgin Battery, Illinois Light Artillery. After his discharge from military service, Mr. Gifford entered upon the study of law and in 1871 he was admitted to the bar. In 1874 he was elected county judge of Lincoln county, but declined to serve, and in June of the following year he formed a law partnership with Mark W. Bailey, since which time he has continuously been actively engaged in the practice of his profession.

Mr. Gifford has several times been engaged in public service and has always acquitted himself creditably. He was a member of the constitutional convention which convened at Sioux Falls in September, 1883, and had been mayor of the city of Canton during 1881 and 1882. In November, 1884, he was elected a delegate to congress from Dakota territory, being re-elected a delegate in November, 1886, and in 1889 he was elected a member of congress from South Dakota, serving in the forty-ninth, fiftieth and fifty-first congresses as a Republican. While a member of that body Mr. Gifford served as a member of the committees on agriculture, Indian affairs and public buildings, which committees had charge of the more important matters in which the people of Dakota were interested. It was largely through the subject's efforts that the Crow, Sisseton, Sioux and Wahpeton Indian reservations were opened for settlement and Indian industrial schools were established at Pierre and Flandreau and a large number of day schools opened in the Indian country. The question concerning the division of Dakota and the admission of North Dakota and South Dakota as states was the most important measure before congress while Mr. Gifford was a member thereof and it was largely through his efforts, aided by the sentiments of his constituents, that Dakota was divided and two states formed from the immense territory. The measures known as the "omnibus bill," by which North and South Dakota, Montana and Washington became states, was approved by the President and became a law February 22, 1889, and, as before stated, at the first election thereafter, in October, 1889, Mr. Gifford was elected a representative from this state. Mr. Gifford reported to the house and had full charge of the measure for the construction of a public building in Sioux Falls. In November, 1901, Mr. Gifford received the appointment as superintendent of the Hiawatha Asylum, at Canton, a United States Indian insane asylum. He entered upon the discharge of his duties with an intelligent appreciation of its responsibilities and has discharged the same to the full satisfaction of every one.

In May, 1874, the subject was united in marriage with Miss Phoebe M. Fuller. Fraternally, Mr. Gifford has long been actively and prominently identified with the time-honored order of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons. He was initiated, passed and raised as a Master Mason in 1877, and in 1879 he was elected worshipful master of Silver Star Lodge at Canton. He was elected grand treasurer of the grand lodge of Dakota in 1881, was elected grand master of the grand lodge in June, 1882, and was re-elected to that position in June, 1883. In politics he has always been an earnest and active Republican.

HOWARD G. FULLER, judge of supreme court, born at Glens Falls, New York. Educated himself, studied law in a lawyer's office and for several years devoted himself to educational work as teacher and county superintendent. Came to Dakota in 1886 and elected judge of sixth circuit in 1889. On supreme bench since 1894.

FRANK P. SMITH, M. D., one of the prominent and honored members of the medical profession in Canton, Lincoln county, was born at Rouse Point, Clinton county, New York, on the 2d of November, 1852, his father being a farmer by vocation. The Doctor was thus reared on the old homestead, and received his early educational discipline in the common schools of his native county, while later he prosecuted his studies in the high school at Burlington, Vermont, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1872. He then returned to his home in New York and assisted in the work and management of the farm until he had attained the age of twenty-four years, having in the meanwhile determined to prepare himself for the medical profession. For a time he was a student in the Albany Medical College, in the capital city of the Empire state, and then was matriculated in the celebrated Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in the city of New York, in which he was graduated in 1877, receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine and coming forth well fortified for the practical work of his chosen vocation. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession in his old home town of Rouse Point, where he remained two years, at the expiration of which, in 1879, he came to the territory of Dakota and located in Canton, where he has ever since been successfully engaged in the practice of his profession, being one of the leading physicians and surgeons of this section of the state and being known to practically every person in the county. He was the first superintendent of the board of health of the county, retaining this incumbency many years, while he also served long and faithfully as county physician and as local surgeon of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. For sixteen years he was a member of the board of pension examining surgeons for Lincoln county, and has been secretary of its board since 1886. He is a Democrat in politics, and has ever shown a deep interest in the industrial, civic and political progress of his adopted city, county and state.

On the 4th of October, 1893, Dr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Helen Miller, who was born in the state of Wisconsin, being a daughter of William H. Miller, Sr.

NEWMAN C. NASH, well known as the editor and publisher of the Sioux Valley News, at Canton, is a native of the old Empire state, having been born in Orleans county, New York, on the 15th of February, 1848, and being a son of Francis and Catherine V. (Curtis) Nash. His father was born in Genesee county, New York, of English and Holland Dutch descent, and was by vocation a farmer. The mother of our subject was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and in the agnatic line was of Holland Dutch descent, while her mother was a representative of families established in New England in the colonial epoch of our national history. Francis and Catherine V. Nash became the parents of nine children, of whom the subject of this review was the eldest son, while of the number seven are living at the present time.

Newman C. Nash passed his early childhood days on the homestead farm in Orleans county, New York, and was seven years of age at the time of his parents' removal to Rock county, Wisconsin, where his father became a pioneer farmer, and there the parents passed the remainder of their lives, honored by all who knew them. The subject was reared to the sturdy discipline of the home farm, duly availing himself of the advantages afforded by the common schools of the locality and period, and he was still a member of the parental household at the time when the dark cloud of civil war obscured the national horizon. When but seventeen years of age he enlisted as a private in Company A, Thirteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he continued in active service for four years and three months, participating in all of the many engagements in which his command was involved, so that the history of his regiment is practically the history of his faithful and valiant career as a soldier of the republic. He received his honorable discharge on the 28th of December, 1865.

As soon as he was mustered out Mr. Nash returned to Rock county, Wisconsin, and was thereafter engaged in agricultural pursuits near the city of Janesville, that county, until 1871, when he came as a pioneer to the territory of Dakota. He arrived in Lincoln county in February of that year and in Canton township took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, perfecting his title in due course of time and forthwith instituting the improvement and cultivation of his land. He continued to reside on this ranch until the autumn of 1876, when he removed to the city of Canton, which was then a small frontier village, and in January of the following year he initiated his career in connection with the "art preservative of all arts," by purchasing a half interest in the plant and business of the Sioux Valley News, of which he became the sole proprietor in the following April. This was one of the first papers published in the territory, and he has presided over its destinies consecutively from the time noted. The paper is a model in the matter of letter press, discrimination is displayed in the news columns and those devoted to miscellaneous reading, while even a cursory glance establishes the fact that the editorial department is under the control of a man who keeps himself well informed regarding matters of public moment and who writes forcibly and with directness in expressing his opinions. The News has a circulation of fourteen hundred copies and is a welcome visitor in the majority of the homes in this section of the state. Mr. Nash is a valued and influential member of the South Dakota Press Association, of which he was president for two years, and politically he is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, whose principles he supports by his franchise and personal influence. He is an appreciative and most popular member of the Grand Army of the Republic, being affiliated with General Lyon Post, No. 11, while from June, 1893, to June, 1894, he held the office of commander of the order for the department of South Dakota. He is also past grand master of the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in the state, and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and the Modern Woodmen of America. He and his wife are zealous members of the Congregational church in their home city, and he has served as a member of its board of trustees for more than a decade and a half. He was a member of the board of education for several years, and has also rendered effective service in other local offices of public trust, including that of postmaster, of which he was incumbent from April, 1890, to June, 1894.

On the 26th of June, 1865, Mr. Nash was united in marriage to Miss Jennie E. Williston, who was born and reared in Janesville, Wisconsin, and of their five children we incorporate the following brief record: Nina M. is the director of the model school in the Aberdeen Normal; George W. is state superintendent of schools for South Dakota; Clara W., a graduate of Yankton College, is married; Marion is deceased; and Francis F. is also a graduate of Yankton College, and is junior member of the firm of N. C. Nash & Son, publishers of the Sioux Valley News, of Canton, and the Harrisburg News, of Harrisburg.

FREDERIC T. CUTHBERT, of Canton, the present incumbent of the office of county judge of Lincoln county, was born in Whiting, Monona county, Iowa, on the 2d of April, 1876, being a son of Rev. Thomas and Emily J. (Denham) Cuthbert, the former being a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church. While the subject was a mere child his parents removed to Mapleton, Iowa, where they resided a number of years, thence removing to Rolfe, that state, and there remaining about two years. When Frederic was fifteen years of age he accompanied his parents to England, their native land, and the family continued to abide in the "tight little isle" about four years, during the major portion of which time our subject continued his educational discipline in a private school. In 1883 the family home was established in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, and the father soon afterward located on a farm near this city, our subject attending the public schools here until the removal to England, as noted. The subject returned to the United States in 1895 and located in Canton, South Dakota.

In 1895 Mr. Cuthbert took up the study of law in the office of A. R. Brown, of Canton, and he was admitted to the bar of the state on the 13th of May, 1897. He forthwith established himself in practice in this place, entering into partnership with M. E. Rudolph. A few months later he formed a professional alliance with L. J. Jones, with whom he was associated until May, 1901, in the meanwhile gaining a reputation as an able advocate and counsellor. Upon the dissolution of this partnership Mr. Cuthbert formed a partnership with A. B. Carlson, under the firm name of Cuthbert & Carlson, and this association has since obtained, the firm controlling a representative business.

Judge Cuthbert has always been a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and he took a particularly active part in the campaign of 1896, doing effective work in the party cause, as has he also done in subsequent campaigns. In 1900 he delivered more than twenty speeches in advocacy of the Republican principles, and he is known as one of the most able young public speakers in the state. In the spring of 1898 he was elected justice of the peace in Canton, retaining this incumbency one year, and in 1900 he was elected city attorney, serving one term. In the autumn of that year still more distinguished preferment came to him in his election to the office of county judge, in which judicial capacity his services met with so marked popular approval that he was chosen as his own successor in the election of 1902, being thus in tenure of the office at the time of this writing. Fraternally, Judge Cuthbert is identified with Silver Star Lodge, No. 4, Free and Accepted Masons, Siroc Chapter, No. 4, Royal Arch Masons, and with Canton Lodge, No. 52, Knights of Pythias, all of Canton.

EDGAR DEAN, one of the best known citizens of Lincoln county, South Dakota, was born May 26, 1851, in Sullivan county, New York, where he lived until he was eight years old, at which time his parents moved to Ulster county, that state, where they remained until he was about sixteen years old, when they again moved, this time locating in Dekalb county, Illinois. Mr. Dean attended the common schools of the neighborhoods in which he resided, afterwards attending the high school at Sycamore, Illinois. In May, 1874, he came to Dakota territory, locating in Lincoln county, taking up as a homestead a quarter section of land in Norway township and also an eighty-acre tree claim. He remained on this tract until 1887, improving it as the years went by, until he became the possessor of a model farm. In the fall of 1887 Mr. Dean was elected treasurer of Lincoln county and in consequence moved to Canton that he might give his entire attention to the duties of the office. He served in this office for four years, faithfully discharging the duties of the same and winning for himself the confidence and esteem of the people. Prior to his service as county treasurer he had served for four years as a member of the board of county commissioners, and also served on the Canton board of education for four years, so that his experience in public affairs was varied and of sufficient length to either condemn or commend him to the public. That the people viewed his record with favor is shown by the fact that in 1891 he was chosen state senator from Lincoln county, and at the subsequent session ably represented his constituents in the legislature. He has given his best efforts to the people and to the county which has honored him with these respective positions of trust and honor and has been active in all movements looking to the advancement of his county and city. He now owns a half section of land in Norway and Pleasant townships, Lincoln county. In 1891 he engaged in the lumber business at Canton, acting as secretary and manager of the Farmers' Lumber Company, and is conducting this business at the present time, the enterprise meeting with splendid success.

In 1871 Mr. Dem was united in marriage with Miss Lavina Parker, of Kingston, Illinois, but who was born in Perry county, Indiana, and to them have been born six children, namely: Ralph, George, Effie, Edna, Ella and Edgar M., all of whom are now living. Fraternally, Mr. Dean is a member of the Masonic order and also of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

THOMAS THORSON, one of the leading citizens of Canton, Lincoln county, where he is engaged in the real-estate business and where he holds the office of president of the First National Bank, was born in Norway, on the 14th of November, 1848, and was there reared to the age of six years, when, in 1854, he accompanied his parents on their immigration to the United States, the family settling in northeastern Iowa, where his father became numbered among the pioneer farmers, taking up government land near the town of McGregor. There our subject availed himself of the advantages of the public schools, continuing to assist his father in the work and management of the home farm until 1869, when he secured a position as clerk in a hardware establishment in Sioux City, Iowa. In 1871 he removed to Beloit, Lyon county, that state, where he opened the first store in the county, building up a successful general-merchandise business and becoming one of the influential citizens of that section. In the autumn of 1871 he was elected the first recorder of the county, and in 1874 was elected county auditor. After the expiration of his term in this office, in 1875, he accepted a position as traveling representative of the Sioux City Journal, and continued in this line of work for the ensuing six years, at the expiration of which, in 1881, he located in Canton, South Dakota, and here engaged in the real-estate business, doing much to further the development and settlement of this section and having ever since continued to be here prominently identified with this important line of enterprise, in which connection he has become the owner of much valuable city realty and farming and grazing land. He at once identified himself intimately and helpfully with public affairs, and he served two terms as mayor of Canton, while he was elected to represent his county in the provisional legislature of 1885. He has been at all times an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Republican party and an active worker in its cause, and in 1892 he was shown further distinction at the hands of his party and the voters of the state in being chosen secretary of state, giving an able administration and being chosen as his own successor in 1894, on which occasion he received the largest plurality ever given to any candidate on the state ticket—a significant evidence of popular confidence and esteem. After his retirement from office he again turned his attention to his real-estate business, which he has continued with marked success. He became one of the stockholders of the First National Bank of

Canton at the time of its organization, was a member of its directorate for many years and in January, 1903, was elected to the presidency of the institution, which is one of the solid and prosperous banks of the state.

On July 12, 1882, Mr. Thorson married Miss Jessie Hunt, of Dodge county, Minnesota. Fraternally, he is a Knight of Pythias and in the Masonic order he has attained all the degrees of the York and Scottish rites, up to and including the thirty-second, and is also affiliated with the Mystic Shrine. His religious connection is with the Lutheran church.

CHARLES L. BEEMAN is a native of Bradford county, Pennsylvania, where his birth took place on the 11th day of January, 1832, being the son of Joseph H. and Betsy (Buck) Beeman, both parents born and reared in the Keystone state. The Beemans and Bucks were among the early settlers of Bradford county and both families appear to have been widely known and highly esteemed. Joseph H. Beeman, the subject's father, was a farmer and in connection with agriculture worked for a number of years at the carpenter's trade, having been an efficient mechanic as well as an enterprising and prosperous tiller of the soil. Of his eight children, three survive, namely: Charles L., who is the second in order of birth; Julia, living in Iowa, and Amos, who is still a resident of Bradford county. The following are the names of those deceased; Denton, who was the oldest of the family, Minor, Eliza and Henry, the third, fourth and fifth, respectively. Henry was a soldier in the Union army during the late Civil war, rendered valuable service for his country and died a miserable death in the prison pen at Andersonville.

Charles L. Beeman was reared on the home farm in Pennsylvania and owing to unfavorable circumstances was enabled to acquire only a limited education. Being the oldest of the living children, much of the labor of the farm naturally fell to him, but with true filial regard he cheerfully assumed the responsibility and discharged his duties faithfully and well, remaining with his parents and looking to their interests and the interests of the rest of the family until long after the age when the majority of young men are accustomed to begin life for themselves. In 1864 he left home and went to Jones county, Iowa, where he purchased forty acres of land and engaged in farming. He succeeded fairly well and continued to live where he originally located until 1883, when he sold his place and came to Bon Homme county, Dakota, purchasing a quarter section of land in the township of Bon Homme, which he soon reduced to cultivation and otherwise improved. Accustomed to hard work from his youth and possessing a determined will, Mr. Beeman made substantial progress as a farmer and in the course of a few years was accounted one of the most successful men of the community in which he resided. In the year 1900 he bought his present place and since that time has brought it to a high state of tillage, besides making a number of substantial improvements, including a neat and comfortable dwelling, good barns and other outbuildings, and he now owns one of the most beautiful and desirable homes in the township. Mr. Beeman has devoted his life to agriculture and is familiar with every phase of his chosen calling. He employs modern methods in the tilling of the soil, raises abundant crops of grain, vegetables and other products peculiar to South Dakota, besides paying considerable attention to live stock, in the breeding and raising of which he has met with encouraging success. Mr. Beeman is a man of domestic tastes, a great lover of his home and has never had any desire for public office, although a staunch Republican in politics and an active supporter of his party. In religion he is a Baptist, having united with the church a number of years ago, and his life ever since been in harmony with the principles and teachings of the faith which he professes.

Mr. Beeman was married in his native county and state, in 1852, to Miss Caroline E. Titus, who was born and reared in the same neighborhood in which he spent his youth and early manhood. They have three children, the oldest being Rosie, who is now the wife of Alexander Kane, a farmer, of Knox county, Nebraska; Estella, the second daughter, married Homer Beeman, a farmer and stock raiser of Bon Homme township, and the youngest of the family, a son by the name of Frank, lives at home and helps his father run the farm. Mrs. Beeman is also a Baptist in her religious belief and a consistent and highly esteemed member of the local church.

MILTON D. GARDNER, one of the leading farmers and stock raisers of Bon Homme county, is a native of Oneida county, New York, and dates his birth from April 30, 1837. His grandfather, Benjamin Gardner, moved to that county in an early day from Rhode Island and was one of the leading citizens of the community in which he spent the remainder of his life. He was a farmer by occupation, took an active part in the affairs of Oneida county and died there many years ago, leaving a family of six children, viz: Daniel, Frederick, David, Mary, Harriet and Narcissus, all deceased except Harriet, who still lives in the state of New York.

Frederick Gardner, the second son, was born September 23, 1811, married Sarah Wiggin, whose birth occurred in the year 1816, and departed this life in Oneida county, January 16, 1870, his wife dying seven years after that date. Mr. Gardner followed tilling the soil for a livelihood and was a man of sterling worth. He was a Democrat in politics, a Baptist in his religious belief and as a neighbor and citizen bore an excellent reputation. Frederick and Sarah Gardner reared a family of seven children, whose names are as follows: Joanna, born January 10, 1835, married Alexander Bowers, and died in Dubuque, Iowa, October 10, 1900; Milton D., the subject of this review, is the second in order of birth; Anna Eliza was born June 28, 1839; Harriet, wife of William Bowers, was born February 24, 1842, and died in 1898; George W., whose birth occurred on the 17th of September, 1846, died in childhood; Henry J., born March 23, 1849, is living a retired life with the subject; A. W. was born March 22, 1855, and makes his home in Maquoketa, Iowa.

Milton D. Gardner was educated in the public schools of his native county, grew to manhood on the farm and remained with his parents until twenty-seven years of age. In 1864 he severed home ties and went to Minneapolis, Minnesota, but after spending a short time at that place changed his abode to Waseca, in the same state, where he clerked for two years in a mercantile house. Resigning his position at the end of that time he became bookkeeper for a firm in Dubuque, Iowa, where he remained until 1873, the meanwhile becoming familiar with business and well qualified to enter upon the duties of the active career which awaited him in the west. In the above year Mr. Gardner came to South Dakota and with his brother engaged in the implement business at Yankton, where the two conducted a large establishment until 1883, building up a lucrative trade during that time and becoming widely and favorably known in commercial circles. Disposing of his interest at the time noted, the subject came to Bon Homme county and purchased his present farm of one hundred and sixty acres in the township of Bon Homme, which he at once began to improve and which he has since converted into one of the best farms as well as one of the most beautiful and attractive country homes in this part of the state. Since moving to this place he has devoted his attention to agriculture and stock raising and that his success has been most flattering is attested by his steady advancement in material affairs, being at this time the owner of eleven hundred acres of valuable land in Bon Homme county, four hundred of which are in cultivation and otherwise highly improved. He devotes especial attention to corn, millet, alfalfa and hay, which he raises in abundance and feeds to his live stock. Mr. Gardner has achieved enviable repute as a raiser of fine blooded cattle and has on his farm at this time thirty-five registered shorthorns, also a large herd of other superior breeds, besides owning two hundred Poland-China hogs, and a number of fine horses, for both draft and road purposes. He exhibits his live stock and the products of his farms have taken a number of premiums awarded by the state fairs, all of which he attends and in the deliberations of which he takes an active interest and prominent part. In addition to his general agricultural and large live-stock interests, Mr. Gardner has a wide reputation as a grower of fine varieties of corn. So great has been the demand for this product of his farm that in the year 1903 he shipped more than a thousand bushels to different parts of the state and yet was unable to fill all orders that came to him. He has given close and critical study to corn culture and his efforts have resulted in the improvement of standard varieties and the development of new and highly productive kinds, for all of which he receives fancy prices.

Fraternally, Mr. Gardner is a Mason, belonging to the blue lodge at Tyndall and the chapter at Scotland and he is also identified with the Pythian order, holding membership with the lodge which meets at Springfield. While not a politician in the strict sense of the word, he keeps well informed on the leading public questions of the day, and gives his support to the Democratic party, though in local affairs frequently voting for the best qualified candidate, regardless of political ties.

Mr. Gardner, on May 1, 1861, was united in marriage with Miss Ophelia Brewer, of Oneida county, New York, the union resulting in the birth of three children, the oldest of whom, Asa, was born on May 8, 1866. This son is now a prosperous stock dealer and lives at New England, North Dakota, where he has a family of five children, his wife having formerly been Miss Emma Harrison, of Bon Homme county; Isabella S., the second of the subject's children, was born March 12, 1868, and married Herbert Silverwood, a farmer of Bon Homme county, this state; the youngest of the family, a son by the name of Clarence E., was born on May 24, 1879, and is his father's able assistant on the farm.

SEYMOUR A. GUPTILL, one of the largest land owners and successful farmers of Bon Homme county, is the son of John B. and Emily (Warren) Guptill, and was born in Winnebago county, Illinois, on the 7th day of January, 1859. His father, a native of Maine, came west in 1845 and settled in Illinois, where he purchased a farm on which he made his home until 1886, when he disposed of his interests in that state and moved his family to Canton, South Dakota. Buying land near the latter place, he improved a farm and continued to cultivate the same as long as he lived. He was a good man and an influential citizen, took an active interest in public affairs and at different times was honored with official positions, in all of which he discharged his duties ably and acceptably. Mrs. Guptill, who was born in New York, survives her husband and at the present time lives in the state of Illinois. The following are the names of the children born to this couple: Charles, of Bon Homme county; Mrs. Lona Goldy, who lives in Illinois; Seymour A., of this review, and Lillie, who departed this life at the age of eleven years.

Seymour A. Guptill received a limited education in the public schools and remained with his parents until his twenty-second year, the meanwhile assisting with the labors of the farm. In 1882 he came to South Dakota and settled in Lincoln county, where he became one of the leading farmers. While there he accumulated considerable property, both real estate and personal, but in 1901 he sold out and came to Bon Homme county, where he invested his means in land, purchasing a fine farm of five hundred and twenty acres, which he still owns and which under his energetic labors and efficient management has become one of the finest and most productive farms of the township in which it is situated. Mr. Guptill has added greatly to his realty from time to time until he now owns eleven hundred and sixty acres, all valuable and the greater part under cultivation and well improved. He farms the home place and rents the rest of his land, and as an agriculturist and stock raiser he ranks with the leading men of his part of the state, who are thus engaged. A Populist in sentiment and a zealous supporter of the party of that name, Mr. Guptill has kept aloof from partisan politics and persistently refused to accept office or any kind of public position. He has no ambition further than to be a successful farmer and business man and to dignify his standing as a citizen whose interests are not wholly circumscribed within narrow, selfish limits, but tend largely to promote the welfare of his fellow men.

In 1880 Mr. Guptill contracted a marriage with Miss Nettie Hoyt, of Rock county, Wisconsin, and he is now the head of an interesting family of four children, viz: Clyde, Walter S., Lorna and Sidney, the youngest, a son by the name of Rolland, being deceased.

MARTIN J. LEWIS, born Orleans county, New York, 1843, son of Governor Lewis, of Wisconsin. Located at Vermillion 1869. Engaged in banking with Messrs. Inman and Thompson; prominent Baptist and leader in philanthropic enterprises. Died about 1893.

IRA J. SMITH, of Springfield, Bon Homme county, is a native of Steuben county, New York, where his birth occurred on April 25, 1846, and is an honorable representative of one of the oldest and best-known families of that part of the Empire state. His father, Solomon C. Smith, settled in the above county as early as 1830, cleared and improved a good farm and afterward moved onto a farm in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, and lived on the same until his death, at the age of seventy-nine years. He was of German descent and when a young man married Miss Lucretia Hurd, who departed this life when fifty-seven years old, after bearing him nine children, whose names are as follows: Joshua C., of Steuben county, New York; Rebecca lives in Boston, Massachusetts; Freeloove, of Fredonia, New York; Daniel, who lives in Portland, Oregon; Betsey, deceased; Ira J., whose name introduces this sketch; Mary J., deceased; Adaline, of Olean, New York, and Lovisa, whose home is in the state of Washington.

Ira J. Smith was reared to agricultural pursuits, received a common-school education and remained with his parents until twenty-three years old. Leaving home, he came west in 1870, arriving at Yankton, Dakota, on March 27th of that year. After spending a short time at that place the subject settled in Springfield, which had but recently been laid out, and, taking up a quarter section of land in the vicinity of the town, turned his attention to agriculture. While proving up on his land he worked in different places and after obtaining a patent from the government, entered an adjoining quarter section, for which he received a deed in due time.

Mr. Smith served four years as clerk in the United States land office at Springfield, during which time he lived in the town, but at the expiration of his term he returned to his farm and has continued its cultivation ever since. In addition to agriculture he is largely interested in live stock, being one of the leading cattle raisers in Springfield township, and he also devotes considerable attention to horses and hogs, making the fine breeds a specialty. Mr. Smith is one of the substantial business men of his community and as a farmer and stock raiser occupies a place in the front rank of those who follow these vocations. He is a self-made man and his success since coming west has been almost phenomenal. He reached South Dakota with sixty cents as the sum total of his capital and at this time he owns one of the most valuable farms in the county and a fine modern residence in Springfield, besides the wealth represented by his live stock and other personal property, all of which has been accumulated by his own industry, thrift and efficient management. He moved to his beautiful and attractive home in the town in 1902, but still gives attention to his farming and live-stock interests. Mr. Smith is a potent factor in the affairs of his township and county and one of the leading Republicans in his part of the country. He served three years on the board of county commissioners and could have almost any local office within the gift of the people, were it not for the fact that he has always been averse to accepting public position. In religion he is a Congregationalist; he assisted to organize the church at Springfield and has been one of its leading members and most liberal supporters ever since, being at this time a member of its board of trustees.

The domestic life of Mr. Smith dates from 1873, in which year he contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Hattie Bell, of Beloit, Wisconsin, who has borne him five children, Maude L.; Ward E. died when two and a half years old; W. Berton, one of the promoters and owners of the Springfield Telephone Company; Mabel C. and Rena A.

HENRY E. PHELPS is a native of Ford county, Illinois, and was born in August, 1863, being the son of Jasper and Mary Ann (Davis) Phelps, both of whom died in the year 1864, leaving their son to be brought up in the family of a friend by the name of John Wood. As this gentleman and his good wife cared for their young protege and sustained toward him almost parental relations, it is proper in this connection to present a brief outline of the benefactor to whom the subject is so greatly indebted and whose memory he so fondly cherishes. Mr. Wood was born in Dutchess county, New York, May 6, 1824, and at the age of eighteen went to Norwalk, Ohio, between which place and Mt. Vernon he drove stage for a number of years. In 1846 he married Sarah J. Lyons, of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and in 1858 moved to Huntington county, Indiana, locating at the town of Andrews, where, in partnership with a Mr. King, he operated a sawmill for a period of three years, changing his residence at the expiration of that time to Woodford county, Illinois. After farming about two years in that part of the state, Mr. Wood moved his family to Livingstone county, thence, in 1872, came to Lincoln county, South Dakota, and entered land in Dayton township, which he improved and on which he spent the remainder of his days, dying on November 30, 1893.

H. E. Phelps spent his early life in the home of Mr. Wood and was reared to agricultural pursuits. He accompanied his foster parents to South Dakota in 1872 and from that time until 1889 had charge of the Wood farm in Lincoln county, but purchased forty acres of his own two years previous to the latter date. On March 13, 1889, he was united in marriage with Miss Florence Lyon, of Andrews, Indiana, daughter of John J. and Ruth (Beauchamp) Lyon, and immediately thereafter set up a domestic establishment of his own, purchasing an additional eighty acres of land the same year, which he has since improved and reduced to a successful state of cultivation. Mr. Phelps has one of the finest farms in Lincoln county, from which he derives every year a handsome income. He devotes his attention to general agriculture, raises abundant crops of grain, especially corn, and feeds considerable live stock, being among the most successful raisers of hogs and horses in his neighborhood. Since coming west he has applied himself closely to his chosen calling, with the result that he is now in comfortable circumstances, with ample competence against possible adversity, and has long occupied a conspicuous place among the representative citizens of the community in which he resides.

In 1895 Mr. and Mrs. Phelps made a trip to Indiana on account of the latter's health, and from there went to Fitzgerald, Georgia, where he operated a meat market for a short time with his brother-in-law, H. L. Beauchamp. Later he, with his wife, visited Tampa, Florida. He was absent on this sojourn the greater part of two years, returning home in 1897, since which time he has carried on farming and stock raising, with the success already indicated. In politics Mr. Phelps votes the Populist ticket and in religion belongs, with his wife, to the Methodist Episcopal church, both being faithful and consistent members and active workers in the local congregation with which they are identified. Mr. and Mrs. Phelps have no children of their own, but some years ago they opened their hearts and home to an adopted daughter, upon whom they have lavished the same love and affection as if she had been their own flesh and blood.

GEORGE ATWOOD PETTIGREW, M. D., was born in Ludlow, Vermont, April 6, 1858, the son of Josiah Walker and Susan Ann (Atwood) Pettigrew, natives of Ludlow and Londonderry, Vermont, respectively. He was educated at the Black River Academy, of Ludlow, Vermont, the Colby Academy, of New London, New Hampshire, and was graduated from the medical department of Dartmouth College, at Hanover, New Hampshire, with the class of 1882. He began the practice of his profession at Flandreau, South Dakota, February 2, 1883, and in June, 1884, entered into a professional partnership with Dr. F. A. Spafford, which lasted until February, 1891, when he retired from the active practice and engaged in the real-estate, loan and banking business. He was surgeon of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad for eight years; government physician to the Indians for eight years; surgeon of the Second Regiment of Territorial Guards, and their successors, from 1885 to 1893; surgeon-general of South Dakota under Governor Sheldon, for two terms; member of the board of United States pension examiners from 1884 to 1901, with the exception of one year; surgeon of the First and Second Regiments of South Dakota National Guard from organization to their departure for the Philippines.

Mr. Pettigrew assisted in organizing the Flandreau State Bank in May, 1891, and was its president until July, 1903, when he resigned and moved to Sioux Falls, September 3d, following. He is president of the Union Savings Association of Sioux Falls. He served as coroner of Moody county for many years, and was the first to organize the real-estate move to advance the interests of Flandreau and Moody county. He located hundreds of now prosperous farmers in this county and the price of farm lands has advanced from eight dollars an acre in 1891 to fifty and sixty dollars an acre at the present time.

The subject is a Mason and has attained the thirty-third degree, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite and the Royal Order of Scotland. He served as grand secretary of the grand chapter of Royal Arch Masons of the state since 1889; in 1895 was elected grand secretary of the grand lodge of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; in 1894 grand recorder of the grand commandery of Knights Templar and in 1896 grand recorder of the grand high priesthood, and now holds these offices. He is a member of the chapter of the Eastern Star and was grand patron for 1891, 1892 and 1893. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America and the Association of Military Surgeons of America.

At Troy, New York, October 19, 1887, Dr. Pettigrew was married to Eudora Zulette Stearns, who was born at Felchville, Vermont, July 28, 1858. This union has been blessed by the birth of one child, Adelle Stearns, born September 7, 1890.

THOMAS O. MITCHELL, of the well-known firm of Mitchell & Thompson, dealers in grain, flour, hay, live stock, etc., Whitewood, South Dakota, was born in Adamsville, Ohio, on the 15th day of December, 1852. He spent his early years in his native state, enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education and until twenty-one years of age remained with his parents, assisting in the cultivation of the home farm. On attaining his majority he went to McLean county, Illinois, where he followed agricultural pursuits from 1873 to 1877, and in the spring of the latter year went to Grand Island, Nebraska, thence to Sidney, South Dakota, from which place he afterwards came with a train of freighters to the Black Hills. The summer following his arrival Mr. Mitchell devoted to prospecting on Battle and Rapid creeks, and in the fall returned to Nebraska and accepted a clerkship in his brother's general store at Alda, continuing in the latter capacity until the spring of 1881, when he again came to Dakota and engaged in business at Deadwood. He began his career in that city, buying and shipping grain, and in due time built up a profitable trade, but in 1891 sold out there and established himself in the grain and hay business at Whitewood, which place has been the scene of his operations ever since. In 1892 Mr. Mitchell associated himself with T. W. Thompson, the firm thus constituted erected the same year the elevator at Whitewood, and from that time to the present they have conducted a large and lucrative grain business, also buy and ship live stock on a very extensive scale, being one of the most successful firms of the kind in the western part of the state. In 1894 these gentlemen built a gristmill at Whitewood, which has since been operated in connection with the grain and live-stock business, the enterprise proving as remunerative as the other interests, there being a constantly growing demand for the high-grade flour made by the firm. In addition to the lines of business referred to, Messrs. Mitchell and Thompson pay considerable attention to the raising of blooded cattle, principally Herefords, pasturing a large number of these and other fine animals on their extensive ranch lands in the vicinity of Whitewood and elsewhere in Lawrence county.

Mr. Mitchell is decidedly a self-made man and his present high standing in commercial and industrial circles has been reached without aid from the outside sources or the prestige of influential friends. His business qualifications are of a superior order, his integrity and honor have always been unquestioned and his fair dealings and upright conduct have borne legitimate fruitage in the success which has made his name popular among the representative men of the city and county honored by his citizenship. Mr. Mitchell is a Democrat in politics and one of the active and influential party workers in his part of the country, having served as chairman of the town board for a number of years, besides filling other positions of honor and trust.

Mr. Mitchell was married on March 6, 1894, to Miss Angie Robinson, a native of Iowa, but who was brought to South Dakota when a child, and has spent nearly all of her life in this state; two children have resulted from this union, a son, Oron, and a daughter by the name of Alice.

WILLIAM HOLLEMAN, one of the enterprising citizens of Bon Homme county, was born in Holland on May 12, 1832, being the son of Peter and Gertrude (Donkersloot) Holleman, both parents natives of the Netherlands. Peter Holleman and family came to America in 1855 and settled in Ottawa county, Michigan, where he purchased land and cleared a farm, upon which he and his good wife spent the remainder of their lives. Mr. Holleman was twice married, the subject of this review being the only child of the first union. His second wife, whose maiden name was Mary Pruisen, bore him four children, namely: Johanna, Leentje, Anna and Arie, all of whom live in Ottawa county, Michigan, where the family originally settled.

William Holleman was reared and educated in the land of his birth and at the age of twenty-three accompanied his parents to America, locating with them in the state of Michigan. He began farming for himself in Ottawa county and in due time became the possessor of one hundred and ninety acres of land, which he improved and on which he lived and prospered until the year 1885, when he sold out and moved to Bon Homme county, South Dakota. On coming west, Mr. Holleman purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land, which he has since converted into one of the finest farms in that part of the county, and he has also added to his realty from time to time until he now owns, with his sons, one thousand four hundred acres, five hundred and seventy of which are under cultivation and otherwise well improved.

As a farmer Mr. Holleman stands in the front rank, as prosperity has continuously attended him, and he is today one of the leading agriculturists in his part of the state. In addition to the large crops of corn, wheat, oats and hay which his place produces, he is quite extensively interested in live stock, devoting his attention to fine shorthorn and Durham cattle, Poland-China hogs and several breeds of horses, in the raising of which he has achieved a reputation much more than local. He is a great admirer of his adopted country and its free institutions, manifests a lively interest in national and state questions as well as local affairs and in politics votes the Republican ticket. In matters religious he has strong faith and well-defined opinions, being a worthy and consistent member of the Dutch Reformed church, in the faith of which he was born and reared and with which the majority of his family are also identified.

Mr. Holleman was married November 22,

1859, to Miss Clara Ulburg, a native of Holland, who bore him thirteen children and departed this life on April 21, 1902. Mrs. Holleman was a zealous member of the church to which her husband belongs, and a lady of beautiful Christian character and of many excellent qualities. She reared her children to industrious habits, early instilled into their minds and hearts a love of truth and right and by example as well as precept, taught them to live lives of usefulness and honor. The following are the names of the children born to Mr. and Mrs. Holleman: Peter, a graduate of a literary institution in Holland and of the University of Michigan, now a physician, practicing his profession at Roseland, Iowa; John, a prosperous farmer and stock raiser of Bon Homme county; Garrett, who is engaged in agricultural pursuits near Jamestown, Michigan; Edward, of Bon Homme county and a farmer by occupation, as is also Leonard, the fifth in order of birth; James, Timothy, Henry, David, William, Clarence, Ida and Gertrude are still with their father on the homestead.

HENRY T. COOPER, cashier of the Whitewood Bank, and ex-treasurer of Lawrence county, also state senator for two consecutive terms, is a native of Warwickshire, England, where his birth occurred on the 22d day of June, 1850. He grew to manhood's estate and received his education in the country of his birth and after reaching his majority accepted the position of traveling salesman with a wholesale firm which he represented in various parts of England until 1879. Severing his connections with his house that year, he came to the United States and, proceeding direct to St. Paul, Minnesota, entered the employ of the Northwestern Transportation Company, which at that time was operating lines of stage coaches through various western states and territories. Shortly after engaging with this company, Mr. Cooper was placed in charge of the business at Bismarck, South Dakota, thence, in 1880, was transferred to Pierre, where he looked after the company's interests during the five years following. In 1885 he took charge of the office at Chadron, but when the railroad was finished to that town the transportation company moved its office to Rapid City, thence a little later to Sturgis, and finally, in the fall of 1887, to Whitewood, which place sprang into existence that year. Mr. Cooper continued with the company at the latter place until 1890, when its business was wound up by reason of the completion of the railroad to Deadwood. For some time thereafter he was engaged in various enterprises, among which was the running of transportation lines to a number of smaller towns beyond the reach of railway facilities, and later he constructed the water-works system at Whitewood, which for several months was operated under his personal management. In 1894 Mr. Cooper was elected treasurer of Lawrence county, and served as such for a period of two years, discharging his official functions in an able and satisfactory manner and proving not only a capable but a very obliging and popular public servant. He early manifested a strong predilection for politics and, espousing the principles of the Republican party, in due time became one of its ardent advocates and active workers in the Black Hills country. As a further recognition of his valuable services he was honored in 1898 by being elected a member of the state senate, in which capacity he served his district two terms, having been re-elected in the year 1900.

Mr. Cooper, in 1898, became associated with the Whitewood Banking Company, and since that date he has been cashier of the bank, also one of its largest stockholders. He is a skillful accountant, capable and painstaking in the discharge of the duties of his position and has made a special study of financial questions, on all of which he is not only well informed, but is considered an authority. In addition to banking, he has large mining interests in different parts of the country, and as an all-round, wide-awake, enterprising business man, he occupies a prominent place among the leading men of the Black Hills. He still owns the water works at Whitewood and, with his other sources of income, has become quite well to do, being at this time classed with the financially solid and responsible men of his part of the state.

Mr. Cooper is a married man and the father of two children, Henry and Albert; his wife, formerly Miss Kate Grimshaw, is a native of Minnesota and her name was changed to the one she now bears on April 11, 1888.

RICHARD BLACKSTONE, one of the representative citizens of the Black Hills district, maintaining his home in Lead, Lawrence county, was born on a farm near Connellsville, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, and is a scion of one of the old and honored families of the Keystone state. The date of his birth was October 16, 1843, and he is a son of James and Nancy C. (Johnston) Blackstone, both of whom were likewise natives of that county. The parents of the subject passed their entire lives in the vicinity of Connellsville, where the father followed the vocation of farming, being a successful and influential citizen and one who commanded unequivocal confidence and esteem. Of his fourteen children, eight are yet living.

Richard Blackstone was reared on the home farm and secured his early education in the schools of Connellsville and in a private school. On the 20th of July, 1861, when somewhat less than eighteen years of age, he enlisted in Company C, Thirty-second Ohio Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Colonel Thomas B. Ford, who had served as governor of the Buckeye state. He enlisted at Mansfield, Ohio, and thence accompanied his command to West Virginia, where they passed the winter. In the spring they advanced to the east toward Staunton, Virginia, under General Milroy, and took part in the battle of Bull Mountain, after which they marched by way of Franklin over into the Shenandoah valley, where they joined General Fremont's forces and followed Stonewall Jackson on his retreat up the valley to Harrison. They then returned to Winchester and fortified the city, and when Lee crossed into Maryland they abandoned Winchester and retreated to Harper's Ferry, taking part in the battle of Maryland Heights, where they were taken prisoners and paroled. During the battle of Antietam they could hear the firing but were not able to take part, as they were held in captivity at the time. The regiment was moved on to Baltimore and thence to Camp Douglas, in Chicago, and in the fall were sent to Columbus, Ohio, where their exchange was effected. In the spring of 1863 the regiment was again made ready for duty and proceeded via Mississippi to Memphis, where it became a part of the Army of the Tennessee, under General Grant, being assigned to the Third Division of the Seventeenth Army Corps. After lying in camp at Milliken's Bend for a time the command crossed the Mississippi river, below Vicksburg, and started on the march to the rear of Vicksburg, engaging in battle with Raymond's forces on the 8th of May, and then proceeding as far as Jackson, Mississippi, from which point they returned toward Vicksburg, participating in the battle of Champion Hills, on the 16th of May. In the charge they captured two entire regiments, from Alabama. Then advancing upon Vicksburg they besieged that city until the 4th of July, under General Logan, and after the capitulation of the city the regiment was engaged in provost duty during the summer, and in the fall Mr. Blackstone was made first sergeant of his company. At that time he re-enlisted, although his term would not have expired until nearly a year later. He received a thirty days' veteran furlough and passed the same at his old home, after which he returned to Vicksburg and was detailed on recruiting service. The regiment in the meanwhile came northward, and he rejoined the command at Cairo, Illinois, from which they proceeded up the Tennessee river to Athens, Georgia, our subject being about this time commissioned second lieutenant. They marched onward and joined Sherman's army at Big Shanty, Georgia, where they began their services in connection with the Atlanta campaign, advancing against General Johnston, who made a somewhat stubborn stand at Kenesaw Mountain, while they had numerous skirmishes enroute, reaching Atlanta in July, and being in the thickest of the fray on the 22d of that month, when General McPherson was killed.

Sherman continued his march and the Thirty-second Ohio was present at the battle of Jonesborough, but did not take part in the same. Returning to Atlanta, they there encamped until late in September, when General Hood started for the north. The federal troops were put on cars and went as far as Dalton, the intention being to head off Hood. Sherman then began the destruction of the railroad and shortly afterward our subject's regiment arrived at Atlanta and joined in the memorable march to the sea, thence proceeding northward through the Carolinas and being present at the surrender of Johnston, after which they marched to Washington, where, as a part of Sherman's army, they participated in the grand review. From the national capital the regiment was sent to Louisville, Kentucky, where they were assigned to provost duty. Mr. Blackstone there receiving his honorable discharge in July, 1865, as captain of his company, while on the 27th of the same month he was mustered out of the service.

After the close of his long and arduous military service Captain Blackstone returned to his home, in Pennsylvania, and for a number of months was a student in the Pennsylvania Military Academy, at Chester, after which he took a two-years course in the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy, New York, where he gave his attention to the study of engineering. In 1868 he came west to Colorado, making the trip from Cheyenne to Denver by stage, and he engaged in placer mining on the site of the present town of Breckenridge, also prospecting in other localities. In 1870 he returned to Denver, where he secured a position in the office of the United States surveyor general, as draughtsman. One year later he removed to Cheyenne, Wyoming, where he was employed in the office of the surveyor general until 1878, in March of which year he started for the Black Hills, arriving in Deadwood on the last day of the month. He came here in the interest of Cheyenne men who had some mining properties on Whitewod creek, and he acted as superintendent about two months, when he found that the venture was not a profitable one, and he accordingly engaged in the work of his profession as an engineer, to which he devoted his attention for the ensuing two years. In 1881 he entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company as engineer, and began the construction of the Black Hills & Fort Pierre Railroad, continuing to make extensions to the same at intervals until 1890, when the line was completed to Piedmont. In connection with his other official duties he was superintendent of this railroad until it was sold to the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company, in 1901. He has been chief engineer for the Homestake Company from the start, and has maintained his home in Central City since 1888. April 1, 1903, he was made assistant superintendent of the company. He also served as assistant superintendent of the Father DeSmet, Deadwood, Terra and Caledonia mines, owned by the Homestake Company. In politics the Captain is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Ohio Commandery of the Loyal Legion and with E. M. Stanton Post, No. 8, Grand Army of the Republic, at Lead.

On the 28th of December, 1871, was solemnized the marriage of Captain Blackstone to Miss Mabel R. Noble, who was born and reared in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, being a daughter of William and Louisa (Findley) Noble. Of this union have been born three children, namely: Alexander J., who is in the employ of the Homestake Mining Company; Mary L., who is the wife of D. C. Regan, of Lead; and Florence, who remains at the parental home. The family attend the Episcopal church.

JAMES HARTGERING, of Rapid City, a mining and mechanical engineer, with offices also at Deadwood, was born on September 22, 1853, in Ottawa county, Michigan, and is the son of Alexander and Josephine Hartgering, natives of Ohio. The father was a man of intellectual pursuits and engaged in teaching school during the greater part of his mature life. When a young man he served in the Mexican war, and after the close of that memorable contest followed farming for a time in Michigan, where he died. The son, James, was reared and educated in his native county, and in the spring of 1877 came to the Black Hills, arriving in this new Eldorado on the first day of April, and at once went to prospecting and mining, following these alluring but often disappointing occupations for a number of years in various places throughout the Hills country. He also learned his trade as a millwright and worked at that considerably. In 1885 he pursued a special course of study in the State School of Mines at Rapid City, the school having then been recently organized. After the completion of his course there he entered on the practice of his profession as a mining and mechanical engineer, and to this he has steadfastly adhered ever since. His home has been at Rapid City from 1891, with offices at Deadwood also. His professional work has had a wide scope and is of considerable magnitude, he being generally recognized as one of its leading practitioners in this part of the country. He has been prominent in designing and building mills and cyanide plants on contract. The growth and development of the section has enlisted his warmest and most intelligent interest, and to this he has devoted the greater part of his time and energy. In addition he has taken an active part in public affairs, although not an earnest partisan in political work. From 1886 he served as United States deputy surveyor and as United States deputy mineral surveyor, and was county surveyor of Custer county for one term. In fraternal relations he is connected with the Masonic order, and has climbed the mystic stairway to the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, being also a noble of the Mystic Shrine, belonging to the blue lodge at Rapid City and the other bodies of the order at Deadwood. He also belongs to the camp of the Modern Woodmen of America at Rapid City, and is a valued member of the Society for the Advancement of Science, whose headquarters are at Washington, D. C.

On March 21, 1883, at Chicago, Illinois, the subject was married to Miss Jennie M. McRae, a native of Ontario. They have five children, Constance M., James F., Genevieve, John M. and Francis B.

THOMAS GREGORY, who is incumbent of the responsible position of state mining inspector, is a native of Devonshire, England, where he was born on the 24th of July, 1862, being a son of John and Jane Ann (Sergeant) Gregory, the former of whom was born in Devonshire and the latter in Cornwall, while the paternal grandfather of the subject, William Gregory, was likewise a native of Devonshire, where the family has resided for many generations, the name being closely identified with the mining industry in that section of the "right little, tight little isle." The father of the subject was in his younger days engaged in farming, but later became concerned in mining, being in the employ of the Devongrate Consols Mining Company, a large and important concern, engaged in the mining of copper, and with the same he continued until his death, by accident in the mine, in 1888, while his devoted wife passed away in 1870. They became the parents of eight children, of whom five are living at the present time.

Thomas Gregory passed his boyhood days in his native county, where he secured his education in the common schools, and while a boy he entered the copper mines, in which he advanced through various grades of promotion until he held responsible positions. He was employed in the mines of Devonshire and Cornwall for varying intervals until March, 1884, when he came to America. He first went to California, and after passing about fifteen months in gold mining at Plymouth, Amador county, he came thence to the Black Hills. Here he entered the employ of the Deadwood Terra Mining Company, at Terraville, whose properties were later purchased by the Homestake Mining Company, which still controls the same. He was thus engaged until 1893, having in the meanwhile been successful in various contracting enterprises which he undertook in an incidental way. In the year mentioned the mine was closed down and Mr. Gregory then made a visit to his old home in Devonshire, England, where he remained eight months, after which he returned to the Black Hills and again entered the employ of the Deadwood Terra Mining Company, and about four months later entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, in whose service he continued, a valued and trusted employe, until April 1, 1901, when he was appointed state mining inspector, with headquarters at Lead. He gave most able and satisfactory service and was appointed as his own successor on the 1st of April, 1903, being the first incumbent of the office to thus receive appointment for a second term in this state,—a fact which is duly significant without further testimony or endorsement. In politics Mr. Gregory gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. Shortly after his arrival in the Hills Mr. Gregory organized a cornet band at Terraville, and the headquarters of the same were transferred to Lead at the time of his removal to this point. He has been the leader and instructor of the band from the start and it has now attained a high degree of proficiency, having about twenty pieces represented in its instrumentation, while it has the distinction of being the official band of the Second Regiment of the Uniformed Rank of the Knights of Pythias, in which connection its services have been in requisition in the most diverse sections of the state.

Mr. Gregory has been twice married, first in 1884. A son, John, was born of this union, who at present resides in Plymouth, England, and is apprenticed to the brass fitter's trade. The second marriage of Mr. Gregory occurred in 1900.

THOMAS B. HART, one of the highly esteemed citizens of Central City, Lawrence county, is a native of the province of Quebec, Canada, where he was born on the 4th of June, 1843, being a son of William and Elizabeth (Brown) Hart, who were likewise born in the province of Quebec. The paternal grandfather of the subject was Thomas Hart, who was born in County Sligo, Ireland, and who was a captain in the British army, in which connection he was sent to the dominion of Canada with his regiment, which was stationed in the city of Quebec. After retiring from the military service he purchased a farm fifteen miles out from the city, and there passed the remainder of his long and useful life, having served for more than twenty years in the English army and having participated in a number of wars in which his country was involved. The father of our subject continued to reside in his native province until 1859, when he removed with his family to Cleveland, Ohio, where he engaged in the fur business, and there he and his devoted wife passed the residue of their lives, honored by all who knew them. They had four sons and three daughters, of whom three of the former and all of the latter are living at the time of this writing.

Thomas B. Hart, the immediate subject of this review, secured his educational discipline in the excellent schools of his home province, and was about sixteen years of age at the time of the family removal to Ohio. There he secured a position in car shops in the city of Cleveland, where he developed much mechanical skill, and thereafter he assisted in the putting in of trestle work for the Atlantic & Great Western Railroad, while later he entered the employ of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, with which great corporation he continued until 1876, in March of which year he set forth to seek his fortunes in the Black Hills. From Cheyenne, Wyoming, he came by team to his destination, in company with others, arriving in Deadwood on the 22d of May. They encountered no trouble with the Indians, though two days previously to their crossing Hat creek two men had been killed by the savages at that point. Mr. Hart at once turned his attention to prospecting in the vicinity of Deadwood, but his success was of a negative character and after three months he entered the employ of the owners of the Keach mine, at Central City. A few months later he went to work on the Father Desmet property, and there continued until the mine was sold to a California company, in December, 1877, when he secured service with the new owners and remained with them until 1881, when the Homestake Mining Company purchased the property, which they still own and continue to develop. With this well-known company Mr. Hart was employed until May 10, 1886, when he engaged in contracting at the carbonate camps, being fairly successful. A few months later he again turned his attention to prospecting, in company with Eli T. Forrester. They relocated the Bingham mine, one mile west of Central City, and forthwith instituted the work of development, running tunnels and openings up the ledge, which is now one hundred and eighty-four feet in width. They sunk a shaft to the depth of one hundred feet and placed the property in good working condition. In 1901 they sold the property to the firm of Mayhem & Stevenson, and it is now known as the Hidden Fortune. In company with Florence McCarthy, in the Golden Rule properties, in Rudebaker Gulch, one mile directly west of the town of Lead, Mr. Hart ran three tunnels, one of sixty-five feet, another of one hundred and twenty feet and the third of seventy-five feet, after which they made a cross-cut of the lead. In 1901 they sold this property to the Pennsylvania Mining Company and the property is now being worked by that company. In the handling of these properties Mr. Hart has been very successful and he is known as one of the reliable and progressive mining men of the section and as one of the representative citizens of Central City, where he owns an attractive residence. In politics he is arrayed with the Democratic party.

On the 14th of January, 1867, Mr. Hart was married to Miss Margaret Mulreedy, who was born in Ireland, whence she accompanied her parents on their emigration to America when a child, the family locating in Mansfield, Ohio, where she was reared and educated. Of this union have been born five children, concerning whom we incorporate the following brief record: James, who married Miss Earl Brown, is a resident of Butte, Montana; Thomas is in the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, and resides in Lead City; John, who married Miss Louise Lyons, is a resident of the city of Portland, Oregon; William is in Nome, Alaska; and Eugene is a student in the Gertrude House in the city of Chicago.

MATT PLUNKETT, who has been identified with the mining industry in the Black Hills for more than a quarter of a century, and now maintains his home in Central City, Lawrence county, was born in the parish of St. Sylvester, province of Quebec, Canada, twenty-eight miles southeast of the city of Quebec, on the 11th of November, 1850, and comes of staunch old Irish stock. His parents, James and Mary (McKelvie) Plunkett, were born and reared in the north of Ireland, while their marriage was solemnized in Canada. As a comparatively young man James Plunkett came with his widowed mother to America and settled in the parish of St. Sylvester, where he engaged in farming until about 1865, when he disposed of his interests there and removed to the city of Alpena, Michigan, on the shore of Lake Huron, where both he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. He was well advanced in years at the time of this removal and lived practically retired thereafter until his life's labors were ended. He and his wife were members of the Catholic church and were folk of sterling character. Of their nine children eight are living at the time of this writing.

Matt Plunkett passed his school days in his native parish and after the removal of the family to Michigan he identified himself with the great lumbering industry in that state, while later he was similarly employed in Wisconsin. In 1877 he came to the Black Hills, by the way of Bismarck, having no trouble with the Indians while enroute, and he arrived and settled in Golden Gate, adjoining Central City, in December. He devoted the first year to prospecting, and has located a number of valuable properties, some of which are now yielding large returns. At the head of Nevada Gulch, in July, 1878, in partnership with John McVain and Dave Arno, he located the Signet and Black Moon lodes, which they to a certain extent developed. Our subject retained an interest in this property until 1902, when it was sold to the Horseshoe Mining Company, the lodes being a low-grade ore and well adapted to reclamation by the cyanide process. In 1896 Mr. Plunkett and his partner, Charles F. Abbott, located the Metallic Streak (1 to 6, inclusive), on which they did considerable development, having some of the ore treated, and in 1890 they sold the property to the Spearfish Mining & Milling Company, who are now working the same very successfully. Mr. Plunkett has at the present time a number of interests in patented and unpatented mining lands, and some of these properties are promising prospects. In 1896 Mr. Plunkett was elected sheriff of Lawrence county, on the Fusion ticket, and was re-elected in 1898. He had all the stirring experiences which usually come to a sheriff in a mining district, but his administration was characterized by directness of action, alertness and vigilance and by great personal courage and self-reliance, so that he gained a high reputation as a capable and discriminating officer. He now devotes his attention principally to mining. In politics he is a Bryan Democrat and he has been a member of the Miners' Union of Central City since 1878, and has held an office in the same at various times.

At Central City, on the 1st of August, 1882, Mr. Plunkett was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Cunningham, who was born in County Sligo, Ireland, whence she came with relatives to America in 1880, while she came to the Black Hills with her sister, Mrs. Herman Carroll. Of this union have been born five children, namely: James Joseph, who remains at the parental home and who is working in the DeSmet Mill; Mary Ellen, who is attending the public schools; Matthew J., who is attending school; William, who died at the age of one month, and Margaret Pearl, a winsome little lass of nine years (1904).

EDWARD HEMMINGER, one of the representative citizens of Charles Mix county, conducting a successful mercantile business in the village of Jasper, was born in Somerset county, Pennsylvania, on the 9th of November, 1855, being a son of Jonas and Susan (Shawley) Hemminger, of whose thirteen children ten are living at the present time, the parents having likewise been natives of the old Keystone state, where they passed their entire lives, the father having been a farmer by vocation and a man of prominence and sterling character.

The subject of this sketch received his educational training in the public schools, continuing his studies until he had attained the age of eighteen years and in the meanwhile assisting in the work of the home farm. After leaving school he came west to Iowa, where he was for a time employed as a farm hand, eventually becoming the owner of a farm in Crawford county, that state, where he was quite successful in his operations. He remained in Iowa about eleven years, at the expiration of which, in 1883, he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in Charles Mix county, where he also secured three hundred and twenty acres by pre-emption, the land being located near the present village of Jasper. He continued to be actively engaged in farming and stock growing until 1899, when he took up his residence in Jasper and here established himself in the general merchandise business, in which he has since successfully continued, being known as an enterprising and reliable business man and gaining a representative patronage. He was appointed postmaster at Jasper and has remained consecutively in tenure of this position, the office being located in his well-equipped store.

In politics he gives a staunch support to the Republican party and is one of its wheelhorses in his community, while both he and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He has served for a number of years as treasurer of the school board and manifests a lively interest in all that makes for the well-being of the community. He still retains possession of his fine farm of six hundred acres, which he rents, the land being now worth from twenty-five to forty dollars an acre, while at the time of his arrival in the county it could be purchased for a few dollars an acre,—in fact was subject to homestead and pre-emption entry. In the summer of 1903 Mr. Hemminger and his family, in company with John E. C. Wilson and family, made an extended tour through the Yellowstone National Park and other portions of the northwest, as well as of California, the outing proving a most enjoyable one.

On the 30th of January, 1879, Mr. Hemminger was united in marriage to Miss Minerva Ellen Scott, who was born in Illinois, while their marriage was solemnized in Indianola, Iowa, of which state she was a resident at the time. Of this union were born five children, of whom only one is living.—Edith, who will complete her education in Mitchell University and who still remains at the parental home, being one of the popular young ladies of the town and county.

JAMES C. NELSON, of Yankton county, was born in Denmark, August 30, 1868, and is a son of Nels and Julia (Anderson) Olsen, who came to this country when their son James was only about five years of age. On the 4th of July, twenty-nine years ago, they arrived in Yankton county and the father purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land near Tabor, investing the money which he had brought with him from his native country. In the family were nine children, namely: Ola, John, Dora, Christina, Cecelia, Fred, James, Andrew and Helena. Of this number Andrew is now deceased. The parents are both living, their home being now in Yankton. Mr. Olsen has now retired from active business and enjoys the fruits of his former toil. He has reached the age of seventy-five and his wife is now seventy-one years of age. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in the summer of 1903, and although now well advanced in years both are enjoying good health..

In the public schools of South Dakota James C. Nelson was educated, therein continuing his studies until he reached the age of sixteen. He afterward, however, became a student in Yankton College, where he remained for two years and thus with a liberal mental discipline he was well prepared for the active affairs of life. Upon leaving college he turned his attention to farming in connection with his brother Andrew, who is now deceased.

In October, 1897, Mr. Nelson was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Burton and they have become the parents of three children: Bessie, Robert and Edith, all of whom are at home. The farm property of the subject comprises three hundred and sixty acres of land, a part of which is under cultivation, while the remainder is used for pasturage purposes. He raises considerable stock, having now one hundred head of cattle ready for the Chicago market. In his business affairs he is active and honorable and whatever he undertakes he carries forward to successful completion. About eight years ago he planted a number of apple trees and now has a good orchard. In public affairs he is energetic and his labors have been of marked benefit along many line of progress. He has been a member of the school board for three terms of six years and has been assessor for seven or eight years. In politics he is a Republican, recognized as one of the active workers for the success of his party, yet he has never been an aspirant for office nor sought official preferment as a reward for his party fealty.

JOSEPH HEJL is a native of Bohemia, born in the year 1847. He spent his youth in that country and then sought a home in America, believing that he might find better opportunities in this country. Accordingly, he left his native land in 1868 and when the ocean voyage was completed he proceeded across the country to Ohio, where he spent one year. He then went to Iowa, where he engaged in farming for a year.

In 1873 Mr. Hejl was united in marriage to Miss Katherine Petrick and unto them have been born nine children, six daughters and three sons: Mary, Annie, Frances, Josephine, Katie, Stella, Joe, Frank and Mattie. The family circle yet remains unbroken by the hand of death and the children are still with their parents. They have been educated in the English schools and have thus been well equipped for meeting the responsible duties of life.

In 1871 Mr. Hejl arrived in Yankton county and has since carried on general farming here. He not only cultivates his fields, but also is engaged in the raising of cattle of good grades. As the years have gone by he has prospered in his work because he has labored earnestly from early morning until evening, throughout the busy season of the year. He has also manifested sound judgment in the control of his business affairs and because of his industry and perseverance he has won success, being today the owner of six hundred acres of very valuable land. He has set up all of the trees upon his place and in fact has made all of the improvements. He lived here during the time of the grasshopper scourge, when the insects descended in such numbers upon his farm that they ate every particle of vegetation there. Other discouragements have had to be met and difficulties have had to be borne, but with characteristic energy Mr. Hejl has worked on year after year and is now one of the prosperous farmers of this community. In 1890 he erected a good brick residence upon his place and has made other substantial and modern improvements,—in fact, his fine farm is a monument to his life of industry and thrift. He deserves great credit for what he has accomplished and his life should inspire and encourage others who have to begin as he did, without capital.

JOSEPH J. NEDVED, of Yankton county, was born in Bohemia on the 3d of January, 1849, and is the eldest son of Frank and Veronica (Stadnik) Nedved. At the usual age he entered the public schools of his native country and therein continued his studies until he reached the age of fourteen. He afterward worked upon his father's farm until he was sixteen years of age, when he began an apprenticeship at the butcher's trade, following that calling for two years. When he was a young man of eighteen years his father decided to sell the property in Bohemia and took up his abode in the land of freedom. Accordingly the subject came with the family and lived first in Cleveland, Ohio, where he was employed for three years. During a part of that time he worked as a railroad hand and the remainder of the period was devoted by him to the mastery of the cooper's trade. When twenty-one years of age he came to Yankton county, South Dakota, and assisted his father in the development and improvement of the home farm for about three years.

It was on the 25th of March, 1872, when twenty-three years of age, that Joseph J. Nedved was united in marriage to Miss Mary Peterka, who was born in Bohemia and came to Dakota with her parents. Five children graced this marriage: Annie, who is now the wife of Frank Bartos, a resident farmer and miller of Tabor, Bon Homme county; Charles, who is now twenty-eight years of age and assists in the operation and management of the home farm; Mattie, who has departed this life; and Joseph and Frank, who are yet under the parental roof.

About 1871 Mr. Nedved pre-empted one hundred and sixty acres of land, which he afterward traded for a homestead and subsequently he bought one hundred and twenty acres, adjoining his second property. He now owns four hundred and forty acres, but intends to give a quarter section of this to his son Charles. Since coming to Dakota he has been identified with agricultural interests, which is the chief source of wealth to the state, the broad prairies of this locality furnishing splendid opportunity to the farmer and stock raiser. Much of Mr. Nedved's land is under cultivation and the fields produce good crops. He is, however, also extensively engaged in the raising of stock and finds this department of his business a profitable source of income. Independent in political views, he votes for the candidates whom he thinks will prove most capable and efficient officials. He has served as school director for three years and as school clerk for about one year. Socially he is connected with the Z. C. B. J., a Bohemian society. He has ever discharged his duties with marked ability and fairness, for he is a most loyal, public-spirited citizen.

LUTHER E. GAGE, a representative citizen and business man of McCook county and vice-president of the Security State Bank of Montrose, was born in New York on the 27th of July, 1861, and is a son of Eugene S. and Elvira (Hazelton) Gage, representatives of old and honored families of the Empire state, where they were both born and reared. They now reside in Montrose, South Dakota, where they have made their home since 1880. The father of the subject was for many years engaged actively in farming and stock raising, but is now living practically retired. Of the eight children in the family all are living except one, the names, in order of birth, being as follows: Ellen, Luther E., Frank, Matilda, Gertrude, Earl, Orin and Smith, the last named being deceased. When the subject was yet a youth, his parents came to the west and located in Grundy county, Iowa, where his father was engaged in farming until his removal to South Dakota. The subject secured his educational discipline in the public schools of Iowa, and after leaving school he continued to give his attention to the great basic art of agriculture, to which he has ever since given his allegiance, appreciating the fact that it is a proud distinction to be termed a successful farmer. In the spring of 1879, at the age of eighteen years, Mr. Gage came to what is now the state of South Dakota and settled in Clear Lake township, Minnehaha county, where he entered claim to one hundred and sixty acres of government land, perfecting his title in due time and there continuing to reside until 1892, when he came to McCook county, where he engaged in farming and stock raising, eventually becoming the owner of a finely improved landed estate of four hundred and eighty acres, which he still retains in his possession and to whose operations he still gives a general supervision. He has given special attention to the raising of high-grade cattle, and upon his ranch are usually to be found about five hundred head. In 1893, Mr. Gage engaged in the general merchandise business in Montrose, conducting this enterprise in addition to his ranching business, and he continued the same successfully for a period of two years, at the expiration of which he disposed of his interests in the line.

In March, 1897, Mr. Gage became associated with P. G. Williams, a leading business man of Montrose, in the conducting of an agricultural implement and real-estate business until the spring of 1902, when the Security State Bank was organized and opened for business on the 9th day of March of that year. They own the controlling stock in the bank, and the reputation which they bear in this section stands as ample voucher for the reliability and solidity of the institution and gives assurance of a representative popular support. Mr. Williams is president of the bank and the subject is vice-president, while L. S. Lillibridge is in active charge of the counting room in the capacity of cashier. Mr. Gage is, in politics, a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party, but has never sought or held public office of any description. His wife is a Baptist. Fraternally, he is affiliated with the Masonic order, in which he has passed the degrees of the blue lodge, and is also affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 23d of May, 1881, Mr. Gage was united in marriage to Miss Ana Williams, of this county. She was born and reared in Wisconsin and is a daughter of William and Mary Williams, who are now residents of Minnehaha county, this state. Mr. and Mrs. Gage have six children, namely: Roy, Nona, Allen, William, Irene and Clyde. Roy and Allen are students in the high school at Sioux Falls at the time of this writing, the former being a graduate of the class of 1903 and the latter will graduate with the class of 1904.

DELMONT GOLDSMITH, who was the founder of the Commercial State Bank of Salem, McCook county, and who has been president of the institution from the time of its inception, was born in Webster City, Hamilton county, Iowa, on the 30th of August, 1871, and is a son of Charles D. and Delia (Borland) Goldsmith, the former of whom is still living, the mother having died in 1882. The father of the subject was a prominent and honored member of the bar of the Hawkeye state, where he was actively engaged in the practice of his profession for many years, while for four years he served as district judge, making a most enviable record on the bench.

When the subject was ten years of age his parents removed to Sac City, Sac county, Iowa, and in the public schools of that place he secured his early educational training, after which he was for one year a student in the Rohbaugh Commercial College, in the city of Omaha, Nebraska, where he completed a thorough business course and ably equipped himself for the active duties of life. After leaving school he became assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Sac City, retaining this position three years and then coming to McCook county, South Dakota, in 1893. Shortly after his arrival he effected the organization of the Commercial State Bank of Salem, over whose affairs he has since presided as chief executive, while under his management the institution has been ably conducted and signally prospered, having ample capitalistic reinforcement and being one of the solid banking houses of the state. The bank was opened for business on the 1st of July, 1893, and the attractive and substantial bank building, of modern design and equipment, was erected by Mr. Goldsmith for the purpose to which it is now applied. In politics Mr. Goldsmith is an uncompromising adherent of the Democratic party, and fraternally he is identified with the blue lodge and chapter of the Masonic fraternity.

On the 23d of October, 1895, Mr. Goldsmith was united in marriage to Miss Lucile Schneider, of Salem, South Dakota, she being a sister of L. V., J. F. and H. W. Schneider, leading merchants of Salem. Mrs. Goldsmith was born in Huston county, Minnesota, being a daughter of Joseph and Frances Schneider, and she was reared and educated in Salem, South Dakota.

JOSEPH PONSFORD, who is the owner of an extensive and valuable landed estate in Buffalo and Jerauld counties, comes of stanch English lineage and is a native of the beautiful old city of St. John, province of New Brunswick, Canada, where he was born on the 19th of January, 1840, being a son of Walter F. and Elizabeth (Henderson) Ponsford, both of whom died there, the father having been a shipbuilder by vocation. They became the parents of five children, of whom three are living. The subject of this sketch attended the excellent schools of his native city until he had attained the age of sixteen years, when he set forth to face the stern battle of life on his own responsibility. He located in Racine, Wisconsin, where he remained two years, engaged in work at the carpenter trade, and becoming a skilled artisan in the line. At the expiration of the period noted he removed to Waterloo, Iowa, where he followed the vocation of contracting and building until 1883. It should be noted that after the close of the war of the Rebellion Mr. Ponsford enlisted for service, serving in the quartermaster's department from 1865 to 1867, within which time he was in Dakota, with the forces under command of General Sully.

In April, 1883, Mr. Ponsford came to Jerauld county, South Dakota, where he took up three hundred and twenty acres of government land, in Crow township, and forthwith instituted the reclamation and improvement of the property. As success attended his energetic and well-directed efforts he manifested his faith in the value of South Dakota property by adding to the area of his landed estate, which now comprises fourteen hundred and forty acres of exceptionally fine agricultural and grazing land. He is engaged in the raising of cattle and other live stock upon an extensive scale and is one of the most substantial ranchmen of this favored section of the state. He came to Dakota a poor man, and it is gratifying to note the fact that by energetic and well-directed endeavor in connection with the development of the magnificent natural resources of the state he has attained a most unqualified success in temporal affairs, his estate being now valued at about fifty thousand dollars.

He was prominently identified with the organization of Jerauld county and has ever manifested an insistent and helpful public spirit. He is a stanch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and though he has been urged to accept nomination for various county offices he has invariably refused to permit the use of his name in such connection. Fraternally, he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Mrs. Ponsford is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church, and in this faith the subject also was reared.

On the 2d of May, 1867, Mr. Ponsford was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Dunham, of St. John, New Brunswick, who was born and reared in St. John, being a daughter of Joseph O. and Elizabeth Dunham.

JESSE B. INGERSON, the present able and popular incumbent of the office of county auditor of Buffalo county, was born in St. Lawrence, New York, on the 13th of June, 1864, and is a son of Lewis and Maria (Baraclough) Ingerson, the former of whom is still living, while the mother is dead. They became the parents of five children, of whom the subject was the third in order of birth, while four of the number are living at the time of this writing. The father of the subject was a farmer by vocation and both he and his wife were representatives of families long and honorably identified with the annals of American history. Jesse B. Ingerson was tendered such educational advantages as were afforded by the public schools of his native state and was reared under the invigorating discipline of the homestead farm. At the age of sixteen years he left the parental roof to become dependent upon his own resources. He was principally engaged in farming in New York state until 1883, when, at the age of nineteen years, he came to South Dakota, which was then a portion of the great integral territory of Dakota, and settled in Buffalo county, where he took up government land and set himself vigorously to the work of reclaiming and improving the same. That he has been successful is best shown in the fact that he is now the owner of a fine landed estate of about one thousand acres, a considerable portion of which is devoted to the raising of grain, while the balance is utilized in connection with the raising of live stock, to which industry he has given special attention, carrying on the enterprise upon an extensive scale and also being a successful dealer in and shipper of stock.

Mr. Ingerson is a stalwart Republican in his political proclivities, and in the fall of 1902 he was elected county auditor, assuming his official duties on the 6th of March, 1903, and having thus taken up his residence in Gann Valley, the attractive county seat. He still gives a general supervision to his ranch, but the county is fortunate in having secured his services in an office for which he is so distinctively eligible. Fraternally, he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 17th of September, 1890, Mr. Ingerson led to the hymeneal altar Miss Anna Miller, who was born and reared in South Dakota, being a daughter of A. W. Miller, a prominent and honored resident of Buffalo county, this state. Mr. and Mrs. Ingerson have five children, all of whom remain beneath the home roof, namely: Myrtle, Laura, Pearl, Jesse and Flaurence.

THE GARDNER BROTHERS are numbered among the representative business men of Hand county, where they have resided since the pioneer epoch in its history, and they are now prominently engaged in the general merchandise business in the attractive village of Ree Heights.

F. R. Gardner was born in Licking county, Ohio, on the 9th of May, 1856, and W. T. Gardner, the junior member of the firm, was born in La Salle county, Illinois, on the 8th of June, 1858. They are sons of Gilson and Margaret (Humphrey) Gardner, five of whose children are living at the present time. The father of the subject devoted the major portion of his active life to agricultural pursuits, and his wife died in the state of Iowa in 1892. F. R. Gardner received his early educational training in the public schools of Iowa, and later continued his studies in the Iowa State Normal School at Cedar Falls, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1880. He had previously completed a course in the high school, and thereafter was for three years successfully engaged in teaching in the public schools of Chickasaw and Boone counties, Iowa. In 1884 he came to Hand county, South Dakota, where his brother W. T. had previously located, and since that time they have been closely associated in their business enterprises. They here engaged in the ranch and live-stock business, to which they continued to give their attention until 1892, when they established their present general merchandise business in Ree Heights, where they have built up a large and prosperous trade, which is drawn from the wide radius of country normally tributary to the town. They carry a large and complete stock in each of the several departments and by their correct business methods and manifest integrity of purpose have gained and retained the unqualified confidence and esteem of the community. The firm is also associated with another brother, Newman A., in the ownership of the Orient State Bank, of Orient, South Dakota, which was opened for business in September, 1903, and which has met with a most gratifying popular support from the time of its inception. The brothers are the owners of about fourteen hundred acres of land in the county and have here attained a high degree of success through their well-directed endeavors. They are uncompromising Republicans in their political proclivities, and their religious faith is that of the Congregational church.

On the 2d of December, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of F. R. Gardner to Miss Kate M. Wetherell, of Jancsville, Iowa, and they have three children, Charles W., Hugh H. and Margery. Fraternal Mr. Gardner is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

W. T. Gardner, like his brother, was reared to the sturdy and invigorating discipline of the farm, and after completing the curriculum of the public schools he continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits in Black Hawk county, Iowa, until 1881, when he came as a pioneer to what is now the state of South Dakota. He settled first in Aurora county, where he took up land and remained thereon for two years, at the expiration of which he came to Hand county and eventually became extensively engaged in the ranching and stock-raising business with his brother, as has already been noted in this sketch. He first secured in this county a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of land, in Spring Hills township, while the extensive holdings of the brothers in this section now aggregate, as noted, nearly fourteen hundred acres. The property is well improved and figures as an asset which is constantly appreciated in value.

On the 15th of April, 1895, W. T. Gardner was united in marriage to Miss Anna Wharton, who was born in Iowa and reared in Hand county, South Dakota, and of this union has been born one son, Henry.

JACOB ENGBRETSSEN HOLTER, numbered among the prosperous farmers of Lincoln county, is a native of Norway, where he was born on the 24th of June, 1837, and having been reared and educated in the fair land of his nativity, where his father was for many years engaged in a lumber business, making extensive shipments to foreign ports and being a man of sterling worth. Both he and his wife passed their entire lives in Norway, and of their children five are living at the present time, while of the number four are residents of the United States.

The subject of this sketch remained in his native land until he had attained the age of twenty-eight years, having received excellent educational advantages, going through Den Norske Artillery Brigade's Underofficers' Skole, and having rendered effective service in the Norwegian army for a period of seven years. In 1865 he came to America, landing in Quebec, and thence making his way westward to Chicago, his financial resources upon his arrival in the future western metropolis being represented in a twenty-dollar gold piece, which he exchanged for greenbacks, receiving one and one-half dollars for each dollar of gold. He was variously employed until 1868, when he came to the great territory of Dakota as a pioneer, locating in what is now Lincoln county and taking up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in the immediate vicinity of the present thriving city of Canton.

He was one of the earliest settlers in this locality, and in the pioneer days had to endure the hardships and vicissitudes incidental to establishing a home on the frontier, neighbors being few and far removed from one another, while the hostile Indians were a constant menace to life and property. He erected his rude and primitive dwelling and earnestly set himself to the task of subduing the virgin prairie to cultivation, and though he met with misfortunes, through the scourge of grasshoppers and by reason of unfavorable seasons, he maintained a sturdy courage and indomitable perseverance, and has not been denied his just rewards, since he is now the owner of a finely improved and valuable farm of three hundred and sixty acres, the greater portion of which is under effective cultivation. On his farm he set out the fine trees and orchard which now adorn the place, while all the permanent improvements are of excellent type and have been made by himself, he being a carpenter as well as farmer. He devotes his attention to diversified agriculture and stock growing and is one of the influential and highly honored pioneers of the county. In politics he gives his support to the Populist party, and has been active in the promotion of its cause, while the esteem in which he is held in the community is shown in the fact that he has been called upon to serve in various offices of local trust. He has almost constantly been a member of the school board of his district, is now serving his sixth term as treasurer of Canton township, and was incumbent of the office of county commissioner from 1870 to 1872, inclusive. In 1869 he erected the first frame house in Canton for J. Q. Fitzgerald and at all times he has shown that progressive spirit which has typified the sterling pioneers of the state, whose advancement and great prosperity have been advanced through their efforts. In religion he is very liberal. He admits the supremacy of natural law and rejects orthodoxy. He is a strong moralist and a member of the Norwegian Lutheran church.

On the 23d of December, 1872, Mr. Holter was united in marriage to Miss Helga Thorsteinson, who was born in Norway and who was a resident of Lincoln county, this state, at the time of her marriage. Of this union have been born eight children, five of whom are living, namely: Engebret, Thorstein, Carl, Emma and Clara.

FRANK W. DRAKE, one of the prosperous and honored farmers of Moody county, claims the old Granite state as the place of his nativity, since he was born in Merrimack county, New Hampshire, on the 30th of December, 1841. He is a son of W. H. and Betsy (Glines) Drake, both of whom were born and reared in New Hampshire, where the father was a prosperous farmer. In his family were eleven children, and nine of the number are still living. He died in 1892, when well advanced in years, and his wife is still living, both having been zealous and active members of the Methodist Episcopal church, while in politics he was originally a Whig and later a Republican.

In 1856, at the age of fifteen years, the subject of this sketch accompanied his parents on their removal to the state of Iowa, the family thus becoming numbered with the pioneers of that commonwealth, where he was reared to maturity under the sturdy discipline of the home farm, while his educational advantages were those afforded by the common schools. On the 16th of August, 1862, Mr. Drake tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a private in Company K, Twenty-seventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he rendered valiant and faithful service until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge. His command became a part of the Army of the West and he thus was an active participant in the battles of Nashville, Mobile and Pleasant Hill, besides others of importance, and also took part in the Red river campaign under General Banks.

After the close of his military service Mr. Drake returned to his home in Mitchell county, Iowa, where he continued to be actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1880, when he disposed of his interests there and came to Moody county, South Dakota, where he filed on homestead and timber claims and forthwith inaugurated the improvement and cultivation of the land, which had never been furrowed by the plowshare at the time he secured the property from the government. He now has a fine estate of three hundred and twenty acres, two-thirds of which are under a high state of cultivation and productivity, while the improvements are such as indicate the progressive ideas and good judgment of the owner. In addition to diversified agriculture, in the propagation of the various cereals best adapted to the soil and climate, Mr. Drake also gives not a little attention to the raising of an excellent grade of live stock. His political allegiance is given to the Republican party, and he has been called upon to fill various offices of local trust, having served for six years as justice of the peace and for twelve years as an officer of his school district.

On the 30th of December, 1873, Mr. Drake was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Monholland, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, being a daughter of John and Lucind (Burrington) Monholland. Her father was a painter by trade and vocation and was employed in this line in Wisconsin and later in California, where both he and his wife died. Mr. and Mrs. Drake have four children; Carrie is the wife of Frederick Bergstresser, of Wentworth, Lake county, this state; Jennie is the wife of Grant Dockstader, a farmer near Dell Rapids; Hilord H. has the general charge of the homestead farm; and Fair also remains beneath the parental roof, the children having been given good educational advantages.

OLAUS E. HOLTER, one of the well-known and prosperous farmers of Lincoln county, is a native of Norway, where he was born on the 29th of March, 1840, and he is a son of Engebret and Carrie (Olson) Holter, both of whom passed their entire lives in Norway, where the father was long and prominently identified with the lumber business. The subject of this sketch was reared and educated in his native land, and after he attained years of maturity he there devoted his attention to lumber work until his emigration to America. Prior to this radical change he was married, in 1864, to Miss Maren Axelson, a native of the same locality, and she has proved to him a true helpmeet and materially aided him in the winning of independence and definite success. It may be stated at this point that they have six children, and in the connection we are pleased to enter a brief record concerning them: Lizzie, who has been successfully engaged in teaching school for the past ten years, is now residing in that state of Washington; Annie is the wife of Lauritz Olson, a successful farmer of Lyman county, South Dakota; Martin is associated with his father in the work of the home farm; Laura has taken up a claim of land in Lyman county and is residing on the same, in order to secure title to the property; Otto remains at home and assists in the work of the farm; and Cora also remains beneath the parental roof.

In April, 1869, Mr. Holter left his native land and came with his wife to America, landing in New York and forthwith making his way westward to the great territory of Dakota. He settled in what is now Lincoln county, being among the first to take up a permanent residence here, while only a few dugouts marked the habitations of the pioneer settlers, the most of these being located along the course of the Sioux river. Mr. Holter took up a tract of government land in what is now Canton township, and on the same constructed one of the rude and primitive dugouts, in which he placed his few household effects, and he then left his devoted wife with two little babies in charge of the place and went to Sioux City to secure work, being variously employed for some time and in the meanwhile carrying forward the development and improvement of his farm. The passing years have not only shown the result of his labors but have brought him a full measure of prosperity. He is now the owner of two hundred and forty acres of very productive land, and nearly all is under cultivation, while he has embellished the same with hardy trees and good fences and buildings, his fine large barn having been erected in 1896. He gives his attention to diversified farming and also raises live stock of high grade. In politics Mr. Holter is an independent voter, and he has served as a school officer of his district.

ALFRED KOHLER, one of the progressive and successful farmers of Moody county, is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born on the homestead farm, in Fayette county, on the 16th of March, 1866. He is a son of Nicholas and Mary (Lang) Kohler, both born and reared in Switzerland. The father of the subject continued to reside in his beloved fatherland until 1854, when he severed the home ties and immigrated to America. Soon after his arrival in the new world he made his way westward to Iowa and became one of the pioneers of Plymouth county, where he has since resided, devoting his attention to the great basic art of agriculture and having gained prominence and prosperity as a business man and valued citizen. His devoted wife is still living, as are also eight of their ten children, the other two having died in early childhood. The father of our subject was a carpenter in his early life, having followed this vocation in his native land. In politics he is a Democrat and both he and his wife are sincere and consistent members of the Lutheran church. He is one of the wealthy farmers of Iowa, owning a valuable estate of four hundred acres.

The subject of this sketch was reared to maturity on the homestead farm which was the place of his birth, and his early educational training was received in the excellent public schools for which Iowa has long been celebrated. He continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-four years, when he initiated his independent career. In 1893 he came to South Dakota and located in Moody county, where he is now the owner of nine hundred and sixty acres of most arable land, as has been previously noted, and the entire tract is under effective cultivation. Mr. Kohler is a man of advanced ideas, and brings to bear scientific principles in his farm work, while he has the business thoroughly systematized, realizing that this is as essential to success in farming as in any other line of industrial or commercial enterprise. He has equipped his farm with substantial and attractive buildings and the place may well be looked upon as a model. In addition to diversified agriculture he also gives no little attention to the raising of an excellent grade of live stock. In politics Mr. Kohler maintains an independent attitude, and he has been called upon to serve as township trustee and as an officer of the school district.

On the 10th of March, 1889, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Kohler to Miss Matilda Miller, who was born and reared in Fayette county, Iowa, being a daughter of Benedict and Elizabeth (Islay) Miller. Mr. and Mrs. Kohler have six children, namely: Otto, Pearl, Vina, Lester, Lynn and Lloid.

MICHAEL J. DOUGHERTY, one of the enterprising and popular young business men of Mount Vernon, Davison county, was born in Schuylkill county, Pennsylvania, on the 4th of June, 1868, and was there reared to the age of eight years, when, in 1876, he accompanied his parents on their removal to Wisconsin, the family locating in Waukesha county, where he received his educational training in the public schools, his father being there engaged in farming until 1880, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up his residence in Davison county, being the first to enter claim to government land in this county and being the first settler in the present thriving village of Mount Vernon. He and his wife still reside here, honored pioneers, and he is sixty-six years of age at the time of this writing. The subject is a son of Michael and Mary (Flannagan) Dougherty, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Ireland, and they are the parents of five children. They are members of the Catholic church, and in politics Mr. Dougherty is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party.

Michael J. Dougherty, the immediate subject of this sketch, was about twelve years of age at the time of his parents' immigration to South Dakota, in the spring of 1880, and here he continued his studies in the public schools, while he assisted in the development of the homestead farm, being identified with the great basic art of agriculture until 1899, when he established himself in the hardware business in Mount Vernon, where he has built up an excellent trade and is honored as one of the progressive and representative citizens of the town. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Democratic party, and his religious faith is that of the Catholic church, while fraternally he is identified with the Brotherhood of American Yeomen and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In 1901, as candidate on the Citizens' ticket, he was elected village clerk of Mount Vernon, in which capacity he served three years.

On the 1st of November, 1899, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dougherty to Miss Nellie Pollard, of Mt. Vernon, a daughter of Joseph Pollard, and of this union has been born one son, Eugene.

HORACE W. LEBLOND, a pioneer druggist of Chamberlain, South Dakota, and in point of continuous residence one of the town's oldest business men as well as one of the leading citizens of Brule county, was born June 28, 1854, in Celina, Ohio, and when a child of three years was taken by his parents on their removal to Minnesota, in which state he spent his childhood and youth and in the public schools of which he received his elementary education. The discipline thus acquired was later supplemented by a three-years course in the University of Minnesota, after which he took up the study of pharmacy and pursued the same until becoming proficient in every detail of the profession.

In 1881 Mr. LeBlond came to South Dakota on a prospecting tour for a location, and being pleased with the new town of Chamberlain and the advantages it afforded to young men of spirit and enterprise, he decided to make it his permanent place of abode. In due time he secured a business room and, stocking the same with a full line of drugs and a complete assortment of such other articles and sundries as are usually found in first-class establishments of the kind, opened his doors and announced himself in readiness to wait upon his customers. Being the only business house of the kind in the place, he soon commanded a large and lucrative patronage and his career from that time to the present day, covering a period of over twenty-two years, presents a series of continued advancements, which now place him in the front ranks of the enterprising and successful men of affairs in this part of the state. Mr. LeBlond has added largely to his stock in order to keep abreast of the steadily growing demands of the trade, and being, as already indicated, a master of his profession and at the same time a most courteous and obliging business man whose relations with the public have always been of a pleasant and agreeable character, it is not at all surprising that he has won a warm and permanent place in the confidence and esteem of the people.

Since locating in Chamberlain, Mr. LeBlond has been an influential factor in the growth and development of the place and a conspicuous figure in its political and public affairs. Although a strong adherent of the Democratic party, he was elected in the early days of the town to the office of city clerk, making the race on the Peoples' ticket and defeating a well-known and popular competitor by a very decisive majority. After serving one term with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the public, he was re-elected his own successor on the citizens' ticket, his successful management of the office being his greatest recommendation to the suffrage of the people regardless of party or political affiliation, his second term fully justifying the support given him and adding to his reputation as an able and judicious and popular public servant.

Mr. LeBlond has a beautiful and attractive home in Chamberlain which is presided over with dignity and grace by a lady of intelligence and varied culture who, since 1893, has worthily and honorably borne his name, shared his fortunes and successes, co-operated with him in his endeavors and sympathized and assisted him in all of his aspirations. Mrs. LeBlond before her marriage was Miss Lizzie Bridgeman and she was born in Little Rock, Arkansas, and moved to South Dakota in 1880. In his business and social relations Mr. LeBlond has been actuated by the highest motives of honor and his record is that of a man of wide intelligence and broad generous sympathies, whose integrity has never been questioned and whose character has always been above reproach. He is a Mason of the Royal Arch degree, an influential member of the blue lodge in Chamberlain and at various times has been honored with high official stations in the different branches of the order with which he is identified.

JOHN JANCİK, a prosperous agriculturist of Yankton county, who is living near Lesterville, was born in Bohemia in 1848, a son of Frank Anthony Jancik. There was no event of special importance in his early youth to vary the routine of life for him, but after he had attained his majority he was married, in 1870, to Miss Tracy Nikodyn. Three years passed and in 1873 they bade adieu to friends and native land and sailed for the new world. They hoped to find in the land of freedom the business opportunities which were not so easily secured in the old country nor has Mr. Jancik been disappointed in this hope. Coming to South Dakota, he homesteaded two hundred acres and he still owns this property, all of which he himself farms. He lived here at the time when the grasshoppers descended upon the country in such great numbers, when they seemed in the air like an immense cloud. Settling upon the fields, they destroyed in a few hours the crops which it had taken months of labor and care to ripen. Other hardships and trials have been met by Mr. Jancik, but he has with courageous spirit borne all these difficulties and at length has triumphed over the obstacles in his path to success so that he is now a prosperous farmer of his community. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Jancik were born ten children: Louise, who is at home; Annie and Amelia, also under the parental roof; Rosie, the wife of Joe Rankin, a resident farmer of Yankton county; Sophia, who is employed in the city of Yankton; Tina, Mary, Minnie, Emil and Tillie, who are also at home.

Becoming a naturalized American citizen, Mr. Jancik, after informing himself concerning the political conditions of the country and the belief of the parties, allied his interests with the Republican party and has since supported its men and measures. He is a member of the Evangelical church and is a man of considerable force of character, having depended entirely upon his own exertions since an early age. While in Bohemia he mastered the tailor's trade and followed it there, but since coming to the new world he has carried on agricultural pursuits and his farming interests are now valuable. His life history proves how excellent are the business advantages afforded in the United States to young men of energy, whose labors are not hampered by social or caste conditions.

RASMUS PEDERSON was born in Norway on the 26th of August, 1861, being a son of Jorgen and Christence Pederson, who emigrated from the fair Norseland to America in 1867, locating first in Wisconsin, where they remained until the following year, when they came to the wilds of the great territory of Dakota and cast in their lot with the pioneers of Yankton county. The father of the subject took up a homestead claim eight miles northeast of the city of Yankton, on the James river, and here passed the remainder of his long and useful life. He developed a fine farm and the place is now one of the best improved and most productive in this section, its area being now three hundred and twenty acres. He continued to reside on the homestead until his death, which occurred in June, 1900, and his widow is still living on the old farm, which has been her home for more than thirty-five years, her son Rasmus, subject of this sketch, having had charge of the farm since the death of his father. In the family of this worthy couple were four children, of whom two are living, Rasmus and Ole.

Rasmus Pederson grew up under the sturdy discipline of the homestead farm and under the influences of the pioneer epoch in a section which he has seen develop into one of the most attractive in the great state of South Dakota. His educational advantages were such as were afforded in the district schools, and he has lived on the home farm consecutively except for a period of about five years,—from 1883 to 1888,—during which he was engaged in business in the city of Yankton. He is an energetic and progressive farmer and has been successful in his efforts, while he holds the esteem of the community in which he has passed nearly his entire life. He gives his support to the Republican party and he and his wife are members of the Lutheran church, while fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 23d of October, 1888, Mr. Pederson was united in marriage to Miss Amanda Jane Emerson, who was born in Fayette county, Pennsylvania, on the 23d of March, 1866, being a daughter of Aquila and Ellen Emerson, who came to Dakota in 1884. Mr. and Mrs. Pederson have three children, namely: Rena E. Christina, Amanda Johanna and Ralph Emory.

GEORGE S. RIX, the present city attorney of Milbank, Grant county, is a native of the state of Minnesota, having been born in Spring Valley, Fillmore county, on January 26, 1860, and is a son of Porter N. and Emma (Winters) Rix, the former of whom was born in Canada, and the latter in England. Porter N. accompanied his parents on their removal to Wisconsin when a small boy, and he was reared to manhood in that state, whence, about 1860, he removed to Fillmore county, Minnesota, where he became a prominent and successful farmer and stock-grower, devoting special attention to the raising of fine horses and high-grade cattle. He was one of a large family of boys, and nearly all of them have been more or less prominent in politics and other affairs of a public nature.

George S. Rix was graduated in the high school of Spring Valley as valedictorian of the class of 1889. He was then matriculated in the law department of the University of Wisconsin, from which celebrated institution he was graduated in 1891, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, while he was simultaneously admitted to the bar. Upon the opening of the Sisseton-Wahpeton Indian reservation, in April, 1892, he took up his residence on a claim near Brown's Valley, Minnesota, where he remained about one year, until the 1st of January, 1893, when he came to Milbank, where he entered into professional partnership with the late John W. Bell, under the firm name of Bell & Rix. They were associated in practice about one and one-half years, since when Mr. Rix has conducted an individual practice, retaining a representative clientage and having gained marked priority. Mr. Rix early developed oratorical and dialectic skill and thus laid an excellent foundation for comprehensive knowledge of parliamentary law. His first speech given outside the lyceum or school was made in the Methodist Episcopal church of his native town on the occasion of the centennial anniversary of the inauguration of George Washington to the presidency, and his success was such that he soon found himself much in demand as a speaker on public occasions. He has continued to appear as a speaker on matters of public polity, political affairs, patriotic observances, etc. During the campaign of 1900, while a law student, his services were given to the Democratic party at various places in Wisconsin. However, he became convinced that the principles for which the Republican party stands sponsor most nearly represent the highest interests of the people, and he signalized his conviction by transferring his allegiance to the "grand old party," in whose cause he has ever since been an enthusiastic and active worker. In 1892, while a resident of Roberts county, he was a delegate to the Republican state convention, as was he also from Grant county in 1896, while in 1896 he became a member of the Republican state central committee, in which capacity he served two years. In 1896 he was elected state's attorney of Grant county, continuing incumbent of this position two terms and making an admirable record as a prosecutor. He has served as city attorney since 1902. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, in the former of which he has passed all the official chairs in his lodge. He and his wife are valued members of the First Congregational church, taking an active interest in the various departments of its work. They have an attractive home on Fourth street, and he is also the owner of other residence property in Milbank.

GEORGE S. RIX.

On Christmas day of the year 1895 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Rix to Miss Maud C. Nash, who was born and reared at Cherry Grove, Minnesota, being a daughter of L. H. Nash, an old and honored resident of that section. Mr. and Mrs. Rix have one child, Doris C.

ADDISON H. PEASE, postmaster at Wagner and publisher and editor of the Charles Mix County New Era, is a native of the state of Michigan, having been born in Lacota, Van Buren county, on the 17th of May, 1867, and being a son of Enoch M. and Rachel A. Pease. The former was born in Wayne county, New York, in 1830, and the latter in Pennsylvania, in 1838. They came to South Dakota in 1882, and the father died in Wagner, this state, on the 26th of February, 1901, while his devoted wife passed away, in the same town, on the 25th of January, 1903. Enoch M. Pease was of stanch German lineage, the family having been established in America fully twelve generations ago. He was a wool carder by vocation, was a man of sterling integrity and ever commanded unqualified confidence and esteem. He was a Republican in politics and he and his wife held membership in the Methodist church. They became the parents of six children, all of whom are living, while the subject of this sketch was the third in order of birth.

Addison H. Pease came to South Dakota in November, 1882, in company with his parents, being at the time a lad of fifteen years. His educational advantages were such as were afforded in the common schools, which he continued to attend as opportunity afforded after the removal of the family to the territory of Dakota. As he has personally stated, his education was secured "principally by hard knocks and practical experience," since he early began to depend upon his own resources. He has never been willing to wait for opportunity but has turned his hand to whatever honest work has come to hand. In early days he drove stage and for eight years after his marriage was variously employed. In June, 1895, he took up a homestead claim on Yankton reservation, Charles Mix county, and gave his attention to its improvement and cultivation until January 1, 1901, when he took up his residence in the town of Wagner, having been appointed postmaster. He also purchased in that year the plant and business of the New Era, a weekly paper, and has since continued its publication, making it an effective exponent of local interests and an advocate of the principles of the Republican party, in whose cause he has been an active worker. Mr. Pease is one of the charter members of Wagner Tent, No. 59, Knights of the Maccabees, of which he is now commander.

At Armour, this state, on the 1st of September, 1890, Mr. Pease was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Thompson, daughter of Harry Thompson, who was at that time sheriff of Douglas county.

DELATUS HINMAN, of Yankton county, was born in Oswego county, New York, April 6, 1848, and is of English lineage. His paternal great-grandfather was Edward Hinman, who deserted the land of his birth and established his home in the new world and the family has since been represented in America by loyal adherents of the interest of this country. The grandfather, Ephraim Hinman, was drafted for service in the war of 1812. The parents of the subject were William and Julie (Salisbury) Hinman, both of whom were natives of New York, in which state they lived and died. The father was a farmer by occupation and a well-known representative citizen of this country. He died in the year 1888 and his wife passed away in 1884. They were both members of the Methodist Episcopal church and lived in harmony with their profession. The political support of Mr. Hinman was given to the Whig party, and later to the Republican party and eventually he became a Prohibitionist.

Delatus Hinman was reared in his father's home and assisted in the cultivation of the farm until he had attained his majority, when he entered upon an independent business career as a school teacher and followed that profession through several winter terms. Attracted by the opportunities of the rapidly developing west, he came to Yankton county in the fall of 1869, traveling by stage from St. Louis. He has been identified with the educational interests of this locality for several terms as a teacher, and in 1869 he made preparations for carrying on agricultural pursuits by entering one hundred and sixty acres of land from the government, while to this he afterward added another quarter section. He afterward sold both tracts and in the fall of 1870 he bought one hundred and sixty acres in township 94, range 55. There were no improvements upon the place except a log house, but he has since devoted his knowledge to the care and cultivation of the farm, upon which he has lived continuously since 1877. He has a fine farm and in 1878 he erected a substantial and attractive residence. He has likewise built good barns and added other improvements and the boundaries of his farm he has extended by the purchase of eighty acres. The entire farm is now under cultivation. In the early days he lost his crops because of the grasshoppers, but he persevered in his work and as the years have gone by he has accumulated a comfortable competence. He now breeds hogs and cattle and makes a specialty of the production of alfalfa hay. He has a good apple orchard, containing some of the best bearing trees of the state, and his farm is modern in all its equipments and constitutes one of the valuable properties of the community.

On the 1st of March, 1877, Mr. Hinman was united in marriage to Miss Jane Ottman, a daughter of Jacob and Christiana Ottman, who spent their entire lives in New York, the father being a successful farmer there. He voted with the Republican party and both he and his wife were members of the Disciple church. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Hinman has been born one son, Byron, whose birth occurred January 1, 1885, and who is now a student in college at Yankton. In 1893 they adopted Mary Kincel, nine years of age, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kincel, were both deceased. The child took the name of Mary Kincel Hinman, and has been given a good education, graduating from Yankton Academy in June, 1903. The parents hold membership in the Methodist church, taking an active part in its work, and their labors are effective in promoting its welfare and extending its influence.

Mr. Hinman is a Prohibitionist, with strong party tendencies, and fraternally he is connected with the Modern Woodmen, the Pyramids and the Royal Tribe of Joseph. Because of his success and sterling worth, Yankton county numbers him among her representative men.

NORMAN D. WHITE was born at Scales Mound, Illinois, August 2, 1863, and is a son of John and Henrietta C. (Phelps) White. The father was born December 25, 1826, at Jamestown, New York, and was the youngest son of Moses and Sallie (Cheney) White. The family is of English descent and was founded in America by Elder John White, who emigrated from England to Massachusetts in 1632. The grandfather of the subject was a goldsmith by trade and removed from Southington, Connecticut, to New York in 1791. He finally married and settled at Jamestown, New York. His wife was born and reared at Essex, Vermont. John White spent his childhood in Jamestown and attended the public schools. He early showed marked musical talent and became a skillful violinist. In 1846, at the age of twenty, he went to Chicago, Illinois, and thence by stage to Galena, where he worked for two years as a farm hand and about the lead mines and also found many profitable opportunities for the employment of his musical skill. He was married in 1848 to Henrietta Phelps, of Jo Daviess county, Illinois, a daughter of Milo and Charlotte (Beldin) Phelps, formerly of Jasper, New York. Locating upon a farm north of Scales Mound, he there engaged in farming and stock raising for many years, accumulating considerable property. In the fall of 1880 he visited his brother at Yankton, South Dakota, and was so well pleased with this locality that he invested in real estate in the fertile James river valley. In 1885 he disposed of his property in Illinois and located on his South Dakota farm. He added to his possessions from time to time until he owned over thirteen hundred acres of as fine land as can be found in the state. In all his work and dealings he left the impress of a considerate, careful-minded man and one of strong, forceful character. In his long lingering illness he manifested great patience and forbearance which characterized his entire life. He voted with the Democracy and was a loyal member of the Methodist church, to which his wife also belongs. She survives him and is yet living on the old homestead. In the family of this worthy couple were nine children: Thomas, in 1849, married Melvina Wells and with his family of four children lives upon a farm in Yankton county; Cecil J., born in 1854 and now conducting a country store in Yankton county, married Miss Viola Hill and they have an adopted child; Delia, born in 1859, is the wife of William C. Coulson, a resident farmer of Yankton county, by whom she has three children; Norman D. is the next of the family; Lee is a carpenter of St. Louis, Missouri; Addie, is the wife of William Van Epps, a liveryman of Yankton, and they have three sons. The three other children of the White family died in Illinois. All were provided with good educational privileges and Delia engaged in teaching school, while Addie taught music. Thomas displayed much of his father's musical talent as a violinist. The different members of the family are now comfortably situated in life and are valued residents of the various communities in which they reside.

Norman D. White spent his early life in Illinois and with his father came to South Dakota in the spring of 1885. He has since resided upon the home farm here and has taken an active part in its management and operation. At the time of his father's death he was appointed executor of the estate, comprising eleven hundred acres of land in Yankton county. He now carries on general farming and stock raising, making a specialty of Guernsey cattle, splendid bred horses and Poland-China hogs. He has handled stock extensively, becoming one of the leading representatives of this line of business in the county and his large sales have brought to him a splendid financial return. His home is pleasantly located on the banks of the James river, four miles from Yankton, and in 1891 he erected an elegant farm residence which is one of the most attractive features of the landscape. There is found an artesian well upon his place and also a fish pond. He has a blacksmith and carpenter shop upon his farm and he possesses excellent mechanical ability, so that he is enabled to keep everything about his place in first-class condition. Mr. White is a most energetic and enterprising man and his resolution and strong purpose have been important factors in a successful business career. He lives with his mother and both are highly esteemed in the community. Fraternally, Mr. White is connected with the Pyramids and the Maccabees. He is an honored son of an honored pioneer and today occupies a very prominent and enviable position as a representative of agricultural interests in South Dakota.

CHARLES E. SEELEY, one of the well-known and representative citizens of Clark county, is a native of the Wolverine state, having been born in Oakland county, Michigan, on the 31st of May, 1841, and being a son of Edward H. and Calista (Walker) Seeley, the former of whom was born in Seneca county, New York, and the latter in Connecticut, while it may be stated that the original ancestors of the subject in the maternal line settled in New England in the pre-Revolutionary days. Edward H. Seeley devoted his life to farming and was one of the pioneers of the state of Michigan, where both he and his wife died. His father was a prominent lawyer in New York, and served for a number of years as county judge of Seneca county. The subject of this review received his early educational training in the common schools of his native state and also attended a select school for a short time, just prior to the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, in which he participated. On the 17th of August, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company D, Fifth Michigan Volunteer Infantry, and a few weeks later proceeded with his command to the front. He was wounded in the battle of Williamsburg, Virginia, on the 5th of May, 1862, and rejoined his regiment three days before the opening of the seven days' fighting before the city of Richmond. He received his honorable discharge in the autumn of 1862, by reason of disability, and then returned to his home in Michigan. He there continued to be engaged in farming about five years, after which he learned the trade of carpenter and became a successful contractor and builder. In 1893 he came to South Dakota and located in Maydell township, Clark county, and here he has continued contracting and building, having contributed materially to the substantial development and progress of this section and having also become the owner of a well-improved and productive farm, to whose management he has given his attention to a greater or less extent.

Mr. Seeley has gained and retained the respect and confidence of the people of the county and is recognized as a loyal and progressive citizen. In politics he has given his support to the Republican party from the time of attaining his legal majority, having cast his first presidential vote for Abraham Lincoln, at the time of his second nomination, and having ever since been a stalwart upholder of the principles and policies of the "grand old party." He has been called upon to serve in various township offices and is at the present time incumbent of that of justice of the peace. He is treasurer of the Garden City Co-operative Creamery Company, one of the leading business concerns of the county. Fraternally, he is identified with the Grand Army of the Republic, and for the past score of years he has been a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which Mrs. Seeley also is a member.

On the 22d of March, 1865, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Seeley to Miss Lucy O. Green, who was born in the state of Michigan, being a daughter of Z. R. and Zerilla Green, and they have seven children, namely: Elmer G., Harry M., Emmet C., Eugene, May R., Frank A. and Alice Louise.

J. M. DOYLE, one of the influential and honored business men of Delmont, Douglas county, is a native of Grant county, Wisconsin, where he was born on the 10th of May, 1854, being a son of John and Mary (Brady) Doyle, of whose six children five are living, namely: Dr. E. M., who is engaged in the practice of his profession in Yankton, this state; Thomas, who is a resident of Grant county, Wisconsin; Garrett, who, likewise, resides in that county; John S., who is a resident of Kansas City, Missouri; Sarah M., who married William Sheridan in October, 1881, and died a widow in 1892; and J. M., who is the subject of this review. The father of the subject was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, where he was reared to maturity, and he was there identified with the mining industry until 1846, when he emigrated to America, locating in Grant county, Wisconsin, as one of its early pioneers, and there he engaged in mining for two years. He entered a tract of government land in that county, improved a good farm, to whose cultivation he gave his attention until his death, which occurred in 1886, at which time he was seventy-three years of age. He was twice married, the maiden name of his first wife having been Farrell, and of this union were born four children, of whom two are living,—Terrence, who is a retired farmer of Pocahontas county, Iowa; and Anna, a maiden lady, residing in Shellsburg, Wisconsin. The mother of the subject was also a native of County Wicklow, Ireland, and she died in 1881, at the age of sixty-five years, both she and her husband having been zealous members of the Catholic church, while the latter was a Democrat in politics.

J. M. Doyle was reared on the homestead farm in Wisconsin, receiving his early educational discipline in the public schools and supplementing the same by a course of study in St. John's College, in Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin. In 1879 he and his brother Garret rented land in Grant county, that state, where they were engaged in farming for the ensuing two years, at the expiration of which they purchased a meat market in Fairplay, Wisconsin, conducting the same one year. In 1882 the subject came to Dakota, located in Plankinton, Aurora county, and thus becoming one of the pioneers of what is now the state of South Dakota. He located two claims in that county and while complying with the legal requirements necessary to retaining the same he conducted a confectionery store in the village mentioned, there continuing his residence for seven years. Within this period he made a visit to his old home in Wisconsin, remaining about one year. In 1890 Mr. Doyle disposed of his property in Plankinton, Aurora county, and removed to Pocahontas county, Iowa, with the intention of engaging in the real-estate business in company with bankers there. No satisfactory arrangements could be made, however, and after teaching a three-months term of school in Iowa, he returned to Dakota, taking up his residence in Plankinton, and from March until July, 1889, he held the position of insurance underwriter for the Dakota Mutual Protective Association, which was organized and incorporated under the laws of the territory for the purpose of rendering insurance indemnity on live stock, the executive corps being as follows: H. C. Ayres, president; Richard Hancy, secretary, and W. T. Lafollette, manager. In the autumn of the same year Mr. Doyle went again to Iowa, passing some time there and in the city of Chicago, his object being to promote the organization of a land company to handle western properties, but again he was unable to enlist satisfactory capitalistic co-operation, and after teaching school for three months, in Pocahontas county, Iowa, he returned to South Dakota, locating in Delmont on the 17th of August, 1891, as the representative of the firm of T. McMichael & Son, of McGregor, Iowa. He had the management of their elevator and grain business here until 1898, when he purchased the business, which he has since successfully continued. In January, 1892, he established the first permanent hog market in Delmont, and he is today one of the heaviest buyers of grain and live stock in this section of the state, while he is known as an energetic and able business man and as one who is worthy of unqualified confidence and esteem, which are uniformly accorded by all who know him. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, but he has never been ambitious for public office. In the fall of 1902 he was tendered by his party friends the nomination for either sheriff of the county or for representative of the district in the state legislature, but he refused to become a candidate for either office. He was later appointed a member of the board of county commissioners, to fill the vacancy caused by the removal from the county of the regular incumbent, D. M. Brennerman. He is a most effective and popular auctioneer, in which line he is a pioneer in this section, his services being in demand throughout a wide radius of country in the crying of sales of various sorts. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church, and fraternally he is affiliated with Armour Lodge, No. 100, Ancient Order of United Workmen, at Armour.

On the 14th of June, 1898, Mr. Doyle was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Catherine Kelley, who was at the time principal of the Delmont public schools, being a lady of refinement and gracious presence, and they are the parents of two children, William Bryan and Lucille Bernice.

JOHN MEIER, one of Germany's native sons, was born on the 6th of August, 1835, his parents being Jathan and Elizabeth Meier. The father was a tailor by trade and thus provided for his family. In 1856 he brought his wife and children to the United States, settling in Broadhead, Wisconsin. John Meier, who acquired his education in Germany, accompanied the family at that time and in Wisconsin he took a claim from the government and began farming on his own account. He was married February 12, 1866, to Miss Caroline Dubois, of Rock county, Wisconsin. Her father was a successful farmer of that section. Unto the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Meier were born four sons and three daughters, namely: John, George, Jathan, Josephine, Alma, Gilbert and Hattie, and the family circle yet remains unbroken by the hand of death. George married Julia Rinker, by whom he has one child and is a farmer, residing upon a tract of land adjacent to his father's farm. Josephine is the wife of Frank Ray, an agriculturist living near Wagner, South Dakota. The other children are yet under the parental roof.

Mr. Meier continued to reside in Wisconsin until the spring of 1872, when he came to South Dakota, settling in Yankton township. Much of the land was still in possession of the government at that time and he secured a claim of one hundred and sixty acres, to which he has since added by the purchase of three hundred and twenty acres near his old homestead. He is engaged in stock raising and is today one of the progressive agriculturists of his community. The success that has crowned his efforts has come to him as the reward of his perseverance and his earnest labor and now at the age of sixty-eight years he is enjoying the fruits of his former toil, having a valuable property and a comfortable home. He is independent in politics, as he is in religious faith, although he endorses the teachings of the Methodist church to some extent. Both he and his wife are estimable people, enjoying the warm regard of many friends.

REV. D. B. NICHOLS has devoted his life to two of the most important callings which man can give his energies, the healing of the body and the care of the soul, and his life has been one of extreme usefulness, his influence widely felt for good as a factor in the community in which he lives. He was born in Massachusetts on the 8th of October, 1816, and is a son of James and Lydia D. (Bliss) Nichols, natives of the old Bay state.

The father was a miller and for several years was superintendent of a large cotton mill. He also served as deputy sheriff of Bristol county and gave his political support to the Whig party. He held membership in the Congregational church and died in that faith in 1832, while his wife passed away in 1864. In the family were six sons and one daughter, but all have passed away with the exception of the subject.

Rev. Nichols was reared in the east and enjoyed the excellent school privileges of his native state, while later he had more advanced advantages. He pursued a classical course in Oberlin College of Ohio in 1839 and then, for ten years engaged in teaching and occasionally preached, being then employed by the missionary society in Iowa. Subsequently, he pursued a course in medicine in Howard University, where he was graduated in 1872. He is the oldest graduate of that institution, a fact which was mentioned in one of the Washington papers. He was identified with the rise and progress of Howard University, being one of its instructors, its librarian, a trustee and curator of its museum. For about eleven years he remained in the Capital city and also spent a short time in the practice of medicine in Florida. Since 1850 he has engaged in preaching and followed that calling in Kentucky, where he was also engaged in teaching school. His labors have always been directed along lines which have proven of the greatest benefit to his fellow men. He served as city missionary in Chicago, Illinois, and was superintendent of the Chicago Reform School from 1854 until 1860, when he resigned and went to Europe at his own expense, visiting reform schools in England, Scotland and Germany for the purpose of rendering his own labors in that line more effective. Upon his return to his native country he was appointed superintendent of the State Reform School at Lansing, Michigan, where he remained for a year and then went to Boston. Locating at Scituate Harbor, he there remained until after the outbreak of the Civil war. In 1861 he went to South Carolina to preach to the negroes who had formerly been held as slaves and also to act as a teacher among them. There he continued until midsummer when he went to New York and afterward to Washington to act as a missionary among the colored people of that city. In Washington he was appointed superintendent of the contraband department service and had four thousand people under his charge to whom he gave supplies of food and clothing.

In the year 1880 Mr. Nichols came to Decatur, settling in Bon Homme county, where he began preaching. He built a church there and remained for three years as its pastor, at the end of which time his health failed and he returned to Boston, Massachusetts, but after he had recovered somewhat his usual health and strength he once more came to Dakota, visiting various churches in the state and preaching to many congregations. He was also engaged in presenting the claims of Yankton College. His influence has been most marked in the moral development of South Dakota since his arrival here about twenty-five years ago. He is now an honorable trustee of Howard University, at Washington, D. C., and also for years a trustee of Yankton College, and now a member of the college corporation. At one time he served as librarian of Yankton College. Seventeen years ago he located at his present home, which was then in the midst of the frontier district. He built the church at Mission Hill and has assisted in the entire growth and development of this portion of the state. For three years he served as postmaster and with the work of progress and improvement he has been actively identified along material as well as moral lines. His chief interest, however, has centered in the moral development of the people and his influence has been far-reaching and beneficial.

Rev. Nichols has been twice married. He first married Sarah Chisman, whose parents were from Virginia. After the death of his first wife he wedded Elizabeth Booth and they lived together for sixty years, her death having occurred in the latter part of the year 1903, at the age of eighty-eight years. Rev. Nichols has now reached the advanced age of eighty-six years. They were the oldest couple in the county and none were more respected. Mr. Nichols votes with the Republican party and has been active and helpful in matters pertaining to the intellectual progress of the community, acting as one of the school officers. He is identified with the Congregational church here and in Dakota as in other sections of the country where he has lived and labored for his fellow men he has accomplished much good. His life has been devoted to the welfare of the human race and to the opposition of all the vices that hold men in bondage and today there is no citizen of Yankton county held in warmer regard or higher esteem than Rev. D. B. Nichols.

FRED C. RIX was born in Denmark on the 18th of May, 1839. His father was a farmer there and his parents spent their entire lives in that country. In early life Fred C. Rix went to sea and has sailed around the world. He visited Africa in 1861 and the Philippines in 1862, after which he returned to Holland. He has been on the isle of Java, and has visited Russia, Siberia, Prussia, England, Belgium, France, Sweden, Norway and Germany. He has sailed from many ports and in the employ of different nations and was always upon a sailing vessel, never making a voyage upon a steamer until he came to the United States. He was in the war when the Danish fought the Prussians in 1864 and was injured, having his leg broken during a high sea. Mr. Rix continued to reside in Denmark until 1872, when he crossed the Atlantic to the new world, locating first in Chicago, where he followed the mason's trade for two years. He afterward lived in Waterloo, Iowa, where he engaged in business as a brick-mason for four years and in 1877 he came to South Dakota, securing one hundred and sixty acres of land in Yankton county. He settled upon a timber claim and has planted thirty-eight thousand trees since that time. He has one hundred and sixty acres in his homestead and his first place of residence was a dugout, while later he built a clay house, known as a Russian homg. Mr. Rix now has thirty-four hundred dollars' worth of improvements upon his place and he also owns six lots in the town of Irene, together with another tract of an acre and a quarter.

In 1863 occurred the marriage of Mr. Rix and Miss Elizabeth Olson, whose parents spent their entire lives in Denmark, the father being employed in a foundry there. The home of the subject and his wife has been blessed with four children. Olivia, the eldest, is now deceased; Henry married Anna Massy and is living near Bismarck, North Dakota, where he owns and operates one hundred and sixty acres of land; Stella is the wife of Nels Nelson, of Kenmare, North Dakota, where he secured a homestead; Julia is the wife of Lawrence Nelson, a farmer owning two hundred and forty acres of land in Yankton county.

Mr. Rix is an independent voter and has never been an active politician in the sense of office seeking, but for eight years he served as one of the school officials. He belongs to the Lutheran church and his Christian faith has been exemplified in his honorable life and his straightforward dealing. He is now living retired in the enjoyment of the fruits of his former toil.

LARS C. CHRISTENSEN was born in Denmark on the 19th of November, 1856. His father is now deceased, but his mother lives with her son, who, having spent the days of his boyhood and youth in his native country, came to America when a young man of nineteen years. After spending one year in Racine, Wisconsin, where he was employed, he removed to South Dakota and here entered the employ of a stockman, with whom he remained upon a farm for two years. He afterward worked for the railroad company for a year and subsequently was married and turned his attention to farming. Mr. Christensen is now one of the prosperous residents of Yankton county and his financial condition is now in great contrast to that in which he arrived in America, for he then had but very limited capital. He possessed, however, what is better—strong courage and determination, and his continued labor has been the foundation upon which he has built his success. He has two hundred and forty acres of land, of which two hundred is pasture land. His wife homesteaded a part of this land and Mr. Christensen purchased the remainder. He now carries on general farming and also raises shorthorn cattle and some hogs. He employs men who operate his land and has a well-improved property. He hauled the rock from his place and in 1885 he built a rock barn, while in 1897 he provided still better and more commodious accommodations for his stock by building new barns. His home was erected in 1886. In 1899 he planted trees upon his place and now has a very well-improved property supplied with all modern equipments and accessories. He now owns twelve head of horses and thirty-five head of cattle and already this year has sold twenty head of fat cattle.

In 1879 Mr. Christensen was united in marriage to Miss Johanne Petersen and unto them have been born seven children: Catherine, the wife of J. Jule, a farmer; Mary, Anna, Christ, Lewis, Jens and Dagmer, all at home. The family is well known in the community and the members of the household occupy an enviable position in social circles. Mr. Christensen is a Republican in his political views, always supporting the men and measures of that party. He has served as school treasurer and in other local positions and no trust reposed in him has ever been betrayed in the slightest degree. His religious faith is indicated by his membership in the Lutheran church. Mr. Christensen has never had occasion to regret his determination to come to America for he has not only found a good home, but has also gained many friends and won for himself a handsome competence as the reward of his labors. He is, perhaps, better known as Lars C. Bukste, but no matter by what name he is called he is a man worthy of respect and esteem of those with whom he is associated.

ALEXANDER LEPLANTE was born in Charles Mix county, South Dakota, in April, 1867, and owing to the exigencies and conditions of the time and place his early educational advantages were limited in scope, though he secured a good foundation upon which to build up the fund of practical knowledge which is his today. He continued to be associated with his father in the raising of live stock until 1887, when he initiated his independent career in connection with the same line of industry, which has become one of the most important resources of the state. He utilized the range in the valley of the Bad river until 1894, since which time his cattle have found their grazing grounds on the broad acres of the Cheyenne Indian reservation. Mr. LePlante has an average head of seven hundred head of cattle, and makes his residence and headquarters at the Cheyenne government agency, of which he has been official butcher since 1899, providing all meats used.

On the 14th of November, 1893, Mr. LePlante was united in marriage to Miss Johanna Madison, a daughter of that honored pioneer, Trules Madison, of Fort Pierre, concerning whom individual mention is made on other pages of this work. Mr. and Mrs. LePlante have five children, namely: Louis, Edward, George, Gaylord and Caroline.

ORLANDO P. SWARTZ, one of the prominent and highly honored business men of Hutchinson county, is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born in Jo Daviess county, on the 21st of April, 1864, and being a son of Elias M. and Susan (Rudy) Swartz, of whose eight children we incorporate the following brief record: Martius H. is a resident of Gillette, Wyoming; Edith is the wife of James Brown, of Menno, South Dakota; Sarah is the wife of Schuyler C. Freeburg, of Sunnyside, California; George is engaged in the drug business in Parkston, South Dakota; Maud is the wife of Nelson C. Davis, of Crook county, Wyoming; Frederick is likewise a resident of that county, as is also Grover; and Orlando P. is the immediate subject of this sketch. Elias M. Swartz was born in Center county, Pennsylvania, being a representative of one of the sterling pioneer families of the old Keystone state and coming of stanch German lineage. As a young man he removed to Illinois, settling in Stephenson county, engaging in agricultural pursuits, this being the vocation to which he had been reared. He later removed to Jo Daviess county, where he continued to reside until 1882, when he came to South Dakota, remaining for a short interval in the village of Scotland and then entering claim to land in Charles Mix county, where he engaged in the breeding and raising of cattle and horses, becoming one of the prominent and influential citizens of that section and commanding the most unqualified esteem of those who knew him and had cognizance of his sterling qualities of mind and heart. He died in 1901, having been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, while his political allegiance was given to the Democratic party. His widow now makes her home with her children in Wyoming, she likewise being a member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

The subject of this sketch remained at the parental home until he had attained the age of twelve years, having in the meanwhile attended the public schools and assisted in the work of the farm, and he then went to the city of Freeport, Illinois, where he resided in the home of his uncle about five years, during which period he continued his educational work in the schools of that place. In 1879 he returned home, remaining one year, at the expiration of which he went to Iowa Falls, Iowa, where he was employed in the drug establishment of his uncle, John L. Swartz, for the ensuing three years. In July, 1883, he came to Scotland, Bon Homme county, South Dakota, where he secured a clerical position in the drug store of another uncle, William P. Swartz, and in 1884 he went to Springfield, Bon Homme county, where he was employed for two years in the drug store of Bonesteel & Turner, having in the meanwhile become an expert pharmacist. In September, 1886, in which year the town of Parkston was founded, he took up his residence here and engaged in the drug business on his own responsibility. In 1888 he entered into partnership with Frank Wiedman, who was here engaged in the hardware business at the time, and thereafter until 1898 the firm of Wiedman & Swartz here conducted a most prosperous business in the handling of hardware, implements and drugs. In the year mentioned they disposed of the drug department of their enterprise and added a general line of merchandise, building up one of the most important and extensive trades of the sort in this section of the state. In 1901 they also purchased a general stove business at Milltown, and they now conduct the same as a branch of their Parkston establishment. In 1901 Mr. Swartz was appointed postmaster of Milltown, and he is still incumbent of this office, in which he is serving by proxy. In politics he is found arrayed as a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, while fraternally he has attained the thirty-second degree in Scottish Rite Masonry, being identified with Oriental Consistory, No. 1, at Yankton. His ancient-craft membership is in Resurgam Lodge, No. 31, Free and Accepted Masons, at Mitchell, and he belongs to El Riad Temple, Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls, while he is also a member of Milltown Camp, No. 6153, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 25th of September, 1885, Mr. Swartz was united in marriage to Miss Margie W. Robinson, of Iowa Falls, Iowa, she having been born in Concord county, New Hampshire, daughter of Horace Robinson, deceased. Of this union have been born two children, Mabel C., who is attending All Saints' Academy in Sioux Falls, and William R., who remains at the parental home. Mrs. Swartz is a member of the Congregational church of Iowa Falls, Iowa.

JOSEPH E. HUBER was born on the 21st of February, 1867, in Iowa, and in 1869 was brought to Dakota by his parents. Peter Huber, the subject's father, was born in Possan, Bavaria, Germany, about 1838, his parents being agricultural people. He came to America about 1871 and settled at McGregor, Iowa, where he worked as a farm hand for about one year. At the end of that time he purchased twenty acres of timber land and at once commenced clearing and cultivating the ground. After three years he exchanged this land for a yoke of oxen, a cow and a wagon, and with these he moved his family overland to South Dakota, settling in Yankton county, in the James valley. He pre-empted three claims of one hundred and sixty acres each, two of which were timber claims, and afterwards purchased three more claims of the same size and character. He erected buildings and farmed the ground as fast as his limited resources and his own physical strength would permit, and successfully conducted the place until 1901, when he removed to Yankton and retired from active life. He still owns six hundred and sixty acres of the original farm, the remaining portion of it having been divided among his sons. Before leaving Germany he married Miss Theresa Reisinger and they became the parents of fifteen children, of whom eleven are still living, namely: Frank, whose sketch will be found on another page of this work; Caroline, the wife of Frank Heinige, of Parkston, South Dakota (they became the parents of ten children and the mother is now deceased); Joseph is the subject of this sketch; Peter, who lives near Parkston, married Kate Wallace, of Yankton, and they are the parents of five children; Mary is the wife of John Mack, of Gage county, Nebraska, and they have six children; Katie is the wife of Patrick McGilgig, of near Hanson, this state, and they have two children; Charles married Bertha Rothmyer and they had three children, one of whom is deceased; Theresa is the wife of Nels Anderson, of Yankton, and they have two children; Bertha became the wife of Gerald Smith, of Yankton; Celia, Josephine and Louisa are single and remain at home. Two, Peter and Edward, died in infancy, and Anna died at twelve years of age.

At ten years of age Joseph E. Huber entered the public schools and his preliminary studies were supplemented by a course in Yankton College. He thus gained an excellent education and for three years he taught in the public schools, proving a capable educator who imparted with readiness and clearness to others the knowledge that he had acquired.

On the 9th of October, 1892, Mr. Huber was joined in wedlock to Miss Emma Rothmeyer, who was born in Iowa. Six children have graced this marriage, five of whom are now living, while one has passed away. Those who still survive are Clara, Anna, Martha, Joseph and Mildred. The daughter who is deceased was Eleanora. The home farm of Mr. Huber comprises one hundred and sixty acres of land, most of which he cultivates, and his energy and activity in business affairs are bringing to him very creditable success. Since he was eighteen years of age he has been a member of the school board and he has also been chairman of the board of supervisors. He filled the office of justice of the peace for a term of two years and in all these positions he has been loyal to the trust reposed in him. Over the record of his public career and his private life there falls no shadow of wrong or suspicion of evil. He is a man well worthy of public regard and as almost his entire life has been passed in Yankton county his career is known to be one that is worthy of commendation, gaining for him the favor of all and the friendship of many.

Mr. Huber was tendered the nomination of representative, but not wishing to serve in that capacity refused to allow his name to go before the convention. He has always been affiliated with the Democratic party, and always takes an active part in his party's campaigns. He is an active member of the Roman Catholic church, and attends the St. Agnes church, of which Father Byrne, of Yankton, is the officiating minister. Mrs. Huber is an active member of the same church and the children are regular attendants of the Sunday school.

Mr. and Mrs. Rothmeyer, parents of Mrs. Huber, moved from Iowa to South Dakota in 1883. The mother died in 1894, and the father is living a retired life in Yankton. He was again married.

SILAS BURTON, one of the honored and esteemed residents of Yankton county, was born in Litchfield county, Connecticut, on the 22d of December, 1837, his parents being James and Harriet Burton, in whose family were nine children, namely: Silas, Malvina, Lewis, Diadama, Almoure (who died in the United States army), Charles, Mary, Elizabeth, Florence, Ruth and George. All but five have passed away, these being Silas, Malvina, Charles, Diadama and Ruth, and with the exception of the subject and Ruth these are residents of New Haven, Connecticut.

The public schools of Litchfield county, Connecticut, afforded to Silas Burton his educational privileges and he continued his studies until nineteen or twenty years of age, thus gaining a broad practical knowledge in order to fit him for the responsible duties of a business career. When he put aside his text-books he worked at the butcher's trade at Kent Corners, Connecticut, being thus employed until 1863, when his patriotic spirit was aroused and he enlisted in the Second Heavy Artillery of Connecticut, being with the army for twenty months. He participated in the battles of the Wilderness and afterward became ill and has never yet fully recovered his health. Before starting to the front he was married on the 6th of December, 1862, to Miss Ellen Stewart, who was born in Hunter, New York, a daughter of Alonzo and Mary (Tate) Stewart. In her parents' family were six children: Edgar, Herman, Ellen, Charles, William and George, of whom Edgar and Charles are now deceased. The living brothers of Mrs. Burton are yet residents of Connecticut.

Following the Civil war Mr. Burton removed from Connecticut to New York, where he remained for two years and then came west with his family. In 1868 he settled in Yankton county, South Dakota, having traveled by stage from Sioux City to his destination. The government afforded good facilities for purchasing land and Mr. Burton secured a pre-emption claim of one hundred and sixty acres. Subsequently he purchased an additional tract of one hundred and sixty acres and he now farms two hundred and eighty acres, raising grain and stock. In 1881, by reason of the flood caused by the ice gorges in the Missouri, he lost all of his cattle, his house and his barns, in fact, his entire personal property was destroyed save one team of horses. Thus he has met with discouragements in what would seem to be a prosperous career. He has ever persevered in his work, however, and as the years have gone by he has accumulated a comfortable competence and has become one of the very successful farmers of South Dakota. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Burton have been born eight children: Mary, who became the wife of W. R. Smith, died at the age of twenty-three years, leaving two children, Edgar and George, but the latter was drowned in the Missouri river at the age of thirteen years and Edgar is now living with his grandfather, the subject of this review; Edgar, the second child of Mr. Burton, has passed away; Hattie is the wife of Mr. Anderson, a farmer of Yankton county; Jennie is the wife of M. C. Nelson, a resident farmer of this county; Arthur is living at home at the age of fourteen years; Theodore has departed this life and two of the children died in infancy. For the past thirty-five years Mr. Burton has been connected with the schools of Dakota and the cause of education finds in him a warm and helpful friend. In politics he is a stanch Democrat and fraternally he is connected with the Masonic lodge. His wife and children are members of the Congregational church and the family is one of prominence in the community, the members of the Burton household occupying an enviable position in social circles and in the regard of their many friends.

HENRY HASKAR, one of the representative men of Yankton county, was born in the fatherland in 1836 and the schools of Germany afforded him his educational privileges. He was a young man when he resolved to seek a home in the new world and after living in Tennessee for a time he removed to Ohio and twenty-seven years ago came to South Dakota. Under the homestead act he secured a quarter section of land in Yankton county across Beaver creek. He afterward purchased two hundred and eighty acres near Utica and now owns four hundred acres of rich land which is cultivated by his sons. For many years Mr. Haskar was actively connected with its improvement and development, but now he is living retired. He and his wife occupy a pleasant home in Yankton.

In 1864 Mr. Haskar was united in marriage to Miss Mary Heine and unto them have been born nine children: Annie, the eldest, is now deceased; Kate, the next in the family, is the wife of Henry Houker, a farmer residing in Irene, South Dakota, and they have five children; Mary has also passed away; Henry and Peter are both enterprising young farmers who are operating their father's land. The latter was married April 22, 1903, to Miss Katie Wagner, who was born in Yankton county and is a daughter of George C. and Anna (Kramer) Wagner, prominent farming people of this locality. Maggie is the wife of John Rankin, a prosperous farmer of South Dakota; Lena is the wife of Albert Wagner, who also follows farming in this state; Hattie is the wife of Norman Lest, and Tesse is with her parents in Yankton and both are graduates of the public school of Yankton county and are popular in social circles there.

Mr. Haskar has served as school director for the past twenty years. In the early days he made his own home to be used as a schoolroom, for the people were then too poor to build a schoolhouse. He has always taken a deep interest in the cause of education, putting forth every effort in his power to advance its interests and his efforts have been far-reaching and helpful in this direction. In his political views Mr. Haskar was formerly a Democrat, but now votes independently, supporting the men and measures of no particular party, but casting his ballot as he thinks will do the most good in promoting general progress. He formerly belonged to the Farmers' Alliance and he and his wife are members of the Catholic church and attend the services in Yankton. They occupy an attractive and comfortable home at No. 701 Broadway and a cordial hospitality is extended to their many friends. Mr. Haskar has ever been known as a courteous, genial gentleman who while firmly upholding his own opinions has always manifested due deference for the opinions of others. His work in the county has been of a helpful and beneficial nature and this section of the state has profited by his residence here.

JOHN CHAMBERLIN, one of the sterling pioneers of Cambria township, Brown county, is a native of the city of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he was born on the 2d of March, 1831, being a son of John and Anna Chamberlin, both of whom were born and reared in the state of New Jersey, the father being a miller by vocation. The subject was reared to manhood in the state of New Jersey, having been assigned to the care of his uncle when he was eleven years of age. In that state he gained his education and at the age of sixteen entered upon a four-years apprenticeship at the trade of wagon-making, receiving the sum of one hundred dollars in cash for the services rendered during this period, while he was permitted to work in the harvest fields two weeks each season, thereby gaining a little extra money. In 1852 he came west to Kingston, Green Lake county, Wisconsin, where he established a shop and engaged in the work of his trade, also dealing in general merchandise on a small scale. He followed his trade for a period of thirty years, having been foreman of a large shop in Vermont prior to his removal to Wisconsin. He remained in Kingston seven years and then removed to Portage City, Wisconsin, where he was for one year employed in the car shops of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. Later he removed to Randolph, in the same state, where he made his home until 1880, having served as postmaster of the town for the greater portion of the intervening period. In the year mentioned Mr. Chamberlin came to what is now the state of South Dakota, taking up a homestead claim in Brown county, on July 15th, this being the place on which he has ever since continued to reside, having brought his family to the pioneer farm in October of the same year. During the winter of 1880-81 he and his family occupied a sod house on an adjoining farm, and during a period of eight months no other woman than his wife entered the primitive dwelling, with one exception, the nearest neighbors being one and a half miles or more distant. It is needless to say that the family encountered its quota of hardships and deprivations, and during the winter mentioned some of the flour used in the household was obtained by grinding the wheat in a common coffee-mill. In the fall of 1880 Mr. Chamberlin hauled lumber from Watertown and constructed a small house on his claim, while his present comfortable and attractive farm residence was erected about fifteen years ago, the other farm buildings being likewise of substantial order. At the time he came here there were but four or five other families in Cambria township. Shortly after taking up his residence here Mr. Chamberlin also took up a tree claim, and his landed estate now comprises four hundred and eighty acres, of which three hundred and twenty comprise the home place, while the remaining one hundred and sixty acres constitute a separate farm, about a half mile distant. The subject has from the beginning devoted his attention mainly to the raising of grain and at the present time he devotes three hundred acres to this branch of his enterprise. He has raised as high as thirty bushels to the acre, and his largest crop in one year aggregated thirty thousand bushels. He was prominently concerned in the organization of the township and has been closely identified with its development and material upbuilding. He has served for many years as chairman of the board of township trustees, and in 1891 he was elected to the office of county commissioner, in which capacity he served three years. In politics he is arrayed as a stalwart supporter of the principles of the People's party, and both he and his wife are zealous and valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Booth. They were concerned in the organization of the original class which resulted in the founding of this church, about 1884, and of the few who thus gathered together for worship there is probably but one other left in the township, Mrs. Wenz. Mr. Chamberlin has been an official in the church from the time of its organization to two years ago and was Sunday school superintendent fifteen years.

On the 24th of April, 1857, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Chamberlin to Miss Martha I. Clark, who was born and reared in Vermont, having received her education in the academy at Brandon, that state, and having been a successful teacher for about two years prior to her marriage. They have no children.

WILLIAM KOEPEL, a member of the state senate and one of the honored citizens of Brown county, is a native of the Badger state, having been born on a farm in Dodge county, Wisconsin, on the 27th of June, 1858, and being a son of Herman and Caroline (Detlaff) Koepsel, who were numbered among the sterling pioneers of that state. The subject grew up under the invigorating discipline of the farm and received his educational training in the public and parochial schools. He continued to be identified with the great industry of agriculture in Wisconsin until 1882, when he came to what is now South Dakota and cast in his lot with its people. He secured his present farm, in Groton township, shortly after his arrival in the state, having now a well improved and attractive farm of four hundred and eighty acres and being known as a progressive and enterprising agriculturist and stock-grower. In politics Mr. Koepsel has ever been a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and while he has been an unostentatious worker in the party cause he has not been animated by ambition for office, so that his selection to his present distinguished position as a member of the state senate, in the fall of 1902, indicates in how high esteem and confidence he is held by the people of the district from which he was chosen for this honorable preferment. In the senate he was assigned to the committees on education, federal relations, public health, charitable and penal institutions, and legislative expenses, and in each of these important connections he proved himself signally faithful to the duties devolving upon him, while he introduced and stanchly advocated four bills of no slight importance, though never seeking to make himself obtrusive in the great deliberative body of which he is an able member. He is recognized as a man of most scrupulous honesty of purpose in all the relations of life, and thus the people of his district consistently place their trust and confidence in him as a representative of their interests and those of the state at large. He is a member of the Lutheran church, and has been president of the Groton congregation since its organization.

Mr. Koepsel was married, in March, 1883, to Bertha Waugerin, a native of Wisconsin, who died in April, 1885, leaving one son, Edward. He was married again in February, 1888, to Adeline Wegner, of Groton. Mrs. Koepsel died in August, 1900, leaving three daughters, the oldest, Emma, being eleven years; the second, Frieda, nine years, and the youngest, Lydia, four years old. Mr. Koepsel was married the third time in April, 1902, to Miss Meta Zahl, of Minnesota, a native of Germany.

DAVID PATERSON is an American by adoption, his native country being Scotland, where his birth occurred on the 6th day of October, 1856. His parents, William and Margaret (Duncan) Paterson, were born in Scotland, spent their lives there on a farm, and both lie buried in the old cemetery where sleep so many of their kindred and friends. David Paterson was reared to agricultural pursuits and enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education. When a youth he learned the tanner's trade and followed the same at different places in Scotland until his twenty-second year, when he decided to go to America, accordingly in 1879 he and his brother, Colin, took passage and in due time arrived at their destination, after which they spent a couple of months in New York, where the subject found employment in a tannery. In July of the same year the brothers went to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where they worked at the tannery trade during the two years following, and it was while thus engaged that David made a trip to South Dakota and entered a tract of land in Kingsbury county. Hiring a man to break about twenty acres, he returned to his work in Milwaukee and there remained until the spring of 1881, when he again came to South Dakota to take possession of his land and attend to its cultivation. After erecting a small, but comfortable dwelling, he planted twenty-five acres of his own land and twenty acres on the claim belonging to his brother, and in due season reaped fair returns from his first effort at South Dakota farming. On June 5, 1881, Mr. Paterson chose a wife and helpmeet in the person of Miss Jane Allardice, of Scotland, the marriage being the culmination of a tender attachment between the two, which began in the old country, where they first became acquainted. After preparing a home and finding himself in circumstances to support a wife, he sent for his intended bride, who in due time made the long journey from Scotland to South Dakota, where the nuptials were duly celebrated.

Mr. Paterson began life in the west under very modest auspices, but by industry and thrift he soon succeeded in getting the fair start which paved the way to more favorable circumstances. He developed a fine farm, raised cattle and other live stock, from which he usually received a liberal income, and by well-directed and persevering efforts, as well as excellent management, finally reached the condition of prosperity he now enjoys. His farm, which embraces an area of four hundred acres, is admirably situated in one of the richest agricultural districts of the county, and with its good residence, a comfortable barn, fences and other improvements indicates the home of a man of enterprise, who is thoroughly familiar with every detail of agricultural work. In addition to general farming and stock raising, Mr. Paterson, since 1895, has been interested in the dairy business, keeping about twenty cows, the milk from which finds a ready market at the creamery in Lake Preston.

The career of Mr. Paterson from the time of landing on American soil with less than one hundred dollars in his possession to his present conspicuous position, among the leading farmers and representative citizens of his adopted county, presents a series of successes such as few achieve and affords many lessons which the young of the present generation may study with profit. Mr. Paterson is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America of Lake Preston, and in politics supports the principles of the Populist party, though formerly a Republican. He has religious convictions and has been a leading member of the Congregational church at Lake Henry since its organization in 1886, besides serving three years as superintendent of the Sunday school. His wife and three daughters also belong to the Lake Henry church and, like him, they are zealous workers, demonstrating by their daily lives the genuineness of their religious profession. Mr. Paterson takes a special interest in temperance work and all agencies for the benefit of the people. He has never been a seeker after office or any kind of public place, notwithstanding which his fellow citizens, irrespective of party, have honored him at different times with positions of responsibility and trust.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Paterson consists of seven children: Colin C., a young man of very good habits, who assists his father on the farm; Beatrice, a graduate of the DeSmet high school and a teacher of much promise; Frances, also a graduate from the above school; Margaret, who is pursuing her studies in the high school; William, David and Florence are three bright, intelligent students of whom their parents feel proud, and in whom are centered many fond hopes for the future.

A. P. ROBINSON, who is justly considered one of the leading agriculturists of Brown county, was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, March 23, 1851. When a boy he was taken to Wisconsin by his parents and spent his youth, until nineteen years of age, in Dodge county, that state, living on a farm until his fourteenth year. Meanwhile he acquired a common-school education and on leaving the farm entered his father's store. In 1869 he went to native town and secured his early educational training in its public schools, after which he completed a course of study in St. Lawrence University, in Canton, that state, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1880. He then took up the study of law in the office of Hon. Leslie W. Russell, of that place, one of the most eminent members of the bar of the state. He served as attorney general of the state, was a member of congress for several terms, while in 1884 he was defeated for the United States senate by a few votes, his opponent being the Hon. William M. Evarts. He later became an associate justice of the supreme court of the state, resigning this office a short time before his death. Under this able and honored preceptor Judge Stearns prosecuted his legal studies, continuing in the office of Judge Russell until 1884, when he accompanied his preceptor to Albany, being one of his clerks while he was serving as attorney general. During the winter of 1884 the subject took a course of lectures in the Albany Law School, having been admitted to the bar of the state in November of the preceding year. Judge Stearns was graduated in the law department of Union University, in Albany, on the 22d of May, 1884, having completed the prescribed two-years course in one year, and from this institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Laws. After his graduation he entered upon the active practice of his profession in Canton, New York, where he remained one year. In April, 1885, he came west on business, and became so impressed with the attractions of this division of our national domain that he located in Wadena, Minnesota, where he was associated in practice with Frank Wilson until 1887, meeting with excellent success. In 1889 his father died and he returned to his old home in New York to assist in the settlement of the estate. He had previously, in 1887, visited South Dakota on business, remaining several months, and upon returning to the west he located in Fort Pierre, this state, in 1890. Here he has since been engaged in active practice, retaining at the present time a large and representative clientele and holding high prestige at the bar of the state. He served three terms as state's attorney for Stanley county, and one term as judge of the county court, making an excellent record in each of these offices. He was one of those prominently concerned in bringing about the abolishment of the grand-jury system in South Dakota, and he drew the first information for murder after the law of 1896 went into effect, said information having been drawn on the 3d of July of that year, while the law went into effect only two days previously. During his first term as county attorney he was prosecutor in three murder trials, and while serving on the county bench he settled the estate of Frederick Dupree, amounting to one hundred and eighty thousand dollars. The Judge has been an ardent and effective worker in the cause of the Republican party, and in 1892-3 was secretary of the Republican League of the state. Early in the year 1893 Gov. Charles H. Sheldon selected Mr. Stearns for one of his staff and commissioned him a colonel. He held this appointment for four years, and did his full share of the honors and entertaining at the South Dakota building at the World's Fair in Chicago during the season of 1893. He was also appointed and commissioned by Governor Sheldon to represent this state as a delegate to the World's Real Estate Congress, held in Chicago during the week commencing October 12, 1893. He was a charter member of Hiram Lodge, No. 123, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Fort Pierre, and the charter for the same was secured largely through his efforts, as there was no little opposition on the part of other lodges. Owing to the danger entailed in crossing the Missouri river at certain seasons of the year he finally secured the required dispensation from the grand lodge. He has been a strong advocate of the project of building a railroad from Pierre to the Black Hills, and his opinions and written articles on the subject have been freely quoted and republished.

Royal B. Stearns.

From the time of locating in the state Judge Stearns has been more or less interested in real estate and stock raising enterprises, and in 1900 he effected the organization of the St. Paul & Fort Pierre Cattle Company, of which he has been vice-president and general manager from the time of its inception. J. B. Little, of St. Paul, Minnesota, is president, and H. A. Knight, of Minneapolis, is secretary and treasurer. The company is capitalized for one hundred thousand dollars, and is engaged in the grazing and maturing of beef cattle, having one of the finest stock ranches west of the Missouri river, the same being located on the Bad river, two and one-half miles south of Fort Pierre, where they have a large ranch and fine ranch buildings. They make a specialty of buying Texas cattle, shipping them to their ranch and here maturing them for the Chicago market, while the company are rapidly increasing the number of stock fed on the ranch, conducting operations on a constantly increasing scale.

On the 24th of November, 1893, Judge Stearns was united in marriage to Mrs. Mary A. Miir, who was born and reared in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, being a daughter of John Heyler, a prominent farmer of Tioga county. No children have been born of this union.

ARTHUR H. SEYMOUR, minister and educator, was born in Portage county, Ohio, August 15, 1868. His father, Deming Seymour, a native of Massachusetts, was the son of Gideon and Corinthia Seymour, both of English descent, their respective ancestors being among the earliest settlers of New England. In his young manhood Deming Seymour married Miss Harriet Hallock, of Portage county, Ohio, whose parents, Colonel William R. and Julia Hallock, were also descended from old New England families, several representatives of which served in the colonial army during the Revolutionary war. Some of the Seymours were also heroes of that struggle and rendered distinguished service in the cause for independence. Deming Seymour grew to maturity on a farm in Portage county, Ohio, and after his marriage, engaged in the pursuit of agriculture near Roostown, where he lived until his removal to Windham, in the same county, some years later. He departed this life at the latter place in February, 1888, leaving a widow who now lives with her daughter in the city of Cleveland, and three children, namely: Arthur H., of this review; Alice, wife of C. R. Bissell, Esq., and George D., a prominent business man of Windham, Ohio.

Arthur H. Seymour spent his early life in the village of Windham and in 1886, when eighteen years old, was graduated from the high school of that place. He then entered the Ohio Normal University at Ada, where he completed the prescribed course in 1887 and subsequently, 1898, received the degree of Master of Arts from the same institution. He also studied one year at Oberlin. After finishing his education he spent seven years teaching in the schools of Portage county, three of which were devoted to high school work, and in 1895 he yielded to a desire of long standing by entering the ministry of the Church of Christ, locating the same year with a congregation at Carthage, South Dakota. After preaching at that point until September, 1897, he took charge of the church at Arlington, and two years later accepted the superintendency of the Arlington public schools, the duties of which position he has since discharged in connection with his ministerial work. Professor Seymour's present pastorate has been signally successful. Since entering upon his labors the church has prospered along every line of activity, its membership has greatly increased, a marked spiritual growth has also been noticeable and in 1902 the beautiful and commodious edifice in which the congregation now worships was erected and dedicated to the services of God. Professor Seymour's religious work has not been restricted to the specific field in which he now labors, but has extended throughout the state, as he served two years as secretary of the State Christian Endeavor Union, and one year as president, during which time he traveled quite extensively, preaching at many points and striving to strengthen the organization and add to its influence and efficiency.

As an educator the Professor occupies a prominent position among the leading school men of South Dakota, and his reputation as a superintendent is second to that of but few of his compeers. The high standard of excellence which the educational system of Arlington has attained under his management affords the best evidence of his ability as an organizer, and it is now generally conceded that in point of efficiency the schools of that town are among the best in the county. His services as an institute conductor are in great demand and he spends no little part of his vacations in this kind of work. He has conducted two very successful institutes in Kingsbury county, and has also labored efficiently in similar institutions in the counties of Gregory and Miner. He is a member of the state and national educational associations, and of the Religious Education Association. In addition to the above bodies, Professor Seymour is identified with the Brotherhood of American Yeomen, of Arlington, besides manifesting at all times a lively interest in local organizations for the promotion of educational and religious endeavor.

On November 12, 1896, Professor Seymour was united in marriage with Miss Jennie I. Sanford, of Portage county, Ohio, who died in June, 1898, after a most happy wedded life. In 1900 he married Miss Flora M. Wilson, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota, who for several years had been a teacher in the public schools of that city. Like her husband, Mrs. Seymour is active in all lines of church and general religious work, and has served very efficiently as president and secretary of the State Christian Endeavor Union, a position requiring a high order of clerical and executive ability. Professor and Mrs. Seymour have two children, a son by the name of Gideon Deming and a daughter named Margaret Isabel.

CHARLES W. SNYDER, who is the owner of a fine landed estate in Mellette township, Spink county, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in Waukesha county, Wisconsin, on the 10th of January, 1855, and being a son of A. K. and Margaret Snyder, the former of whom was born in Germany, while the latter was a native of Ireland. Both died in Wisconsin, where the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits for many years, having been one of the early settlers in Washington county.

The subject grew up on the home farm and as a boy became inured to the strenuous work involved in its cultivation, while he received his educational training in the common schools of Hartford, Wisconsin. In 1876 he purchased a small farm in Dodge county, that state, and initiated his independent career as a husbandman. As he himself has stated the case, he "farmed the same two years, among stumps, stones and gravelly hills, the land being high-priced at that." His experience in this connection doubtless accounts in no small measure for his marked appreciation of the superior advantages found in his present location. In the fall of 1878 Mr. Snyder disposed of his farm in Wisconsin and moved westward into Minnesota, locating in Freeborn county, where he purchased a small farm, to whose improvement and cultivation he devoted his attention for the ensuing seven years, disposing of the property in 1885 and coming thence to what is now Spink county, South Dakota, his financial resources at the time being represented in the sum of about two thousand dollars. Apropos of this statement we may say that his estate at the present time may be conservatively placed at a valuation of twenty thousand dollars, and the significance of the comparative statements is prima facie. Shortly after his arrival in the county Mr. Snyder purchased a quarter section of land in Mellette township, one mile southwest of the present village of Mellette, and this has ever since been his place of residence, while as success has crowned his efforts he has added to his landed possessions from time to time until he is now the owner of a valuable ranch of six hundred acres, while the permanent improvements are of excellent order, everything about the place betokening thrift and prosperity, while it may be stated that Mr. Snyder is recognized as an able business man and as one who is well entitled to unequivocal confidence and esteem. To the writer he spoke most pertinently as follows, the words well indicating his attitude: "I intend to remain here, and, all things considered, believe this part of the Jim river valley the best agricultural region in the United States." On the place is found an abundant supply of pure water, the same being secured from a fine artesian well. In politics Mr. Snyder has always been a stalwart supporter of the Republican party and its principles, though he has never sought office of any sort. Fraternally, he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Royal Neighbors.

On the 9th of October, 1877, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Snyder to Miss Josephine Dempsey, a daughter of James Dempsey, of Hartford, Wisconsin, and it is pleasing to note that the family circle remains unbroken at the time of this writing, their twelve children all being still beneath the home roof, while eight of the number were born on the homestead here. The names of the children are here entered in order of birth: Frank, Harry, Mattie, Helen, Frederick, Lois, Mary and Howard (twins), Carl, Frances, and Willard and Wilburt (twins).

JOHN H. LEMAY, editor and publisher of the Northville Journal, at Northville, Spink county, is a native of the city of Philadelphia, where he was born on the 27th of January, 1870, being a son of Edward F. and Nellie (Robertson) LeMay, the former of whom was born in France and the latter in Scotland and both of whom have now passed away. The father of the subject came to America as a young man, and established his home in Philadelphia, while he became a prominent contractor in the construction of railways and bridges. The subject secured his early educational discipline in the fair old "City of Brotherly Love," and thereafter completed a course of study in the Shattuck Military Academy, at Faribault, Minnesota. At the age of sixteen years he entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade, working during vacations for several years in Duluth, that state, gaining an excellent knowledge of the details and mysteries of the "art preservative of all arts," and thereafter he was engaged in the work of his trade in divers sections of the union, having come to South Dakota in 1896, while in April, 1900, he settled in Northville and purchased the Northville Journal, of which he has since been editor and publisher. The Journal is a five-column quarto and is issued on Thursday of each week, while both editorially and in matter of letter-press it is an attractive publication, while it so fully covers matters of local interest that it is a welcome visitor in the majority of the best homes in this section. In politics, Mr. LeMay is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and his paper is the medium through which he wields the greatest influence in local affairs of a public nature, while he is thoroughly progressive in his attitude and always ready to lend his aid and influence in the furthering of worthy enterprises for the general good. He is a member of the South Dakota Press Association. He has attained to the thirty-second degree of Scottish-Rite Masonry, being a member of the consistory at Aberdeen, and is also a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, as well as of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He enjoys unqualified esteem in business and social circles and is one of the popular young men of Spink county.

On the 1st of May, 1902, Mr. LeMay was married to Miss Mary Elsom, who was born and reared in Northville, being a daughter of Joseph Elsom, concerning whom a specific sketch appears on another page of this work. On February 8, 1904, a son was born to this union.

RUDOLPH ALEXANDER was born in Germany, on the 20th of April, 1849, and is the third in order of birth of the eight children of William and Mary Alexander, while all of the children are still living. The parents of the subject bade adieu to their fatherland and emigrated with their children to America, taking up their abode in Sauk county, Wisconsin, where the father engaged in agricultural pursuits, reclaiming a good farm and being one of the sterling pioneers of that section of the Badger state, where both he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. Their eldest son, Richard, was about nineteen years of age at the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, and in 1864 he enlisted as a member of a regiment of Wisconsin volunteers, and served until the close of the war. Though a mere boy at the time, our subject was desirous of emulating the example of his brother, but his age prevented his being accepted as a volunteer. He was reared on the homestead farm and early began to assist in reclaiming and cultivating the land, while his educational advantages were such as were afforded in the somewhat primitive schools of the locality and period. After leaving school he remained on the home farm some time and later engaged in farming on his own responsibility, in Sauk county, where he continued to reside until 1882, when he came to South Dakota, arriving in March of that year and visiting various sections of the prospective state in search of a suitable location. The following summer he took up his residence in Faulk county, whose organization had been effected but a short time previously, and here took up a pre-emption claim near the present village of Rockham, and there continued to reside about twelve years, bringing his farm under cultivation and meeting with excellent success on the whole, though he met with the misfortunes entailed throughout this section by droughts and grasshoppers in the earlier years. In 1895 he disposed of his property and purchased a portion of his present fine ranch of Frank Bacon. He has since added to its area by additional purchases in the locality until he now has a landed estate of one thousand acres, of which a very considerable portion is under a high state of cultivation while the remainder is used for grazing purposes, as he runs an average herd of about two hundred head of Durham and short-horn cattle, while of late he is giving attention also to the raising of the Hereford breed. His ranch adjoins the corporate limits of Miranda on the north and he also owns considerable real estate in the village, while his residence is one of the finest in the county and his ranch building large and substantial, affording ample accommodations for stock and farm products. As the line of the Northwestern Railroad is in juxtaposition to his ranch he has the best of shipping facilities, and he has reason to be proud of his valuable ranch as well as of the success which he has attained since casting in his lot with the people of South Dakota. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, though never a seeker of public office, and fraternally he holds membership in the Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 12th of April, 1877, Mr. Alexander was married to Miss Mary Trueb, who was born in Switzerland, where she was reared and educated, being a daughter of John Trueb, who came from Germany to America in 1857 and became a pioneer of Wisconsin. Of the children of this union we enter the following brief record: Louis is now associated with his father in the management of the home ranch; Annie is the wife of Henry Metz, of Miranda; and Edward, Ella, Edna and Hilbert remain at the parental home.

JOHN J. PRICE, one of the pioneers and highly esteemed citizens of Faulk county, is a native of Wales and a scion of staunch old Welsh stock. - He was born in Mothvey, Carmarthen-shire, on the 24th of January, 1860, and is a son of John W. and Guenllein (Joseph) Price, both of whom were born and reared in the same section of southern Wales, where the respective families have been established from the time when the "memory of man runneth not to the contrary." In 1868 his parents immigrated to America and settled near Iowa City, Iowa, where they remained until 1872, when they took up their residence in Williamsburg, Iowa county, Iowa, while in 1876 they removed to Jefferson, Greene county, Iowa, where the father was engaged in farming until his death, which occurred on the 26th of April, 1903, at the venerable age of eighty-three years. He was a man of inflexible integrity, keeping himself "unspotted from the world," and living a life of honor and usefulness. His widow still resides near Jefferson, being seventy-seven years of age at the time of this writing, in 1904. The subject received his educational training in the public schools of Iowa, and continued to be associated with his father in the conduct of his business affairs until he had attained his legal majority, when he initiated his independent career. In March, 1883, he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and filed entry on the northwest quarter of section 10, township 120, range 68, in Faulk county, which original homestead is an integral portion of his present landed estate. He surveyed his own land, as only a small portion of the land had been surveyed by the government at the time, and his residence is located on this original claim. He is now the owner of twelve hundred and eighty acres of most fertile and productive land, improved with substantial and attractive buildings, the property being unincumbered of debt, while he is also the owner of a nice residence in the city of Aberdeen, his intention being to utilize the same as a family home during the period when his children are to avail themselves of the educational advantages there afforded. He devotes his attention to diversified agriculture and the raising of a high grade of live stock, and is the owner of two modern steam threshing machines, which he keeps in active operation each autumn. In politics he is an uncompromising Republican, and he has served two terms as county commissioner, being chairman of the board for a portion of each term. He is identified with Camp No. 2692, Modern Woodmen of America, at Ipswich, in which he carries an insurance of three thousand dollars.

On the 8th of June, 1888, Mr. Price was united in marriage to Miss Lotta M. Scott, who was born in Manchester, Iowa, on the 14th of August, 1867, being a daughter of Thomas B. and Emma (Pratt) Scott. Mr. and Mrs. Price have five children, whose names and respective dates of birth are here entered: Joseph, August 29, 1889; Florence, August 30, 1891; Howard, October 13, 1893; Marie, October 8, 1895, and Forrest, August 7, 1898.

WILLIAM T. DALE, a prominent and well-known citizen of Mellette, Spink county, was born in Daleville, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the 6th of January, 1840, and is a son of Mark Dale, who was a native of England, whence he came when young to America, in company with his parents, who located in Pennsylvania, and engaged in farming. The father of the subject also continued to follow the great basic industry of farming during his active life and his death occurred in Pennsylvania. He was a man of exalted integrity of character and a prominent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, in which he was a licensed exhorter. He was twice married and the subject of this review was the eldest child of the first union. William T. Dale was reared on the farm and his early educational advantages were such as were afforded in the common schools of his native county. At the age of thirteen years he set out to see somewhat of the world, coming west to Illinois, where he remained three years, after which he returned to his home in the old Keystone state, where he worked for his father for a year, and then went to Salem, that state, being employed there until the fall of 1860. He then went to the pineries of Clearfield county, Pennsylvania, and worked at lumbering until spring, then going down the river on a lumber raft to Marietta, that state. On the 21st of May, 1861, he tendered his services in defense of the Union, practically being in the Federal army throughout the entire period of the great Civil war. He enlisted in Company K, Fifteenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry, for a term of three months, D. H. Hastings being captain of his company. Mr. Dale took part in the battle of Falling Waters and was with General Patterson when he crossed the Potomac. He received his honorable discharge on the 7th of August, 1861, and on the 17th of the following September re-enlisted, at this time becoming a member of Company L, Ninth Pennsylvania Volunteer Cavalry, in which he was made commissary sergeant of his company, which was in command of Captain George Smith. His regiment was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland, and in the connection he was a participant in the battles of Perryville, Thompson Station, Brentwood, second battle of Franklin, Triune, Shelbyville, Lafayette (Georgia), the three days' fight at Chickamauga; the engagement at Mossy Creek, the two battles at Fairgarden, and the conflict at Cripple Creek, after which he was with Sherman in the Atlanta campaign and on the memorable march to the sea, taking part in the engagements at Black river and Goldsboro. He received his second discharge on the 31st of December, 1863, but promptly veteranized and re-enlisted in the same company and regiment. April 14th the regiment started home. Mr. Dale received a veteran's furlough on April 26th at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and arrived in Danville on the 28th. On May 22d following he was married to Susan Snover, to whom he had been engaged at the time of his enlistment in 1861. On May 26th he rejoined his regiment, with which he continued in active service until the close of the war, receiving his final discharge on the 18th of July, 1865. He then returned to Pennsylvania, and in the same year removed with his wife to Iowa, locating in Independence, where he continued to reside for the ensuing fifteen years, being there engaged in the manufacturing of wagons, making and losing ten thousand dollars.

On the 20th of May, 1881, Mr. Dale made his advent in what is now the town of Mellette, South Dakota, with a strong heart and light purse to start life anew, being the first settler, and in the following fall, October 4th, he here opened a grocery store, the only store within ten miles, which he conducted until January, 1883, when he sold out his groceries and put in a stock of hardware, in which line he has ever since continued, now having a commodious and well-equipped store and warehouse, and carrying a full line of heavy and shelf hardware, tinware, stoves, etc., as well as agricultural implements and machinery. He has the unqualified confidence and esteem of the people of the community and thus has his business prosperity established on a firm foundation, controlling a large and representative trade. It was not until about two months after his settling here that another resident came to the little frontier village which was represented by only one or two buildings at that time. In December, 1881, Mr. Dale was appointed postmaster of the place, and has ever since served in this capacity save for an interim of four years, during the second administration of President Cleveland. He has taken a most prominent part in the development and civic progress of the village and county, and is one of their most honored and popular citizens. He is identified with the Grand Army of the Republic and the Masonic fraternity, besides a number of insurance fraternities, and in politics he is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party. He is treasurer of the Old Settlers' Association of Spink county and takes an active interest in its affairs.

In Pennsylvania, on the 22d of May, 1864, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dale to Miss Susan Snover, who was born and reared in Wayne county, that state, and of their children we record that Mark died at the age of twenty-seven years; Lucy is the wife of J. L. Mead, the subject's partner in the hardware store and business; and Bertha remains beneath the parental roof. The family are all members of the Episcopal church and Mr. Dale was for a number of years one of the vestry of the St. James church at Independence, Iowa, although he never united with the church but took an active interest in its welfare and supported it in every way possible.

JOEL WHITNEY GOFF, A. M., who occupies the chair of English in the South Dakota State Normal School at Madison, is a native of the old Pine Tree state and a scion of families early settled in New England, where was cradled so much of our national history. He was born on a farm near Sangerville, Piscataquis county, Maine, on the 16th of October, 1861, being a son of Edward and Elizabeth (Spaulding) Goff, the former a farmer and lumberman by occupation. Professor Goff has but meager data of absolutely authentic order as applying to the remote genealogy, but it is known that the ancestry in the agnatic line was of English and Irish extraction, while on the maternal side the lineage is traced to Scotch and English forbears. The paternal ancestors came to the new world in the early colonial epoch and settled in New Hampshire and Maine, while representatives of the name were valiant soldiers in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution. Many followed a seafaring life, and records extant indicate that for several generations the love of travel, and particularly of the sea, was strongly evidenced by the sturdy men of this stock. The parents of the subject are now dead. To them were born three children, of whom all are still living.

The early educational advantages enjoyed by the subject were such as were afforded in the public schools of Sangerville, Maine, after leaving which he continued his studies for one year in Foxcroft Academy, at Foxcroft, that state. Later he was for two years a student in the Maine Central Institute, at Pittsfield, being there graduated as a member of the class of 1882. In 1882 he was matriculated in Bates College, at Lewiston, where he completed the classical course, being graduated in June, 1886, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while in 1889 his alma mater conferred upon him the degree of Master of Arts. It may be said that Professor Goff passed his boyhood and early youth on the parental farmstead, three miles distant from the village of Sangerville, and he early became imbued with a distaste for the drudgery of farm life, while he was equally appreciative of the value of an education and had the self-reliance and determination to carry him forward to the coveted goal. Through the generous sacrifice of his parents he was enabled to prepare himself for college, and thereafter certain friends of the young man had sufficient confidence in him to advance the funds requisite to supplement his own earnings to a sufficient degree to enable him to complete his collegiate course. He labored zealously to attain the desired end, teaching school during the winter terms and working on farms during the summer vacations. After his graduation Professor Goff forthwith turned his attention to teaching, finding this the most expedient method of earning the money with which to discharge his indebtedness and being also animated with a distinctive love of the work. During the first year after his graduation he held the position of principal of Monmouth Academy, at Monmouth, Maine, and at the end of the school year he made a trip to South Dakota, for the purpose of recreation and in order to see what he could of the great west. The greater portion of the time was given to the study of law and the next year he accepted the principalship of the Anson Academy, at North Anson, Maine. At the end of the year he was elected to his present position as professor of English in the South Dakota State Normal School, and he has thus been identified with the institution in this capacity for the past fifteen years, contributing materially to the prestige of the school and to the advancement of its interests and the efficiency of its work, while he is held in affectionate regard by the many students who have been trained under his able direction. Professor Goff has an attractive home in Madison and is also the owner of valuable farming land in Lake county. In politics he has ever been a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and while he has never sought or desired official preferment he has been an active worker in the party cause, having served for several years as chairman of the Republican central committee of Lake county, while he also represented the county on the state central committee for two years. He is liberal in his religious views and is not formally identified with any church organizations, his opinions being essentially in harmony with the basic tenets of the Unitarian church. The Professor was initiated into the time-honored Masonic fraternity in the spring of 1887, when he became an entered apprentice in Monmouth Lodge, No. 110, Free and Accepted Masons, at Monmouth, Maine, in which he was passed to the degree of fellowcraft, after which he was duly raised to the Master's degree and with which he is still affiliated. He has advanced through the various grades and attained the thirty-second degree of Scottish Rite Masonry, being identified with Oriental Consistory, in the city of Yankton.

On the 22d of June, 1892, Professor Goff was united in marriage to Miss Frances Shaw, who was born near Cresco, Howard county, Iowa, being a daughter of James and Ella Emmons Shaw, who are now residents of Madison, South Dakota. Mrs. Goff was a pupil in the State Normal School, where she was graduated as a member of the class of 1890, and while there she formed the acquaintance of her future husband, who was one of her instructors. Prior to her marriage she was for one year a teacher in the public schools at DeSmet, this state, and one year in her alma mater, the normal school. Professor and Mrs. Goff have three children, namely: Charles Sheldon, who was born on the 5th of June, 1894; Margaret, born February 1, 1897; and Edward Shaw, February 2, 1901.

Our subject is quite frequently called upon to deliver public addresses on educational and other topics and to thus appear before various organizations. In the spring of 1903 he was selected as one of the three judges of delivery at the annual meeting of the Northern Oratorical League, held in the city of Minneapolis, this league comprising the great universities of the central and northwestern states, including Chicago University, the Northwestern, the Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Oberlin College.

WILLIAM B. VALENTINE comes of stanch English stock and is a native of the city of Buffalo, New York, where he was born on the 31st of March, 1836, being one of the eight children of George and Anna (Mee) Valentine, while all except one are yet living. Eliza is a widow and resides in Cincinnati, Ohio; Sarah is the wife of John M. Cooper, of St. Louis, Missouri; William B. is the subject of this sketch; Elizabeth, a maiden lady, resides in St. Louis, as does also Lucy, who is the wife of William N. Graves; Albert is engaged in building and contracting in Tuscola county, Michigan; and Helen is the wife of Byron Bailey, of Cincinnati. The parents were both born in Boston, England, whence they came to America with their respective parents when they were children, both having been reared and educated in Buffalo, New York, where their marriage was solemnized. John Valentine, grandfather of the subject, was a man of means and became an influential and prominent citizen of Buffalo, where both he and his wife died. John Valentine learned the trade of mason in his native city and was a man of marked intellectuality and business ability. He was engaged in contracting and building in Buffalo until 1867, when he removed to Michigan, locating in Bay City, which was then a village of two or three thousand, and there he continued to reside about five years, at the expiration of which he removed to Fair Grove, Tuscola county, that state, where he continued to make his home until his death, which occurred in 1886, at which time he had attained the venerable age of eighty years. In politics he was originally an old-line Whig, but upon the organization of the Republican party he espoused its cause and ever afterward remained a stalwart adherent of the same, taking an active part in forwarding the party interests but never aspiring to official preferment. His religious faith was that of the Adventists and he afterward became a Baptist. His first wife, the mother of the subject, died in 1849, and he later married Mrs. Ann Dove, no children being born of this union.

William B. Valentine, whose name initiates this sketch, was reared to maturity in Buffalo, New York, and received his educational training in the common schools, while in his youth he learned the trade of mason under the effective direction of his father and became a skilled and able contractor and builder. Upon attaining maturity he left the parental roof and went to Ohio, where he remained one season, being engaged in the work of his trade. He then returned home, where he remained for a short time and then took up his residence in Flint, Michigan, where he engaged in contracting and building, to which important line of enterprise he has ever since given his undivided attention, having had to do with the construction of many large structures of both public and private order and having been long recognized as one of the leading contracting builders of South Dakota. He remained in Flint about four years and then went to Bay City, where he continued in his chosen vocation about eight years, having erected the first brick building in that now attractive and populous city, where he continued to make his home until 1870, when he came to Yankton as one of the pioneers in his line, and here he erected the first brick building to be put up in the place, while it may be said without fear of contradiction that he has erected more than one-half of the principal buildings in the city. In politics Mr. Valentine is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and he served for six years as a member of the board of county commissioners, while for four years he was a member of the city council, in each of which incumbencies his efforts and advice proved of marked value and met with appreciative approval. He also was for one year a member of the board of trustees of the state hospital for the insane, which is located in his home city. Mr. Valentine is not formally identified with any religious organization, but his family are members of the Congregational church.

On the 10th of November, 1863, Mr. Valentine was united in marriage to Miss Elfrida E. Mathias, who was born in Woolwich, England, and of this union have been born four children, namely: Florence E., who remains at the parental home; Gipsy E., who is the wife of Leon J. Potter, of Chicago, Illinois; Dr. Everett M., who is a practicing dentist of Yankton; and Charles H. A., who is a successful contractor and builder of Phoenix, Arizona.

REV. HENRY KIMBALL WARREN, M. A., LL.D., president of Yankton College and known as one of the leading educators of the state, was born in Cresco, Howard county, Iowa, on the 31st of May, 1858, being a son of Chauncey J. and Mary A. (Kimball) Warren, whose two other children are Alice M., who is the wife of Rev. Arthur H. Claflin, of Allegheny, Pennsylvania, and Harriet L., who is the wife of William H. Davisson, assistant chief engineer of the Rock Island Railroad, with headquarters in the city of Chicago. Chauncey J. Warren was born in Watertown, New York, on the 1st of August, 1831, and when he was about seven years of age his parents removed to northern Indiana, becoming pioneers of that section, where his father developed a farm in the midst of the forest wilds. Thus the father of the subject was reared under the conditions of the pioneer epoch, implying that his educational advantages were somewhat limited in scope and that a full quota of arduous labor fell to his portion in his youthful days. After his marriage he removed to Cresco, Howard county, Iowa, where he engaged in farming. He there continued to reside until 1861, when he returned to Middlebury, Elkhart county, Indiana, and purchased his father's old homestead farm, to whose cultivation he gave his attention until 1865, when he disposed of the property and removed to Ionia county, Michigan, purchasing a farm near the village of Portland, where he continued in agricultural pursuits until 1872, when he took up his residence in the village, where he engaged in the operation of saw and planing mills and in the manufacture of the products incidental to the same. At the present time he is devoting his attention to the manufacture of an improved type of washing machines, still retaining his residence in Portland. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and he and his wife are both earnest and active members of the Congregational church.

Henry K. Warren, the immediate subject of this sketch, acquired his early education in the public schools, completing a course in the high school at Portland, Michigan. In 1876 he was matriculated in Olivet College, at Olivet, that state, where he was graduated in the spring of 1882, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while three years later his alma mater conferred upon him the Master's degree. After his graduation Dr. Warren turned his attention to the pedagogic profession, in which his work during the intervening years has been attended with most gratifying success. He was ordained a clergyman of the Congregational church at Neligh, Nebraska, in the year 1893, and the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon him by Olivet College, in 1902. The Doctor was principal of the public schools at Mount Pleasant, Isabella county, Michigan, during the years 1882-3, and from the latter year until 1889 he held the position of superintendent of the public schools of Hannibal, Missouri. He was then called to the presidency of Gates College, at Neligh, Nebraska, retaining this incumbency until 1894, and for the ensuing year he was president of Salt Lake College, at Salt Lake City, Utah. He resigned this position in 1895 to accept his present incumbency as president of Yankton College, while his labors here have been such as to add further to his high reputation as an able and discriminating educator, the college having been eminently prosperous during his administration. In politics the Doctor is a Republican, taking a lively interest in the issues of the day, and fraternally he is a member of Yankton Lodge, No. 101, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 25th of December, 1883, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Warren to Miss Lillian Hamilton, of Sturgis, Michigan, and they are the parents of three children, Howard H., Ruth K. and Robert H., all of whom remain at the parental home, which is a center of gracious and refined hospitality.

F. D. WYMAN is the scion of one of the oldest families in the United States, the history of his ancestry being traceable in an unbroken line to Lieutenant John Weyman (as the name was originally spelled), a tanner by trade, the date of whose marriage, in November, 1644, appears on the old official records of Middlesex county, Massachusetts, preserved in the archives of Woburn, that state. Of the preceding history of this ancestor nothing definite is known, but from the most reliable information obtainable he subsequently appears to have been a man of considerable consequence in his community, and, from his title, to have been connected with the early military service of the colony. Among his immediate descendants was a son by the name of Jacob, who also became a tanner and who spent his life in his native town of Woburn. A son of Jacob Weyman, also Jacob by name, was born at the above place, September 11, 1688, but of him little is known beyond the fact of his having married, and reared sons and daughters, one of the former being Daniel, who for a number of years operated a saddlery shop at Sudbury, Massachusetts, and who afterwards served from 1757 to 1759, inclusive, as a sergeant in the French and Indian war. His son, Daniel, Jr., born at Sudbury, was a millwright and builder, also a soldier, having joined the American army at the age of nineteen and taken part in Arnold's ill-starred invasion of Canada, during the early part of the Revolution. This Daniel married and reared a family, among his sons being one who was also given the name of Daniel, and who, like his father, became a millwright and builder. Joseph Weyman, son of the third Daniel, was a soldier in the war of 1812, and for a livelihood followed the same pursuits as did his father and grandfather before him, working at his trades for a number of years in Schoharie, New York. David Weyman, son of Joseph, and father of the subject of this review, was born in New York, removed with his parents when a child to Crown Point, that state, and, when a young man, took up the trades to which his ancestors had for so long a period devoted their attention, to-wit, building and equipping of mills. He followed his chosen calling in his native state until about the year 1844, when he removed to Walworth county, Wisconsin, where in addition to the manufacture of flour he carried on farming. Subsequently, 1865, he disposed of his interests in Walworth county, and took up his residence in Schuyler county, Missouri, where he devoted his attention chiefly to agricultural pursuits, until his death, which occurred on the 21st day of January, 1871. He was a man of intelligence and good judgment, successful in his business affairs and a most estimable citizen. In politics he was a Republican and an active party worker and in religion he subscribed to the Baptist faith and for many years was an earnest and sincere member of the church. The maiden name of Mrs. David Weyman was Betsy M. Braley; she bore her husband eight children, the following being the living representatives of the family: Mrs. Hickox, of Ocola, Iowa; F. D., of this review; Mrs. Adelia Murphy, of Frederick, Kansas, and J. Henry, who lives at St. Charles, Iowa.

F. D. Wyman was born in Essex county, New York, on the 14th of June, 1841. He enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education, and after remaining with his parents until nineteen years of age, severed home ties and taught for one year at Byron, Illinois. He then worked his way as far as Des Moines, Iowa, supporting himself and paying his expenses by teaching vocal music at his various stopping places, and to this manner of life he gave his attention until the breaking out of the great Civil war, when he tendered his services to his country in its time of need. In August, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Eighth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he bravely and honorably served until August, 1865, a period of three years, during which time he took part in some of the most celebrated campaigns of the rebellion, participating in thirty-three battles, among the more notable of which were Fort Donelson, Shiloh, the two engagements at Corinth, the various battles of the Red River expedition, siege of Vicksburg, Chattanooga, Nashville, Tuscumbia, Iuka and many others, to say nothing of skirmishes and minor engagements. The regiment to which Mr. Wyman belonged gained a national reputation on account of the live eagle, "Old Abe," which was carried at his head during the war, and which, stuffed, has since been preserved as an interesting and priceless war relic in the state house at Madison, Wisconsin.

Mr. Wyman was mustered out of the service at Uniontown, Alabama, but, unlike the great majority of his comrades and Union soldiers generally, he did not return home, choosing rather to remain in the south, where he felt convinced money could be made raising cotton, for which there was such a great demand immediately following the war. Locating in Perry county, Alabama, he at once engaged in cotton culture, and in addition thereto soon became interested in the public affairs of that section of the state. He had a varied and interesting experience, and during his six years' residence in the south was honored with several important official positions, in all of which he acquitted himself worthily and won the esteem and confidence of the people. He served two years in the state senate, where he made a creditable record, and was also elected superintendent of the Perry county public schools. While serving in the latter capacity, he organized the local educational system, introduced many reforms and valuable modern innovations, secured teachers of recognized professional ability from the north, and before the expiration of his term placed the schools upon the solid and successful basis which they have ever since enjoyed. Mr. Wyman also held the office of revenue assessor while a resident of Alabama, discharging the duties of the same about two years, and for the same length of time served as sheriff of Perry county, resigning the latter position in 1871, when he moved to Schuyler county, Missouri. After living about two and a half years in the latter state, Mr. Wyman, in the fall of 1873, came to South Dakota, bringing with him a herd of horses for the Yankton market. Choosing this city for his permanent location, he at once began buying and shipping live stock on quite an extensive scale, and in connection therewith also opened a meat market which soon became the leading establishment of the kind in the place. To him belongs the credit of shipping the first carload of cattle that ever left Yankton by rail and he has since followed the business with a large measure of success financially, being still engaged in the handling of live stock of all kinds, also running a meat market, the patronage of which has steadily increased with the city's growth. In addition to the enterprises noted, he has large agricultural interests in the vicinity of Yankton.

Mr. Wyman has been an unswerving supporter of the Republican party ever since old enough to exercise the right of franchise, and it was in recognition of his valuable services as an organizer, manager and leader as well as by reason of his personal qualifications, that he was honored with the several official positions referred to in preceding paragraphs. In September, 1898, he was appointed steward of the State Hospital for the Insane at Yankton and held the office for one year, when a change of administration caused his removal with that of others connected with the institution. Subsequently, however, in the spring of 1901, he was reappointed to the same position, and since that time has attended closely to his line of duty, his official course being straightforward, business-like, eminently honorable, and above the slightest suspicion of anything savoring of disrepute. In 1886 Mr. Wyman was elected sheriff of Yankton county and served as such for a period of six years, having been twice chosen his own successor. In 1894 he was sent to the general assembly and served during the exciting session of that year, taking an active part in all the deliberations of the body, working on important committees, besides introducing bills which, becoming laws, have had a decided influence in promoting the interests of the state. He is a member of Phil Kearney Post, No. 37, Grand Army of the Republic, also belonging to the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

While a resident of the south, Mr. Wyman, in 1866, married a cultured southern lady by the name of Miss Mattie C. Robertson, a representative of an old and popular family of Uniontown, Alabama. To this marriage six children have been born, only three of whom are living, namely: Mattie M., wife of F. A. Kloppling, of Yankton; Albert Lee, a prominent attorney of the same city, and Lute A., who is engaged in buying and shipping stock at this point.

ELIJAH P. FOWLER is a native of New York, born in the city of Rochester, September 25, 1844. He spent about eight years of his boyhood in Massachusetts, where he attended school, and he also pursued his studies for some time in the state of his birth, remaining in the latter until entering the army as a member of the Fourth New York Artillery, in the year 1863. He shared with his comrades the vicissitudes of war in the Virginia campaigns, under General Hancock, and participated in a number of hard-fought battles and minor engagements, serving with an honorable record until the surrender of the Confederacy, at Appomattox. Mr. Fowler was mustered out at Washington City in 1865, and after spending several months at home went the following spring to Virginia City, Montana, near which place he devoted his attention to prospecting and mining until 1873, meeting with varied success the meantime. In the latter year he went to Nevada, after which spending about eight months in the Eureka and other mining camps, traveled over different parts of the country until 1875, when he returned to New York and engaged in the nursery business about five miles from his native city of Rochester.

After a brief experience in that industry Mr. Fowler again became animated by a strong desire to go west; accordingly in the spring of the following year he disposed of his nursery interest and went to Nevada, thence after a brief period to California, and from the latter state came to the Black Hills, in the early part of 1877, and engaged in prospecting in the vicinity of Deadwood. Two years later he went to Minnesota and purchased cattle, which he drove through to the Belle Fourche river, where he began his career in the live-stock business and in which locality he prosecuted the enterprise with very encouraging success for a considerable length of time. Later he bought cattle in Texas, but in the winter of 1886-7 suffered quite heavy loss on account of the death of a large number of his animals, also encountered severe financial embarrassment the following spring in the destruction of a large part of his property in Central City, by fire.

In the winter of 1887, shortly after the laying out of Whitewood, Mr. Fowler bought land adjoining the town site, which he surveyed into lots and made an addition to the original plat. With the growth of the town these lots found ready purchasers, and from their sale he realized handsome profits on the original investment. The following year he opened a general store in the new town and within a comparatively short time was at the head of a large and profitable business which he continued with encouraging success until September, 1902, when he sold out his establishment, at that time being the principal mercantile house in the place. After his severe financial reverses in 1887, Mr. Fowler discontinued the live-stock business for several years, but in 1899 he again engaged in cattle raising, running his herds during the several years following at Slim Buttes, Butte county. Later, however, he disposed of his live stock and turned his attention to other pursuits, principally real estate, in which he still deals quite extensively, owning at this time large and valuable tracts of grazing and farm lands in the vicinity of Whitewood, also desirable lots in the town, besides private property of no small magnitude. Mr. Fowler owns one of the finest residences in Whitewood and has spared no reasonable expense in beautifying and adorning the same. Believing in using good things of this world to enhance comfort and happiness, he has supplied his place with modern conveniences and many of the luxuries of life, thus providing liberally for those dependent upon him and making his home noted for the hospitality which pervades its precincts.

Mr. Fowler is an earnest supporter of the Republican party, and wields a strong influence in political circles; he was elected in 1890 and re-elected in 1892, to represent Lawrence county in the general assembly. His record as a legislator is an honorable one, as he labored faithfully for the good of his constituency and for the best interests of the state. Fraternally, he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, aside from which he gives countenance and support to charities and benevolence, irrespective of name or order.

Mr. Fowler, on August 23, 1880, was married, in Central City, to Miss Augusta Larsen, who has borne him seven children, viz: Mabel, Arthur G., Elmer P., Emmet Willis, Walter E., Lester and Cora A., all living but Cora and Arthur. The last named departed this life on the 13th of May, 1903, at the age of twenty years. Cora was the oldest, being born May 23, 1881, and died August 23, 1883.

JACOB P. RESNER, cashier of the bank of Scotland, Bon Homme county, was born in Plotzk, South Russia, on the 14th of March, 1863, being a son of Andrew and Anna M. (Lyer) Resner, of whose two children he is the elder, the other being Dr. Andrew K., who is a successful practicing physician at Manning, Iowa. The father of the subject was a native of Wurtemberg, Germany, where he was reared to the life of a farmer, continuing to there devote his attention to this great basic industry until 1877, when he emigrated with his family to the United States, spending a short interval in the state of Iowa and thence coming directly to the territory of Dakota, locating in Hutchinson county, where he entered claim to three quarter sections of land, under the homestead, pre-emption and tree-culture acts, respectively, and here he has ever since continued to make his home, having improved his land and placed it under a high state of cultivation and having thus contributed to the development of the resources of the great state of South Dakota. He has been successful in his labors and is now one of the representative and substantial citizens of Hutchinson county. He is a Republican in politics and has held various local offices of public trust, ever retaining the confidence of his fellow men. His devoted and cherished wife died in the fatherland, in 1869, and he later married Miss Caroline Stortz, and they are the parents of four children, Daniel and John, who reside in Scotland, Bon Homme county; Emanuel, who remains at the parental home; and Mary, who is the wife of L. W. Hoffman, of the village of Scotland.

Jacob P. Resner, to whom this sketch is dedicated, was about eight years of age at the time of his father's emigration from Germany to America, and he received his education in both

German and English, having prosecuted his studies in the public schools of South Dakota after the family here took up their abode. That he made good use of the advantages thus accorded is shown in the fact that he was for three years successfully engaged in teaching in the district schools of Hutchinson county prior to his marriage, which occurred in 1885. After his marriage he settled on a quarter section of land in that county, having secured the same as a pre-emption claim, proving up on the property after attaining his legal majority. He made good improvements on his farm and devoted his attention to its cultivation for four years, at the expiration of which he removed to Scotland, in the adjoining county of Bon Homme, to accept the position of treasurer and manager of the Farmers' Elevator Company. He retained this incumbency two years and then purchased the elevator of the company, continuing its proprietor for the ensuing seven years, when he disposed of the property and became manager of the elevators here owned by the Spencer Grain Company, an important corporation engaged in the handling of grain throughout this section. He remained with this concern three years, during which time he was also individually engaged in the real-estate business, having his office on Main street in the village of Scotland. He continued in the real-estate business after severing his connection with the company mentioned and also accepted a position as manager of the local interests of Shannard Brothers, extensive grain buyers of Bridgewater, this state. In August, 1902, Mr. Resner accepted the position of cashier of the Bank of Scotland, one of the solid and popular monetary institutions of this section, and he has since continued to give most discriminating service in this important executive office, gaining to the bank new prestige and handling its affairs with marked ability and to the entire satisfaction of its stockholders. Shannard Brothers were most reluctant to dispense with his services and finally prevailed upon Mr. Resner to continue in their employ as manager of their interests in this section, and the details of the business he now assigns principally to a deputy, though maintaining a general supervision of all transactions. The political support of the subject is given in an unqualified way to the Republican party, of whose principles he is a staunch advocate, having been prominent in political affairs in a local way for a number of years past. He served four years as a member of the village council and for the past six years has been a valued member of the board of education, while for three years he was incumbent of the office of village assessor and is in tenure of this office at the time of this writing. His religious faith is that of the German Congregational church, of which both he and his wife are zealous members, and he is prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with Scotland Lodge, No. 52, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons; Yankton Commandery, Knights Templar; and Yankton Consistory, No. 1, of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, at Yankton. He also holds membership in Security Lodge, No. 48, Knights of Pythias, and Scotland Camp, No. 977, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 14th of December, 1885, Mr. Resner was united in marriage to Miss Christina Redmann, of Yankton county, whither her parents emigrated from Russia in 1873. Of this union have been born seven children, namely: Edward, William, Julius, Amerlia, Lydia, Bertha and Arthur.

CHESTER C. TORRENCE is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born in Jones county, on the 13th of April, 1873, the fourth in order of birth of the six children of Adam C. and Almira J. (Rooney) Torrence. Of the children we enter brief record as follows: George A. is a resident of Bon Homme county and is associated with our subject in the management of the old homestead farm and in the cattle business; Cora B. is the wife of Frank Cole, of York county, Virginia; Nellie M. is deceased; Chester C. is the immediate subject of this sketch; David M. is assistant to the subject in the postoffice; and Charles is deceased. Adam C. Torrence was born in Fairfield county, Ohio, on the 27th of August, 1840, and in 1849 he accompanied his parents on their removal to Tama county, Iowa, where he was reared to manhood, receiving a good common-school education. In 1861 he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a private in Company B, Ninth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he proceeded to the front, remaining in the service three and one-half years, or until the close of the war, his regiment having served under both Sherman and Grant, while the history of the Ninth Iowa is the record of his gallant military career as a true and loyal son of the republic. After the close of the war he returned to Iowa, and after his marriage located on a farm in Jones county, where he continued to reside until 1883, when he came to South Dakota and purchased a farm three miles east of the town of Bon Homme, in the county of the same name. In 1898 he removed to Montana and later to Idaho, which is now his home, while he is devoting his attention to fruit culture. He is a Republican in politics and both he and his wife are exemplary members of the Methodist Episcopal church, while fraternally he is a valued member of the Grand Army of the Republic. He is a man of influence in his community but has never sought the honors of public office of any order. Elmira J. (Rooney) Torrence was born in Warren county, Indiana, on the 27th of September, 1843, and she accompanied her parents on their removal to Jones county, Iowa, in 1850, being there reared and educated, and thus both the Torrence and Rooney families are to be noted as having been pioneers of the favored state of Iowa.

Chester C. Torrence, whose name initiates this article, received his early educational training in the public schools of his native county in Iowa and was about ten years of age at the time of the family removal to South Dakota. As early as his fourteenth year he began to depend upon his own resources, being a boy of marked energy and ambition, while his self-reliance prompted him to prove his mettle, and he worked on farms or at such other occupations as he could secure. For nearly six years he devoted his attention to the drilling of artesian wells in various portions of South Dakota, being successful in his efforts and being careful to conserve his financial resources. In 1900 he located in Tabor and engaged in the buying and shipping of live stock and grain, in which connection he has shown much business tact and acumen and has met with unqualified success. In June, 1901, he was appointed postmaster of the town, and in 1902 he here established a local telephone exchange, which he still owns and operates, the same being of great benefit to the town through the facilities which it offers. For the past two years, he has also served as deputy sheriff of the county, while in politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and fraternally is identified with Tabor Camp, No. 9087, Modern Woodmen of America, and Canton Lodge of Home Guardians. He is held in high esteem in the community and is known as one of the energetic and progressive young business men of the county.

On the 1st of February, 1903, Mr. Torrence was united in marriage to Miss H. Emma Cooley, daughter of Hon J. P. Cooley, of Bon Homme county.

ADRIAN L. FISH, the able and popular clerk of the courts of Bon Homme county, was born in Adel, Dallas county, Iowa, on the 15th of November, 1867, being a son of Abner K. and Margaret E. (Wallace) Fish, of whose five children he is the eldest of the four surviving, the others being as follows: Oliver, who is a resident of Good Springs, Nevada; Lillian, who is the wife of James Farran, of Sioux City, Iowa; and Alice, who remains at the parental home. Abner K. Fish was born in Reading, Pennsylvania, in the year 1845, and when he was a boy he accompanied his parents on their removal to Iowa, where he was reared to maturity. His father, Abner H. Fish, was one of the pioneer settlers of Dallas county, that state, where he took up government land and engaged in farming, becoming one of the prominent citizens of that section. He lived to attain a patriarchal age, having died in the home of his son, Peter Fish, in the city of Chicago, at the age of ninety-eight years, having been a resident of Chicago about twenty years prior to his demise. The father of our subject enlisted for service in the Union army in 1863, being at the time eighteen years of age and going as a substitute for an elder brother, who had been drafted. He served until the close of the Rebellion, under command of General Sherman, and soon after his return to Iowa he was married, and he there continued to devote his attention to agricultural pursuits until 1873, when he came to Union county, South Dakota, which was yet a portion of the undivided territory of Dakota, and here he purchased a tract of land near Elk Point, where he continued to be engaged in farming and stock growing until 1881, when he removed to Sioux City, Iowa, where he engaged in the coal and wood business. In 1891 he removed thence to Texas county, Missouri, where he has ever since been engaged in the culture of fruit, being one of the honored and successful citizens of that locality. He is a stalwart Republican in his political proclivities and is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Adrian L. Fish, whose name initiates this sketch, secured his preliminary education in the public schools of his native county, and he then entered the normal school at LeMars, Iowa, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1889. He later attended the university at Vermillion, South Dakota, for two years, and in 1890 he took a business course in the University of the Northwest, at Sioux City, Iowa. As early as his nineteenth year he inaugurated his efforts as a teacher in the public schools, and through his efforts in the pedagogic profession he earned the funds which enabled him to complete his collegiate work. In 1891 he entered the law office of Carter & Brown, of Sioux City, and under their preceptorship continued the technical reading of the law about two years, becoming well grounded in the principles of the science of jurisprudence. In the spring of 1892 he came to Tyndall, South Dakota, and here was associated for one year with P. W. Smith, in the abstract business. At the expiration of this time he was appointed deputy register of deeds for Bon Homme county, in which capacity he rendered most efficient service for the ensuing four years, and in 1897 he was elected to his present responsible and exacting office of clerk of the courts, in which he has since served consecutively, which fact indicates the appreciative estimate placed upon his services. He was elected for a fourth term in the autumn election of 1902. In politics he accords an unflinching allegiance to the Republican party, taking an active interest in the cause and contributing to the furtherance of the same in a local way. His religious faith is that of the Congregational church, of which his wife likewise is a devoted member, and fraternally he is identified with Tyndall Lodge, No. 95, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Istaska Tribe, No. 32, Improved Order of Red Men; and Tyndall Camp, No. 2463, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 31st of October, 1892, Mr. Fish was united in marriage to Miss Alice Benbow, of Sheldon, Iowa, and of their four children two are living, Warren D. and Francis F.

JOHN H. SANFORD is the owner of a fine ranch of six hundred and forty acres in Bon Homme county, while he maintains his business headquarters and residence in the attractive town of Tyndall, the county seat. The state of Illinois figures as the place of his nativity, since he was born in Ogle county, on the 12th of December, 1847, a son of Jared W. and Henrietta (Sturgis) Sanford, of whose eight children only three are living at the present time—James W., who is a resident of Santa Clara county, California; Sarah, who is the wife of Aaron Rood, of Pueblo, Colorado; and John H., who is the subject of this sketch. Jared Sanford was born in the state of Connecticut, where he was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm and where his marriage was solemnized. Some time after thus assuming conjugal responsibilities he removed to Ogle county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming until about 1870, when he removed to Missouri and later to Dickinson county, Kansas, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1876, at which time he was seventy-one years of age. While his vocation in life was farming, he had distinctive mechanical ability, and for a number of years he did much work along this line, in connection with his agricultural operations, while he was also a successful stock-grower, our subject having gained his initial experience in the breeding of stock under the effective direction of his father. Jared Sanford was a stanch Republican in his political proclivities and he and his wife were zealous members of the Congregational church, the latter having entered into eternal rest in 1854, at the age of forty-five years.

John H. Sanford was reared to farm life and secured his early educational discipline in the public schools, supplementing the same by a course in F. E. Arnold's business college, at Rockford, Illinois. On attaining his legal majority he came into possession of a valuable farm, of one hundred acres, the same having been a part of his father's old homestead in Ogle county, Illinois, and he devoted his attention to the cultivation of the same until the time of his marriage, which occurred on the 30th of December, 1869, when he led to the hymeneal altar Miss Louisa E. Stone, the only daughter of Joseph and Mary Stone, of Ogle county, Illinois, and thereafter he was associated with his father-in-law in the management of the latter's farm until 1880, while for a number of years he was extensively engaged in the buying and shipping of live stock, in which line of enterprise he was very successful, gaining a knowledge which has made him one of the best judges of stock to be found in South Dakota. In 1880 he came to South Dakota and secured a quarter section of land in Bon Homme county. He has since added to his landed estate in the county until he is now the owner of an entire section, as previously stated, and though the tract is valuable farming land he devotes his attention more specially to the cattle industry, being an extensive feeder of stock and a breeder of registered cattle and hogs. He has done much to improve the grade of stock raised in this section and his finely improved farm shows some of the finest specimens of cattle and hogs to be found in the confines of the state. He is progressive and discriminating in his methods and has been very successful in his operations since coming to South Dakota. In politics he gives his support to the Republican party, but he has never been an aspirant for public office. Fraternally he is identified with Bon Homme Lodge, No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons. He and his wife are the parents of one child, Harry Otis, who is a veterinary surgeon, being successfully established in the practice of his profession at Tyndall.

JAMES H. DICKSON, one of the leading citizens of Scotland, Bon Homme county, is a native of the old Empire state, having been born on a farm in St. Lawrence county, New York, on the 4th of September, 1844, a son of John and Catherine (McGregor) Dickson, both of whom were born in Scotland, of stanch old Scottish lineage, while both came to America as children, their respective parents having emigrated to this country and taken up their abode in the state of New York. The father of the subject passed his entire life in the northern part of that state, where he was a successful farmer. He passed away at the age of seventy-four years, having been a man of prominence and influence in his section and having held various local offices. He identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization and ever afterwards remained a stanch advocate of its principles, while both he and his wife held membership in the Presbyterian church, the latter having been summoned into eternal rest at the age of forty-two years.

The subject was reared under the invigorating discipline of the home farm and after availing himself of such advantages as were afforded in the common schools of the locality and period he completed a course of study in the Eastman Business College, at Poughkeepsie, New York. He continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when he went to the town of Gouverneur, St. Lawrence county, New York, where he engaged in the dry-goods business in company with George P. Tait, under the firm name of Tait & Dickson. This partnership continued about five years, at the expiration of which the subject retired from the firm and engaged in the merchant-tailoring business in partnership with James Brodie, under the title of Brodie & Dickson. Four years later, in 1879, Mr. Dickson established himself in the same line of enterprise at Adams, Berkshire county, Massachusetts, being there a member of the firm of Dickson & Legate. In 1882 he came to South Dakota and located in Scotland, Bon Homme county, where he has ever since maintained his home. Here he opened a general mercantile establishment and engaged also in the buying of grain and hogs, in each of which lines of enterprise he built up an excellent business within a short interval. Upon the completion of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad through this section Mr. Dickson built and operated a chain of grain elevators from Lesterville to Armour and Parkston, while later he erected a large elevator in Geddes, and several of these monuments to his enterprising spirit are still owned and operated by him. He is a heavy shipper of hogs and grain, and in connection with the latter branch of industry he handles agricultural implements and coal in the various towns in which he buys grain. These statements clearly indicate that he is a man of affairs and one of marked capacity in an executive way, but he has proved equal to meeting all exigencies and is known as a careful, able and upright business man and as a citizen of value to the county and state. In 1894 his mercantile house and stock in Scotland were entirely destroyed by fire, but a fortnight later he had installed a new and comprehensive stock in his present attractive quarters, so that his large trade suffered but slight interruption.

In politics Mr. Dickson gives an unqualified allegiance to the Republican party and has been a prominent figure in its councils in the state, having been repeatedly a delegate to state and other conventions, while he has been strongly importuned by his party friends to permit the use of his name in connection with candidacy for the state senate, but he has no ambition for official preferment, realizing that the demands of his business are exacting and require his undivided attention and believing that he has discharged his civic duties in his efforts to promote the cause of his party and to further the ends of good government. He is one of the prominent and valued members of the Presbyterian church, in which both he and his wife are zealous workers, and he has held the office of elder in the church since the age of twenty-eight years, having been elected to this office while a resident of Gouverneur, New York, and having been chosen incumbent of the same office in Scotland soon after identifying himself with the church here. Fraternally he is affiliated with Scotland Camp, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 14th of February, 1872, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dickson to Miss Mary J. Tait, who was born and reared in Rossie township, St. Lawrence county, New York, and they are the parents of one son, Cyrus J., who is associated with his father in business.

FREDERICK D. WICKS, who is presiding on the bench of the county court of Bon Homme county, an incumbency which he has retained for nearly a decade, is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born in Fort Edward, Washington county, New York, on the 31st of July, 1866, and being the youngest of the seven children of Walter W. and Ellen (Kennedy) Wicks, all of whom survive except one, a brief record concerning them being as follows: William E. died at the age of forty-five years; Mary remains at the parental home; Walter J. is superintendent of the Indian school at Springfield, South Dakota; Sarah is the wife of James D. Keeting, a printer and publisher in Fort Edward, New York; Fannie is the wife of Frank B. Hall, a successful merchant of Hartford, New York; Albert H. is a cigar manufacturer and tobaccoist at Fort Edward, that state; and Frederick D. is the immediate subject of this sketch. The parents are still living at the old home in Fort Edward, where the father of the subject has long been engaged in building and contracting. He is a Republican in his political proclivities and both he and his wife are members of the Episcopal church.

Judge Wicks secured his early educational training in the public schools of his native town and later supplemented this discipline by a course of study in the Fort Edward Collegiate Institute. In 1886 he began the reading of law in the office of R. O. Bascom, a prominent member of the bar of Fort Edward, and under his able preceptorship he continued his technical studies until he became eligible for admission to the bar, gaining this distinction in 1890. Soon afterward he came to South Dakota and located in Scotland, where he established himself in the practice of his chosen profession. His ability so manifested itself that his novitiate in his new field of endeavor was of short duration and he soon took a prominent place at the bar of the county, while a gratifying recognition of his personal popularity and his professional talent came only two years after he took up his abode in the town, since in 1892 he was elected county judge, of which important office he has since remained consecutively incumbent save for an interim of two years. He has a distinctively judicial mind, is well poised and impartial in his rulings, which are based on a thorough knowledge of the science of jurisprudence in its various branches, and he has dignified the bench by his able and discriminating services. He is also city attorney of Scotland, a position which he has held for four terms, and he is known as a skillful advocate and a conservative and able counsellor. In politics the Judge gives an unwavering allegiance to the Republican party, in whose cause he has rendered timely and efficient service, and both he and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church, while fraternally he is identified with Scotland Lodge, No. 52, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons, and Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, in Yankton.

On the 12th of November, 1895, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Wicks to Miss Mary L. Wood, of Springfield, this county. She was born in Springfield, Bon Homme county, in 1874. Judge and Mrs. Wicks have three children, Emma, Walter and Ellen.

JOHN L. TURNER, in point of consecutive identification the oldest merchant in the state of South Dakota save for one exception, retaining his residence and business headquarters in the attractive town of Springfield, Bon Homme county, is a scion of a family which has been identified with the annals of American history from the early colonial epoch, and is himself a native of Geneseo, Livingston county, New York, where he was born on the 26th of August, 1843, being a son of Lyman and Martha (Lewis) Turner, of whose five children he is the eldest of the three surviving, his sisters being Mary H., a maiden lady, residing in New York city, and Isabella L., the wife of Charles S. Pease, of Albany, New York. The father of the subject was born in Connecticut, in 1800, his ancestors in the agnatic line having emigrated from England to America in 1648, taking up their abode in the colony of Massachusetts, whence representatives later went into Connecticut, where the name became one of prominence, as representative of the highest order of citizenship. Members of the family rendered valiant service as Continental soldiers during the war of the Revolution, and patriotism and loyalty have been distinguishing family traits in successive generations. As a young man Lyman Turner removed with his father, Mattley Turner, who was born in 1777, to New York city, whither an older brother had preceded them, and after remaining for a short time in the national metropolis he removed to Geneseo, that state, where he established himself in the mercantile business. In later years he became extensively engaged in the cattle business in that section of the Empire state, and was a member of the company which imported the first shorthorn cattle into that district. He eventually retired from mercantile pursuits and devoted his entire attention to the breeding of blooded live stock, in which connection he gained a high reputation, being very successful in his efforts and becoming an extensive land owner. He died at the age of fifty-five years, in the very prime of his honorable and useful manhood, his demise occurring in 1864. He was originally an old-line Whig in his political adherence, and espoused the cause of the Republican party at the time of its organization, ever afterward remaining a radical advocate of its principles, though he never sought official preferment. He and his wife were communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church and were persons of sterling character, retaining the high regard of all who knew them. The mother of the subject entered into the eternal life in 1861, at the age of forty-two years.

John L. Turner remained at the parental home until he had attained the age of twenty-two years and after completing a course of study in the high school at Geneseo he entered a private boarding school conducted by Dr. Reed, at Geneva, New York, and later continued his studies in a commercial college at Rochester, that state. After thus completing his educational discipline he became actively associated with his father in the cattle business, which he continued after the death of his father until 1867, when he removed to Ann Arbor, Michigan, where he resided until 1870, giving his attention to property interests of the estate in that locality. In the year last mentioned he cast in his lot with what is now the state of South Dakota, coming to Springfield and here establishing himself in the general merchandise business. About three years later he became associated with Henry E. Bonesteel in the prosecution of the enterprise, under the firm name of Bonesteel & Turner, and this partnership obtained for a quarter of a century, being dissolved in 1898, after which John W. Turner, the son of our subject, became associated with him in the business, proving an able coadjutor, and the enterprise has since been continued under the firm name of J. L. Turner & Son. The business has grown to extensive proportions, drawing its trade from a wide radius of contiguous country, while the stock carried is select and comprehensive and the firm is one whose reputation for reliability and fair dealing is of the highest. Mr. Turner is also the owner and operator of the Artesian roller mills in Springfield, and for many years he also conducted a drug store in the town, having recently disposed of this branch of his business.

In 1864 Mr. Turner enlisted as a member of the Fifty-eighth New York National Guards, in which he was made sergeant major, and during his term of service he was on guard duty at Elmira, New York, receiving his honorable discharge in December, 1864. Mr. Turner has ever been a staunch adherent of the Republican party and has taken an active interest in promoting the party cause. Soon after coming to Springfield he was appointed postmaster of the town, being the first incumbent of this office, which he continued to hold for a number of years, while his also was the distinction of being the first mayor of the town, of which position he was likewise incumbent for several years. He may well be mentioned as one of the founders and builders of Springfield, to whose interests he has ever been most loyal, doing all in his power to promote its advancement and material upbuilding. In 1896 he was candidate of his party for presidential elector, and in 1892 he was an alternate delegate to the national Republican convention, in Minneapolis. He has been a member of the Masonic fraternity since 1865 and is a charter member of Mount Zion Lodge, No. 6, of Springfield; he was a delegate at the organization of the grand lodge of the territory of Dakota, being senior grand warden of this body in 1879. He is also a charter member of the Masonic Veterans' Association and is identified with DeMolay Commandery, No. 3, Knights Templar, at Yankton, and with El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls. He is one of the prominent members and a communicant of Ascension church, Protestant Episcopal, in whose organization he took an active part, and he has been a member of its vestry from that time to the present. He was for several years a member of the board of education of Springfield, and in 1883 he was a member of the state constitutional convention, which assembled in Sioux Falls.

On the 17th of May, 1865, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Turner to Miss Mary A. Finley, of Geneseo, New York, and they became the parents of one son, John W., who was born on the 8th of October, 1866, and who is now associated with his father in business, being one of the able and popular young men of the county. Mrs. Turner entered into eternal rest on the 8th of March, 1884, having been a devoted communicant of the Episcopal church, and on the 2d of February, 1888, Mr. Turner was united in marriage to Miss Fanny E. Howes, of Springfield, who presides with gracious dignity over their attractive home, no children having been born of this union.

CHARLES M. KEELING, M. D.—The attractive town of Springfield, Bon Homme county, has in Dr. Keeling an able physician and surgeon and one whose prestige and success place him among the representative members of the medical profession in the state. The Doctor was born in Bartholomew county, Indiana, on the 16th of February, 1863, being a son of William W. and Mary R. (Speirs) Keeling, all of whose five children are yet living, namely: John R., who is a merchant at Shelbyville, Indiana; William F., who is engaged in the drug business at Nemaha, Nebraska; Charles M., who is the subject of this sketch; Dr. James E., who is a practicing physician at Sulphur Hill, Indiana; and Marian R., who is the wife of Edward L. Culver, of Omaha, Nebraska.

The father of the subject is a representative of one of the pioneer families of Indiana, having been born in that state in the year 1830, and being there reared to maturity. As a young man he prepared himself for the practice of medicine, entering the Eclectic Medical College of Cincinnati, Ohio, and being there graduated about 1858. He entered upon the practice of his profession in Indiana, where he remained until 1863, when he went to Nemaha, Nebraska, where he continued the work of his noble profession very successfully, becoming one of the leading citizens of that section. In 1865 he was elected a member of the Nebraska legislature, and shortly after the expiration of his term of office he returned to Indiana, locating at Sulphur Hill, where he continued in the active practice of medicine about a quarter of a century, being recognized as one of the leading physicians of that section. About 1890 he returned to Nemaha, Nebraska, where he has since maintained his home and where he still devotes more or less attention to his profession, though well advanced in years. He is a Democrat in his political proclivities, and his religious faith is that of the Methodist Episcopal church. Mary R. Speirs was born in Indiana in 1840 of Scotch parents.

Dr. Charles M. Keeling was an infant at the time of his parents' removal to Nemaha, Nebraska, and was about three years of age when they returned to Indiana, and thus he secured his early educational training in the public schools of Sulphur Hill, that state. At the age of sixteen years he was matriculated in Harts-ville College, at Hartsville, Indiana, where he continued his literary studies for some time. He was thereafter engaged in teaching in the public schools for five years and then began reading medicine under the effective direction of his honored father, thus continuing until 1885, when he entered the Medical College of Indiana, at Indianapolis, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1887, receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine. Soon after his graduation he came to South Dakota and took up his abode in Springfield, where he has since continued in the practice of his profession, being known as a skilled physician and surgeon and having a large and constantly increasing business. In 1899 he completed a post-graduate course in Chicago, while in 1901 he took another post-graduate course in New York city, ever aiming to keep in touch with the advances made in the sciences of medicine and surgery and thus the more thoroughly fortifying himself for his practical work in connection with the same. He is a member of the State Medical Society, of which he was president in 1901, and is also identified with the American Medical Association. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Democratic party and fraternally he holds membership in the lodge and chapter of the Masonic order and in the adjunct order of the Eastern Star; also the lodge and Daughters of Rebekah, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Brotherhood, and the Knights of the Maccabees, and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 22d of March, 1882, Dr. Keeling was united in marriage to Miss Viola E. Osborn, of Sulphur Hill, Indiana, and they have one child, Era. Mrs. Keeling's father, John C. Osborn, was born in 1840, in Ohio, and was a school teacher. He died in 1866. The mother, whose maiden name was Roanna Hawkins, was born in Indiana in 1841.

PAUL LANDMANN, who is successfully engaged in the real-estate and lumber business in the town of Scotland, Bon Homme county, was born in Odessa, Russia, on the 22d of February, 1853, being a son of Anton and Louisa (Hoffman) Landmann and the only survivor of their three children. His brother, Emanuel, died in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on the 28th of September, 1898, as a result of fever contracted in Porto Rico, where he served as a member of Company F, Third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, during the Spanish-American war. The father of our subject was born in Germany and always remained a citizen of that empire, though he went to Russia as a young man and there maintained his home about a quarter of a century. A year after the subject came to the United States and located in South Dakota his parents joined him here, and this state continued to be their home until their deaths.

Paul Landmann was reared to maturity in Russia, and there acquired his educational training in the excellent schools of his native place. In 1873, at the age of twenty years, he bade adieu to his native land and set forth to seek his fortunes in America. He landed in New York city and from the national metropolis continued his westward journey to what was then the territory of Dakota, arriving in Yankton, the capital, with a cash fund of only five dollars. There he was for seven years employed in the hardware store of the firm of Wynn & Buckwalter, in the capacity of salesman, and in 1880 he came to Scotland, Bon Homme county, where he engaged in the same line of enterprise upon his own responsibility, beginning operations upon a modest scale and succeeding in building up an excellent trade. He continued the business about seven years, when he disposed of the same, having been elected to the office of county treasurer, in which he served one term, after which he was incumbent of the office of register of deeds of the county for a term, having proved a most efficient executive in each of these capacities. After his retirement from office Mr. Landmann returned from Tyndall, the county seat, to Scotland, where he engaged in the real-estate business, in which he has since continued, having handled much valuable property in this and other counties of the state. In February, 1903, Mr. Landmann expanded the sphere of his business operations in Scotland, by establishing extensive lumber yards in the town, and he already controls a large part of the lumber business of this section. He is the owner of eleven hundred and twenty acres of land in Hutchinson county and much valuable real estate, both improved and unimproved, in the village of Scotland. He is a stalwart Republican in his political adherency and is a strong factor in the councils of his party in this section, and both he and his wife are members of the Reformed church.

Mr. Landmann was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Serr, of Scotland, this county, and they are the parents of seven children.

JAMES H. BASKIN, one of the best-known and most popular residents of Bon Homme county, and late mayor of the town of Scotland, was a native of the sunny south, having been born in the city of Atlanta, Georgia, on the 17th of February, 1845, a son of John and Elizabeth (Benton) Baskin, of whose seven children four are living at the present time, namely: Anna, who is the wife of a Mr. Harris, of Atlanta; Walter, who likewise continues to reside in that city, as does also Zachariah; and James H., the immediate subject of this sketch. The father of the subject came of stanch English lineage and was himself a native of the state of South Carolina, where he was reared to maturity. He finally removed thence to Atlanta, Georgia, where he established himself in the blacksmithing and wagon-making business, in which he continued to be actively engaged for many years, and in that city he continued to reside until his death, at the age of seventy years, while his devoted wife passed away when the subject was quite young.

James H. Baskin was reared and educated in his native city and was a lad of sixteen years at the time of the outbreak of the Civil war. His sympathies were naturally with the section in which he had been reared, and he was among many others of the chivalrous and valiant young men of the south who tendered their services to the Confederate government. At the age of sixteen years he enlisted, in September, 1861, as a member of a Georgia regiment, heavy artillery, with which he continued in active service until November, 1864, when he was captured at Fisher Hill, Virginia, and taken to the Union prison at Point Lookout, Maryland, being released on parole two weeks later. He had participated in many of the important engagements of the war and had proved a valiant defender of the "lost cause." After his release from captivity he passed a short interval in New York city and then drifted westward to St. Louis, Missouri, while in 1868 he came as a pioneer to the territory of Dakota, which was then on the frontier of civilization. For a year after his arrival he was in the employ of the firm of Duett & Bogue, traders, at Fort Thompson. About this time the Indians were removed to the Santee agency, and our subject was sent to that point in the employ of the government, and there he continued in service until 1875, when he took up his residence in Springfield, Bon Homme county, where he established himself in the hotel business, in which he there continued for the long period of eleven years, gaining a wide acquaintanceship throughout what is now the state of South Dakota and becoming one of the most popular pioneer hotel men of the state. In 1886 he came to Scotland, where he conducted the Baskin hotel, which is a popular resort of the traveling public, no pains being spared to provide the best possible accommodations and cater to the comfort and pleasure of the guests of the house. That the subject was a man of versatility is shown when we state that for seven years after coming to Scotland he was editor and publisher of the Scotland Journal, which he made an able exponent of local interests and a factor of importance in public and political affairs in this section. In 1890 he was elected mayor of the town, and served continuously as chief executive of the municipal government from that time to the date of his death, save for an interim of two years. He maintained a progressive policy and yet conserved economy in all departments, while his long retention in office was the best voucher of the popular appreciation accorded his well-directed efforts in the connection. In 1899 Mr. Baskin was elected a member of the lower house of the state legislature, and during his service of one term he proved an able and discriminating legislator, taking an active part in the work of the body, while he had the distinction of being chairman of the important committee on ways and means and also held membership on the committee on railroads and that on military affairs. He was originally an adherent of the Democratic party, but was a man who ever showed the courage of his convictions, and in harmony therewith he transferred his allegiance to the Republican party in 1896, during the campaign of which year he gave effective service in the support of the candidacy of President McKinley, and he afterward continued a stalwart advocate of the cause of the "grand old party." He and his wife were communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church, and fraternally he was identified with Scotland Lodge, No. 52, Free and Accepted Masons, and Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons.

On the 1st of December, 1888, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Baskin to Miss Mary Kula, of this county, and they became the parents of two sons, James E. and Frederick R., both of whom remain at the parental home. Mr. Bas-kin departed this life on February 29, 1904.

ELMER W. MONFORE, a well-known and highly respected citizen of Springfield, Bon Homme county, was born in the town of Center Lisle, Broome county, New York, on the 18th of November, 1853, being a son of Peter and Diana A. (Howland) Monfore, of whose eight children seven are living, namely: Emerson J., who resides at Waverly, Kansas; Elmer W., who is the subject of this review; Cora A., who is the wife of Clark S. Rowe, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Lana H., who is the wife of Alfred Burkholder, of that city; Alice A., who is the wife of Charles McBeth, of Mankato, Minnesota; Luna B., who is the wife of Professor Joseph W. Whiting, a member of the faculty of the normal school in Springfield, South Dakota; and Peter G., who is likewise a resident of this place.

The father of the subject was born in Delaware county, New York, in 1821, and in the old Empire state he learned the trade of miller. In 1865 he came west to Putnam county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming for the ensuing three years, at the expiration of which he removed to Marion county, Iowa, where he remained about two years and then came to South Dakota, locating in Springfield, and he was thereafter employed for a number of years by the government as miller at the Santee Indian agency and later at the Ponca agency, after which he lived a retired life in Springfield until his death, which occurred in 1895. On coming here he took up homestead and tree-culture claims, while at the time of his death he had recently disposed of three hundred and twenty acres of excellent land near Springfield. In politics he was a staunch Republican, and he was a man who ever commanded unqualified esteem. His wife was born in Broome county, New York, and is now living with a married daughter at Mankato, Minnesota.

Elmer W. Monfore was about twelve years of age at the time his parents came from New York to Illinois, and his early educational training was secured in the common schools and supplemented by a course in Bryant & Stratton's Business College in Des Moines, Iowa. After coming to South Dakota he devoted his attention to farm work for about five years, and later he was employed, for varying intervals, in the mercantile establishments of D. W. Currier, M. H. Day and P. M. Liddy, all of Springfield, the last mentioned having succeeded Mr. Day. In 1881 he engaged in business for himself, conducting a drug and grocery store here for two years, at the expiration of which he admitted to partnership in the enterprise his cousin, Edward C. Monfore, the firm title of E. W. Monfore & Company being adopted at that time. This partnership continued until January 1, 1903, when the firm disposed of the business, since which time our subject has had no active business associations. In politics he is a Republican and he has served as a member of the board of aldermen of Springfield and also as treasurer of the town and as a member of the board of education. He and his wife are valued members of the First Congregational church, and fraternally he is identified with Mount Zion Lodge, No. 6, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 52, Royal Arch Masons; Springfield Lodge, No. 7, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Deborah Lodge, No. 52, Daughters of Rebekah; Springfield Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and Springfield Chapter, No. 11, Order of the Eastern Star.

On the 16th of October, 1883, Mr. Monfore was united in marriage to Miss Emma R. Secombe, of Springfield, and they became the parents of four children: Charles E. (died February 6, 1904), Alberta A., Fred H. and Milliecent L.

LEVI D. WAIT.—Douglas county is favored in having so able a representative of its interests as the Armour Herald, which is recognized as one of the best county newspapers to be found in the state. Of the corporation of Wait & Dana, editors and publishers of the Herald, the subject of this sketch is the senior member and president of the company. He is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in Sylvan Corners, Richland county, on the 26th of June, 1867, a son of Lorenzo and Rachel (Townsend) Wait. In the family were ten children, and of the number the following seven survive: Helen, who is the wife of J. M. Cross, of Richland county, Wisconsin; Nora, who is the wife of A. P. Monnell, of Selby, Iowa; Iona, who is the widow of William Jones, and resides in Oacoma, South Dakota; Nellie, who is the wife of E. S. Wallace, of Richland county, Wisconsin; Dighton C. resides in Richland county, Wisconsin; Charles A., who is likewise a resident of that county; and Levi D., who is the immediate subject of this sketch. Lorenzo Wait was born in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, in 1829, and there he was a boyhood friend of the late President Garfield, being reared to maturity in that city. As a young man he became identified with the lake marine industry, sailing on various vessels on the Great Lakes for a number of years, after which he removed to Wisconsin and located in Richland county, where he has since maintained his home, save for a period of twelve years passed in Kimball, South Dakota, whence he and his wife returned to their old home in Wisconsin in 1894. Both are devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in politics Mr. Wait is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party.

The subject of this sketch was reared to maturity in his native county and his educational discipline was secured in the public schools. At the age of twenty years he entered upon an apprenticeship at the printers' trade, in the office of the Flandreau Herald, at Flandreau, South Dakota, his parents having been residents of this state at the time. He continued to be identified with the publication of this paper for three years and was thereafter employed in the office of the Pipestone Star, at Pipestone, Minnesota, until 1892, when he removed to Howard, Miner county, South Dakota, where he became editor of the Howard Advance, retaining this position one year, at the expiration of which he entered into partnership with his present associate, Mr. Dana, and purchased the plant and business of the Miner County Democrat, of Howard, continuing the publication of the paper until 1898, when Mr. Dana became the sole owner of the enterprise, having purchased our subject's interest. Mr. Wait was thereafter employed for one year as a traveling commercial salesman, and he then returned to Howard and purchased the paper and business of his former partner, the publication being continued under his control for the ensuing year. In May, 1901, he came to Armour, Douglas county, and purchased the plant of the Armour Herald, and the first edition after the property came into his hands was issued under his name, as editor and publisher. A week later, however, Mr. Dana became his associate in the enterprise, and they have since successfully carried the same forward under the firm name of Wait & Dana (recently merged into a stock company). Mr. Wait is inflexible in his allegiance to the Democratic party and takes a deep interest in the questions and issues of the hour, as well as in local affairs of a public nature. He has just completed a term as alderman for the city of Armour. In 1900 he was chosen permanent secretary of the Democratic state convention at Yankton, and since that time has been identified more or less with the organization of the party in the state. Mr. Wait has devoted a great deal of time and energy the past winter to furthering the ambitions of Hon. E. S. Johnson to become national Democratic committeeman for South Dakota, and at the state convention in Sioux Falls March 30, 1904, saw his efforts rewarded by the unanimous election of Mr. Johnson to the head of the party within the state. By reason of his activity in party councils Mr. Wait is probably one of the best known Democrats in South Dakota today, and has the respect and esteem of his party and business associates at all times. During the summer of 1903 Mr. Wait was one of the prime movers in the organization of the Publishers' Mutual Insurance Association, of Huron, now the strongest mutual insurance company in the state. Mr. Wait was elected its first president and was unanimously re-elected by the board of directors at their annual 1904 meeting. He is also serving his second term as treasurer of the South Dakota Press Association, one of the strongest bodies of newspaper men in the United States. He is a thorough churchman of the Protestant Episcopal church, of which he was made a communicant in 1900, and he is now warden of the parish in Armour. Fraternally he is identified with the Masons, Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 25th of February, 1893, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Wait to Miss Lulu A. Wallace, of Kimball, this state, and they are the parents of one son, Harry W., who was born on the 8th of September, 1895. Mrs. Wait also is a communicant of the Episcopal church and is an active worker in the same.

RUEL E. DANA, secretary and treasurer of the corporation of Wait & Dana, editors and publishers of the Armour Herald, was born in Fairmount, Minnesota, on the 23d of May, 1872, being a son of Charles T. and Lucinda (Gilman) Dana, of whose five children he is the eldest of the three now living, the others being Frank N., who is a resident of St. Paul, Nebraska, and Myrtie L., who is the wife of William A. Torbert, of Deavertown, Ohio. The father of the subject came of stanch New England stock, of English extraction. He was born in the state of Vermont, in 1820, and as a young man he set forth to seek his fortunes in the west, becoming one of the pioneers of the state of Wisconsin, where he remained for a few years and then repeated his pioneer experiences in Minnesota, where he resided many years. His death occurred in St. Paul, Nebraska, August 4, 1893, at the age of seventy-three years. In his youth he learned the trade of carpenter, becoming a skilled artisan in the line, and he was for many years successfully engaged in contracting and building, while he also was prospered in his operations as a farmer. In 1887 he removed to Howard county, Nebraska, and later to Thomas county, in the same state, where he remained about three years. He identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization in Wisconsin and continued to support its cause for many years, but finally identified himself with the People's party, of whose principles he continued a stanch advocate until his death, at which time he was incumbent of the office of county commissioner of Thomas county. In earlier years he held, at various times, practically all the county offices in the section where he resided, having never been defeated for any office for which he was a candidate, and having been a power in local affairs, showing much ability in the marshalling of political forces and being an influential factor in his party councils. His wife, who was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, July 20, 1842, is now sixty-two years old. Mr. Dana held membership in the Methodist Episcopal church in his earlier life, while his widow is a member of the Baptist denomination.

Ruel E. Dana, the immediate subject of this sketch, remained at the parental home until he had attained the age of sixteen years, his educational advantages having been such as were afforded in the public schools during a portion of the winter periods, his time during the summer months being taken up with work on the farm. At the age noted he initiated his independent career, having, in the summer of 1887, entered the office of the Advance, a weekly paper then published at Worthington, Minnesota, under the editorial direction of A. P. Miller, a prominent journalist and a poet of considerable reputation. There Mr. Dana gained his initiation into the mysteries of the "art preservative," remaining until the autumn of the same year, when he accompanied his parents on their removal to Nebraska, where he secured employment in the office of the St. Paul Phonograph and later was an employee of the Greeley Herald, at Greeley Center, that state. In October, 1892, Mr. Dana came to Howard, South Dakota, arriving here without funds, since the proceeds of his former labors had largely been devoted to assisting in the support of the family. Previous to his arrival he had been offered employment in the office of the Miner County Democrat, in Howard, resigning his position with the Greeley (Nebraska) Herald to accept the South Dakota position, and less than two months later, on the 1st of December, 1892, he formed a partnership with Levi D. Wait, his present associate, and purchased the plant of the Democrat "on tick," which they continued to publish under the same title, the enterprise proving a financial success, as is evident when we revert to the fact that the young men were able to pay for their plant within eleven months after its purchase, while they advanced the paper to a position among the best and most widely quoted in that section of the state. In 1898 Mr. Dana purchased his partner's interest and individually continued the publication about one year, when he sold the plant and business to Mr. Wait, and he then secured employment in a local mercantile establishment, his impaired health having necessitated this change of vocation. In the autumn of 1900 Mr. Dana went to Seneca, Missouri, where he took a working interest in the Seneca Dispatch, with an ultimate view of purchasing the property if satisfied with the business outlook and climatic conditions. After a six-months residence in the Missouri town he was not satisfied, however, and thereafter made a trip through Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texas, returning to Howard, South Dakota, in April, 1901, and there rejoining his family. Within the period of his absence Mr. Wait had sold the Democrat and in May, 1901, had come to Armour and contracted for the purchase of the Armour Herald, publishing the first copy under his name. One week later Mr. Dana joined his old partner here and purchased a half interest in the business, which has since been continued under the firm name of Wait & Dana, merged into a corporation January 5, 1904, all the stock being owned by the subject and his partner.

In politics Mr. Dana is a zealous advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, in whose work he has taken an active part. While a resident of Howard he held the office of village recorder for two terms. In the fall of 1902, yielding to the importunities of his party friends, he became a candidate for the office of auditor of Douglas county, and he was elected to this office, notwithstanding the fact that the normal political complexion of the county is strongly Republican and that he had been a resident of the county only eighteen months at the time of his election. He received a majority of thirty-one votes, and was appreciative of the honor conferred upon him by the voters of the county, while his service has proved the wisdom of their confidence and support. Fraternally, Mr. Dana is a Mason and a member of Washington Lodge, No. 104, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of Armour. He passed through all the chairs of Lodge No. 48, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, at Howard and has been a representative to the grand lodge of the state. He is also identified with the encampment of the order and with the Daughters of Rebekah, while he is affiliated with Armour Camp, No. 2746, Modern Woodmen of America. He and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church. Mrs. Dana is at present noble grand of Pleiades Lodge, No. 86, of Armour, and is the representative to the state assembly, of South Dakota, for 1904.

On the 15th of August, 1894, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dana to Miss Ellen Moore, of Howard, this state, and they are the parents of three children, Florian Alice, Charles M. and Clarence E.

JAMES H. EXON, one of the prominent and honored citizens of Charles Mix county, formerly incumbent of the office of county judge, as well as that of county auditor, and the principal figure in the County Seat State Bank, at Wheeler, is a native of the "right little, tight little isle" of England, having been born in Somersetshire, on the 11th of July, 1858, being a son of Henry and Sarah Exon, both of whom were likewise born in Somersetshire, of stanch old English stock. Both secured excellent educational advantages and both received life certificates as teachers in England, where both gained distinction and prominence in educational circles, the father having devoted the major portion of his active career to the pedagogic profession, while his wife also devoted herself to teaching for several years. The former was for nine years superintendent of the Ripleyville British schools and for eighteen years was principal of the schools at Wookey, Somersetshire, where the subject of this sketch was born. The mother of the Judge was likewise a teacher in the schools at that place. In 1882 the parents left their native land and came to the United States, our subject having come to Canada in the preceding year, and from New York city they proceeded to Iowa, where they resided about six months, after which they came to South Dakota, and secured claims in Charles Mix county, the property being located in what is now Forbes township.

In the month of May, 1881, Judge Exon bade adieu to home and native land and emigrated to America, landing in Quebec, and remaining in Canada about one year, at the expiration of which he joined his parents, who had located temporarily in Iowa, as has just been noted. In the autumn of 1882 he preceded them into what is now the state of South Dakota and selected the land for his father and for the four children who had attained years of maturity, the members of the family thus eventually being able to prove up on the five quarter sections which he had selected in Charles Mix county, of which they were pioneer settlers. Later three of these quarter sections were sold and the parents of the subject then removed to Gage county, Nebraska, where they now reside, the father having retired from active labors and being now sixty-eight years of age, while his devoted wife has attained the age of seventy years. Both are members of the Episcopal church and are folk of sterling character and high intellectual attainments.

Judge Exon attended the Ripleyville schools for a period of five years, during which time he prepared himself for his collegiate course. He then entered Cullom College, near famed old Oxford, where he was graduated in 1879, after which he was for two years an assistant master in the schools at Ripleyville, Bradford and Yorkshire. It was the wish of his father that he should follow the profession of teaching, in which the former had attained so gratifying success, but the Judge early manifested a desire to turn his attention to agricultural pursuits and it was in harmony with this ambition that he was led to emigrate to America. After his location in South Dakota he taught in the district schools during the winter months, and during the balance of the year devoted his time to the improving and cultivation of his farming land. In the autumn of 1890 he was elected to the office of county auditor, and in the following January he removed from his farm to the village of Wheeler, the county seat, to enter upon the active discharge of his official duties. He gave a most capable and satisfactory administration, and at the expiration of his term of two years he engaged in the abstract business, while in July of the same year he was appointed state's attorney, to fill the unexpired term of the regular incumbent, A. L. Hoppaugh, who removed from the state. In the following October Judge Exon was one of the leading spirits in bringing about the organization of the People's party in this section of the state, and, in company with seven other prominent workers in the movement, he purchased the Wheeler Courier, the weekly newspaper published in the capital town of the county, and this was thereafter made an effective exponent of the cause of the party. Our subject's appointment to the office of state's attorney, for which he was well qualified in an abstract way, led him to make a careful study of the technical branches of the science of jurisprudence, and he was admitted to the bar of the state, upon examination before the supreme court, at Pierre, on the 3d of October, 1893. From time to time he continued to acquire the interests of other stockholders in the Wheeler Courier, of which he became sole owner in 1901, while the paper has been under his editorial charge and his general direction from the time it was purchased by him and others, as previously mentioned. In the autumn of 1898 he was elected to the office of county judge, serving one term, and in January, 1902, he again received the appointment of state's attorney to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of T. J. Remington, and he served in this capacity until the expiration of the term, in January, 1903. In March, 1903, was effected the organization of the County Seat State Bank, and Judge Exon was made president of the institution at that time and still continues as chief executive. He still continues in the active practice of the law and is also engaged in the real-estate and abstract business. He now gives his allegiance to the Democratic party, of whose principles he is a staunch advocate, and his religious faith is that of the Protestant Episcopal church, of which he is a communicant, but as there is no church organization in Wheeler he and his family attend the Congregational church services. Fraternally he is identified with Doric Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons, at Platte, this state.

On the 26th of June, 1886, Judge Exon was united in marriage to Miss Emma Smith, of Mitchell, South Dakota, and they became the parents of three sons, Arthur R., Walter E. and John J. In 1896 Mrs. Exon's health had become so seriously impaired that he deemed it advisable to take her for an ocean voyage, in the hope that she might recuperate her energies, and they accordingly visited his old home in England, where she received treatment without avail, since her death there occurred four months later, on the 5th of August, 1896. On the 20th of April, 1898, at Paris, Kentucky, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Exon to Miss Marian Smith, a native of England and a sister of his former wife, and they are the parents of one child, Dorothy J.

WILLIAM L. RYBURN, cashier and general manager of the business of the First National Bank of Alexandria, was born in Rockford, Illinois, May 10, 1872, a son of William and Mary (Legge) Ryburn, to whom were born six children, namely: Anna, who resides in Alexandria; George, who is engaged in the real-estate business in this place; John, of Alexandria; Minnie, who is the wife of G. H. Montgomery, engaged in the furniture business in the same place; William L., who figures as the immediate subject of this sketch, and Maud, who is the wife of Dr. E. E. King, of Mitchell, this state. Both the father and mother of the subject were born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, the former in 1836 and the latter in 1835. The parents of each died when they were children and they were reared in the homes of relatives, and after attaining maturity each came to America in company with relatives. Both located in the city of Rockford, Illinois, where the father learned the trade of blacksmith, in which he was there engaged for nearly thirty years. In 1883 he came with his family to South Dakota and purchased a pre-emption claim in Hanson county, where he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock growing up to the time of his death, which occurred in 1898, his devoted wife having been summoned into eternal rest in 1893. Both were worthy members of the Presbyterian church and were folk of sterling character, honored by all who knew them.

The subject of this review was about ten years of age at the time of his parents' removal to South Dakota, and his early educational training had previously been secured in the public schools of his native city, to which he later returned for the purpose of taking a course in the Rockford Business College, in which he was graduated in 1891, having completed a thorough commercial course. He then returned to his home in South Dakota and was given a position in the Hanson County Bank, in Alexandria, proving himself a capable and faithful executive and being made assistant cashier of the institution in 1894, while in 1899 he was chosen cashier. In 1901 the bank was reorganized and incorporated as the First National Bank of Alexandria, with a capital stock and surplus of fifty thousand dollars, and Mr. Ryburn was forthwith placed in executive charge of the affairs of the institution, which has gained a leading position through his able and well-directed efforts. In 1899 he was sent to Elk Point, Union county, to superintend the business of the Citizens' Bank, which was practically a branch of the bank at Alexandria, and there he remained about eighteen months, within which time the institution was reorganized as the First National Bank of Elk Point.

Mr. Ryburn is one of the leaders in the local ranks of the Republican party and is secretary of its county organization. He is a member of Celestial Lodge, No. 37, Free and Accepted Masons, and Mitchell Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, of Alexandria; St. Bernard Commandery, Knights Templar, at Mitchell; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, in Yankton, and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls, being an appreciative and enthusiastic affiliate of these various bodies of the time-honored order of Freemasonry. He has held the office of worshipful master of his lodge for the past three years. He and his wife hold membership in the Presbyterian church.

On the 28th of April, 1898, Mr. Ryburn was united in marriage to Miss Edith Peckham, of Alexandria, and they are the parents of two children, Leota and Helen.

EDWARD E. WAGNER, one of the representative members of the bar of Hanson county, was born in Lyon county, Iowa, October 22, 1870, a son of James H. and Louisa E. (Conklin) Wagner, of whose six children four are living, namely: Orville S., of Rock Rapids, Iowa; Fred B., of Pasadena, California; Hulbert D., of Hawarden, Iowa, and Edward E., subject of this sketch. The father of the subject was born in Pennsylvania, on the 8th of February, 1840, and as a boy accompanied his parents on their removal thence to Iowa, the family locating in Linn county, where he was reared to manhood on the homestead farm. He was there married in the year 1860, and in the following year enlisted as a private in Company G, Twenty-fourth Regiment Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he remained in service until the close of the great conflict which perpetuated the integrity of the Union. He was captured by the enemy at Sabine Crossroads, Texas, and later was again taken captive in a spirited engagement, passing about fourteen months in rebel prisons. He was with Grant in the siege of Vicksburg and participated in many of the important engagements incident to the progress of the war. After receiving his honorable discharge he returned to his home in Iowa, where he continued to be identified with farming until 1870, when he removed to the northwestern part of that state, where he took up government land. He was one of the organizers of Lyon county, in 1871, and was chosen the first treasurer of the county, while for many years thereafter he was a member of the county board of supervisors, being a man of influence in that section and a prominent figure in the local ranks of the Republican party, of whose principles he was an ardent advocate. He passed the remainder of his life in the county which he aided in organizing, his death there occurring on the 15th of November, 1884, while his cherished and devoted wife entered into eternal rest on the 7th of October, 1901, both having been consistent members of the Congregational church, while he was a Royal Arch Mason.

Edward E. Wagner was reared on the homestead farm and after attending the district schools completed a course in the high schools at Rock Rapids, Iowa. In February, 1891, he began reading law in the office of H. G. McMillan, of that place, his former preceptor being now United States district attorney for the northern district of Iowa, while he was for several years a prominent member of the Republican state central committee of Iowa. Under the able direction of this honored preceptor the subject continued his technical studies until his admission to the bar, on the 13th of May, 1893. He then came to Mitchell, South Dakota, where he was associated in the practice of his profession with D. A. Mizener until November, 1895, when he returned to Rock Rapids, Iowa, and became associated in practice with his former preceptor, Mr. McMillan, who had lately been chosen chairman of the Republican state central committee. About one year later Mr. Wagner formed a law partnership with C. J. Miller, of Rock Rapids, and this professional alliance there continued until April, 1899, when the subject came again to South Dakota and located in Alexandria, where he has since been established in practice, having gained a high reputation as an advocate and being one of the prominent and successful members of the bar. He is a staunch Republican, and in 1900 was elected state's attorney of Hanson county, serving one term. He was the nominee of his party for representative of his district in the state senate in 1903, but met the defeat which attended the party ticket in general in this section. He is a member of Celestial Lodge, No. 37, Free and Accepted Masons; of Mitchell Chapter, No. 16, Royal Arch Masons; and St. Bernard Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, of Mitchell, while he also is affiliated with the Alexandria lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He has served as a member of the county central committee of the Republican party and is a zealous worker in the cause of the same. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, at Alexandria.

On the 10th of July, 1894, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Wagner to Miss Alice E. Tresler, of Rock Rapids, Iowa, and they are the parents of three children, Hazel L., Ruth N. and Robert Edward.

HORACE J. AUSTIN.—Standing in the clear white light of a life and character such as denoted the late Horace J. Austin, we are moved to a feeling of admiration, respect and reverence, for he stood for all that signifies sane, well poised and noble manhood. He was one of the foremost citizens of the state of South Dakota, and in his home city of Vermillion, Clay county, his death came with a sense of personal bereavement to his fellow townsmen, who could not but appreciate his sterling worth and his value to the community. It is fitting that in this history be incorporated a memoir of this distinguished citizen.

Horace J. Austin was born in Washington county, New York, July 11, 1837, and when he was two years of age his parents removed thence to Essex county, that state, where he was reared to manhood, continuing to abide beneath the home roof until the fall of 1857, when, as a young man of twenty years, he set forth to seek his fortunes as a pioneer in the west, his educational advantages having been such as were afforded in the common schools. He proceeded as far as Dubuque, Iowa, where he secured employment with a company of surveyors, and there he made his home for two years save when absent on surveying expeditions. Twice within this period his business brought him within the confines of the territory of Dakota, and on the second trip he decided to here take up his permanent residence. Accordingly he located in Yankton, the capital of the territory, where he was living at the time of the outbreak of the Civil war. In 1861 he enlisted in Company A, First Dakota Cavalry, which was stationed for some time in Vermillion, where it was mustered out on the 9th of May, 1865, having thus served during the entire period of the war, principally in repelling the ravages of hostile Indians, and the record of our subject as a soldier was one that will ever redound to his honor. After his military career he continued to reside in Vermillion until his death, which occurred on the 27th of February, 1891, as the result of an attack of pneumonia, which brought his life to a close in the zenith of its power and usefulness. From a previously published outline of his career we enter the following excerpt:

Although he never had the advantages of what is technically designated as higher education, he was a man who had the power of gaining much through absorption, observation and personal application, and his knowledge of men and affairs was well rounded and symmetrical. His honesty, integrity and steadfastness of character won him a high place in the hearts of the people, and he was six times elected a member of the legislature. In 1868-9 he was president of the territorial council. As a civil engineer he secured government surveying contracts every year from 1866 until his death, and there are few if any counties in the state which do not bear some of his surveying stakes. In temporal affairs Mr. Austin was greatly prospered, but freely as he received, with equal freedom did he give to the poor and needy. His was a kindly, sympathetic nature and charity and tolerance abided with him as constant guests. The principles of diligence and faithfulness were early mastered by him and ever dominated his course in life. His name, too, was a synonym of honesty, and in writing to his sister, several years prior to his death, he said: "I am being prospered, but this much I can say, I have never taken an unjust penny from any man." In the political history of South Dakota he bore an honorable part, and as a legislator was associated with such men of prominence as Moody, Brookings and a host of others, and was the acknowledged peer of all. As a citizen he believed in law and its obedience, and as a man he was gentle, courteous and obliging. In truth, Horace J. Austin was well-nigh the embodiment of man's ideal. He was a sturdy pioneer, a patient soldier, a faithful legislator, a true citizen, a loyal friend, and, last but not least, a loving and indulgent husband.

HORACE J. AUSTIN.

MRS. RACHEL M. R. AUSTIN.

On the occasion of his funeral the president of the State University spoke of him as follows: "With all his modesty and simplicity, he was a great, strong man and played a full man's part in the world. He could not be moved from the position which he believed to be right; he was true to his conscience. He was like a child in freedom from trickery or meanness or malice. He was every inch a man in the thick of life's struggles with evil and wrong. With a heart tender to suffering, he knew what it was to be righteously indignant against the evils that produce suffering. What a wide range of character these traits cover! A simple-hearted, strong-willed, generous, gentle man—what more can be said of character? * * * And I call this life successful because, first, Mr. Austin won an honorable success in his chosen pursuit. He became an expert surveyor; he acquired reputation and a competence. His work was honest work. Successful, second, in that he was a loyal and loved citizen and an honored public servant. There was no public enterprise in which he was not interested. He could be counted on for everything that concerned the welfare of the people. And it was a matter of course that such a man should be chosen for public service. He was the model citizen. He never sought office; he was too distrustful of his own abilities, too modest for that. He shunned rather than courted responsibility, yet, like a true man, when the office sought him he accepted it as a true citizen, with determination to do his best." Mr. Austin was a member of the lower house of the state legislature at the time of his death, and thus he died in the harness, faithful to the last and one of that noble band of pioneers who were associated in the founding and building of a great commonwealth. His political support was given to the Republican party and fraternally he was prominently identified with the Masonic order and the Grand Army of the Republic. Though he never formally identified himself with any religious body he had the deepest reverence for the spiritual verities as exemplified in the Christian faith, and guided and guarded his life in accord with the teachings of the divine Master, whom he served with humility and reverence, his being the faith that makes faithful.

The home of Mr. Austin was ever to him a sacred spot, and here his ambitions and affections centered and shone most resplendently. To violate this sanctity by words of eulogy would be most flagrant abuse in this connection, but in conclusion of this memoir we enter a brief record concerning the domestic chapter in his life history. On the 21st of March, 1870, Mr. Austin was united in marriage to Miss Rachel M. Ross, who was born in Trumbull county, Ohio, on the 1st of June, 1838, being a daughter of Benjamin and Mary (Palm) Ross. The father died in Arkansas and Mrs. Ross later came to Vermillion Dakota, where she died on the 22d of January, 1876. Mrs. Austin, whose death occurred March 6, 1904, was a woman of gracious presence and noble character and proved a true helpmeet to her husband, their companionship being ideal in all its relations. Mr. and Mrs. Austin had no children, but their generous natures prompted them to provide a home for three children, all of whom were reared with utmost care and solicitude, namely: Leroy O. Stevens, who is now living at Victor, Colorado; Anna Ross, who is now at Silex, Missouri, and Helen P., who was legally adopted by them in infancy, being now of Vermillion.

Rachel Ross was born in Warren, Trumbull county, Ohio, June 1, 1838, where she grew to young womanhood, and received her education. In 1867, with her mother, she came to Dakota territory and took up her home in Vermillion. Soon after her arrival here, she was employed by the pioneer people to teach in the school-house which they had erected—the old log school-house in the ravine—and even today are those in this city who were her pupils at that time. In 1870 she was married to Horace J. Austin, who preceded her to the better land some thirteen years ago. Never were husband and wife any more alike or more congenial in their natures. They possessed the same ideas as regards the doing of good to their fellow-beings.

When Mr. Austin died and left to his wife his large estates, she used the income in the manner that they both did before: the relief of the suffering and needy, the making of a pleasant home, and assisting in all the public enterprises in which the people of the city were interested. She donated to the city the block of land near the fair grounds to be used for park purposes; and although she has not been permitted to live to see its full development, yet that park will stand as a monument to her large-heartedness and public spirit. And in days to come, as the generations view this monument it will recall to their minds the life and works of a good, true and generous woman.

In the early history of this community Mrs. Austin was one of the foremost figures. In religious work she was among the leaders. She was a charter member of the first organization in this city, and was the last survivor of that noble band who worked so hard and faithfully during those early days to establish the church in this community, and from the earliest inception of the society up to the present time she has been one of the pillars in the support of the church and organization. She was always ready and willing to do more than her share in matters pertaining to its welfare. Her home was always open to church social gatherings, and her life was devoted to the cause of the Master.

Mrs. Austin was an untiring worker in the ranks of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and to her devotion is largely due the fact that the local union has been made one of the strongest in the state. It was but a week before her death that she opened the doors of her home for a public memorial service in honor of the memory of Frances E. Willard. As a tribute to her memory, the following testimonial by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was read at the funeral services:

In behalf of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, we desire to express the regret we feel in the loss of our dear sister, Mrs. Austin, who was so heavenly in her aims, and who earnestly worked to extend the blessings of temperance and to build up the union. We believe if the sealed lips could speak to us from the calm heights among the hills of God, that it would be to bid the women of today stand together to secure for the world a truer motherhood, a nobler manhood, a higher type of citizenship. Through the help of Christian womanhood homes are to be lifted from dishonor. The world is better because of the life of such a woman, and while her noble soul was ever filled with gratitude to God, her great heart was ever reaching out in helpfulness to humanity. It does not seem possible that we shall no more see her "till we lift the latch and pass into the other chamber of the King, a chamber larger than this." It is very hard to say, "Thy will be done." How can we get on without her?

She always gave her warmest support to any cause that she thought was right, and when the woman suffrage movement was started she identified herself with the work, and at the time of her death was president of the local league. Four years ago, when the proposition was up for the consideration of the voters in the shape of a constitutional amendment, she managed the campaign in this county, and brought to the standard of the equal suffragists far more support than the advocates of the movement had anticipated.

She was a prominent member of the Eastern Star lodge, and in her death the members of that order were called upon to mourn the loss of one whose counsels were looked up to with confidence, and whose advice was timely and good. As a tribute to her memory the members of the order complied with her often expressed desire, and took up a goodly collection and sent to the Children's Home at Sioux Falls.

Another society in whose work she took the utmost interest was the Cemetery Improvement Association. It was her aim to make a beautiful place of this resting-place of the dead. And now as her body lies within the enclosure of that sacred spot, her associates of the society will recall her efforts in bringing Bluff View Cemetery to its present orderly arrangement.

She was a heavy stockholder in the County Fair Association, and took an active interest in the work pertaining to the annual exhibitions.

She was very fond of the young people, and always had room in her home for some young man or woman who was working his or her way through school or college. There are many of this class of pupils who have attended the University in years past, who will give evidence of her large-heartedness and her timely assistance while they were struggling on the upward grade.

In educational matters Mrs. Austin took a deep interest. Not only did she lend her energies to the betterment of educational facilities, but she had the interests of the teachers at heart. Her spacious lawn and pleasant home have been the scene of many a happy party given to the teachers of the city and county, and she was always happy when she was engaged in entertaining a company of this kind. At the city election in 1903 she was chosen a member of the city school board from the fourth ward, and had been faithful in the discharge of her duties as such member. The other members of the board have been aided by her presence, and they will miss her quick womanly discernment and sound judgment. As a mark of respect to her memory, the board dismissed school on Tuesday and the board and the teachers attended the funeral services in a body.

All of Mrs. Austin's public and private benefactions originated in her own home and radiated from that home out into the community. She had an intuitive way of finding out who really needed help, and when she found that some poor family was destitute and the family was worthy, help was immediately forthcoming. She had an extraordinary power of estimating the value of timely help where help was needed. Many are the times that she has ordered groceries and provisions sent from the stores to the needy ones in the city, and there are those who will miss her faithful watchfulness and gentle ministrations in this regard. She felt that it was her duty—the performance of these many kindnesses—and she never shrank from what she deemed to be her duty, no matter where the performance of that duty lay.

In view of Mrs. Austin's generosity, her many kindnesses and her gifts to the city, Mayor Bryant issued the following proclamation:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Vermillion, S. D., March 8, 1904.

Again death has entered our city and claimed one of our number, whose strength of mind and character and whose devotion to duty and interest in the welfare of others made her more than ordinary. Mrs. H. J. Austin. Her life work was not confined to the radius of a few, but extended to the public at large in more ways than one. One of our city parks we today own by the grace of her benevolence. Her death casts a gloom over our entire city. I, therefore, express what I am certain will be the desire of every citizen, that, during the funeral hour from three to four o'clock this afternoon, all places of business be closed and all business be suspended, that we may as a city show our admiration for her character.

W. C. BRYANT, Mayor.

P. F. WICKHEM, one of the representative merchants of Alexandria, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born on a farm in Dodge county, on the 15th of October, 1855. He is a son of John and Catherine (Joyce) Wickhem, of whose seven children six are living, namely: Michael, a resident of Waterloo, Wisconsin; P. F., the immediate subject of this sketch; James G., who is a prominent attorney of Beloit, Wisconsin, where he served four years as postmaster, being one of the leaders of the Democratic party in that section; Maria, who remains on the old homestead, with her brother Michael; Nellie E., who makes her home with the subject; and Margaret, principal in the public schools of Beloit, Wisconsin. The father was born in County Wexford, Ireland, about 1825, and was there reared to manhood, having been left an orphan when a mere lad and having thus been early thrown upon his own resources. He there devoted his attention to farm work until 1842, when he emigrated to America, being variously employed, in different states of the Union, for the first four years of his residence here and finally taking up his permanent abode in Dodge county, Wisconsin, where he purchased a farm of eighty acres, becoming one of the prominent and prosperous farmers of the county and being the owner of a fine estate of three hundred and twenty acres at the time of his death, which occurred in 1892. He was a Democrat in politics and he and his wife were communicants of the Catholic church, the latter having entered into eternal rest in 1897.

The subject of his sketch was reared on the home farm and completed the course of studies in the graded schools of Waterloo, Wisconsin, being graduated in 1873. He then secured a clerkship in a general store in that town, where he remained until 1880, when he came to Alexandria, South Dakota, in charge of a stock of general merchandise owned by his employer, S. M. Wiener, and here he opened a branch store. Two years later he engaged in the same line of enterprise on his own responsibility, opening his store on the 1st of May, 1882, and he has ever since been identified with this enterprise, which has been developed into one of the most important of the sort in the county, controlling a large and representative trade. The business is now placed in charge of H. L. Burlew, who has been in the employ of the subject for the past twenty-two years. Mr. Wickhem withdrew from the active supervision of his store in order to devote his attention to his extensive cattle interests, having become identified with this important line of industry in 1900. He is now the proprietor of the Rose Hill and the Spring Valley stock farms, comprising twelve hundred acres of the best land in the county, and he has gained a high reputation throughout the state as a breeder of short-horn cattle, which he raises upon a large scale, having done much to advance the stock interests of this section and having two of the finest stock farms to be found in the state. In politics Mr. Wickhem is an uncompromising Democrat, and has ever taken an active part in furthering the party cause. His is the distinction of having been chosen the first mayor of Alexandria after its incorporation, in 1885, and he served two terms as treasurer of the county, while further official honors came to him in 1890, when he was elected to represent his district in the state senate, serving with ability and discrimination during the sessions of 1890-91. In 1893-4 Mr. Wickhem held the position of internal revenue collector for the eastern district of South Dakota, then resigning the office in order to give his attention to his personal business interests. He has been an important factor in the ranks of the Democracy in the state, and was a delegate to the national convention of 1892, in Chicago, which nominated Cleveland for the presidency. He is president of the Retail Merchants' Association of South Dakota, and was one of the organizers of the Retail Merchants' Fire Insurance Company, of whose directorate he is a member. He and his wife are communicants of St. Mary's church, Roman Catholic, and he is a member of its official board.

On the 1st of June, 1897, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Wickhem to Miss Ella Hayes, of Rockford, Illinois, and they are the parents of one son, John Francis, who was born on the 27th of April, 1891.

N. J. BROCKMAN, vice-president and manager of the State Bank of Spencer, is a native of Germany, where he was born on the 26th of April, 1853, being a son of Claus and Aple (Stuhr) Brockman, both of whom passed their entire lives in Germany.

The subject of this review was reared to manhood in his native land and was given the advantages of a collegiate education. He came to America in 1871, with but little financial reinforcement, and located in the city of Davenport, Iowa, where he was variously employed for several months. He then went to Tama county, that state, where he was identified with agricultural pursuits until 1877, when he took up his residence in the town of Traer, Iowa, where he engaged in the mercantile business, in which he was very successful, there laying the foundation for the distinctive prosperity which he today enjoys. In 1881 he engaged in the same line of enterprise in Gradbrook, Iowa, where he remained two years, at the expiration of which he disposed of his interests there and engaged in the lumber trade at Kingsley, that state, also buying and shipping grain. There he continued to make his home until 1901, when he sold his prosperous business and removed to Sac City, Iowa, where he resided until January 1, 1903, when he became associated with M. D. Gates in the purchase of the State Bank of Spencer, South Dakota, Mr. Gates being made president of the corporation, while the subject assumed his present office of vice-president and general manager. Mr. Brockman is a Republican in his political proclivities, while he and his wife are members of the German Lutheran church, and fraternally he is identified with the lodge, chapter and commandery of the Masonic order, and also with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

In 1883 Mr. Brockman was united in marriage to Miss Bertha E. Gebauer, of Lyons, Iowa. One son has been born of this union, Ray, who is now a student in the Iowa State Agricultural College, at Ames.

W. S. HILL, one of the representative business men of Hanson county and an influential citizen of Alexandria, was born in Edgar county, Illinois, on the 3d of June, 1863, being a son of Joseph and Rebecca (Braden) Hill, of whose four children three are living at the present time, namely: Elizabeth, wife of William Hillyard, of Wayne county, Iowa; Albert, a resident of Alexandria, South Dakota; and W. S., the immediate subject of this sketch. Joseph Hill was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, and his wife in Greene county, that state, both being of Scotch-Irish lineage, and both having removed to the state of Illinois when young, their marriage having been there solemnized a few years later. The father of the subject was reared on a farm but as a young man learned the trade of carpenter, becoming a skilled artisan. He followed his trade for a time in Iowa, having resided in Keokuk, and then returned to Illinois, settling in Edgar county after his marriage and there engaging in agricultural pursuits. He tendered his services in defense of the union at the time of the Civil war, enlisting as a member of Company E, Twelfth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served eighteen months,—until the close of the war, when he received his honorable discharge. In 1869 he removed to Iowa and located in Wayne county, where he became a prominent and prosperous farmer, there continuing his residence until his death, in 1897, at the age of sixty years. He was a Republican in politics from the time of the organization of the party, and was originally a member of the Presbyterian church, later embracing the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church. His widow is still living, making her home in Wayne county.

The subject of this sketch completed the curriculum of the common schools and was graduated in the high school at Allerton, Iowa, as a member of the class of 1884, while two years prior to this he had completed a course in the Pierce Business College, in Keokuk, Iowa, being duly graduated in 1882. At the age of twenty-one years he secured a position with a firm of wholesale dealers in farming machinery and implements in the city of Des Moines, remaining thus engaged for a short time and then accepting a position with the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company, while a year later he entered the employ of a wholesale grocery house in Des Moines. In the spring of 1887 Mr. Hill came to South Dakota and located in Alexandria, where he purchased an interest in the business of Lanz & Jacobs, securing the interest of the junior member of the firm, while operations were continued under the title of Lanz & Hill, the enterprise involving the handling of agricultural implements and machinery and varied allied lines of goods. In 1893 the subject's brother, Albert, purchased Mr. Lanz's interest in the business, which was conducted for the ensuing six years under the firm name of Hill Brothers. In 1899 our subject purchased his brother's interest and has since been in entire control of the extensive business which has been built up through energy, enterprise and honorable methods. He handles a complete assortment of agricultural implements, vehicles of all kinds, harness and saddlery goods and also coal, and the enterprise ranks as one of the foremost of the sort in this section of the state.

In 1897 Mr. Hill became identified with the cattle business, making his first purchase of ranch land in that year, and from time to time he has made additional purchases until he now has a fine landed estate of fifteen hundred and twenty acres, all being located in Hanson county and being known as the Riverview ranch, while it is recognized as one of the finest stock farms in this section, having the best of modern improvements and facilities. Mr. Hill makes a specialty of the breeding of registered red polled cattle, and in this line he has attained a high reputation throughout the state and has done much to improve the grade of cattle raised here. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and he is now serving his third term as mayor of Alexandria. He is secretary of the Retail Implement Dealers' Association of South Dakota, Southwestern Minnesota and Northwestern Iowa, having held this office from the time of the organization of the association, in 1899. He and his wife are prominent members of the Presbyterian church, in which he is an elder, taking a deep interest in all departments of church work. He is affiliated with Celestial Lodge, No. 37, Free and Accepted Masons, at Alexandria; Mitchell Chapter, No. 16, Royal Arch Masons, in Mitchell; St. Bernard Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, in this city; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, in Yankton; and El Riad Temple of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls, while he is also identified with Alexandria Lodge, No. 11, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 3d of September, 1890, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Hill to Miss Ida Kellogg, of Wayne county, Iowa, and they are the parents of five sons, Joseph L., W. Braden, Emory K., Lawrence M. and Robert D.

LEWIS V. SCHNEIDER, one of the most prominent and highly honored business men of Salem, McCook county, was born in La Crosse, Wisconsin, on the 28th of December, 1860, being a son of Joseph and Frances (Ringl) Schneider, of whose children eight are living at the present time. The father of the subject was born in Austria, where he was reared to maturity, there learning the trade of cabinetmaking. As a young man he emigrated to the United States, and passed a number of years in the state of New York, where he followed the vocation of carpenter and builder. About 1855 he came west to La Crosse, Wisconsin, as one of the pioneers of the place, and there he followed contracting and building for some time, also devoting no little attention to work as a millwright, through which association he was finally led to engage in the milling business. In 1890 he sold his milling interests in Sheldon, Minnesota, where he had resided for a number of years, and came to South Dakota to pass his declining days with his sons. He died in October, 1897, at the age of sixty-seven years. His widow now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Frances Roop, of Salem, this state. Joseph Schneider was a Democrat in politics, but was not deflected from its original principles by the heresy of free silver. He was a member of the Lutheran church, as is also his widow, who was born in Austria.

The subject of this review secured his early educational raining in the common schools of the pioneer epoch in Wisconsin, having attended school in a little log building of the most primitive type. At the age of thirteen years he secured a position in a general store at La Crosse, Wisconsin, working the first year for his board and clothing and being thereafter advanced in salary from year to year, as his value increased. He retained this clerical position seven years and then, in the spring of 1881, came to the territory of Dakota, being one week en route. His financial resources were represented in the sum of about five hundred dollars, which he had saved from his earnings, and after returning to La-Crosse to make a final settlement of his affairs preliminary to taking up his permanent abode in what is now South Dakota, he returned to Sioux Falls, in May, 1881, driving through from Valley Springs, where the railway train had been compelled to stop, by reason of the damage done to the roadbed by heavy storms. He finally reached his destination, having been compelled to ford numerous swollen streams and to encounter other annoying obstacles. Upon his arrival he entered the employ of Frank Kuerth, a prominent general merchant of Sioux Falls and one who stands high in Masonic circles. In December, 1881, Mr. Schneider engaged in business on his own responsibility, entering into partnership with P. L. Runkel, and coming to Salem. Here they erected a store building and on the 27th of the following March formally opened the same for business, having a stock of general merchandise. The enterprise prospered and in June, 1889, Mr. Schneider purchased his partner's interest and soon afterward admitted his brother Henry to partnership, while in 1890 his brother Joseph also became a member of the firm. On the 2d of March, 1899, to meet the exigencies of the constantly increasing business, the firm was incorporated as the Schneider Brothers' Company, under which title the business has since been continued, the establishment of the company being one of the best equipped department stores in this section of the state and commanding a large and widely extended trade throughout the surrounding country. In addition to a full and select line of general merchandise the company also conduct an extensive trade in the handling of farming implements and machinery, this department having been an adjunct of the business since 1882, while in the connection it may be noted that our subject sold the first binder ever sold in the county. In 1892 Mr. Schneider was prominently concerned in the organization of the McCook State Bank, of Salem, of which he was chosen president, retaining this office until 1897, when he disposed of his interest in the institution. In 1895, in company with his two brothers, he purchased the Salem flouring mill, and in 1892 they established in connection with the same a modern heating and electric-lighting plant, supplying public facilities in these lines, and at that time they effected the organization of a stock company, known as the Salem Milling, Lighting and Heating Company, under which corporate title the enterprise has since been successfully conducted. Since its organization Mr. Schneider has served as its president.

Since 1896 Mr. Schneider has been aligned with the Republican party, while prior to that time he was a sound-money Democrat. In 1896 he was persuaded to accept the nomination of the Republican party for state senator from his district, but met defeat in the Democratic landslide which prevailed in this section in that campaign. In 1888 he was chairman of the Democratic central committee of his county, and later served as councilman and mayor of Salem. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church. He is a prominent and valued member of the Masonic fraternity in the state, and was a member of the building committee which had the supervision of the erection of the fine Masonic temple in Yankton, being also a member of the board of trustees, as is he at the present time. His Masonic affiliations are briefly noted as follows: Fortitude Lodge, No. 73, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Chapter No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, in which he has attained the thirty-second degree; and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He also holds membership in Salem Lodge, No. 106, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; the Knights of the Maccabees and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 28th of August, 1883, Mr. Schneider was united in marriage to Miss Emma Jehlen, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, and they have one child, Mae.

WESLEY DOUGLASS, engaged in the drug business in Menno, is a native of the province of Ontario, Canada, where he was born on the 30th of January, 1851, being a son of Robert and Jane (McGill) Douglass, of whose nine children only four are now living, namely: Alexander, who is engaged in the real-estate business in Winnipeg, Canada; Elizabeth, who is the widow of John Sproat and resides in Ontario, Canada; John, who is a physician in the city of Chicago; and Wesley, who is the subject of this review. Robert Douglass was born in the state of New York, where he was reared on a farm, and as a young man he removed to the province of Ontario, Canada, where the later years of his life were passed in agricultural pursuits, his death there occurring in 1888, at the age of eighty-four years. He was a man of strong individuality and well-fortified opinions, and loyal to his native land. He was a zealous advocate of the principles of the Whig party and an advocate of reform measures in the land of his adoption, while his religious faith was that of the Wesleyan Methodist church. He was of stanch old Scottish ancestry, his grandfather having come to the United States from Scotland during the war of the Revolution, arriving about the time of the historic "Boston tea party." The mother of the subject died in 1895, aged eighty-seven years.

Wesley Douglass received his educational training in the common schools of his native province, remaining at the parental home during the major portion of the time until he had attained the age of twenty years, prior to which he had been employed for a time in a drug store and in the office of his brother Robert, who was then engaged in the practice of medicine in Canada. In 1871, at the age noted, our subject came over "into the states," making his way to Kansas where he remained about two years, having been engaged in teaching school and in working in the office of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railroad. He then returned to Canada, where he tarried one year, operating for the Grand Trunk Railroad, and in the spring of 1874 he became numbered among the pioneers of what is now the state of South Dakota, coming to Hutchinson county and entering homestead and timber claims a few miles northwest of the present town of Scotland. He resided on his farm about four years, in the meanwhile doing some freighting to the Black Hills and teaching school during the winter terms for two years. In the fall of 1878 Mr. Douglass was elected sheriff of Hutchinson county, being chosen as his own successor in 1880, and thus serving four consecutive years. After the expiration of his second term he removed to the village of Scotland, where he was employed during the ensuing year as operator in the telegraph office of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. In January, 1884, he came to Menno, where he has since resided. Shortly after locating here he established himself in the drug business, being one of the pioneer merchants of the town, and this enterprise he has since successfully conducted, having a representative patronage. He is a Democrat in his political allegiance, and fraternally is a member of Scotland Lodge, No. 53, Free and Accepted Masons.

On the 3d of February, 1878, Mr. Douglass was united in marriage to Mrs. Caroline (Church) Johnson, who was born in Ontario, Canada. She had one child by her first marriage, Minnie, who is the wife of E. J. Swanton, of Menno, and of the second union have been born two children, Agnes J. and Gerald R., both at the parental home.

ALBERT C. BIERNATZKI, a prominent and successful member of the bar of McCook county, being actively engaged in the practice of his profession in Salem, was born in Webster City, Iowa, on the 3d of December, 1860, being a son of Charles and Margaret (Noland) Biernatzki, the former of whom was born in Poland and the latter in Ireland. The father of our subject was reared to maturity in his native land, and secured his educational training in the military academy in St. Petersburg. He was thereafter commissioned a colonel in the Russian army, but as his mother was strenuously opposed to his continuing in the military service he resigned his office and was appointed a member of the government engineering corps, with the rank of colonel. He became involved in the revolution of 1847, manifesting that distinctive loyalty which was one of his dominating characteristics, and his patriotism placed his life in jeopardy, so that in that year he left his native land and came to America, locating in Oswego, New York, where he became identified with the shipping trade, owning and operating two or more vessels. In 1857 he removed to Webster City, Iowa, where he engaged in farming and live-stock enterprises, becoming one of the prominent and influential citizens of that section and being signally prospered in his business operations. He died in 1899, at the venerable age of eighty-two years, honored by all who knew him and recognized as a man of fine intellectuality and sterling character. He was a stanch Republican, and while never ambitious for office he was an influential factor in the councils of his party. His wife is still living.

Albert C. Biernatzki secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of his native place and then entered the University of Des Moines, Iowa, where he continued his studies for two years, while in 1881 he was matriculated in the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, where he had simultaneously prosecuted a technical course in the law department of the university, in which he was graduated in 1884, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. In March of the following year he took up his residence in Salem, South Dakota, being one of the early members of the bar of the county, and here he has ever since been established in the active practice of his profession, having built up an excellent business and retaining a representative clientage, while he has high standing at the bar of the state. He continued to be a close and appreciative student, and is considered one of the best read lawyers in this section. He is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose cause he has been an effective worker, and he served as county judge from 1889 until 1903, with the exception of one term, his rulings being signally impartial, indicating not only the possession of an intrinsically judicial mind but also a wide and intimate knowledge of the science of jurisprudence. The Judge is a member of Fortitude Lodge, No. 72, Free and Accepted Masons; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, and El Riad Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls.

On the 7th of June, 1887, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Biernatzki to Miss Emma Sibley, of State Center, Iowa, and they are the parents of one son and two daughters, Charles, Margaret and Helen.

GEORGE E. MASTERS, one of the prominent business men and honored citizens of Spencer, McCook county, was born in Steuben county, New York, February 26, 1853, a son of Samuel and Margaret (Farrington) Masters, of whose four children we incorporate the following brief data: Augusta A. is the wife of C. P. Sherwood, state dairy commissioner of South Dakota, and they reside in DeSmet; Jesse F. B. is likewise a resident of that place; Genevieve is the wife of W. G. Renwick, auditor for the zinc syndicate and a resident of the city of Chicago; and George E. is the subject of this review. Samuel Masters was born in New Jersey, in 1822, and when a child accompanied his parents on their removal to Steuben county, New York, where he was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, demical education, in Ithaca, New York, being given the advantages of an academy. There he completed a course in civil engineering, and in later years he found his services as a surveyor in much requisition, in connection with his agricultural operations. In 1878 he removed with his family to Minnesota, and three years later came to South Dakota, locating in Kingsbury county, where he took up a quarter section of government land. He rendered efficient service as county surveyor for a number of years and was one of the influential citizens of his section. He was a Democrat in politics and was a man of impregnable integrity and marked mentality. While a resident of Steuben county, New York, he held the office of superintendent of schools for several years, having also been a successful teacher and prominent in educational work. He died in 1893, having passed the psalmist's span of three score years and ten. His widow is still living and resides in the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sherwood, in DeSmet, being seventy-six years of age at the time of this writing, in 1903.

George E. Masters was reared under the gracious influences of a cultured and refined home, and after completing the curriculum of the public schools continued his studies for two years in Corning Academy, at Corning, New York. At the age of twenty-one he took a position as clerk in a drug store in that place, where he was employed for three years. In 1876 he set forth to carve out his career in the west, and for two years was employed in the city of Chicago. In 1878 he located in Walnut Grove, Minnesota, in which locality he was employed at farm work, and there, in 1879, he was married to Miss Margaret Gilmore. In the spring of the following year he came with his bride to South Dakota, and during the ensuing summer he was employed in the company store of Walls, Harrison & Shute, railroad contractors, who were then engaged in the construction of the line between Tracy and Pierre. In the fall of that year Mr. Masters took a position as brakeman on this road, and in December went to DeSmet, Kingsbury county, in which locality he has filed entry on a tree claim in 1879 and on a homestead in the spring of 1880, his eldest son having been the first white child born in what is now the thriving little city of DeSmet. He continued to reside on his homestead until 1886, duly proving on the property under the homestead laws. Within this interval, in 1881, he accepted a position with the Empire Lumber Company, at DeSmet, and continued in the employ of this concern for ten and one-half years, while for one year he was an employe of the firm of Hanson & Lambert, engaged in the same line of enterprise in DeSmet. In 1893 he associated himself with his brother Jesse in the sheep business, in which he continued a short time. In 1892 he was candidate on the Democratic ticket for the office of state senator, there being three tickets in the field during that campaign. He succeeded in winning sufficient Republican votes to compass the election of the Populist candidate, and though he was himself defeated he gained no little influence in the ranks of his party, and this led to his securing the appointment of postmaster at DeSmet, an office which he held for four years under the administration of President Cleveland. In the winter of 1884 there was organized in DeSmet Company E of the National Guard of the Territory of Dakota, and our subject was made third sergeant of the same, from which position he finally rose to the office of captain. At the outbreak of the Spanish-American war Mr. Masters was senior captain of his regiment, which in 1898 tendered its services to the government, enlisting for service in the Philippines, where it made a brilliant record. Mr. Masters accompanied the regiment to Sioux Falls and there was rejected for service on account of his physical proportions. This was the reason given but he has ever been certain that the real cause of his rejection was one of political nature. He was, however, given the privilege of naming the lieutenants of the company over which he had so long been in command, and his choice fell upon Harry Hubbard and Sidney Morrison for first and second lieutenants, respectively. On bidding the boys farewell the last to grasp his hand were Lieutenant Morrison and Lewis Chase, both of whom met their death in the Philippines while in discharge of their patriotic duties.

In March, 1899, Mr. Masters accepted a position with the John W. Tuttle Lumber Company, as manager of their yards at Spencer, where he has since been located, being one of the honored and popular citizens of the place. He is a stanch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party and has long been an active worker in its cause. While a resident of DeSmet he served for a number of years as a member of the village council and also as a member of the board of education, while at the time of this writing he is president of the board of education in Spencer. He is affiliated with Spencer Lodge, No. 126, Free and Accepted Masons, to which he transferred his membership from DeSmet Lodge, of which latter he is past master, as is he also of the lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in that place. He and his wife are valued members of the Baptist church.

Mention has been made of the fact that Mr. Masters was married in 1879, his nuptials having been solemnized, in July of that year, to Miss Margaret Gilmore, a resident of St. Charles, Minnesota, and a native of that state. They are the parents of nine children: Arthur, who is a resident of Dayton, Washington; Alexander also resides in that place; Vere H. is manager of the State Bank of Farmer; Claude is employed in a printing establishment here; and Juniata, Hazel, Genevieve, Ronald and George, Jr., remain at the parental home.

MORRISON A. TAYLOR, M. D., of Spencer, McCook county, was born in Clarksville, Butler county, Iowa, December 2, 1857, a son of James R. and Hester N. (Cook) Taylor, of whose five children he is the eldest of the three surviving. John M., a commercial traveler by vocation, is a resident of Mason City, Iowa, and Rose E. is the wife of L. M. Valentine, a prominent capitalist of that place. James R. Taylor was born in Fairfax county, Ohio, and his wife was born in Fountain county, Indiana. The ancestry in the agnatic line is of Scotch-Irish derivation, and the direct line is traced back to the youngest son of an English earl, he having left the parental home and located in Scotland, whence his descendants eventually came to America. The Cook family is of French Huguenot stock intermixed with German, the original progenitors in America having come hither from Germany and the name having been spelled Koch at that time. The parents of our subject removed from Indiana to Iowa in 1853 and they still reside in Clarksville, that state, honored pioneers of the commonwealth. Mr. Taylor was numbered among the early settlers of Butler county, where he purchased government land, receiving a warrantee deed signed by Franklin Pierce, who was then president of the United States. He paid the purchase price in gold, which was then the currency commonly in use. He continued to be actively identified with agricultural pursuits until 1902, when he retired, having now attained the venerable age of seventy-two years. He and his wife have long been prominent and zealous members of the Christian church, and he has also been influential in educational work.

Dr. Taylor secured his preliminary education in the district schools of his native county and then completed a course in the high school at Clarksville. At the age of nineteen he initiated his pedagogic career, proving a successful teacher. At the age of twenty-one he went to Decorah, Iowa, where he completed a one year's course in the institute conducted by Professor John Breckenridge, and he thereafter continued to teach for two years in the district schools of his native state. In 1881 he entered the Northern Indiana Normal School and Business University, at Valparaiso, Indiana, but shortly afterward he suffered a serious illness, which compelled him to abandon his studies and return home. He then began teaching in the public schools of different towns and cities in Iowa, continuing to advance in his profession and to receive larger salaries from year to year. In 1889 the Doctor came to South Dakota, and for three years was superintendent of the public schools of Alexandria. In the fall of 1894 he was matriculated in the medical department of the State University of Iowa, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated in the spring of 1897, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He initiated the practice of his profession in Volga City, Iowa, but shortly afterward located in Lamont, and later engaged in practice in Waterloo, that state. In May, 1903, Dr. Taylor came to Spencer and here established himself in practice, and he has already gained marked prestige in his profession and controls a representative supporting patronage, which is a due recognition of his ability and genial personality. He is a member of the state medical society and is examiner for the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Milwaukee; the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company, of Minneapolis; and the Bankers' Life Insurance Company, of Des Moines, while he also holds a similar position with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Mutual Benefit Association, and the Central Life Insurance Association of Des Moines, the Ancient Order of Pyramids, the C. C. C. and the Modern Brotherhood of America. He is a Republican in politics and his religious faith is that of the Christian church. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Ancient Order of Pyramids, the Modern Brotherhood of America and the Mutual Benefit Association.

On the 29th of September, 1898, Dr. Taylor was united in marriage to Miss Marie A. Axtell, of Strawberry Point, Iowa, and they are the parents of two children, Roba H. and Hester M.

WILLIAM T. ELLIS, postmaster at Salem, McCook county, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in Rock county, Wisconsin, on the 2d of August, 1852, a son of Thomas and Mary (Davis) Ellis, of whose six children he is the third and the eldest of the three surviving. Of his brothers it may be noted that Allen B. is engaged in the grain business at Winnipeg, Manitoba, and that Edgar A. is engaged in the same line of enterprise in Assiniboine, Canada. The parents of the subject were born in Cardiganshire, South Wales, whence the father came to America when a young man, his marriage being solemnized in Ohio, where his wife had come with her parents when a girl. Thomas Ellis was a tailor by trade, but the sedentary employment made serious inroads on his health and he was thus led to abandon this vocation and turn his attention to agricultural pursuits. About 1850 he removed from the Buckeye state to Wisconsin, where he resided until 1855, when he removed to Freeborn county, Minnesota, where he initiated his operations as a farmer, becoming one of the prosperous men of that county, where he continued to reside until his death, which occurred on the 13th of September, 1874, since which time his loved and devoted wife has made her home with the subject of this review. Thomas Ellis was a Republican in politics and his religious faith was that of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which his widow is likewise a devoted member.

William T. Ellis was reared on the homestead farm in Minnesota, and after completing the curriculum of the district school he continued his studies in the high school at Albert Lea, that state. At the age of twenty-one years he engaged in teaching in the public schools, and to this vocation he continued to give his attention at intervals for about twelve years, in Minnesota and South Dakota. In May, 1880, he came to Salem, this state, and within the same year entered a homestead claim in McCook county, at a point four miles west of Salem. He proved on this property and there continued to reside for a period of six years, developing a valuable farm. In 1888 he became associated with his brother Allen in the erection of a store building in Salem, and in the same they engaged in the hardware business, in which they continued to be associated until May, 1901. In 1897 the subject was appointed postmaster at Salem, taking charge of the office on the 1st of June, and he has ever since remained in tenure of the position. At the initiation of his regime the office was one of the fourth class, but in 1899 its business had so increased that it was brought into the class of presidential offices, so that Mr. Ellis received in that year his re-appointment directly from President McKinley. It is needless to say that he is an uncompromising Republican, and in the connection he has done effective service in behalf of the party cause in this section of the state. He served three years as a member of the board of county commissioners, having been incumbent of the office at the time of the erection of the present court house. Fraternally Mr. Ellis is identified with Fortitude Lodge, No. 73, Free and Accepted Masons; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Omega Council, No. 2, Royal and Select Masters; Constantine Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, and El Riad Temple of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls. He is also affiliated with the local organizations of the Knights of the Maccabees. He was the first eminent commander of the Constantine Commandery, Knights Templar, of Salem, and has ever manifested a deep interest in the noble fraternity of Freemasonry.

J. C. LAWVER, M. D., established in the successful practice of his profession in the town of Spencer, McCook county, was born in Bellville, Washington county, Pennsylvania, on the 2d of January, 1862, a son of Martin and Margaret (Moss) Lawver, of whose eight children all are living save one. Martin Lawver was born in Brownsville, Fayette county, Pennsylvania, as was also his father, while the grandfather was a native of Germany, whence he came to America in an early day, being numbered among the sterling pioneers of the old Keystone state. In the maternal line the Doctor traces his ancestry back to Scotch-Irish stock. His mother died in 1882, and his father now resides in Spencer, this state, having come to South Dakota about 1883 and purchasing land in McCook county, where he was actively engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1902, when he removed to Spencer, where he has since lived retired.

Dr. Lawver may be said to have inherited a certain predilection for the medical profession, since on the maternal side of the family there have been a number of able physicians, in the various generations. His uncle, John C. Moss, was the inventor of the process of photo-engraving, in which connection his name became known throughout the civilized world, while several others of the Moss family attained distinction as lawyers and educators. Dr. Lawver secured his early education in the public schools and supplemented this by a course of study in Waynesburg College, at Waynesburg, Pennsylvania. At the early age of fourteen years he purchased medical books and began to devote his attention to careful study of the same, having determined to fit himself for the medical profession. In 1882 he went to New York city to complete his medical studies. In the fall of 1884 he entered the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in New York city, where he continued his studies for the ensuing three years, being graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then began the practice of his profession at Granville, West Virginia, where he remained until the fall of 1891 when he was matriculated in the Baltimore Medical College, in the city of Baltimore, where he was graduated in the spring of 1892, having thus secured the very best of preliminary training for his exacting and responsible profession. After his graduation the Doctor continued in practice at Granville for a short time, and in the fall of the same year he came to South Dakota in search of an eligible location. In February, 1893, he established himself in practice in Spencer, where his skill, devotion and personal courtesies have been the factors which have enabled him to build up a large and representative practice. In addition to his superior medical education which fitted him for active duties, since he commenced to practice twelve years ago, he has been a liberal patron and student of most of the leading medical books and periodical publications in this country and abroad, by means of which he has successfully kept posted on the latest discoveries for the cure of human afflictions and the most skillful methods of treating them. Stacks of medical magazines and a magnificent library of the best medical works, representing a cost of hundreds of dollars, attest in the most emphatic terms to the educational qualifications of Dr. Lawver. Among the office equipments are nearly all the latest devices, implements and medical appliances used in testing the condition of the human system and for treating chronic diseases in the most scientific way. Very few country physicians have such a fine display of instruments and appliances as has Dr. Lawver, of Spencer, and this fact as well as the further fact that he possesses superior skill in handling them, is becoming widely known throughout this section of the country. During the past year the Doctor has erected a fine two-story brick building, entirely adapted to his own use, and it is his intention to ultimately utilize this building as a hospital in which he can treat cases of every description from different parts of the country, and give them hospital treatment at home equal to or better than what they now go to larger cities to obtain. He is a member of the State Medical Society and at all times keeps in touch with the advances made in both branches of his profession. In politics he renders allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally is identified with the Free and Accepted Masons and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 2d of February, 1903, Dr. Lawver was married to Miss Margaret Theis, of Farmer, this state, she being a daughter of Jacob Theis and a native of the state of South Dakota.

CHARLES P. BARBIER, who is now living practically retired in the village of Geddes, was born in Besancon, France, on the 12th of June, 1833, being a son of Frederick and Kate (Goll) Barbieri, both of whom passed their lives in la belle France, the former having devoted the major portion of his life to custom office pursuits, while he served with distinction in the French army. This worthy couple became the parents of nine children, of whom five are still living, three of the number being resident of the United States. The subject was reared to the age of sixteen in his native land, where he received good educational advantages, and at the age noted, in company with his sister Louise, he emigrated to the United States. His father also desired to come to America, but found it inexpedient thus to do, since his removal from the French domain would forfeit him the pension which he received from the government and which was adequate for his maintenance in his declining years. From New York city our subject made his way to Ohio, where he remained about ten years, being variously employed, and he then went to the state of Louisiana, where he was engaged in working along the Mississippi river for several years, finally removing to the city of St. Louis, Missouri, where he was employed during the years 1859 and 1860 by the American Fur Company, afterward being located for a time in Iowa. In 1861 he came to Dakota and secured employment with Dave Pease, a prominent Indian trader, whose headquarters were on Pease creek and Pease island, which were named in his honor. Later he engaged in chopping wood to supply the steamboats which then plied the Missouri river to points in Montana, where the gold excitement was then at its height. In 1867 he took up a homestead claim of a quarter section of land, near the river, and in what is now Charles Mix county, South Dakota. He improved this farm and retained the same in his possession until 1893, when he disposed of the property, for a consideration of one thousand dollars.

In November, 1863, Mr. Barbier was united in marriage to Miss Kate Bear, a member of the Yankton Sioux tribe of Indians, and of this union have been born six children, concerning whom we enter the following brief record: Louise is the wife of Dennis Moran, who resides in Fort Randall, being an extensive farmer; Mary is the wife of William Sweeney, who is an extensive farmer and stock grower on the Yankton reservation; Annie, who is partially crippled, remains at the parental home; Sophia resides in Geddes with her parents; Fred, who married Miss Rose Burdean, is a successful farmer of Charles Mix county; and Adele, who was the fifth in order of birth, died in early childhood. In politics Mr. Barbier gives his support to the Republican party, and he and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church. He served for two years as county commissioner, has always taken a deep interest in the advancement of the county and state and is held in high esteem by all who know him. He and his wife are the owners of two hundred and forty acres of land on the Yankton Indian reservation, and he gives a general supervision to this property as well as to his other capitalistic interests. Mr. Barbier has a vivid recollection of the memorable snowfall which visited the state in the winter of 1880-81. The precipitation began on the 7th of December and remained on the ground until April 12th. The result was the loss of much valuable live stock by starvation, and the subject himself suffered a loss of more than one hundred head of cattle at the time.

SOLOMON CLOUGH, one of the prominent and representative farmers and stock growers of Charles Mix county, is a native of the far distant Pine Tree state, having been born in Piscataquis county, Maine, on the 19th of August, 1832, so that he has now passed the span of three score years and ten. He is a son of Noah and Abigail (Oakes) Clough, who became the parents of eight children, namely: Clarissa, Bradford, Noah, Orrison, Albion, Betsy Jane, Solomon and John B. Of the children those living at the present time are Orrison, Solomon and John B. The father followed a seafaring life for seven years, after which he was engaged in agricultural pursuits during the balance of his active career. The Clough family is one whose name has long been identified with American history, the original progenitors in the new world having come hither from England about four centuries ago. When our subject was a lad of seven years his parents emigrated from Maine to the new state of Illinois, settling in Winnebago county, where they remained about four years, the father having there purchased land for about two dollars an acre. At the expiration of the period noted he disposed of his Illinois farm and settled in Grant county, Wisconsin, where he purchased government land and developed a good farm, having been one of the sterling pioneers of that section of the Badger state, where both he and his wife continued to reside until their deaths.

Solomon Clough, subject of this sketch, has a vivid recollection of the pioneer days in Wisconsin, where he passed his youth, assisting in the reclaiming and cultivation of the home farm and attending the common schools until he was about eighteen years of age. In 1854 he was united in marriage to Miss Frances Shaw, who was born in Illinois, and the one child of this union survived its birth by only a few days. The subject continued to follow agricultural pursuits in Wisconsin from the time of his marriage until 1890, when he came to South Dakota, having previously disposed of his farm in Grant county, Wisconsin, for a consideration of fifteen dollars an acre. Upon arriving in Charles Mix county he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of the valuable land in the Missouri river valley, paying for the same at the rate of six and one-quarter dollars an acre, while he also took up a homestead claim of eighty acres. He now is the owner of a fine landed estate of two hundred and forty acres, the same having excellent improvements of a permanent nature and being maintained under a high state of cultivation. In politics Mr. Clough pronounces himself a Jeffersonian Democrat and an Abraham Lincoln Republican, and he holds that the two terms are synonymous. He served for six years as treasurer of his school district and has done all in his power to forward the educational interests of the district. He and his wife are members of the R. G. Ingersoll church.

J. E. HAMAKER, one of the leading business men and honored citizens of Spencer, McCook county, comes of stanch German lineage and was born in Perry county, Pennsylvania, on the 28th of February, 1849, a son of Adam and Hannah (Grubb) Hamaker, both likewise native of that county and representatives of old and honored families of the Keystone state. Adam Hamaker was a wheelwright by trade and devoted his attention to the same for a number of years, later engaging in agricultural pursuits. In 1857 he removed with his family to Ogle county, Illinois, where he became a successful farmer and prominent citizen, his death there occurring in 1892, his wife passing away in 1901.

The subject of this sketch secured his early education in the common schools of Pennsylvania and Illinois, and as a youth he became identified with the great basic art of agriculture, to which he continued to give active allegiance until 1892. In the spring of 1880 Mr. Hamaker came to South Dakota and took up a homestead claim in McCook county and a tree claim in Miner county. He made excellent improvements on both of these properties and continued to reside on his fine homestead until 1892, when he took up his residence in Spencer. In 1894 he here established himself in the furniture and undertaking business, in which he has since continued.

In politics Mr. Hamaker is an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Democratic party. In 1891 he was elected a member of the state legislature from his district, being one of the historic "faithful twenty-five," and making a creditable record as a conscientious and able legislator. He served several years as a member of the Democratic central committee of McCook county, and has been a member of the state central committee since 1902. Fraternally he is affiliated with Spencer Lodge, No. 126, Free and Accepted Masons, and Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons.

On the 29th of December, 1881, Mr. Hamaker was united in marriage to Miss Rosa B. Jarver, of Ogle county, Illinois, no children having been born of the union.

STANLEY B. DICKINSON, M. D., is one of the able and popular young members of the medical profession in the state, being successfully engaged in practice in Watertown, and being held in high regard in professional, business and social circles. The Doctor is a native of the state of Michigan, having been born in Benton Harbor, Berrien county, on the 16th of April, 1871. He is a son of Joseph and Hannah A. (Davis) Dickinson, the former of whom was born in the state of Michigan and the latter in New York. Joseph Dickinson became one of the successful fruit growers in the famous peach belt of Michigan, was a man who commanded unequivocal confidence and esteem, and died at his home in Benton Harbor in 1888, at the age of fifty-five years, his wife being still a resident of that place. The paternal grandfather of the subject was Robert Dickinson, who was born in England, whence he came to America as a young man.

Dr. Dickinson received his early educational training in the public schools of his native place and then entered the Northern Indiana Business Institute, in Valparaiso, Indiana, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1890. The following three years he was engaged in managing a fruit farm in his native county, and at the expiration of this period entered the medical department of the State University of Illinois, established in the city of Chicago, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1897, having passed the intervening summers in further technical study, under the preceptorship of Dr. John Bell, of Benton Harbor. After his graduation, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, he held for a short time a position as interne in West Side Hospital, in Chicago, thus gaining farther and valuable clinical experience. He was thereafter engaged in the practice of his profession in Chicago for four years, at the expiration of which, in 1901, he came to South Dakota and opened an office in Watertown, where by his energy, ability, devotion to his profession and gracious personality he has built up a most gratifying and successful practice. While in Chicago he was for three years clinical instructor on diseases of children in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, while he also acted as medical examiner for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Prudential, of Newark, New Jersey, and other leading companies, as well as fraternal insurance orders. In politics the Doctor is an uncompromising Republican, taking a lively interest in the questions and issues of the hour. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally is identified with the Masonic and Pythian orders, and belongs to the District, State and American Medical Associations.

On the 26th of September, 1900, Dr. Dickinson was united in marriage, in the city of Chicago, to Miss Nellie C. Shurtleff, who was born and reared in that city, being a daughter of Barzella M. and Mary Ellen (Sibley) Shurtleff, the former of whom was born in Illinois and the latter in Vermont. Mr. Shurtleff has been for many years a prominent commission merchant in Chicago. The Sibleys are of a prominent old family of New England, and related to that redoubtable Revolutionary hero, General Israel Putnam. Laura Bridgeman, the famous blind mute, is also a relative of the family. Mrs. Dickinson is a member of the Woman's Club and is prominent in local social circles, being an accomplished musician and a woman of gracious refinement. They have one son, Robert Sibley Dickinson.

S. E. DICKINSON, M. D.

SUTTON E. YOUNG, a resident of Aurora county, is a native of the old Buckeye state, having been born in Hiram, Portage county, Ohio, on the 23d of September, 1847, a son of Erastus M. and Christina (Allyn) Young, both of whom were representatives of sterling pioneer families of Ohio. The father was born in 1813, while his death occurred in 1891, his life having been devoted to farming and to contracting and building. His wife died in 1899, at the age of seventy-seven years, and of their three children the subject of this sketch and his brother, Dr. Clark M. Young, a professor in the University of South Dakota, are now living.

Sutton E. Young was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm and his early educational training was received in the public schools, after which he continued his studies in Hiram College, Ohio, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1871. Thereafter he was for five years superintendent of the public schools of Kenton, Ohio. In the meantime he had given careful attention to the study of law, securing admission to the bar of Ohio in 1875. He served as prosecuting attorney of Hardin county, Ohio, for one term and later represented the same county in the legislature of the state. In 1881 Mr. Young came to the territory of Dakota and accepted the superintendency of the public schools of Sioux Falls, remaining in that position until 1884 and gaining a high reputation as one of the able educators of the state. Later he was successfully engaged in the practice of law in Sioux Falls. He was elected a member of the first legislature of the state of South Dakota in 1889, and had the distinction of being chosen the first speaker of the house of representatives. In 1891 he returned with his family to Ohio, where they remained four years, during which time his sons were attending college at Hiram, Ohio. He then returned to South Dakota and passed the ensuing two years in Rapid City, in the Black Hills, after which he again took up his residence in Sioux Falls, where he remained until 1901, and was then appointed superintendent of the State Reform School at Plankinton, which position he now holds. Mr. Young is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party and has been an effective worker in its cause and one of the leading campaign speakers in the state.

On the 11th of May, 1874, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Young to Miss Emma Stickney, daughter of Cleveland and Abigail (Abbott) Stickney, of Medina county, Ohio. Mrs. Young is a graduate of Oberlin College, Ohio, and has always been prominently identified with educational and philanthropic work. At the time of her marriage she was principal of the high school of Kenton, Ohio. She has also taught in the Sioux Falls high school and in the Sioux Falls College. Mrs. Young has written much on educational themes and at present has editorial charge of the Reform School Item. There are three children in the family, concerning whom we enter the following brief record: Allyn A. completed a course of study in his father's alma mater, Hiram College, in Ohio, and then entered the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, to take a post-graduate course, and received the doctor's degree in 1902. He is now professor of economics in the Western Reserve University, in the city of Cleveland, Ohio. Evan E. was educated in Hiram College and in the South Dakota State School of Mines, at Rapid City. When the First South Dakota Regiment was organized for service in the Spanish-American war he entered the regiment as second lieutenant of Company M, of Rapid City. He served with the regiment in all its campaigns in the Philippines and was promoted to a first lieutenant and made adjutant of the regiment. When the regiment returned home to be mustered out, Lieutenant Young remained in the Philippines and accepted a commission as captain in the Eleventh Cavalry, United States Volunteers. He was appointed adjutant of the regiment and served about eighteen months until the regiment was mustered out March 13, 1901. He then declined a commission as first lieutenant of cavalry, United States army, to enter the law school of the University of Wisconsin. He graduated in the law course in June, 1903, and immediately began the practice of law at Sioux Falls. Gertrude, the youngest of the three children, is now a student in the University of Wisconsin.

WILLIAM MOORE, who is one of the owners and operators of the Armour Roller Mills at Armour, Douglas county, is a native of the province of Ontario, Canada, having been born in the town of Athens, on the 10th of May, 1857, a son of Mark and Ann Moore. He received his educational discipline in the excellent schools of his native province, where he was engaged in business until the year 1881, when he came to the United States and located in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, where he resided for two years, at the expiration of which, in 1883, he came to Douglas county, South Dakota, where he established himself in the hardware and agricultural-implement business in the town of Grand View, moving to Armour later and becoming one of the early merchants of the place and building up a most successful enterprise, while he secured a firm hold on the confidence and esteem of the community, so that his business increased in scope and importance with the development and growth of the village and county. In the year 1901 Mr. Moore disposed of this business and shortly afterward purchased an interest in the Armour Roller Mills, of which he assumed the active management at the time. The output of the mills finds a ready demand in the market, and its products are sold throughout the state, the special brands of flour manufactured being the Fancy Patent, the White Rose and the Headlight, all of which have attained a high reputation through South Dakota, being held equal to any brands to be found in any section of the Union. The mills have been equipped with the most modern and improved machinery and accessories, and the most scrupulous care is given to every detail of operation, the daily capacity being for the output of fifty barrels. Through the indefatigable efforts and able administrative powers of Mr. Moore the scope of the business has been greatly expanded, and the enterprise is one which is highly appreciated and which contributes largely to the industrial prestige of the attractive town of Armour. Mr. Moore is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and is at the present time a valued member of the village council. Fraternally he is identified with Arcania Lodge, No. 97, Free and Accepted Masons, of Armour, South Dakota; Mitchell Chapter, No. 16, Royal Arch Masons, and St. Bernard Commandery, No. 11, Knights Templar, the latter two affiliations being with the respective bodies in the city of Mitchell.

On the 3d of June, 1891, Mr. Moore was united in marriage to Miss Hattie E. Long, of Cleveland, Ohio, and they are the parents of two fine sons, William A. and Lucius Wells, aged ten and seven, respectively.

BYRON P. JONES, of Prosper township, Davison county, was born on a farm in Rensselaer county, New York, on the 25th of February, 1855, being the youngest of the three children of Augustus and Margaret (Jones) Jones. His sister, Eudora, is now the wife of N. H. Dumbolton, of Rockford, Iowa, and his brother, James Irving, is a resident of Rockford, Iowa. When the subject was twelve years of age his parents removed to Wisconsin, and in 1868 they took up his residence in Floyd county, Iowa, where they passed the remainder of their lives. The educational advantages afforded the subject were somewhat limited, being confined to a somewhat irregular attendance in the common schools of New York and Wisconsin. He was thirteen years of age at the time of the removal to Iowa, and there he continued to make his home until he had attained manhood, being engaged in farm work during the intervening years.

In 1879 he came as a pioneer to South Dakota, taking up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in what is now Prosper township, Davison county, and later securing a pre-emption claim of equal area, the two tracts constituting his present farm, the major portion of which he has brought under a high state of cultivation, while he has erected a substantial dwelling and other good buildings, constructed fences about the place and otherwise brought it up to a model status. He is a Republican in politics and is known as a loyal and public-spirited citizen. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and both he and his wife are valued members of the Presbyterian church, in whose work they take a zealous interest.

On the 21st of March, 1881, Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Huldah Emma Colby, who was born and reared in Illinois and who was a resident of Rockford county, Iowa, at the time of her marriage, being a daughter of Eben and Mary Colby. Of this union have been born five children, all of whom are living, namely: Margie, Blanche, May, Ethel and Ella.

OLIVER P. AULD, one of the representative business men of Plankinton, Aurora county, is a native of the city of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, where he was born on the 20th of March, 1855, and when he was a child of two years his parents removed westward to Benton county, Iowa, where he was reared to maturity, his educational training having been received in the public schools of Iowa and Illinois. At the age of seventeen years he left school and initiated his independent career, having been engaged in agricultural pursuits for a few years thereafter in Iowa, after which he engaged in the mercantile business in Vinton, that state, conducting the enterprise for three years, at the expiration of which, in 1883, he came to the territory of Dakota and took up his residence in Plankinton, Aurora county, where he established a general mercantile business, building up an excellent trade and devoting his attention to the same for four years. He then disposed of his interests in the line and engaged in the abstract business, in which he has ever since continued, having a representative support and being thoroughly equipped for the facile handling of all work involved, while he is known as an expert in the line and as one of the best judges of realty values in this section of the state. In the real-estate department of his business he has handled most valuable properties in various sections of the state, showing marked discrimination in his operations and being recognized as one of the reliable and straightforward real-estate men of the state, while upon his books are always to be found details in regard to most desirable investments. He is at the present time rendering effective service as receiver of the Bank of Plankinton, which went into liquidation in 1900. In politics he is stanchly aligned in support of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose interests he has been an active worker, having frequently been a delegate to county and state conventions. For ten years he was chairman of the board of county commissioners, while for four years he was incumbent of the office of president of the village council, ably managing and directing the executive department of the municipal government, while he has also held other village offices, ever manifesting a marked loyalty and public spirit and being one of the representative citizens of the county. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

On the 4th of October, 1883, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Auld to Miss Nellie Hoon, of Vinton, Iowa, and they are the parents of four children, Clarence, Leslie, Glenn and Nellie.

GEORGE T. CHANDLER, one of the progressive agriculturists and stock growers of Douglas county, was born in Fayette county, Ohio, on the 1st of November, 1847, being a son of Howell and Martha (Pace) Chandler. Both parents were born in Virginia, being representatives of old and prominent families of the Old Dominion state. Representatives in both the paternal and maternal lines took part in the war of the Revolution, as well as that of 1812, in which latter the paternal grandfather of the subject served as quartermaster. Two of the brothers of the subject were valiant defenders of the Union in the war of the Rebellion. William S. went to the front as a member of the Second Massachusetts Cavalry, while H. T. was a member of Company A, Thirty-fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, while five cousins were members of the Third Iowa Cavalry during the same great conflict through which the Union was preserved. The honored father of Mr. Reed, who was a miller by profession, died in 1898, aged eighty years, while the mother died in 1881, aged sixty-seven years.

George T. Chandler was a child of eight years at the time when his parents removed from Ohio to Iowa, locating on a farm in Decatur county, where he received his educational training in the public schools, continuing his studies until he had attained the age of eighteen years, after which he devoted his attention to the management of a portion of his father's farm until 1880, when he secured a farm of his own in Decatur county, Iowa, where he continued to reside until 1882, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and became one of the pioneers of Douglas county. Here he filed claim to a quarter section, where he has since made his home, having made excellent improvements, erecting good buildings, and he has brought the place under a high state of cultivation, his landed estate in the county now comprising one hundred and sixty acres, while in addition to securing large yields of the cereals and other products commonly raised in this section he devotes no little attention to the breeding and raising of high-grade cattle, swine and horses. He is alert and progressive in his business methods and has attained marked success, while he holds the confidence and esteem of the people of the community in which he has so long made his home.

In politics he is an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and has been an active worker in its behalf, having been a potent factor in securing to the same noteworthy victories in Douglas county, though he has never been ambitious for personal preferment in a political way. He has served, however, for six years as a member of the school board of his district, and is always relied upon to lend his aid and influence in support of all measures tending to advance the general welfare. He is a member of Armour Lodge, No. 25, Knights of Pythias, at Armour, being past chancellor of the same, while he has represented his lodge as delegate to the grand lodge of the state. He is also identified with the Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 25th of October, 1868, Mr. Chandler was united in marriage to Miss Mary Ellen Chambers, who was born in Jefferson county, Iowa, on the 2d of December, 1847, being a daughter of Daniel and Eliza (Breniman) Chambers, her father having been a pioneer farmer of the county mentioned. He now resides in Kansas, having attained the patriarchal age of eighty-seven years, and having been afflicted with blindness for the past fifteen years. His devoted wife was summoned into eternal rest in 1894, at the age of seventy-eight years. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler are the parents of four children, all of whom remain at the parental home, namely: Marion Austin, Thomas M., Howell Francis and Cora E.

JAMES GURNAL JONES, one of the pioneers of Charles Mix county, is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born on a farm in Oneida county, New York, on the 21st of April, 1851, a son of William J. and Ann (Wheldon) Jones. The grandparents of the subject were born in Wales, whence they emigrated to the United States about the year 1812, locating in the state of New York, where they passed the remainder of their lives. The father of our subject was born in Oneida county, New York, and became a prominent farmer near Utica, Oneida county, where he died in 1877. James G. Jones received his early educational discipline in the common schools and in an academy at Rome, New York, while he has ever been a wide reader and student of affairs, and is a man of broad and exact information, having supplemented his early training by systematic personal application. He continued to assist in the work of the home farm until he had attained the age of sixteen years, when, in 1867, he gave rein to his spirit of adventure and came to the west, passing five years in Texas and the Indian territory and gaining much experience in regard to life on the frontier. In 1873 he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and settled in Charles Mix county. In 1879, when the county was organized, Governor Howard appointed Mr. Jones county commissioner, while in the first popular election, in the fall of the same year, he was elected register of deeds of the county. He was re-elected in 1880, serving for a total of three years, as the first incumbent of this office. Four years later he was chosen representative of his county in the first constitutional convention of the south half of the territory of Dakota, but declined to serve, said convention having been held at Sioux Falls. In 1887 he was elected a member of the territorial legislature, serving with marked ability and being chosen as his own successor two years later. Prior to the organization of Charles Mix county Mr. Jones and Major Thad S. Clarkson, ex-commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, were rival candidates for the territorial legislature, and the vote proved to be a tie. Under these conditions Brule county, which gave Mr. Jones a majority, was conveniently thrown out on a technical pretext and his defeat was thus compassed, this being in the year 1876.

The subject was a staunch supporter of the Republican party until the organization of the Populist party, when he transferred his allegiance to the same, and he has ever since been one of the ablest and most enthusiastic advocates of its cause in the state, while he has been an effective worker in the promotion of its interests. In 1893 Mr. Jones was the nominee of his party for the state senate, but met defeat by a narrow margin. In 1896 he was elected enrolling and engrossing clerk of the house of representatives. In 1898 he was again the nominee of his party for the state senate, and at this time a gratifying majority was rolled up in his favor, and he proved an able and valued member of this body. In 1900 he was one of the delegates-at-large from this state to the People's party national convention, at Sioux Falls, which nominated Bryan for the presidency and Towne for the vice-presidency. Mr. Jones is a man of strong individuality and marked intellectuality, being a close student of the political and economic questions of the hour and being ever fortified in his convictions. He is the owner of a fine landed estate of three hundred and twenty acres, in the Missouri valley district of the county, and is one of the successful farmers and stock growers of this section. Fraternally he is identified with Doric Lodge, No. 93, Free and Accepted Masons, at Platte, which village is fourteen miles distant from his fine farm home.

On the 15th of July, 1877, Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Winifred Mulleague, who was born in County Roscommon, Ireland, whence she came to America at the age of thirteen years and established her home with her brothers and sisters in Bon Homme county, South Dakota, where she was reared to maturity. As before noted, she was the first white woman to settle in Charles Mix county, where she resided almost two years with her husband without seeing a person of her sex and race, and her eldest child was the first white child born in the county. Mr. and Mrs. Jones are the parents of eight children, all of whom have been accorded the best possible educational advantages, their names, in order of birth, being as follows: Whitfield, William James, Mary Laura, Gordon Gurnal, Winifred Ann, Roscoe Conkling, Francis, Wheldon and Emma Lela. Four of the children are successful and popular teachers in the public schools of the county, namely: Whitfield, Mary L., Gordon G. and William J.

A. SHERIN, one of the representative citizens of Codrington county, being engaged in the practice of law in Watertown and being also the editor and publisher of the Watertown Times, was born in Victoria county, province of Ontario, Canada, on the 11th of March, 1857, and is a son of Henry and Ann Sherin, both of whom were born in Ireland, whence they came to Canada with their respective parents when they were young. The father of the subject became a successful farmer and both he and his wife died in Canada.

A. Sherin, the subject of this review passed the first sixteen years of his life on the home farm, and received a common-school education, completing his studies in the schools at Branchton, Ontario. He early manifested a predilection for mechanical pursuits and became a skilled carpenter, to which line of work he devoted his attention for eight years after leaving the parental roof. In 1881 he came to what is now the state of South Dakota, and in the following year took up a pre-emption claim near the village of Blunt, Hughes county. In 1884 he removed to Britton, the capital of Marshall county, and there engaged in the practice of law, for which he had prepared himself by careful preliminary study, being duly admitted to the bar of the territory. He built up an excellent professional business and there continued in practice until 1899, when he came to Watertown, where he has since been engaged in general practice. He was editor and publisher of the Britton Sentinel from 1891 until his removal to Watertown, and here he has since published and edited the Watertown Times, one of the ably conducted and popular weekly newspapers of the state. Mr. Sherin served as county judge in Marshall county during the years 1895-6, and during the ensuing two years was state's attorney of that county. He is a Populist in his political faith and adherence, and has been a prominent and influential figure in the ranks of the same in South Dakota, having done most effective service in the party cause. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is identified with the Modern Brotherhood of America, of which he served as secretary in the local organization for two years.

In Galt, Ontario, in the year 1879, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Sherin to Miss Sarah J. Copeland, and of their five children four are living. Edwin J. was born in 1880; Burtie was born in 1881 and died in 1897; Arthur was born in 1883; Harry in 1887 and Evaline in 1894.

ALONZO J. BUFFALOE, M. D., established in the successful practice of his profession in the attractive little city of Alexandria, Hanson county, is a native of the fine old state of North Carolina, having been born in Raleigh, Wake county, and being the son of B. B. and Cornelia Buffaloe, representatives of old and honored southern families. The father is devoting his life to agriculture and is a man of prominence and influence in his community. Dr. Buffaloe was accorded excellent educational advantages in his youthful days, having secured his preliminary discipline in the common schools of his native state and having entered Wake Forest College, where he received his literary training. In the meanwhile he had determined to prepare himself for the noble profession to which he is now giving his attention, and was matriculated in that celebrated technical institution of the national metropolis, Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in New York city, being there graduated in 1886 and receiving his coveted degree of Doctor of Medicine. After his graduation, wishing to be more thoroughly equipped for the arduous duties of his chosen profession, he took special courses in chemistry, physical diagnosis, surgery and army and navy dressings in Bellevue and Mount Sinai Hospitals. He then located in the city of Raleigh, North Carolina, determined to win his professional spurs in his native state, and there he initiated the active practice of medicine and surgery, being for some time connected with the city hospital, where he gained still further clinical experience of the most valuable order. He continued to be there engaged in practice until 1901. In 1895 he availed himself for a while of the advantages of the post-graduate course at the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, Maryland. Dr. Buffaloe came to South Dakota in April, 1901, and finally became impressed with the attractions of Alexandria and decided to establish himself here. He has no reason to regret his choice, for he has met a most favorable reception, both professionally and socially, and has built up a gratifying practice.

WILLIAM HENRY STOKES was born in the town of Porter, Rock county, Wisconsin, on the 16th of May, 1845, being the son of Charles and Anna E. (Kimble) Stokes, the former of whom was born in Axbridge, Somersetshire, England, in 1812, while the latter was a native of Saugerties, New York, being of English and Dutch lineage. He was educated in the district schools in Wisconsin until the age of nineteen, finishing with one term in a select school at Mitchell, Mitchell county, Iowa. His early life was spent on the farm. His business life began May 16, 1866. He was associated with his brothers in the sawmill and lumber business until the spring of 1872. From 1872 until the present time, 1904, he has been interested with various parties in the milling business, ten years in Janesville, Waseca county, Minnesota, and the remainder of the time up to the present date in the milling and grain business at Watertown, South Dakota. At present he is president and manager of the W. H. Stokes Milling Company, while his son-in-law, F. E. Hawley, is the secretary and treasurer.

The old milling plant, built in 1882 at Watertown, South Dakota, was destroyed by fire March 13, 1901, and the summer following the fire the present substantial mill and elevator plant was erected on the same site, business being resumed on December 19, 1901. The W. H. Stokes Milling Company's mill and elevator are decidedly the largest and most modern in the state. The brick elevator and steel tanks have a capacity of one hundred and forty thousand bushels and are practically fireproof. The subject of this sketch has also been largely interested in farming, now owning and controlling something over five thousand acres of land, most of which is in Codrington county, South Dakota.

W. H. Stokes is recognized as one of the leading business men of the state and at the present time is found worthy of having his name enrolled in the Financial Red Book of America for 1903.

Mr. Stokes was married to Miss Elsie Minerva Grout on December 23, 1872. She was born at York, Wisconsin, September 18, 1853, being the daughter of Leroy and Cordelia (Flower) Grout, the former of whom was born at Vermont and the latter in the state of New York. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Stokes. Their names are: Ella Glencora, wife of F. E. Hawley; Gladys May, Maud Leonore, Alice Wilhelmena, Elsie Minerva, William Henry, Jr., Louisa Alcott, Anna Kimble and Philip Douglas, all of whom are now living. Mr. and Mrs. Stokes and six of their children are members of the Congregational church. Mr. Stokes is a member of the Masonic fraternity, being affiliated with the Kampeska Lodge, No. 13, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Watertown Chapter, No. 12, Royal Arch Masons, and Watertown Commandery, No. 7, Knights Templar. He served as eminent commander of the commandery for two years.

Politically Mr. Stokes has always been a Republican, although he has never aspired to any political office or influence.

CLINTON D. HOSKIN, who is the present popular and able incumbent of the office of register of deeds of Hand county, claims the fine old Buckeye state as the place of his nativity, having been born in the county of Ashtabula, Ohio, on the 29th of October, 1867, and being a son of Hilan J. and Nancy (George) Hoskin, who were likewise born in that state. The subject is the elder of their two children, his sister Maud being now the wife of A. R. Hannum, of Hand county, South Dakota, while his parents are residents of Huron, South Dakota. When Clinton D. was but two years of age his parents removed to Wheatland, Clinton county, Iowa, where his father engaged in teaming, and seven years later they removed to Buena Vista county, that state, where the father turned his attention to farming. The subject secured his educational training in the public schools of the Hawkeye state, where he was reared to maturity, and in 1884, at the age of sixteen years, he came to Hand county, South Dakota, where his father took up a homestead claim, in Gilbert township, and here he turned his attention to farming, in which he was engaged until his election to his present office.

Mr. Hoskin has given a staunch allegiance to the Republican party from the time of attaining his majority, has evinced a lively interest in public affairs of a local nature and been a prominent worker in the party cause. He served as treasurer of his school district for a period of thirteen years, and in the fall of 1902 was elected to the office of register of deeds of Hand county, for a term of two years, assuming his official functions in January, 1903. He is well known in the county, and his personal popularity is attested by his having been chosen to fill his present office. Fraternally he is identified with St. Lawrence Lodge, Ancient Order of United Workmen, in St. Lawrence.

On the 29th of October, 1889, Mr. Hoskin was united in marriage to Miss Florence A. Scovill, daughter of B. P. Scovill, a prominent farmer of this county. She was born in Mason county, Illinois, and was twelve years of age at the time of her parents' removal to South Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Hoskin have four children, Mabel I., Hilan J., Mina F. and Benjamin P.

NICK KIRSCH, a farmer and stock raiser of Codington county, whose homestead lies at Gardner, about five miles northeast of Watertown, is a native of Germany, born in Luxembourg on February 9, 1859. He is one of a family of six children, two sons and four daughters, whose parents were Michael and Maggie Kirsch, natives of Luxembourg, as were the antecedents of both branches of the family for many generations. Michael Kirsch, in 1880, brought his family to the United States and settled in Minnesota, where he lived until 1882, at which time he removed to Codington county, South Dakota, his present place of residence.

The subject of this review grew to young manhood in his native country, received a fair education in the public schools and in 1880 accompanied his parents to the new world, remaining with them until their removal to Dakota. In 1882 he took up a homestead in Kreuzberg township, Codington county, and after residing on the same for a period of five years, sold out and purchased his present beautiful place in Elmira township, consisting of five hundred and sixty acres of fine land, admirably situated for agricultural and stock purposes. In addition to farming, which he carries on very successfully, especially the raising of grains, Mr. Kirsch devotes considerable attention to live stock and purposes ultimately to make the latter his principal business. He now has quite a herd of cattle, to which he is making additions as rapidly as possible, also owns a number of valuable sheep and horses and the time is not far distant when he will come to the front as one of the leading stockmen in this section of the state. In addition to his stock and agricultural interests he runs an elevator at Gardner, near his place, and his operations as a buyer and shipper of grain have been eminently successful, as the steady growth of his business abundantly attests.

Mr. Kirsch is one of the progressive German-American citizens of Codington county and his enterprising spirit has done much for the material advancement of the community in which he resides. While retaining warm feelings and tender recollections of the fatherland, he is a loyal citizen of his adopted country and a great admirer of its laws and institutions.

Mr. Kirsch was married November 17, 1887, to Miss Maggie Pfeil, of Minnesota, daughter of Christopher and Elizabeth Pfeil, natives of Germany. The parents of Mrs. Kirsch came to the United States a number of years ago and for some time lived in St. Charles, Minnesota, at which place the mother died on January 27, 1902. The father still lives at St. Charles. They reared a family of eleven children, all but one living. Mr. and Mrs. Kirsch have five bright, interesting children, whose names are as follows: Freddie N., Elizabeth S., Eddie D., Lena G. and Christopher G.

GEORGE C. OSTRANDER comes of sturdy old Dutch stock and traces his family history to the early settlement of the Mohawk valley, New York. His great-grandfather, William Ostrander, was one of the Dutch pioneers of Herkimer county, that state, took an active part in the settlement and development of the valley and became an influential factor in the affairs of the community which he assisted to found. His son, William, was a blacksmith by trade, and a man of sturdy character and generous impulses, who carried to successful completion any undertaking to which he addressed himself. He married when a young man and reared a family, representatives of which still live in Herkimer and neighboring counties of New York, while others may be found in different states of the Union, principally in the west, as the pioneer spirit has long been a marked characteristic of the family. A son of the second William, also William by name, was born in New York and there married Miss Abigail D. Eddy, whose antecedents were also among the early settlers of the Empire state. William and Abigail spent the greater part of their lives in the city of Watertown, New York, where for over twenty years the former was engaged in mercantile pursuits, and to them was born one son, the gentleman whose name furnishes the caption of this review.

George C. Ostrander was born October 22, 1858, in Watertown, New York, and received his educational training in the public schools of that city. At an early age he entered his father's store where he received a practical commercial training and assisted in conducting the business, until about twenty years old, when he abandoned mercantile life for the purpose of learning telegraphy. After becoming proficient in that calling he engaged with the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad as operator and station agent, which position he held until 1882, when he resigned to become a salesman for the wholesale merchant tailoring firm of Wiggins & Goodale at Watertown. After remaining with the above house for a period of four years, he resigned his place and in 1886 came to Codington county, South Dakota, bringing forty-four head of milch cows with the object in view of starting a dairy and engaging in the general stock business. In partnership with his father, Mr. Ostrander purchased a fine tract of farm and grazing land, about four and a half miles east of Watertown, in Elmira township, where he now lives, and here successfully carried out his intentions by starting a dairy which from the beginning more than met his most sanguine expectations. In connection with the dairy he also established a creamery, the first enterprise of the kind in the state, and this also proved a remunerative undertaking as it soon had an extensive patronage and filled a long-felt want in the community. After conducting these lines of business for a few years and realizing therefrom handsome profits, he discontinued dairying and turned his attention to raising grain. Convinced that larger returns could be realized from wool than from agriculture, Mr. Ostrander subsequently discontinued tilling the soil and engaged in the sheep business, which he now follows with success and financial profit, being at this time one of the largest and most successful sheep raisers in Codington county. He is now running about eight hundred grade Shropshires, which breed he finds best suited to the country and by far the most remunerative, all things considered; and in addition to the four hundred acres comprising his own farm he controls about six hundred acres of fine grazing land in the vicinity in which he conducts his large and rapidly growing business.

Mr. Ostrander inherits the energy and progressive spirit for which his family has long been distinguished and his industry and enterprise have made him an influential factor in the business affairs and public concerns of his adopted county. He worthily upholds an honored ancestral name, is a man of wide intelligence, sound judgment and unimpeachable integrity and the high esteem in which he is held by his fellow citizens shows him the possessor of those sterling qualities of head and heart that beget confidence and retain warm and personal friendships. In politics he supports the Republican party and, while not a partisan, still less an office seeker, he was elected in 1902 a member of the board of county commissioners, which responsible position he worthily holds.

The domestic life of Mr. Ostrander dates from 1879, on October 22d of which year, in Watertown, New York, was solemnized his marriage with Miss Martha P. Heintzelman, who has borne him two children, Mabel and William D. Mr. Ostrander is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen of Watertown. His father is a member of the home circle at this time, his mother having died three years ago.

THORNTON N. BABCOCK, one of the prominent and successful farmers and stock growers of Codington county, was born on the parental homestead, Winona county, Minnesota, on the 29th of December, 1865, and is a son of George P. and Antoinette (Newcomb) Babcock, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in Massachusetts, both families having long been identified with the annals of American history. George P. was a carpenter and cabinetmaker by trade, and followed the same as a vocation for many years, having come to Minnesota in the pioneer days and having there maintained his residence until 1880, when he removed to South Dakota, taking up land in Codington county and there improving a good farm. He died at Tracy, Minnesota, on the 1st of March, 1892, while enroute home from Minneapolis, at the age of sixty-four years. In politics he was a staunch Republican. His widow was a devoted member of the Presbyterian church, her death having occurred on the 9th of June, 1899, at the age of seventy years. They became the parents of four sons and four daughters, all of whom are living except the eldest, Ada, wife of J. J. Greer, who died at the age of forty years. The others are Libbie M., unmarried; Charley, a farmer of Brookings county; Lillian, wife of A. M. Nash, of Tracy, Minnesota, a conductor on the Northwestern Railroad; Willie C., of Seattle, Washington, a conductor on the Northern Pacific Railroad; Hobart A., county clerk at Watertown; and Metta, wife of J. E. McKoane, of Minot, North Dakota, in the abstract and real-estate business, and Thornton.

The subject of this sketch received his early educational training in the public schools of Lanesboro, Fillmore county, Minnesota, where he completed a course in the high school. In 1880, at the age of fourteen years, he came to South Dakota, where he gave his attention to farm work and to teaching in the district schools until 1883. Thereafter he remained on his father's farm, taking charge of the same after the death of the latter and still residing on the homestead, which now comprises one hundred and sixty acres, and which is located in Fuller township, eight miles northwest of Watertown, two miles north of Lake Kampeska. In addition to the homestead Mr. Babcock controls and utilizes about five hundred acres, principally Indian-reservation land, and in all he has about five hundred acres under effective cultivation and devoted to diversified agriculture, while he also gives special attention to the raising of live stock, in which line he has gained marked precedence and met with distinctive success. His cattle are of high grade, and he has some pure-bred shorthorn stock in the line, while he also breeds the best type of Percheron and road horses and Berkshire hogs. He is associated with others in the ownership of a fine thoroughbred Percheron stallion, of which he has the management. In politics Mr. Babcock gives an unfaltering allegiance to the Republican party, and he served for two terms as clerk of his township, while he has been a valued member of the school board for twelve years. He is a Methodist, while his wife belongs to the Baptist church. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 3d of January, 1899, Mr. Babcock was united in marriage to Miss Carlotta A. Hewitt, a daughter of C. P. and Arminta (Straub) Hewitt, of Watertown, her birth having occurred in Calamus, Clinton county, Iowa. Of this union have been born two children, Bruce A. and Doris.

AUGUSTUS C. GIESE, farmer, stock raiser and representative citizen of Elmira township, Codington county, is a native of Sauk county, Wisconsin, where his birth occurred on the 3d day of February, 1869. His parents, John M. and Albertina (Yerkley) Giese, natives of Germany, came to the United States a number of years ago and after residing for some time in Wisconsin came, in the fall of 1879, to Codington county, being among the early settlers of what is now the township of Rauville. They located on government land which they entered, improved a good farm and the elder Giese is now among the prosperous and well-to-do men of the community, now living in Watertown.

Augustus C. Giese was a lad of ten years when his parents came to Dakota and from that age to the present has been a resident of Codington county, growing with the country's growth, taking an active part in its development, and for some years he has been an influential factor in the agricultural and live-stock interests of Elmira township. He received his elementary education in his native state and for several years after coming to Dakota pursued his studies in the public schools, the meanwhile assisting his father in improving the latter's homestead and contributing his full share to the support of the family. Reared under wholesome discipline and healthful influence, he grew up strong in body and with an independence of mind which early led him to rely upon himself, and while still a mere lad he matured plans for his future course of action. After remaining under the parental roof until reaching the years of young manhood, he started out to make his own way in the world and being so fortunate as to have his lot cast in a land of opportunities, it was not long until he secured a desirable tract of land. He finally decided upon the place in Elmira township on which he now lives, a beautiful tract containing a half section, which for stock-raising and general agricultural purposes will compare favorably with any like number of acres in the county. He has greatly improved his land and brought it to a high state of cultivation, and, in addition to tilling the soil, he now has a substantial start in live stock, owning a number of cattle, sheep and horses, with most favorable prospects of adding to his flocks and herds as well as of increasing his acreage in the no distant future. He has erected a large barn and has a desirable location for a comfortable residence. Mr. Giese is a young man of well-defined purposes, and his industry and energy have already won him a competence of sufficient magnitude to place him in comfortable circumstances.

On September 13, 1894, Mr. Giese was united in marriage with Miss Emma Barha, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. August Barha, were among the early settlers of Codington county. This marriage has resulted in the birth of six children, namely: Herman; Henry died July 13, 1902, in his fourth year; Robert, Mabel and an infant that died unnamed. Mr. and Mrs. Giese are members of the Lutheran church, belonging to the congregation worshipping at Watertown.

LAURENCE J. O'TOOLE, one of the representative farmers and stock growers of Codington county, is a native of the fair Emerald Isle, having been born on the 16th of June, 1860, and being a son of John and Mary (Dowling) O'Toole, who were born and reared in Ireland. The father was there engaged in farming until his death. The subject and other members of the family came to America in 1871, at which time he was a lad of about eleven years, his early educational discipline having been secured in his native land. He was the youngest of the three sons and two daughters in the family, and of that number three are living at the present time. His brother Patrick had previously come to the United States, and was a member of Corrigan's Brigade, of New York, during the Civil war, in which he sacrificed his life, being killed in battle. Upon coming to the new world the subject and the other members of the family located in New York, where he was reared to manhood, in the meanwhile continuing his educational work in the public schools, while in 1877 he came west and took up his abode in the home of an aunt in Winona county, Minnesota, where he also attended school, remaining with his aunt until 1880, when he came to South Dakota.

Laurence was twenty years of age at the time of casting his lot with what is now the state of South Dakota. In 1881 he took up one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Codington county, the same constituting a portion of his present farm. He set himself vigorously to the work of improving his land and placing it under cultivation, and through energy and good management he has attained a position of independence, being one of the well-to-do farmers of this section, while he has ever maintained a strong hold on popular confidence and esteem in the community. He gives his earnest attention to diversified agriculture and to the raising of high-grade live stock. In politics his support is given to the Republican party, and he has taken an active part in public affairs of a local nature, while he has been called upon to serve in various positions of trust and responsibility, including the office of township clerk and that of member of the board of supervisors, while for the past eighteen years he has been postmaster of Esterly. He is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He has improved his ranch with a commodious and comfortable residence and other excellent buildings, while the entire place gives unmistakable evidence of thrift and prosperity.

On the 16th of February, 1885, Mr. O'Toole was united in marriage to Miss Della S. Grammond, who was born and reared in Illinois, being a daughter of Oliver and Sarah (Barslo) Grammond, both of whom were of French ancestry, but born in Canada. Mr. and Mrs. O'Toole have eight children, namely: Marie Nellie, John L., Edward J., Laurence H., Earl L., Clarence C., Samuel C. and Della M.

JOSEPH P. LEONARD, one of the honored residents of Lake township, Codington county, is a native of Niagara county, New York, where he was born on the 10th of January, 1858, being a son of Joseph L. and Sophia A. (Chidester) Leonard, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in Canada, she being of French descent. The father of the subject was engaged in farming in New York until 1860, when he came west to Minnesota, where he passed the remainder of his life, dying in St. Charles, that state, on the 31st of March, 1895, at the age of seventy-four years, while his widow still maintains her home in that place. Of their seven children five are living, the other two having died in infancy.

The subject of this sketch passed his boyhood days in Minnesota, having been a child of about two years at the time of his parents' removal to the west, and his educational advantages were those afforded in the excellent public schools of the town of St. Charles. In the meanwhile he assisted in the work of the home farm, leaving school at the age of twenty years, and he continued to be thus identified with agricultural pursuits in Minnesota until 1878, when, as a young man of twenty years, he came to the territory of Dakota, taking up government land in Codington county, where he now lives, and thus becoming one of the pioneers of this section of South Dakota. He entered claim to a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres and also took up a tree claim of equal area, adjoining, while he is today the owner of a finely improved and well-cultivated ranch of four hundred acres. He raises the various cereals best adapted to the soil and climate, his entire tract of land being available for cultivation, and also gives no little attention to the raising of cattle and swine of excellent grade. In politics he accords support to the Democratic party, taking a public-spirited interest in local affairs, but never seeking official preferment. Fraternally he is identified with the lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of Pyramids in Watertown.

On the 4th of December, 1881, Mr. Leonard was united in marriage to Miss Sarah A. Williams, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, being a daughter of John and Lavina (Sheldon) Williams, who were born in New York, whence they removed to Wisconsin in an early day. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard became the parents of five children, four of whom are living, while they still remain at the parental home, namely: Lillian B., Herbert E., Gladys P. and Aubrey C. Charles P., the third in order of birth, died on the 25th of February, 1895, at the age of seven years.

JOHN H. KING, one of the honored pioneers of Codington county, being now one of the prominent citizens of Watertown, was born in Troy, New York, on the 10th of January, 1850, and is a son of Michael and Catherine (Holland) King, both of whom were born in Ireland. The father of the subject was a wheelwright by trade, but was for many years engaged in mercantile pursuits in the city of Troy, being one of the prominent and public-spirited citizens of the place and one who commanded unqualified esteem in the community. There both he and his wife continued to reside until their death. They became the parents of two sons and three daughters, and of the number one of the sons and one of the daughters are now deceased.

The subject was reared to maturity in his native place, and there received the advantages of the public schools and also of a preparatory collegiate institution, in which he continued his studies until he had attained the age of twenty years. As a young man he there engaged in the buying and shipping of country produce, in which line of enterprise he met with excellent success. In 1882 he came to South Dakota and took up government land in what is now Eden township, in the western part of Codington county, and there developed a valuable farm, continuing to devote his attention to agriculture and stock raising until 1893, having in the meanwhile become the owner of a fine landed estate of nine hundred acres. In the year mentioned he sold four hundred acres and removed to Watertown, where he has since been prominently engaged in the real-estate business, owning a considerable amount of residence property, as well as farming lands in various parts of the county, while he also controls many properties which he handles for others. In September, 1904, in company with B. H. Cartford, he purchased a general store at South Shore and to this has since devoted his attention, enjoying a lucrative and satisfactory trade. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and has long taken an active part in forwarding its cause in his county. He was justice of the peace in Eden township from its organization until he removed from it. In 1890 he was elected to represent his county in the state legislature, in which he served one term, during the third session, while he has also held various school offices, doing all in his power to advance the interests of popular education. At the time of his locating in Eden township there were but four other families settled within its borders. He was among the number who assisted in adopting the name of the township, and had the privilege of bearing the result of the selection to the county seat. He assisted in the erection of the first schoolhouse in the township, and in all other matters proved himself progressive and public-spirited, while he has at all times commanded the unqualified esteem of the people of the county in which he has so long maintained his home. He and his wife are members of the Catholic church, and fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 17th of March, 1877, Mr. King was married to Miss Anna Nisbet, of Lee, New York, where she was reared and educated, being a daughter of William and Catherine (Cox) Nisbet, both of whom were born in the state of Massachusetts. Mr. and Mrs. King have six children, concerning whom we offer the following brief data in conclusion of this sketch: Lillian M. is the wife of Frederick H. Elfring, of Watertown, and the other children still remain beneath the home roof, their names, in order of birth, being as follows: Nora, Katherine, C. Stanley, Frances C. and A. Iona.

PETER PHILP.—Prominent among the representative citizens and honored officials of Codington county is the well-known and widely respected gentleman whose name introduces this review. Peter Philp, farmer and for four terms county commissioner, is a native of Scotland and inherits in a marked degree the sterling qualities of head and heart for which his sturdy nationality has for centuries been distinguished. His father, James Philp, a teamster by occupation, met with an accidental death when the subject was but one and a half years old; his mother, whose maiden name was Catherine Wilson, subsequently remarried and lived to a very old age, bearing her second husband one daughter, Peter being the only issue of her first marriage.

Peter Philp was born in Thronton, Fifeshire, Scotland, on August 27, 1838. After securing a good education in the schools of his native land he learned the trade of iron moulding and followed the same in various parts of Scotland until about 1875 or 1876, from which time until his removal to America, in 1880, he followed agricultural pursuits. June 19, 1866, he contracted a matrimonial alliance with Elizabeth Anderson, of Fifeshire, daughter of Robert and Margaret (Deas) Anderson, and in 1880, as stated above, he brought his family to America, making his way direct to Codington county, South Dakota, and entering several hundred acres of land in what is now the township of Waverly. Mr. Philp reached his new home in August of the above year and during the ensuing fall he put up a house and as best he could prepared for the winter that was soon to follow. The winter of 1880-81 is remembered as the most severe ever known and the vicissitudes, hardships and sufferings of the settlers during that season of awful cold, piercing winds and frightful blizzards, cannot be described by either tongue or pen. Mr. Philp's stock of provisions was exhausted long before the terrible winter ended, and for weeks at a time the only food of the family consisted of wheat ground to the consistency of course flour in a coffee-mill. To keep from freezing after their fuel was gone, they had recourse to hay, and to make this last as long as possible, only small quantities were burned at a time, the members of the family huddling closely around the fire so as to utilize every particle of the precious heat.

After this trying experience, a more favorable season dawned and from that time forward matters progressed favorably with the pioneer family. Mr. Philp improved his land, brought it to a high state of cultivation and in addition to agriculture devoted considerable attention to live stock until in due time he became one of the leading stock raisers in the county, as well as one of its most prosperous men in other lines of activity. He has taken a lively interest in public affairs ever since coming to the state, and is now on his fourth term as county commissioner, having been first elected a member of the board in the year 1900. He has held the office of school treasurer for over twenty-two years, besides serving two terms as township clerk, having pointedly refused to be a candidate a third time for the latter position. Mr. Philp is a zealous Republican and since arriving in Codington county, twenty-three years ago, his ability as an organizer and his success as a campaigner have made him one of the party leaders in this section of the state. His services on the central committee have been greatly appreciated and the success of the Republican ticket in a number of local elections has been largely due to his effective and thorough work. By close attention to business and successful management, he has succeeded in accumulating a handsome competence and recently he disposed of the greater part of his landed property and retired from active life.

Mr. Philp was made a Mason in Scotland in 1864 and ever since his initiation into the order he has been one of its most earnest and zealous members. In his native land he subscribed to the Presbyterian creed and for a number of years was active in the church, having risen to the position of elder and superintendent of the Sunday school. Since coming to this country, however, he attended the Methodist church and is now, with his wife, identified with the Congregational church.

Mr. and Mrs. Philp are the parents of seven children, namely: Alison J., wife of Henry Esington, of Summit, South Dakota; Margaret, now Mrs. Charles N. Slauson, Graceville, Minnesota; Catherine, who married G. L. Henderson, of Kansas City, Missouri; James and Robert A., both married and living in Watertown; Agnes P., wife of George Burt, editor of the South Shore Republican, and Peter, who is also the head of a family with his home in Watertown.

WILLIAM H. JOHNSTON was born in Blue Earth county, Minnesota, November 7, 1860, and is one of a family of six children, four sons and two daughters, whose parents were John and Elizabeth (Sharp) Johnston, both natives of Scotland. John Johnston, a blacksmith by trade, came to the United States in 1855 and the following year settled in Blue Earth county, Minnesota, where he worked at his chosen calling for a number of years, a part of the time being in the employ of the government. Of his children all are living but the youngest, George, who was killed in a railroad wreck on the Northern Pacific Railroad while making his last run as express messenger, prior to entering upon his duties as auditor, to which position he had been promoted a short time before.

William H. Johnston was reared in his native county and state, and after receiving a public school education prepared himself for active life by taking a commercial course in the Curtis Business College at Minneapolis, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1888. Shortly after receiving his diploma he came to South Dakota and located at the newly settled town of South Shore, Codington county, where he engaged in the hardware business, opening the first store in the place with that line of goods as a specialty. After building up a successful trade and continuing the same for a few months, he disposed of his stock and began the manufacture of flour, the mill which he ran during the ensuing three years being also the first enterprise of the kind in the village of South Shore. Selling his mill at the expiration of the above time, Mr. Johnston turned his attention to real estate and he has since been dealing in the same, doing a large and lucrative business in Codington and adjacent counties, and he has also extended his operations in many other parts of the state, meeting with the most encouraging success in all of his transactions. In addition to his private concerns, Mr. Johnston has been an active participant in the public affairs of his town and county, having served as school trustee of the former ever since its incorporation, and for the last fifteen years he has acted as justice of the peace. He is also chairman of the local school board and his activity in behalf of the cause of education has resulted in great and permanent benefit to the school system of South Shore.

On April 25, 1899, Mr. Johnston was appointed by President McKinley postmaster of South Shore, and since that time he has filled the office with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of the people, proving a most courteous and efficient public servant. In addition to his business affairs and official duties he is now largely interested in live stock, owning a fine tract of land near South Shore, which is well stocked with a fine herd of graded shorthorn cattle.

In politics Mr. Johnston is one of the leading Republicans of his part of the county, and it was in recognition of his valuable services to the party as well as on account of his peculiar fitness that he was honored with the various official positions referred to in preceding paragraphs. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and Modern Woodmen of America, being foreman of the former society at the present time. He was married December 12, 1888, to Miss Mary Benedict, of Wisconsin, daughter of Thomas and Harriet Benedict, and has a family of four children, Dean, Lyle, Rex and Elsie. Mr. Johnston is prominent in the religious affairs of South Shore and, with his wife, belongs to the Congregational church.

MARWOOD R. BASKERVILLE, who has been engaged in the agricultural implement business in Watertown for the past fifteen years, is known as one of the able and progressive business men of the state, having built up one of the most extensive retail enterprises in the line that is to be found in the commonwealth, while his intrinsic public spirit has been manifested at all seasons. He is at the present time incumbent of the office of mayor of Watertown, and is one of its most influential and honored citizens. Mr. Baskerville is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born on a farm in Delaware county, on the 16th of July, 1859, an dbeing a son of Rev. Job and Grace (Caldwell) Baskerville, both of whom were born in England. The father of the subject was a clergyman of the United Brethren church, while after taking up his residence in Iowa, as a pioneer, he became there identified with agricultural pursuits in connection with his ministerial work. He died in Iowa in October, 1892, aged eighty-four years.

The present mayor of Watertown passed his boyhood days on the parental farmstead in Iowa, and after duly availing himself of the advantages of the common schools he continued his studies in Western College, an institution of the United Brethren church, then located at Western, Iowa, but now in Toledo, that state. He later attended Epworth College, at Epworth, Iowa, for one year, after which he completed a course in the Baylies Business College, in Dubuque, Iowa. After leaving that institution he secured a position as bookkeeper in the office of a manufacturing concern in Dubuque, retaining this incumbency three years and then becoming business manager for the Winona Plow Company, at Winona, Minnesota. He resigned this position three years later, in 1888, and came to Watertown, South Dakota, where he established himself in the agricultural implement business, beginning operations upon a somewhat modest scale, while his business has kept pace with the growth and development of the state and is one of the most extensive of the sort in this section, an annual business of two hundred thousand dollars being done, of which about seventy-five thousand dollars is sold at a branch establishment at Elkton, South Dakota. Mr. Baskerville has been signally prospered in his efforts since coming to South Dakota and is known as a straightforward, sincere and upright business man, thus commanding the unequivocal confidence and esteem of those with whom he comes in contact in the various relations of life. He is now the owner of four entire sections of valuable farming land, in Codington county, and the major portion of the same is given over to the raising of the cereals best adapted to the soil and climate of this prolific agricultural section. He is president of the Watertown & Lake Kampeska Transportation Company, which is preparing to construct an electric railway between the city and the attractive lake mentioned, and is a promoter of a line to connect Watertown and Webster. In politics the subject is found staunchly arrayed in support of the Republican party, and in 1903 he was elected to the office of mayor of Watertown, of which he is now incumbent, while his administration is admirably justifying the confidence and trust reposed in him by the municipal electors. That this confidence is of no uncertain order is manifest when we revert to the fact that he was elected by the largest majority of all candidates for the office ever chosen in the city, receiving a plurality of two hundred and ninety-six votes above his two opponents. Mr. Baskerville is identified with the Masonic fraternity, the Knights of Pythias, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, having been the first exalted ruler of Watertown Lodge, No. 838, of the last mentioned organization.

MARWOOD R. BASKERVILLE.

On the 28th of November, 1894, Mr. Baskerville was united in marriage to Miss Harriet L. Fahnestock, a daughter of Henry J. Fahnestock, one of the representative citizens of Watertown, and of this union have been born two children, Henry M. and Walter G.

Mr. and Mrs. Baskerville are members of the Episcopal church, and in all social matters Mrs. Baskerville is active and popular, her home entertainments being leading functions.

GEORGE K. BURT, editor and proprietor of the South Shore Republican, was born January 3, 1875, in Bradford county, Pennsylvania, being the son of John and Ellen (Kirk) Burt, both natives of Scotland. They were reared and married in their native land and resided there until 1873, when they emigrated to Bradford county, Pennsylvania, where for a number of years he followed his trade of shoemaker. In 1876 they returned to Scotland, but in 1881 decided again to try the new world, and came direct to Codrington county. Settling on a tract of government land near South Shore, he improved a farm and cultivated the same with encouraging results until a few years ago, when he ceased active life, and removed to the town where he now is living in easy retirement.

George K. Burt was so young when his parents returned to Scotland that he has no recollection of the place of his birth. His few years spent in the land of his forefathers served to fix permanently in his memory the romantic scenes of that country, but the greater part of his youth was spent on the homestead in Codrington county, where he became accustomed to the varied duties of farm life. He attended the public school of winter seasons and the training thus received was supplemented by attendance for a short time at the agricultural college at Brookings.

He spent one year on the farm, and in 1898 accepted a position in the office of the South Shore Republican, from which time until the present he has been actively engaged in journalism. Two weeks after entering the office he took charge of the paper and after becoming sole proprietor he introduced a number of improvements, gave new life and impetus to the enterprise, and its present high standing is due entirely to his energetic and successful management. The Republican is a creditable paper, its columns containing all interesting and important local and general news and its editorials are able and fearless in discussion of the leading questions of the day. Mr. Burt is an easy and graceful writer, a courteous but able antagonist and is incisive as well as fearless with his pen. He is an influential factor in the public affairs of his town and county, manifests a lively interest in whatever tends to the advancement of the community, and his paper has become a powerful educational force in moulding sentiment and directing opinion.

Mr. Burt was a leading spirit in the incorporation of South Shore and has served two terms as town clerk. He is also interested in various local enterprises, one being the Creamery Association, of which he is vice-president. His fraternal relations are represented by the Modern Woodmen of America, in which he is an active worker and in which he has been officially honored.

Mr. Burt, on Thanksgiving day, 1901, was united in marriage with Miss Agnes Philp, the youngest daughter of Peter Philp, the union being blessed with one child, Muriel.

GEORGE T. MITCHELL, one of the successful and highly esteemed farmers of Grant county, has the distinction of being a scion of one of the representative pioneer families of Ionia county, Michigan, where he was born on the 20th of May, 1855, being a son of Curtis B. and Martha (Troop) Mitchell, both of whom were born and reared in the state of New York. The father early removed to Michigan and developed a good farm in Ionia county, and there continued to reside until his death, in November, 1880, at which time he was sixty-eight years of age. His father, George Mitchell, a veteran of the war of 1812, settled in Michigan in 1839. The family was founded in New England in the early colonial epoch, being of Scotch-Irish extraction.

George T. Mitchell was reared on the homestead farm, while his educational advantages were those afforded by the public schools and a commercial college in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Thereafter he was for a number of years employed as a commercial traveling salesman, in which connection he met with excellent success and gained a reputation for ability and energy. In 1882 he came to what is now South Dakota and took up his permanent abode in Melrose township, Grant county, having come here the preceding fall and purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land, upon which he located in June of the year mentioned, while later he added another tract of equal area, so that he now has a farm of two hundred and forty acres, improved with good buildings, fences, etc., and devoted to diversified agriculture and to the raising of good live stock. He gives no little attention to dairying, and furnishes a very considerable supply of milk to the co-operative creamery at Milbank, having been one of those actively identified with the establishment of the enterprise, which met with some opposition or apathy on the start, much trouble having been experienced for a time in securing the co-operation of many of those who are now numbered among its principal supporters, though it now has about one hundred and twenty-five patrons. He was elected president of the operating company at the time of its organization, and has ever since continued in tenure of this office, while it is due in no small degree to his energy and progressive ideas that the institution has built up a fine business, having the best creamery plant in the state. About three and a half million pounds of milk are received each year in the plant, and the annual product aggregates about twenty-six thousand to twenty-eight thousand pounds of butter. Mr. Mitchell is also treasurer of the farmers' grain elevator at Milbank, having been one of the organizers of the company and having contributed materially to the success of the enterprise, whose financial prosperity has shown how great benefits may be gained by farmers through such co-operation. About two hundred thousand bushels of wheat and thirty thousand bushels of flax are handled annually. The company buys on a close margin and is thus enabled to declare very gratifying dividends to the stockholders. Mr. Mitchell was a member of the board of county commissioners from 1891 for twelve years and was chairman of the same for nine years. The significance of this long tenure of the important office as a Democrat in a strong Republican county is prima facie, as it indicates in an unmistakable way the high degree of confidence and esteem in which he is held in the county and the objective appreciation of his loyalty and business and executive ability. At the time of this writing he is also supervisor of his township. He manifests at all times a lively interest in public affairs, particularly those of a local nature, and in politics is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Democratic party. Fraternally he is identified with Milbank Lodge, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, which he represented in the grand lodge of the state for three years, and with Milbank Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, in which he is serving his third year as high priest, while he also holds membership in the auxiliary chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

At Ionia, Michigan, on the 17th of November, 1880, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Mitchell to Miss Mary Allen, who was born in Allegany county, New York, as were also her parents, Roy and Melissa (Lewis) Allen, representatives of old colonial stock and now residents of Milbank. Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell have four children, Maude E., Curtis B., Clara M. and Leroy.

JUNIUS W. SHANNON, born Will county, Illinois, 1835. Editor; established Huronite June 2, 1881, President board of regents, 1893. Died, 1899.

COURTS AND BAR OF THE BLACK HILLS.

BY GRANVILLE G. BENNETT.

[The following interesting sketch was scheduled to appear among the other contributed articles in Volume I, but was not received until after the completion of that volume.—Ed.]

The treaty with the Sioux Indians, ceding the Black Hills, was made in the summer of 1876, and ratified by the senate on the 27th day of February, 1877. The territorial legislature which convened in January, 1877, anticipated the ratification of that treaty, and, realizing the urgent need of civil administration in that new, busy and seething mining country, passed an act to take effect immediately upon the ratification of the treaty, consolidating the first judicial district with the second, of which Chief Justice Peter C. Shannon was then the presiding judge, and constituting the Black Hills the first district, and transferring Judge Granville G. Bennett from the old to the new first district. Judge Bennett reached Deadwood with his clerk, General A. R. Z. Dawson, on the 28th day of April, 1877, and immediately entered upon the task of organizing the courts.

The Black Hills were then indeed "the forest primeval." The cruel axe of the woodman had just begun its work of slaughter and denudation, which in twenty-seven years has left bare and forbidding large areas once beautiful with their heavy growth of majestic and stately pines. Game was abundant. Deer, antelope, bear, mountain lion, wild cat and elk made the Hills the hunter's paradise. There were no roads, except of nature's own contruction; no bridges; means of travel were primitive, either on foot, horseback or in a dead ox wagon. The population was at that time about twelve thousand. Of this number, ten thousand were in Deadwood, Lead City, Central City and adjacent gulches. In 1876 Custer was the populous camp, containing, as was claimed, not less than six thousand people, but the discovery of placer gold on Deadwood creek, in the northern hills, had well-nigh depopulated it, and at the time of which we are writing it had very much the appearance of a "deserted village," but without a Goldsmith to link its name with the immortality of song. Perhaps the white monuments in the valley of the Little Big Horn will be more enduring as they tell a story more tragic and pathetic than any that might be woven in a poet's brain. Most of the early settlers were mere fortune hunters, with no thought of becoming permanent dwellers or establishing homes, so took but little interest in the organization of society, of churches or schools. The mining states and territories of the west had the much larger representation, and quite a majority of these belonged to the class of placer miners, who as a general thing are improvident and nomadic.

The greater portion of the population had entered the Hills in 1876 under the ban of the United States government, against its protest, and in the face of its active opposition. Being then Indian country, the territorial government was powerless to give them aid or extend to them the protection of the law and the courts. Feeling the necessity for some sort of judicial administration, to hold the unruly element in check, punish petty crimes, and settle chattel property rights, these pioneers of 1876 organized in Custer and Deadwood provisional courts, with judges and ministerial officers. Questions relating to mining and the right of possession of mining ground were settled by miners' meetings, as provided by the rules and regulations adopted by the miners in the several mining districts. The decisions of these courts and miners' meetings were very generally respected as binding and final. Minor offenses were readily disposed of, but when it came to capital or other felonious crimes these hardy frontiersmen preferred giving the culprit his liberty on condition that he would leave the camp,—as in the case of McCall, who murdered Wild Bill,—rather than assume the responsibility of inflicting the death penalty, and the execution of a penitentiary sentence being impossible. There is no question but what these temporary governmental expedients were productive of good. They exercised a wholesome restraint over the lawless element, engendered and kept alive respect for law and authority, prevented serious personal encounters and bloodshed over property rights, and a resort to the questionable methods of vigilantes and the barbarities of lynch law.

Such were the existing conditions when the jurisdiction of the territorial government was extended over the Black Hills country. The counties of Lawrence, Pennington and Custer were organized and the machinery of the law put into operation.

There was some funny work done and attempted by the respective boards of county commissioners of these counties, in the temporary location of the county seats. That of Custer was fixed at a little placer mining camp, called Hayward, which afterwards proved to be in Pennington county, and its subsequent removal to Custer City involved some citizens in rather unpleasant experiences in the courts. The commissioners of Pennington county laid out a town away up in the hills on Spring creek, where there were a few miners' cabins, called it Sheridan, and made it the county seat. An effort was made to locate the county seat of Lawrence county at Crook City, a small hamlet seven miles north-east of Deadwood, but this failed and Deadwood was selected.

Prior to statehood, the following judges occupied the bench of the Black Hills district: Granville G. Bennett, Gideon C. Moody, William E. Church and Charles M. Thomas. Upon the admission of the state, the seventh and eighth circuits were created. The seventh embraced the counties of Pennington, Custer and Fall River, and some adjacent unorganized counties, Lawrence, Meade and Butte counties, with certain adjoining unorganized territory, constituted the eighth circuit. The seventh has had three judges, viz: John W. Nowland, William Gardner and Levi McGee. Judge Nowland died during his term of office. The eighth has had the following: Charles M. Thomas, Adoniram J. Plowman, Joseph B. Moore, Frank J. Washabaugh and William G. Rice, the latter filling by appointment the unexpired term of Judge Washabaugh. Of the judges who have presided over the courts of the Black Hills, three are dead, Judges Thomas, Moody and Washabaugh.

The first term of United States court was convened at Sheridan on the 4th Tuesday of May, 1877. There were no civil cases for trial, and no parties held to answer to the grand jury. So no juries were empaneled, no attorneys were present except Mr. Frank J. Washabaugh, who had been appointed and qualified as district attorney for Pennington county. There was no building in which to hold court, and a miner's cabin, with dirt floor and a dirt roof, was used as a hall of justice, and during a heavy rain-storm the descending water and mud made things very uncomfortable. The session was of short duration and no business was transacted.

The next term of court at Sheridan was held in September, same year. It was unique in many respects. The little cluster of miners' cabins was still all there was of the town, known as the county seat. The county commissioners had erected a one-story log house to serve as a court house. It, too, had a dirt floor and roof. Places were cut out for doorways and windows, but that was all; no doors were hung and no sash or glass; all was open. There was organized the first United States grand jury in the Hills. Many indictments were found and a number of convictions followed, most of them for violations of the internal revenue laws. The United States government was represented by the late John R. Gamble. Quite a number of attorneys were present, but few of whom are still in this jurisdiction. The court, attorneys, jurors and witnesses had to make the trip either from Deadwood or Rapid City by private conveyances, taking with them bedding, provisions and camp equipage, and providing for themselves during the term. A number encamped across the road opposite the court house and fared sumptuously on bacon, slap-jacks and canned goods, and when court was not in session found amusement in shooting the judge's "bench" full of holes, though the open doorway. They were a jolly lot of fellows, and enjoyed their outing. This was the last term of court held at Sheridan, and the last of the town. The county seat was removed to Rapid City, where it should have been located in the first place, and the old site of the prospective city of Sheridan passed to the ownership of a prosperous ranchman, and became one of the most productive farms on upper Spring creek.

The first term of court held in Deadwood, the fore part of May, 1877, was in many respects rather remarkable. There was no civil calendar, and criminal business occupied the time of the court. The grand jury returned fifteen indictments, and but one out of that number was acquitted, fourteen being sentenced to the penitentiary. The crimes for which these persons were indicted and punished ranged all the way from manslaughter to assaults with deadly weapons.

Shortly before the arrival of the judge in the Hills, two homicides had been committed, in a quarrel over the possession of certain town lots. Certain citizens, regarding the conditions as rather unbearable, organized a vigilance committee and proposed to inaugurate extreme measures. One of its members stated that the judge was on his way in and would open court very soon, and suggested that the committee wait and see if he should be able to enforce the law and punish crime. This was acceded to, and this committee ceased to exist after this first term of the court. It can be said to its credit, that during all the period of its wild and reckless history there never was a case of lynching in Deadwood. And since that first term of court life and property have been as safe in Lawrence county as in any county in the west.

In this first effort to establish law and order in this new mining camp, the judge was most efficiently assisted and supported by three excellent officers, Sheriff Seth Bullock, District Attorney John H. Barnes, and Clerk A. R. Z. Dawson. They were among the first settlers, knew the people well, were familiar with conditions and were able to give valuable information and advice.

At this first term seventy or more attorneys were admitted to the practice of the law, representing almost every western state and territory. Of all these, but four remain in the Hills. Many have crossed the mystic river, while the remaining survivors are scattered far and wide. The following year some able men were added, and the Lawrence county bar soon acquired the reputation of being the strongest in the then territory, which it has in a measure maintained, although having lost by death and removal a number of its recognized leaders and talented members. Opportunity is a great factor in the lives of most men, and this factor has been potent with the lawyers of the Black Hills. For many years the litigation, especially in Lawrence county, was extensive and very important. Property rights of great value being frequently involved, and the cases closely and hard fought, could not, than otherwise, develop a keen, logical and thoroughly equipped class of attorneys.

The early strenuous legal contests in the Black Hills courts were cases involving rights to mining ground. These were frequently complicated by the carelessness with which mining claims had been located and sometimes by the utter disregard of the rights of others by subsequent locators. There were other elements entering into these contests, which made the duties of the presiding judge difficult and perplexing. The members of the bar, as has been already stated, came from almost every mining state and territory of the west. Each brought with him his own ideas and interpretation of the practice and procedure in the jurisdiction from which he had come, and insisted upon their adoption and observance, regardless of the provisions of the code of civil procedure of this territory. In fact there was but one lawyer among the sixty or seventy who had a copy of the code. There were then (1877) no accessible text-books and scarcely no adjudicated cases on mines and mining law. One authority only could be produced attempting to construe the mining acts of congress, and that was the Golden Fleece case, decided by the supreme court of Nevada a short time previous. Then there were a few attorneys, wholly devoid of any sense of moral or legal responsibility, who would resort to any methods, however questionable, for the accomplishment of their purposes. Under all these adverse conditions it is not at all strange that the pathway of the presiding judge was rather rough, at least not strewn with flowers.

Some of the earlier cases, while protracted and fought with stubborn ability, proved disastrous to all litigant parties concerned. The first case involving mining rights, being that of the Hidden Treasure Mining Company vs. The Aurora Mining Company, was instituted immediately upon the organization of the courts in Lawrence county. It was conducted on part of counsel for defendant with unpardonable bitterness and malice, the effects of which were apparent for a long time. When the case was concluded it was found that the ground in dispute was worthless, and neither company survived the disastrous legal battle. Of the counsel engaged in this somewhat celebrated case, but one survives, Judge Kingsley, who is now a resident of Denver, Colorado. Of a similar nature was the Sitting Bull case, but without any unpleasantness. It was long-drawn-out and very expensive, at the end both parties were bankrupt, and the ground in dispute has never since been worked and is regarded as of but little if any value. The attorneys for defendant in this case, to-wit: Messrs. McLaughlin, Steele, Moody and Skinner, are all dead, while the attorneys for plaintiff still survive, Messrs. Van Cise and Kingsley being in Denver and Messrs. John R. Wilson and Bennett still practicing in Deadwood. The judge who presided at that trial, Hon. W. E. Church, is now residing in Chicago.

A very important case more recently tried in the federal court was that of the Buxton Mining Company vs. the Golden Reward Mining Company, in which the plaintiff obtained a judgment of over sixty thousand dollars. The plaintiff in this case was represented by Messrs. Martin & Mason, with whom was associated Granville G. Bennett, and the defendants by Messrs. W. R. Steele, G. C. Moody and W. L. McLaughlin. There never was a case more closely tried, every inch being tenaciously contested, and although the trial occupied about four weeks, it was conducted in the most amicable spirit, and without the least friction or unpleasantness, in this presenting a marked contrast to the methods and spirit employed and displayed by certain attorneys in the conduct of the first civil action tried and determined in the courts of the Black Hills.

I have referred to these cases simply as samples of the heavy and important litigation in which the Lawrence county bar has been engaged during more than a quarter of a century.

It will be noticed how the Lawrence county bar has suffered from deaths and removals during its comparatively short existence. But no man was ever yet so great or important that he could not be spared from the world's activities, and these places made vacant are being rapidly filled by the oncoming aspirants for curialistic honors, who give good promise of maintaining the enviable reputation which this bar has enjoyed in the past.

The Lawrence county bar has not been overlooked in the distribution of political honors. It has furnished a delegate in congress, Granville G. Bennett, a United States senator, Gideon C. Moody, a member of congress, Eben W. Martin, a member of the state's supreme court, Dighton Carson, besides many minor positions.

The bars of the other Black Hills counties have many able lawyers, and have not been so changeable in their membership. They have not had the important and extensive litigation that Lawrence has had, hence have not had the same opportunities and experiences as the attorneys in the northern Hills.

The tempestuous days are past. Mining ground is being rapidly patented, which settles very generally mining titles, and does away with what has been the most important branch of the law in the Hills.

Things are fast assuming the steady character of the older communities and litigation is becoming commonplace. But those stirring times will long be remembered by those who were actors in their exciting and busy scenes.

PIERCE CAHILL, representative of the district in the state senate and one of the successful farmers and stock growers of Grant county, was born in Beetown, Grant county, Wisconsin, on the 9th of January, 1869, and is a son of John and Margaret (Quirk) Cahill, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter in Wisconsin. The father was a child of four years when his parents removed to the United States, the family locating in the state of Wisconsin, where he was reared. He became identified with railroad contract work as a young man and was thus engaged at the time of the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, when he enlisted as a private in Company C, Second Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he was under McClellan in the famous old "Iron Brigade," participating in both battles of Bull Run and receiving four gun-shot wounds in the second of those engagements, the injuries thus received resulting in his death, in 1901. His brother Pierce was likewise a soldier and was captured and held prisoner in Andersonville for eighteen months. John and Margaret Cahill became the parents of three sons and one daughter, and all are now living in Grant county, South Dakota.

Pierce Cahill secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of Fox Lake, Wisconsin, and assisted his father in his farming operations until he had attained the age of twenty-six years. In 1889, at the age of twenty years, he came to South Dakota and, in company with his brother, Frank, purchased six hundred and forty acres of land, in Grant county, and here they now have one of the finely improved and valuable farms of this section of the state, while they have given particular attention to the raising of the best grade of live stock. The subject has a fine residence in the village of Albee and is now engaged in stock-buying business here, still retaining his interest in the ranch property and stock-growing enterprise, through the medium of which he has attained a high degree of prosperity and a reputation as a progressive and sagacious man. He is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, and his political faith is that of the Republican party, of whose principles he has been a staunch advocate, being a factor in public affairs and having held various township offices. In 1900 a just recognition of his eligibility and party fealty was given in his being selected to represent his district in the state senate. He made an excellent record during the session of the general assembly, being assigned to important committees and taking an active part in the work and councils of the senate, and the popular appreciation of his efforts was shown by his re-election in November, 1902. He is held in high esteem and is deserving of unequivocal confidence.

THOMAS FITCH, one of the esteemed citizens of Milbank, is a native of the old Buckeye state, having been born in Trumbull county, Ohio, on the 7th of July, 1840, being a son of Andrew and Elizabeth (Blackburn) Fitch, the former of whom was born in Connecticut and the latter in Ohio, the father being a scion of old colonial stock, while representatives of the name were valiant soldiers in the Continental army during the war of the Revolution. Andrew Fitch was a man of sterling character and commanded unqualified confidence and esteem. He served as auditor of Trumbull county, Ohio, and about 1849 he removed with his family to McHenry county, Illinois, where he remained until 1856, when he took up his residence in Fillmore county, Minnesota, becoming a pioneer settler of that section, where he took up a homestead and improved a good farm. He died at Milbank at the age of seventy-four years, having passed the closing years of his life in Milbank, and his wife was summoned into eternal rest three years later, at the age of seventy-four years. They became the parents of ten children, of whom only two are now living, Thomas and Emmor A., who is a resident of Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

Thomas Fitch was about sixteen years of age at the time of the removal to Fillmore county, Minnesota, where he attended the common schools and an excellent academy at Chatfield. He was for many years successfully engaged in teaching, while he has ever continued a close student and wide reader, being distinctively a man of broad information and liberal ideas. He was teaching when the thundering of rebel guns against old Fort Sumter announced the initiation of the greatest civil war known in the annals of history. He responded to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers, and on the 26th of June, 1861, was enlisted for three months as a member of Company A, Second Minnesota Volunteer Infantry. His company was commanded by Captain Judson W. Bishop, who eventually rose to the rank of general and who is now a prominent resident of St. Paul. He continued in active service for three years and one month, being mustered out as corporal on the 21st of July, 1864. He retired from service by reason of severe injuries received in the battle of Chickamauga, on the 20th of the preceding September. He was wounded in the right arm and the face, by the same ball, and in the ensuing surgical operation fifteen pieces of shattered bone were taken from his arm, in which the ball had remained for eighty-one days. His brothers, William A. and James H., also served in the Union army, the former having been a member of the Chicago Light Artillery and died in the service, after having been a prisoner in Libby prison for seven months. The latter was a member of Company E, Seventh Minnesota Volunteer Infantry.

After the war Mr. Fitch resumed teaching in the same school in which he had been retained at the time of his enlistment, and thereafter devoted fourteen years to pedagogic work in Minnesota, though he was also identified with agricultural pursuits and was incumbent of various local offices. In 1880 he took up a soldier's homestead in Kilborn township, Grant county, becoming thus one of the early settlers. He improved his farm and placed it under cultivation, and still owns the property, as well as forty acres adjoining Milbank. In 1883 he took up his residence in Milbank, where he is now successfully engaged in the wood and coal business, while he commands the unequivocal esteem of all who know him, being popular in business, social and public life. He has been called upon to serve in various offices of trust and responsibility, including those of justice of the peace, school trustee and member of the village council. He has a nice residence and the pleasant home is a center of gracious hospitality. Mr. Fitch is a member of the company operating and owning the co-operative creamery in Milbank, which represents one of the important industrial enterprises of the county. In politics he has ever accorded a staunch allegiance to the Republican party and has been an active worker in its cause, while for the past two years he has served as chairman of the Republican central committee of Grant county. In January, 1902, he received through the legislature the appointment as one of the five members of the board of control of the soldiers' home at Hot Springs. He has ever retained a deep interest in his old comrades in arms and is one of the valued members of General A. A. Humphrey Post, No. 42, Grand Army of the Republic. In 1900 Mr. Fitch was elected one of the presidential electors on the Republican ticket, and had the distinction of receiving the largest number of votes ever cast for a candidate in the state.

At Preston, Minnesota, on the 7th of December, 1865, Mr. Fitch was united in marriage to Miss Sarah P. Shaw, who was born in New York, being a daughter of Ebenezer and Lydia P. Shaw, who were numbered among the early settlers in Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Fitch have one son, Frederick, who is now a resident of the city of Spokane, Washington, where he is a conductor on the Great Northern Railroad. He married Miss Mary Hause, and they have one child, Gene.

HON. A. H. INGERSOLL, county judge of Roberts county, was born in Waupun, Wisconsin, October 12, 1857, and is the son of Artemedorous and Nancy (McNammard) Ingersoll, both parents natives of Pennsylvania, the father of English descent, the mother of Scotch-Irish. Artemedorus Ingersoll came from an old and respected New England family, was a man of intelligence and much more than ordinary culture and for a number of years served as official surveyor of Dodge county, Wisconsin, having been an educated and remarkably capable civil engineer. He reared a family of nine children, six sons and three daughters, the oldest son, a captain in the late Civil war, dying in a rebel prison, and two others have died since that time.

A. H. Ingersoll was reared in his native state, received a high-school education at Waupun, Wisconsin, and studied law at Preston, Minnesota, under the direction of Henry R. Wells, being admitted to the bar in 1878. In that year he came to South Dakota and, settling on a tree claim near Wilmot, began practicing in that town and upon the organization of Roberts county, in 1882, he was chosen state's attorney, which position he held for a term of two years, retiring at the expiration of that time to his farm. But a brief interval elapsed until he was again elected to the office and after discharging the duties of the same in an able and satisfactory manner for a period of six years, he was elected to the county judgeship, which with the exception of four years spent in agricultural pursuits, he has since held. Judge Ingersoll is an able lawyer, a judicious and successful practitioner, and as a judge his course has been creditable to himself and an honor to the county, fully meeting the expectations of his friends and the public and justifying the wisdom of his election. In the discharge of his official functions he is eminently fair and impartial, his rulings bear every evidence of a profound knowledge of the law, his decisions have been characterized by an intense desire to render justice in all matters submitted for his consideration, and thus far there has been little in his career to criticize and much to commend. He is not only one of the representative Republicans of Roberts county, but enjoys much more than local prestige as a judicious organizer and successful leader.

Judge Ingersoll is vice-president of the Citizens' Bank at this place, and a stockholder in the same, and is also identified with the Bank of Wilmot, besides having various other interests which tend to the development of the country and the promotion of its prosperity. Fraternally he belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Knights of Pythias, in both of which brotherhoods he is an active worker, and at different times he has been honored with important official positions in the same.

The Judge was married on April 15, 1881, to Miss Ida F. Maydole, a native of Iowa and the daughter of Henry M. and Eliza (Wilson) Maydole, the father of German descent, the mother's lineage being traceable to an old New England family that figured in the early history of Vermont.

ELIAS MONSON, ex-register of deeds of Roberts county and now president of and abstractor for the Roberts County Abstract and Title Company, is a native of Dodge county, Minnesota, and the son of Ole and Bertha (Kuntson) Monson, both parents born and reared in Norway. Ole Monson and wife came to the United States a number of years ago and were among the earliest settlers of Dodge county, Minnesota, locating there when the county was on the very outskirts of civilization. After a long residence in that state, they removed to near Grand Forks, North Dakota, where the father's death occurred in 1900, and the mother's two years previously. Ole Monson, a farmer by occupation, was a man of intelligence and sound judgment and was a most excellent and praiseworthy citizen. He was always deeply interested in the public affairs of the communities in which he lived, took an active part in politics and for years was one of the Republican leaders of Dodge county, Minnesota. Although of foreign birth and ever retaining a warm feeling for his native country, he became devotedly attached to the country of his adoption and was an ardent admirer and loyal upholder of the free institutions under which so many years of his life were spent and so much of his success achieved.

Elias Monson was born on July 4, 1864, spent his childhood and youth in his native county and state and after acquiring an elementary education in the public schools completed an academic and business course in an academy at Portland, North Dakota. On quitting the academy he went to North Dakota in 1888 with the family, and after farming two years in Grand Forks county, changed his residence to the county of Roberts, where, in 1892, he took up a fine claim, which he at once proceeded to improve. He continued to reside on his place and promote its development until the fall of 1898, when he was elected, on the Republican ticket, register of deeds for Roberts county, the duties of which office he discharged for two terms having been chosen his own successor in the year 1900. As a public official Mr. Monson demonstrated fine business capacity and became quite popular with the people. At the expiration of his second term he was prevailed upon by his successor to continue in charge of the office as deputy, being familiar with its varied duties and far better qualified to discharge the same than any other individual.

Mr. Monson is now identified with the Roberts County Abstract & Title Company, of which he is president, and also owns an interest in a hotel at White Rock. He gives his influence and encouragement to all enterprises having for their object the material advancement of the community, being also a friend of education, religion and other civilizing agencies without which no commonwealth can truly prosper. He belongs to the Improved Order of Red Men and Court of Honor at Sisseton, is a zealous worker in both organizations and at various times has been honored with responsible official positions by his fellow members.

Mr. Monson's domestic history dates from 1895, on December 10th of which year was solemnized his marriage with Miss Carrie Stadstad, of Douglas county, Minnesota, a most excellent and amiable lady who has presented him with two children, Beatrice and Arthur A.

CHARLES L. FOLKSTAD, a prominent merchant of Sisseton and proprietor of one of the largest and finest general stores in the eastern part of South Dakota, is a native of Minnesota and the son of Levi Folkstad, who came to the United States from Norway sometime in the 'forties. Charles L. Folkstad was born on June 1, 1863, spent his early life in Dodge county, Minnesota, and enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education. When a young man he turned his attention to well digging, which arduous business he followed for three years in his native state and in 1891 came to South Dakota and, entering a tract of land in the southern part of Roberts county, lived on the same until receiving a patent from the government, when he returned to Minnesota. During the ensuing three years Mr. Folkstad clerked in a mercantile house, but at the expiration of that time resigned his position and in 1895 again came to Dakota and opened a gents' furnishing store in Sisseton. His business career since the above date presents a series of successes perhaps without parallel in this state, as his progress from a comparatively modest beginning to his present commanding position among the leading merchants of Dakota has been little less than phenomenal. Starting with a small stock of goods, in an indifferent building, fourteen by twenty feet in size, he soon secured a lucrative patronage and as the business continued to grow in magnitude more commodious quarters became necessary. In 1897 he took in a partner, but in January following purchased the latter's interest and has since been sole proprietor, the business meanwhile increasing to such an extent as to make his store the leading establishment of the kind in the city. Mr. Folkstad, in 1900, erected the fine brick building which he now occupies, the structure being twenty-four by one hundred and twenty feet in size, handsomely finished with pressed brick front and large plate glass windows, the interior a model of beauty and convenience and perfectly adapted to the purposes for which intended. This store is packed to repletion with full lines of clothing, gents' furnishings, and a first-class tailoring department. Mr. Folkstad has a well-established reputation for selling goods at low prices and for square and honorable dealing with his patrons. Mr. Folkstad has been remarkably fortunate in all of his business affairs and now possesses a fortune of considerable magnitude, owning in addition to his large mercantile house and other city property, an extensive tract of fine farm land, besides considerable stock in a number of local enterprises. He is a man of sterling worth, enjoys the confidence of the public and is held in high esteem by his fellow men of Sisseton and Roberts county. He holds membership with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Knights of Pythias, and in politics supports the Republican party.

Mr. Folkstad's wife, formerly Miss Anna Pederson, was born in Dodge county, Minnesota, but since five years of age has lived in South Dakota, where her marriage was solemnized on September 26, 1893. The following are the names of their children: Lloyd, Gordon, Alton, Anna Bernice and Charles Walter, a twin of the first born dying in infancy.

ANDREW MARVICK, treasurer and manager of the Iowa and Dakota Land Company, and stockholder in the Citizens' National Bank, Sisseton, is a native of Grundy county, Illinois, where his birth occurred on June 28, 1871. His parents, Seivert and Laura (Naadland) Marvick, were born in Norway and in 1854 came to the United States, settling in Illinois, where the father purchased land and became a successful tiller of the soil. Andrew grew up in close touch with the rugged duties of farm life, and after receiving an elementary education in the public schools of his native county entered the normal school at Morris, Illinois, where he pursued for some time the higher branches of learning. His education finished, he engaged in farming in Illinois and continued the same for some years, later embarking in the real-estate business in Minnesota and South Dakota. In the spring of 1902 he opened a real-estate office in Sisseton and after conducting the same with marked success until the following fall, when he helped to organize the Citizens' National Bank, of which his brother, Joseph Marvick, is president.

Mr. Marvick is an accomplished business man and although but recently identified with banking, he has demonstrated abilities and resourcefulness as a financier such as few attain after a much longer and more varied experience. Under his able management the Citizens' National Bank has become not only one of the leading institutions of the kind in Roberts county, but in the northeastern part of the state, and, being backed by safe and conservative men, it bids fair to achieve ere long an honorable reputation among the popular and successful banks of the great northwest. In addition to his connection with the banking interests of Sisseton, Mr. Marvick is identified with various other business enterprises that have had a decided influence upon development of the country, notably among which being the Iowa and Dakota Land Company, which he is now serving in the two-fold capacity of manager and treasurer.

Mr. Marvick ranks with the intelligent and level-headed men of the city of his residence and in every relation of life has made a reputation for probity and correct conduct that has become proverbial. His impulses, always earnest and generous, are invariably in the right direction, and the encouraging success with which his business career has been crowned is mainly due to his industry, fidelity and the spirit of courtesy characteristic of the well-bred, broad-minded gentleman.

Mr. Marvick was married on February 20, 1895, to Miss Linnie Bjelland, a native of Illinois, but of Norwegian parentage, the union resulting in the birth of three children, Lydia, Raymond O. and Amos S. Mr. and Mrs. Marvick have one of the most beautiful modern residences in Sisseton, and their pleasant home is noted for the hospitality and spirit of good fellowship that welcome all who enter its precincts. In private life the subject is quiet and unobtrusive, but warm-hearted and affable in his relations with his fellow men. He numbers his friends by the score, stands high in public esteem and the prominent position which he has already reached in business and social circles is indicative of the still greater and more influential career that awaits him in the future. Religiously Mr. Marvick and wife are Lutherans, being among the leading members of the church of that denomination in Sisseton.

FRITHIOP N. H. GYLLENHAMMAR, M. D., of Gayville, Yankton county, was born in Sweden, on the 8th of February, 1857, being a son of Lars G. and Catherine M. (Samuelson) Gyllenhammar. From 1632 to the present time the subject's ancestors and himself have been noblemen in their native land, the Doctor's name, with the other members of the family, being registered in the noblemen's calendar at Stockholm, Sweden. Mrs. Anna Carlson, the Doctor's sister, who is his housekeeper, was widowed in Sweden, her husband having been a civil engineer. The Doctor was reared in his native land and his more purely literary education was secured in Linköping College, where he continued his studies until he had completed the prescribed course of the college. About the year 1882 he took up the study of medicine and surgery, under most effective preceptorship, and in 1884 he emigrated from the far northland to the United States, locating in the city of Duluth, Minnesota, where he continued his technical studies under the direction of Dr. W. H. McGee, and while a resident of that city he also familiarized himself with the English language, so that he became well qualified for taking up his active labors in the country of his adoption. In the autumn of 1887 the Doctor was matriculated in the College of Physicians and Surgeons in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, where he completed the prescribed course, being graduated as a member of the class of 1891, and receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine on the 10th of March of that year. He passed the ensuing summer in that city and in the autumn removed to Sioux City, Iowa, where he built up a successful practice, continuing to there follow his profession until the autumn of 1894, when he came to South Dakota and located in the city of Yankton, where he was engaged in practice for the ensuing three years, at the expiration of which he came to Gayville, which has ever since been the field of his earnest and successful endeavors in the work of his noble profession, in which he has gained marked prestige and the concomitant confidence and esteem of the community.

Since coming to South Dakota Dr. Gyllenhammar has served about five years as a member of the board of pension examiners for Yankton county, and he is held in high regard by his professional confreres in the state, while his ability and pleasing personality have brought to him a representative support in his chosen field of labor. In politics he accords a stanch support to the Republican party and his religious faith is that of the Lutheran church. He is a member of the South Dakota State Medical Society, the Sioux Valley Medical Association and the American Medical Association, while fraternally he is identified with the Knights of the Macabees and the Mutual Benefit Association. He is also president of the Yankton District Medical Association. The Doctor is the owner of a pleasant and well-appointed home in Gayville, in which he has a large library of well-selected books, both professional and scientific. The Doctor is not married, and his sister presides over the domestic affairs of his pleasant home, while in the family circle are two adopted children, George and Hilda Heloise.

J. A. RICKERT, a financier of more than local reputation, is a native of Trumbull county, Ohio, and the oldest in a family of twelve children, whose father and mother were of German and Irish descent respectively. Mr. Rickert was born September 21, 1852, and four years later, with his parents, emigrated to Olmsted county, Minnesota, where he grew to manhood on a farm, meanwhile receiving his preliminary education in the district schools of that county. In 1871 he entered St. Vincent's College, Wheeling, West Virginia, where he pursued his studies for two years, meanwhile attending night school at the Bryant & Stratton Business College, of that city, completing the full commercial course at that institution. For the six years following Mr. Rickert was engaged as clerk, timekeeper and bookkeeper, in Wheeling, West Virginia, and in towns in Minnesota. In 1879 he came to South Dakota and took up a homestead in Grant county, near Milbank. In 1881 he disposed of his claim and with the proceeds engaged in the general merchandise business two years later at Corona, this state, where he carried on a very successful business during the ensuing sixteen years, all of which time he served as postmaster of the town, besides holding various township and municipal offices.

In 1896 Mr. Rickert was elected treasurer of Roberts county, and upon taking charge of the office moved to Wilmot, where he resided until the seat of justice was changed to Sisseton, when he took up his abode at the latter place and has since made it his home. He was re-elected in 1898 and served both terms in an able and satisfactory manner, proving a painstaking, obliging and popular public servant. During his last term he built an elevator at Sisseton and engaged in the grain business, and about the same time associated himself with H. S. Morris and Howard Babcock and organized the First National Bank of Sisseton, becoming president of the institution, which position he still holds. Still later he became one of the organizers, stockholders and officers of three new banks, known as the Citizens' State Bank of White Rock, the First State Bank of Summit, and the Roberts County State Bank, of Corona, and is a stockholder in the Sisseton Loan and Title Company and the Roberts County Land and Loan Company.

Mr. Rickert owns a fine business property at Corona and a nice residence in Sisseton. He has charge and the management of the extensive farm properties of the Sisseton Loan and Title Company, of which they own about thirty farms in Roberts and neighboring counties.

Mr. Rickert was married in December, 1882, the union being blessed with one child, a son, Paul M., who is now pursuing his studies in Pillsbury Academy at Owatonna, Minnesota.

Mr. Rickert is a Mason and a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen. In politics he has always been an enthusiastic Republican. The distinction which he has achieved in financial and business circles has given him considerable reputation, and as a public-spirited citizen he is deeply interested in all that tends to the material development and general prosperity of his city, county and state.

RT. REV. THOMAS O'GORMAN.—To him whose name initiates this review has come the attainment of a distinguished position in connection with the work of the holy Catholic church. A man of distinctive and forceful individuality and high attainments, he has consecrated his life to the service of the Divine Master and is at the present time ministering faithfully and zealously as bishop of the Catholic church for the diocese of South Dakota, of which Sioux Falls is the see city and consequently his place of residence.

Bishop O'Gorman is a native of the city of Boston, Massachusetts, where he was born on the 1st of May, 1843, being a son of John and Margaret O'Gorman, who removed to the west when he was a child, his boyhood days being passed in Chicago and St. Paul, where he secured his early educational training in public and parochial schools. At the age of ten and one-half years, in company with the distinguished Archbishop Ireland, who was then sixteen years of age, he was sent to France, where he continued his literary studies and was also educated for the priesthood. Upon his return to St. Paul, Minnesota, in 1865, he was ordained to the priesthood, receiving holy orders on the 5th of November of that year. Thereafter he had charge of a missionary district in southern Minnesota until 1878, the center of said district being the town of Rochester. In the year last mentioned he joined with the Paulist fathers in their missionary work, and during a portion of two years was an assistant in the church of St. Paul in New York city. In 1885 Bishop O'Gorman was made president of the seminary of St. Thomas, in St. Paul, Minnesota, in which institution he also occupied the chair of philosophy and dogmatic theology. In 1890 he was appointed professor of ecclesiastical history in the Roman Catholic University at Washington, D. C., where he remained until 1896, in which year he was consecrated a bishop and assigned to the diocese of South Dakota, being the second incumbent of this distinguished and ex-acting office.

At the time of his residence in the national capital the Bishop was selected to write a history of the Roman Catholic church in the United States, and this important work he successfully accomplished, Volume IX of the series of denominational church histories, published under the auspices of the American Society of Church History, having been written by him. Of his work in this connection it has been pertinently said: "This volume evidences the fact that no mistake was made in his being selected for the work. It covers a wider field than any other volume of the series, commencing with the first landing of Columbus on this continent and, advancing step by step, gives a complete account of the development and growth of the church to the present time. It is a great work, written in a most attractive and scholarly style, and places the Bishop in the front rank of historical writers."

Concerning the work of the Bishop in his present wide field of endeavor we can not do better than to quote at length from an appreciative article previously published: "On the 2d of May, 1896, Bishop O'Gorman arrived in Sioux Falls, accompanied by Archbishop Ireland, of St. Paul, and other high dignitaries of the church, and the reception, the ceremonies of the installation the day following, in St. Michael's church, and the banquet tendered him, will always be remembered by participants as among the grandest events in the history of the city. It is not too much to say that a more cordial and elaborate welcome was never given to anyone in Sioux Falls; and one of the most pleasing features attending the coming of this eminent prelate to our midst was the hearty co-operation of the clergy of other denominations in making the event a notable one. Since coming to South Dakota he has labored with great zeal and ability in advancing the welfare of his church, and under his administration some of the finest and most costly church buildings in the state have been erected. The Bishop is greatly beloved by his people, and throughout the state, regardless of denominational preferences, he is highly esteemed, while the city of Sioux Falls is especially proud of her distinguished citizen." Both by inherent qualities and training the Bishop is eminently fitted for leadership in both the spiritual and temporal affairs of his exalted calling, and his labors are fruitful in a cumulative way and will constitute for all time an integral part of the history not of only the church but also of the commonwealth in which he is serving so faithfully and zealously. In 1902 Bishop O'Gorman went to the city of Rome as a member of the Taft commission, to which was assigned the work of negotiating with the church authorities upon the important business and civic questions connected with the church in the Philippine islands, and in connection with this work he was absent from his diocese for four months.

CLEMENT F. PORTER, president of the Farmers' State Bank of Wilnot, is a native of Addison county, Vermont, born in the city of New Haven, on the 24th day of October, 1861. His parents were Clement and Elizabeth (Como) Porter, both natives of the province of Quebec, Canada, and he is one of nine children, seven sons and two daughters, being the fifth of the family. His early life was beset with many discouraging vicissitudes and not a few hardships, and at the tender age of seven years he was thrown upon his own resources, from which time to the present day he has been obliged to make his own way in the world. When about eleven years old he went to West Boylston, Massachusetts, where he learned the shoemaker's trade, and after working at the same in that city until 1878 went to St. Paul, Minnesota, where during the ensuing four years he was employed in the shoe factory of Forepaugh & Tarbox.

Severing his connection with that firm at the expiration of that time noted, Mr. Porter came to Roberts county, South Dakota, and in 1882 engaged in general merchandising at Wilmot, in company with Edmund Cook, where he did a fairly successful business for a short time, finally disposing of his establishment to take a business course in a commercial college in St. Paul, Minnesota. Finishing the course, he returned to Wilmot and opened a hardware store, which he conducted with profitable results until 1888, when he engaged in the livery business, later turning his attention to real estate, banking and to dealing in agricultural implements. Mr. Porter took a leading part in establishing the Farmers' State Bank of Wilmot, and was made president of the same immediately after its organization, being also a director of the Citizens' National Bank at Sisseton and of the Iowa and Dakota Land and Loan Company, also of Sisseton. A few years ago he sold his implement business, and has since devoted his attention to his financial interests and to agriculture, being quite extensively engaged in the latter, owning a finely improved and valuable farm in Roberts county, which is cultivated under his personal management.

Mr. Porter has been an active participant in public affairs ever since coming to South Dakota, and in 1902 was elected to the upper house of the general assembly as representative from the thirty-fourth senatorial district. A Republican of the most orthodox style, he has been a zealous worker in the party, a leader in its councils in Roberts county, and it was in recognition of his valuable services that the above official honor was conferred upon him. Mr. Porter has served on the Republican central committee of Roberts county, in which capacities he was largely instrumental in formulating the policy of the party and in leading it to victory in local campaigns. Mr. Porter is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is also identified with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights of Pythias fraternities, having represented both the last named organizations in the grand lodge.

Mr. Porter is a married man and owns one of the beautiful and refined homes of Wilmot, the presiding genius of which is a lady of intelligence and culture, who formerly bore the name of Nathalie DeNomme, but who changed it to the one she now so worthily bears on February 14, 1886. Mrs. Porter is a native of Massachusetts and of French descent, and has borne her husband children as follows: Flora M., George W., Clement F., Charles S., Thurman, Harry and Irene, all living but Harry, who died January 12, 1902, aged two years and eleven months.

REV. WILLIAM F. QUILTY, who since the year 1900 has been the efficient pastor of St. Peter's Catholic church of Sisseton, was born in Madison, Wisconsin, on the 12th of November, 1872. He received his preliminary educational training in Dubuque, Iowa, later became a student of St. Joseph's College, and after finishing the prescribed course of that institution was prepared for holy orders in St. Mary's Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, where he completed his theological studies in 1898. Father Quilty entered upon the duties of his holy office in Wisconsin, but after a short pastorate there was appointed, in 1900, to St. Peter's church of Sisseton, where he has since remained and which under his able management and aggressive work has grown into one of the strongest and most influential Catholic congregations in the north-eastern part of the state. Since taking charge of the work at this point the church has prospered along all lines of activity and he has won golden opinions and high respect from all classes of society, irrespective of creed or nationality. His labors for the good of his people have been constant and unwearied, and his unswerving fidelity to the interests of his parish has met with an approbation of his superiors that will be more manifest as the years roll by.

In addition to the church at Sisseton, Father Quilty has charge of the mission points at Wilmot and Effington, both of which have progressed greatly under his pastorate, and it is not too much to predict that ere long these congregations will be self-supporting. Father Quilty is a gentleman of scholarly tastes and, as already stated, his earnest and consecrated efforts have endeared him not only to the people to whom he ministers, but to the public at large. His labors for the spiritual and temporal welfare of his flock have been zealous and unceasing and, being an orator by nature and thoroughly trained by education in pulpit eloquence, his success in performing the duties of his pastorate and winning the love and admiration of his parishioners has been little less than phenomenal. Conscious of the dignity of his mission and losing sight of self in his efforts to extend the Master's kingdom and win souls thereto, his life thus far has been consecrated to duty and the future awaits him with abundant rewards. His scholarly accomplishments, as well as his unfeigned piety and many personal virtues, have made him popular with all classes and conditions of his fellow men, and whatever the future may have in store for him, his name will always be cherished in the hearts of the people among whom he is now laboring with such beneficial results.

CHARLES C. KING is one of the representative citizens and honored business men of Scotland, Bon Homme county, where he has maintained his home since 1890, being president of the First National Bank of Scotland, succeeding the Bank of Scotland in 1903, one of the solid and popular monetary institutions of the state.

Charles Clark King is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born in the town of La Harpe, Hancock county, on the 7th of July, 1863, and being a son of Luranus F. and Laura (Andrews) King, both of whom were born and reared in Ohio, whence they removed to Illinois in an early day. In 1866 they removed to Polo, Ogle county, Illinois, the father there turning his attention to banking. The subject of this sketch secured his educational discipline of a preliminary sort in the public schools, being graduated in the high school at Polo, Illinois, as a member of the class of 1883. He then devoted one year to the reading of law, after which he was employed as a stenographer until 1887, when he removed to Duluth, Minnesota, and there engaged in the real-estate and loan business. In the following year he went to the city of Boston, Massachusetts, where he remained for two years as representative of the American Loan & Trust Company, of Duluth, and at the expiration of this period, in May, 1890, he came to South Dakota and took up his residence in Scotland, where he has ever since maintained his home. He here purchased a controlling interest in the Bank of Scotland, of which institution he has ever since been president. He is known as a careful and conservative executive and able financier and has the confidence and esteem of those with whom he has come in contact in either business or social relations. In politics Mr. King is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party, in whose cause he has ever shown a zealous interest, though never a seeker of political preferment for himself. He served as a member of the state executive committee of his party during the campaign of 1900 and at the time of this writing he is chairman of the Republican central committee of his county. He has held no elective offices save that of treasurer of the school district, of which he is now incumbent. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and fraternally he is an appreciative member of the Masonic order, in which he has attained to the thirty-second degree in the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, being affiliated with Oriental Consistory, No. 1, at Yankton, while he is also a member of the El Riad Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls.

On the 19th of February, 1896, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. King to Miss Della Robinson, daughter of A. F. Robinson, a respected citizen of Dixon, Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. King have one son, Robert R., who was born on the 27th of October, 1900.

FRANK McNULTY, attorney and counsellor at law, of Sisseton, is a native of Minnesota and one of a family of six children, whose parents were born and reared in Ireland. His father came to the United States in the early 'fifties and settling in Illinois, followed stock raising until the breaking out of the Great Rebellion, when he enlisted in the Thirty-third Illinois Infantry, with which he served with an honorable record until the close of the war. Later he moved to Minnesota, where he spent the remainder of his life, dying in the city of St. Cloud in 1896, at the age of fifty-six, his widow being still a resident of that place.

Frank McNulty was born December 1, 1873, in the city of St. Paul and after finishing the public-school course pursued his studies for some time in the University of Minnesota, subsequently, 1900, being graduated from that institution with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Meantime, 1895, he came to South Dakota as principal of the schools of Wilmot and after filling the position one year was elected superintendent of the Roberts county public schools, the duties of which he discharged two terms, having been re-elected in 1898. Retiring from the superintendency, Mr. McNulty resumed his legal studies in the University of Minnesota, and after finishing the same, as stated above, opened an office in Sisseton, where his legal abilities soon won public recognition, as is attested by the lucrative practice which he has since built up and now commands. Although a young man with a comparatively brief experience at the bar, he is recognized as a lawyer of high rank and scholarly attainments, well equipped in every branch of the profession and since locating in his present field of labor he has appeared either for the prosecution or defense in many of the most noted cases tried in the courts of Roberts county.

Mr. McNulty is not only well versed in the basic principles of jurisprudence, but is familiar with the devious methods of practice and, being apt and resourceful, is quick to detect weak points or flaws on the part of opposing counsel and turn them to his own advantage. A close and critical student, he has earned the reputation of an able and honorable adviser, as well as that of a judicious practitioner, and the energy and spirit manifested in cases intrusted to him demonstrate his ability to maintain the justness of his causes. Mr. McNulty is pronounced in his allegiance to the Republican party and has done much to promote its success in Roberts county and throughout South Dakota. He served one year as secretary of the state central committee, in which capacity his labors were duly recognized and appreciated, and he has used his influence in many other ways to insure victory for the cause which has always been very close to his heart. Prominent in local affairs and untiring in his efforts to advance the interests of his city and county, he encourages every legitimate enterprise to these ends, and ever since taking up his residence in South Dakota his name has been very closely identified with movements and measures having for their object the advancement of the state and the prosperity of its people. Mr. McNulty is a director of the Citizens' National Bank of Sisseton and a stockholder in the same, also a director and vice-president of the Iowa Land and Loan Company. In addition to his individual interests as represented by his law practice, he owns considerable land and devotes no little attention to agriculture and stock raising, for both of which he has always manifested a decided liking. Fraternally Mr. McNulty is a member of the Knights of Pythias, in which he now holds the title of past grand chancellor, and he has at different times represented the local lodge in the grand lodge of the state. While in college he was an active worker in the Phi Delta Phi fraternity and still manifests a lively interest in the same, retaining his membership and keeping himself in close touch with its deliberations.

L. WILLIAM FOSS, clerk of the Roberts county courts, is a native of Dodge county, Minnesota, where his birth occurred on July 12, 1878. His parents, Anton and Emma (Folkstadt) Foss, were born in Norway and Minnesota, respectively, both being of Scandinavian origin. Anton Foss lived in Minnesota for a number of years and was a man of considerable prominence in his community. He came to South Dakota in 1880, took a leading part in the public affairs of Roberts county and from 1890 to 1894, inclusive, held the office of register of deeds. His home at the present time is on a farm near Wilmot, but he is interested in the abstract business at Milbank, in the Grant County Abstract and Title Company.

L. William Foss was about two years old when his parents moved to South Dakota, and since that time the greater part of his life has been spent in Roberts county. He has reared on a farm near Wilmot, attended the public schools of that town until finishing the prescribed course of study and in 1896 was appointed deputy register of deeds, which office he held until engaging in the mercantile business at Summit in September of the following year. Mr. Foss sold goods until 1901, when he disposed of his establishment and accepted the position of committee clerk in the house of representatives in the session of 1901. He then came to Sisseton and entered the employ of the Roberts County Abstract and Title Company, with which he remained about one and a half years, when he was elected in 1902 clerk of the circuit and county courts, which office he has since held. Mr. Foss's previous training and experience fitted him to discharge acceptably the duties of the clerkship and his management of the office has fully justified the people in the wisdom of his election. He is an accomplished business man, a ready accountant, and by his courteous treatment of those having business to transact in the office, he has won a warm and permanent place in the hearts of his fellow citizens. A Republican in politics and zealous in upholding his principles, he is nevertheless popular with the people of the county, regardless of party ties and numbers among his warm friends many who hold opinions directly the opposite of his own.

Mr. Foss, on November 25, 1901, was united in marriage with Miss Angie M. Tenney, of Spring Valley, Minnesota, the accomplished daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Tenney, who are among the well-known and highly respected people of that town. Fraternally Mr. Foss is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Improved Order of Red Men, being at this time chief of records in the local lodge of the latter organization in Sisseton. Mr. Foss is one of the rising young men of Roberts county, and his honorable career thus far is prophetic of a much wider sphere of action and greater achievements in years to come.

B. F. CAMPBELL, born Machias, Maine, 1838. Served in Civil war and earned rank of colonel. Register United States land office at Vermillion, 1870. Postmaster Sioux Falls, 1889-93. Died, 1897.

HOMER A. METCALF, for twenty-two years a resident of South Dakota and since 1900 auditor of Roberts county, is a native of the dominion of Canada, born near the city of London, Ontario, on April 13, of the year 1865, being one of eight children, three sons and five daughters, that constituted the family of Anthony and Catherine (Haley) Metcalf, the father of English birth, the mother of German-English descent, but born and reared in Canada. Anthony Metcalf, a carpenter by trade, and later a large and successful contractor, immigrated to South Dakota in 1881 and settled near Wilmot, Roberts county, where he engaged in farming, which vocation he followed until retiring from active life a few years ago and removing to the town of Wilmot. While following building he displayed great energy and acquired an honorable reputation as mechanic and contractor. He was also successful as an agriculturist, and is now enjoying the fruits of his many years of honest toil in the quiet, restful life, which only such busy men as he know how to appreciate fully. Mrs. Catherine Metcalf died in Roberts county in the month of March, 1887.

Homer A. Metcalf spent his childhood and youth on the family homestead near London, Canada, attended the public schools there until about his sixteenth year and in 1881 accompanied his parents to Roberts county, South Dakota, where he has since resided. He continued his studies for some time after coming to this state and when a young man engaged in teaching, which profession he followed of winter seasons for three years. He also pre-empted land, from which in due time he developed a good farm, and after retiring from educational work devoted his entire attention to agriculture until the fall of 1900, when he was elected by the Republican party to the office of county auditor. The better to discharge the duties of his office Mr. Metcalf turned his farm over to other hands and removed to the county seat, where he has since lived, having been chosen his own successor in the year 1902.

Mr. Metcalf has administered his office in an able and praiseworthy manner and his record since taking possession of the same has been eminently creditable to himself and an honor to the county. He keeps in close touch with public affairs, is active as a politician and has contributed much to the success of the Republican party in his section of the state. He retained his landed interests until quite recently, when he disposed of the same, and is now prominently identified with the growth and development of Sisseton, encouraging all efforts making for the city's material prosperity and lending his influence to all enterprises having for their object the social, educational and moral advancement of the community.

On November 20, 1890, Mr. Metcalf entered the marriage relation with Miss Ella Frymire, of Canada, daughter of Philip Frymire, who moved some years ago to Roberts county, South Dakota, where the father is still living, her mother being deceased. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Metcalf, namely: Harold H., Donald C., Paul W., Ray C., Edith May and Winfield, all living and, with their parents, constituting a happy household. The religious belief of Mr. Metcalf is represented by the Methodist church, of which he has been a faithful and consistent member for a number of years. Mrs. Metcalf is also a Methodist, and with her husband belongs to the congregation worshipping at Sisseton.

EDWARD C. GAMM, the leading lumber dealer of Sisseton, was born in Schleswig-Holstein, Germany, on August 24, 1844, being one of the five children of Christopher Gamm, a miller by trade, who came to America in 1865, and departed this life four years later in the state of Connecticut. E. C. was reared and educated in his native country and when a youth learned cabinetmaking, which trade he followed in Germany until 1865, when he came to the United States and secured employment in an organ and piano factory in the city of New York. Subsequently he engaged in the manufacture of doors, sash and other building material at that place, but later, in 1875, went to Stillwater, Minnesota, where he carried on the same line of business for some time in connection with the general lumber trade. In 1885 Mr. Gamm went to St. Paul as agent for the St. Croix Lumber Company, and continued to manage the firm's large interests in that city during the ensuing several years, resigning his position as manager in 1896. In the latter year he came to Sisseton, South Dakota, and started the lumber yard of which he is now general manager, the meanwhile building up an extensive business in lumber and all kinds of building material, such as doors, sash, lath, etc., his establishment being one of the largest of the kind in this part of the state. Since coming west Mr. Gamm has manifested a decided interest in the affairs of Sisseton and Roberts county, being public spirited in all the term implies and ever ready and willing to lend his influence and support to enterprises and measures for the general welfare of the community. He served six years as alderman and could have had almost any local office within the gift of the people had he not positively refused to accept such evidence of public confidence.

Mr. Gamm holds membership with the Knights of Pythias, Improved Order of Red Men, Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Sons of Hermann, and in politics votes the Republican ticket. He has been twice married, the first time, in May, 1869, to Miss Amelia Huhnke, of Germany, who died in 1889 at the age of forty-eight years, leaving three children: Charles, Emma and Edward. Mr. Gamm, on October 23, 1890, contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Louisa Hohlmann, a native of St. Paul, but of German parentage, the union being blessed with two children, a son, William H., and a daughter by the name of Irene. As stated in a preceding paragraph, Mr. Gamm is classed with the most energetic and progressive citizens of Roberts county and in every walk of life he is respected as a courteous, kind-hearted gentleman of sterling integrity and genuine moral worth. He has been quite successful in business, but has other than this to recommend him to the favorable consideration of the community, being interested in everything pertaining to the welfare of his fellow men, a liberal donor to all public and private benevolences, and a supporter of agencies that make for the advancement of his city, county and state. Few stand as high in general esteem and no man in Sisseton enjoys greater popularity or is more worthy of the success he has achieved.

T. H. PEEVER is a native of Canada, and the son of David and Eliza (Huffman) Peever, who came from Ireland about 1860 and settled in Canada where the father purchased land and engaged in agricultural pursuits. Of a family of nine children, six sons and three daughters, T. H. is the eldest in order of birth. He was born August 4, 1862, receiving a good practical education in the public schools of Canada, and in 1881 came to the United States, locating for one year in Michigan, where he engaged in the lumber business. At the expiration of the time noted he went to Wisconsin, where he dealt in lumber during the ensuing nine years, and then sold out and came to Roberts county, South Dakota, arriving at Wilmot on the 25th of March, 1892, before the opening of the reservation. After running a locating office at the above place for a short time, Mr. Peever settled on the present site of Sisseton, where he took up a homestead and later when the town was laid out he assisted in the enterprise, took an active interest in disposing of the lots and was largely instrumental in attracting a thrifty class of people to the place. Shortly after locating at Sisseton, he began dealing in farm machinery, in connection with which he also opened a real estate office, and in due time built up a large and lucrative patronage in both lines of business, continuing the same with encouraging success for a period of six years.

Mr. Peever was the second postmaster of Sisseton, having been appointed to the position by President Cleveland, during whose administration he managed the office in a manner highly satisfactory to the public. He was the first chairman of Sisseton and Sisseton township before incorporation and did much to advance the interests of the community and promote its material growth and development. Mr. Peever has always been an ardent Democrat and since old enough to exercise the rights of citizenship has taken active interest in party politics. In 1899 he was nominated for the senate, but by reason of the county's being overwhelmingly Republican he failed of election, although he made a gallant fight and greatly reduced the normal majority of the opposition. In February, 1900, Mr. Peever organized the Peever-Gorham Mercantile Company of Sisseton, which was incorporated with a capital of fifty thousand dollars for the purpose of establishing and carrying on a general mercantile business, and of which he has since been president and business manager. The company carries full lines of merchandise, demanded by the general trade, owns large and commodious store rooms and does a much more extensive business than any establishment of the kind in the city or county. In addition to this enterprise the subject is president of the First State Bank of Peever, is interested in the Peever Loan Company, and owns a large and valuable farm adjoining Sisseton, which is operated under his direction. Mr. Peever is one of the wide-awake, energetic men of Roberts county, and his ability to carry on successfully large and important enterprises is attested by the financial prosperity that has crowned all of his undertakings. Mr. Peever is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Ancient Order United Workmen and Masonic fraternities, and in the last named organization he holds the office of treasurer at the present time. His domestic life dates from January 22, 1895, at which time he was united in marriage with Miss Agnes P. Rice, who died in 1897, leaving one child, a son by the name of David B. Subsequently, May 18, 1901, Mr. Peever was united in the bonds of wedlock with Miss Emma E. Schindler, a native of Minnesota, and a sister of the Schindler brothers, of Sisseton.

ANDREW D. DARLING, D. D. S., one of the representative dental practitioners of South Dakota, maintaining his residence in the thriving town of Tyndall, is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born in Princeton, Beaver county, on the 19th of September, 1862, a son of William D. and Clara O. (Smith) Darling, and the younger of their two children, his sister, Alice C., being the wife of James McCartney, of Wyncote, Wyoming. The father of the Doctor was born in the state of New York, of stanch Scotch extraction, and when he was a boy his parents removed thence to Illinois, where he was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, receiving his education in the public schools.

At the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a private in the Ninety-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry. At the battle of Look-out Mountain he was suffering an attack of measles but insisted upon taking his place in the ranks and participating in the engagement. When the retreat was made he was too ill to keep in line with his regiment and was captured by the enemy and incarcerated in Andersonville prison, where he died shortly afterward. His widow subsequently became the wife of John Vanderley, and they became the parents of one daughter, Nellie, who is the wife of Edward W. Carrell, residing near Plano, Illinois. The devoted mother entered into eternal rest in 1873.

Dr. Darling was reared in the home of his maternal grandparents, in Marion county, Iowa, and his early educational advantages were such as were afforded in the public schools of that locality, while he began to depend upon his own resources prior to attaining his fifteenth year, having thus been the architect of his own fortunes. For four years he worked as a clerk and general utility boy in a grocery at Pella, Iowa, and at the expiration of this period his employer failed in business and a local buyer offered to purchase the stock and place our subject in charge of the enterprise, but he considered it expedient to refuse the overtures thus made and went to Des Moines, that state, where he secured a clerical position in a leading dry-goods establishment. The sedentary occupation finally made serious inroads on his health and he accordingly determined to remove farther to the west. In the spring of 1892, therefore, he resigned his position and proceeded to western Nebraska, where for the first few months he worked on a ranch, receiving his board in compensation for his services but having in view the recuperation of his energies by the outdoor life. Later he secured a position as bookkeeper for an irrigating company, receiving a nominal salary. In July, 1893, he went to Denver, Colorado, arriving in that city in the midst of the severe financial panic of that year, and there he remained for a period of six weeks, by which time his available financial resources had reached a low ebb, being represented in the sum of twelve dollars. With this capital he purchased a ticket for Omaha, Nebraska, and thence went to Pacific Junction, Iowa, where his elder sister was then living. Shortly afterward he secured a position in an abstract office in Plattsmouth, Nebraska, where he remained until the 1st of March, 1894, when he came to Huron, South Dakota, and entered the dental office of his uncle, Dr. William H. Barker, under whose direction he made a careful study of operative and laboratory dentistry, continuing to be thus engaged for one year, at the expiration of which he went to Austin, Minnesota, in company with a Huron merchant, whom he assisted in establishing his business in the town mentioned. He remained in Austin until October, 1895, when he was matriculated in the American College of Dental Surgery, in the city of Chicago, the institution being now a department of the Northwestern University, of Evanston, Illinois. Dr. Darling continued his studies in this college for two years and then opened an office in South Chicago, and in 1899 he resumed his studies in the same college, where he was graduated in the spring of 1900. During the last year of his college course he worked at night in his little office in South Chicago, often remaining until the morning hours, and while he was thus able to gain financial success in his chosen profession the dual strain caused a distinct impairment of his health, and he was compelled to remain for a short time in a local hospital, after which he returned to his home in South Chicago for a short rest. The exigencies of his business, however, did not permit him to secure the needed quiet and he accordingly removed to South Dakota, taking up his residence in DeSmet, where he passed the winter of 1901, and in the following spring he came to Tyndall, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his chosen profession, having built up a large and representative business and being known as one of the able members of his profession in the state. Dentistry implies both a science and a mechanic art, and in all phases of the same Dr. Darling is amply fortified for the highest order of work, so that his success has come as a natural sequel, while he has attained distinctive personal popularity in his chosen field of endeavor. He gives his allegiance to the Republican party and he is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church. Fraternally the Doctor is identified with Capital Lodge, No. 110, Free and Accepted Masons, Des Moines, Iowa, and Des Moines Lodge, No. 68, Knights of Pythias.

On the 11th of July, 1898, Dr. Darling was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Sturgeon, of DeSmet, this state, and of their three children two are living, namely: Stephen Foster and Paul Eugene, both of whom remain at the parental home. Mrs. Darling is a communicant of the Catholic church.

CHARLES M. STILWILL, one of the able and successful young members of the bar of the state, established in the practice of his profession at Tyndall, Bon Homme county, was born in Hopkinton, Delaware county, Iowa, on the 8th of November, 1875, being a son of Charles H. and Marion (Kirkwood) Stilwill. His father is now postmaster of Tyndall and is individually mentioned on other pages of this work, so that a recapitulation of the family history is not demanded at this juncture. The subject has passed practically his entire life in South Dakota, since he was a child of about five years at the time when his parents removed here from Iowa, and here his early education was received in the public schools, after which he continued his studies in Yankton College. In 1892 he began reading law under the preceptorship of James D. Elliott, of Tyndall, United States district attorney at this time, and in 1894 he was matriculated in the law department of the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, where he was graduated in the spring of 1896. After his graduation Mr. Stilwill associated himself with the law firm of Shull & Farnsworth, of Sioux City, Iowa, remaining with this concern until April 1, 1897, when his former preceptor, J. D. Elliott, was appointed United States district attorney and the subject accepted a partnership with him, and here he has since remained as a partner to Mr. Elliott, while through his ability and discrimination he has gained distinctive prestige in his chosen profession, to which he gives his undivided attention. In politics he gives an inflexible allegiance to the Republican party and has been an active worker in its cause. For the past four years he has been secretary of the Republican committee at Tyndall. He is a member of the Congregational church at Tyndall, and is treasurer of the church at the time of this writing, taking a zealous interest in all departments of its work. Fraternally he is a member of Bon Homme Lodge, No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is secretary; and he is also identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 27th of December, 1899, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stilwill to Miss Mary A. McAuley, of Tyndall, and they are the parents of three children, Helen C., Ruth M. and Charles Frederick.

JOSEPH ZITKA, cashier of the Security Bank at Tyndall, is a native of Bohemia, where he was born on the 21st of March, 1850, being a son of Joseph and Anna (Riha) Zitka, of whose three children he is the elder of the two surviving, the other being Frances, who is the wife of Charles Vaulk, of Bon Homme county, this state. The father of the subject was a farmer in his native land, where he continued to reside until 1867, when he immigrated with his family to the United States, locating in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, where he remained about three years, after which he came as a pioneer to South Dakota, which was then still a portion of the great undivided territory of Dakota. He located in Bon Homme county, where he took up a homestead claim and again turned his attention to agricultural pursuits. He was a man of energy and excellent business judgment, and through his well-directed efforts he attained a definite success in connection with his industrial enterprise as a pioneer of this state, while he so lived as to command the respect of all who knew him. At the time of his death, which occurred in September, 1902, he was a resident of Bon Homme county, South Dakota, and his political faith was that of the Democratic party.

The subject of this sketch received his early educational discipline in his native land, being accorded the advantages of the excellent schools in the vicinity of his home, and being about seventeen years of age at the time of the family's emigration to the United States. After locating in South Dakota he continued to be associated with his father in his farming enterprises until 1883, a partnership relation having been maintained. He early became interested in matters of public concern and eventually became a prominent factor in the local councils of the Democratic party, of whose principles and policies he has ever been a stalwart advocate. In 1872 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners of Bon Homme county and in the ensuing year he was still further honored by being chosen to represent his district in the legislature of the territory, while in 1876 he was again elected a member of the board of county commissioners. In 1883 Mr. Zitka was elected register of deeds of Bon Homme county, having become a resident of this county in 1870, and this office he held for three consecutive terms of two years each. In 1889 he was a member of the constitutional convention, at Sioux Falls, which formulated the present admirable constitution of the state. In 1898 he was elected treasurer of Bon Homme county, and thereupon became a resident of Tyndall, the county seat having been removed to this place from Bon Homme in 1885.

In 1880 was effected the organization of the Security Bank in Tyndall and Mr. Zitka was chosen cashier of the new institution, a position of which he has ever since remained incumbent, while his discriminating management of its affairs has shown him to be an able executive and through his efforts the institution has become one of the popular and solid ones of the state. He is the owner of about fifteen hundred acres of valuable farming land in Bon Homme county. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church and fraternally he is a member of Bon Homme Lodge, No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons.

On the 8th of June, 1877, Mr. Zitka was united in marriage to Miss Mary Bohac, of Crete, Nebraska, and of this union have been born eight children, concerning whom we enter the following brief record: Hattie is the wife of Frank Chladek, of Hawarden, Iowa; Rose is the wife of John Herman, of Tabor, South Dakota; and Mary, Charles, Anna, Agnes, Frances and George still remain at the parental home, which is a center of refined hospitality.

CHARLES H. STILWILL, the able and popular incumbent of the office of postmaster at Tyndall, is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born in Genesee county, New York, on the 7th of February, 1843, a son of Hiram R. and Melinda (Drake) Stilwill, of whose four children three survive, namely: Kesiah, who is the wife of John P. Dickey, of Cherokee, Iowa; Charles H., subject of this sketch; and John G., who is superintendent of the Emma mines, at Alta City, Utah. Hiram R. Stilwill was likewise born in Genesee county, of stanch Holland ancestry, and in his native county he received a good English education, having been for a number of years a successful teacher in the district schools, while later he gave his attention to the nursery business. He died of typhus fever, in 1853, at the age of thirty-seven years, our subject having been a lad of ten years at the time. His widow subsequently contracted a second marriage, becoming the wife of Joseph B. Craft, and of this union was born one child, George H., who is now a resident of Oakfield, New York. The mother was summoned into eternal rest in 1871. Her father, John Drake, was an active participant in the war of 1812. William Stilwill, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, whither his parents immigrated from Holland, and there he took up a tract of land in what was commonly known as the Holland Purchase.

Charles H. Stilwill, whose name introduces this sketch, was reared in his native county and received his early educational training in the common schools. In 1865 he severed the home ties and set forth to seek his fortunes in the west. He came to Iowa, arriving in Dubuque the day following the assassination of President Lincoln, and he thence carried the news of this lamentable tragedy into Delaware county, that state, where he devoted his attention to farm work for the ensuing three years. He was married in 1868 and shortly afterward engaged in the manufacture of fanning mills, at Hopkinton, Iowa, and one year later he removed to a farm which he had previously purchased, in Delaware county, and there he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until the spring of 1879, when he disposed of his farm and came to the territory of Dakota, passing the first summer in Yankton, and arriving in Bon Homme county, on the 7th of September, 1879. For about sixteen months thereafter he served as deputy register of deeds of the county, and in 1881 he was appointed clerk of the courts, which incumbency he retained for the long period of eleven years, giving most capable and satisfactory service. Within this time he also gave his attention to the real-estate business, becoming one of the leading representatives of this line of enterprise in this section. He associated himself with G. W. Roberts, of Yankton, and Thomas Thorson, of Canton, in the organization of the Corn Belt Real Estate Association, which has accomplished so great a work in furthering the settlement of the state and the development of its industrial resources. Mr. Stilwill has been called to other offices of public trust, having served as deputy sheriff and as deputy county treasurer, and in all positions he has held the implicit confidence of the people of the county. In 1897 he was appointed postmaster at Tyndall, and in 1902 he received a reappointment under President Roosevelt. He is still largely interested in real estate, owning valuable property in Tyndall and extensive tracts of farming land in the county, and he has done much to promote the general welfare and material progress of this favored section of our great commonwealth. In politics Mr. Stilwill gives an unequivocal allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is affiliated with Bon Homme Lodge, No. 101, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Springfield Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and Tyndall Lodge, Knights of Pythias. He is a member of the Congregational church, as was also his devoted and cherished wife.

On the 11th of February, 1868, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stilwill to Miss Marian Kirkwood, of Hopkinton, Iowa, who proved to him a true helpmeet until her death, which occurred on the 12th of March, 1903. She was held in affectionate regard by all who knew her, being a woman of gracious and noble character, and she is survived by her four children, namely: Agnes, who is the wife of James D. Elliott, United States district attorney, residing in Tyndall; Dr. Hiram R., who is a practicing physician in Denver, Colorado; Charles M., who is a well-known attorney of Tyndall, being individually mentioned on another page of this work, and Hayes K., who is bookkeeper in the Security Bank, of Tyndall.

REV. EDWARD M. FIEREK, the able and popular priest in charge of St. Leo's Catholic church in Tyndall, Bon Homme county, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in Stevens Point, Portage county, on the 13th of October, 1874, a son of August and Johanna (Kropidowski) Fierek, both of whom were born in Poland, where they were reared and educated, having come thence to the United States about 1873, locating in Wisconsin, where their marriage was solemnized. August Fierek rendered valiant service in the Franco-Prussian war, and he came to America shortly after the expiration of his term of service. After his arrival in Wisconsin he was for a short time engaged in farm work, after which he became identified with railroad work, in which he continued, in various capacities, until about 1898, when he met with an accident which necessitated the amputation of his right leg, and since that time he has lived retired, maintaining his home in Ironwood, Michigan, and still having the companionship of his devoted wife, both being communicants and zealous workers in the Catholic church.

Rev. Father Fierek passed his boyhood days in his native state of Wisconsin, and his early education was secured in the parochial schools of Stevens Point, after which he took a classical and philosophical course of study in St. Joseph's College, at Dubuque, Iowa. Thereafter his studies were interrupted for an interval of about three years, at the expiration of which he was enabled to carry forward his long cherished plans of preparing himself for the priesthood, entering St. Mary's Seminary, in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he completed his theological course, being graduated in June, 1901, and in September of the same year he was ordained to the priesthood, at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, under the episcopal offices of Bishop O'Gorman. Soon after his ordination Father Fierek was assigned to the parish of Sts. Peter and Paul church, in Pierre, as assistant to Father John J. O'Neill, and there he remained until June 15, 1902, when he was sent to his present charge, where he has gained the affectionate regard of his parishioners and the high esteem of all who know him. Father Fierek is a young man of genial and gracious personality, earnest in the work to which he has consecrated his life, kindly and tolerant in his judgment, and one well adapted to the noble calling to which he has given himself in the fullness of faith and self-abnegating humility.

PATRICK WILLIAM McKEEVER, chief of the well-equipped fire department of the city of Sioux Falls, is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born in the city of Dixon, Lee county, on the 11th of January, 1868, and being a son of Patrick and Alice McKeever, who removed thence to St. Louis, Missouri, when he was a mere child, his father being a tailor by vocation. The parents are now living in St. Louis, Missouri. The subject passed his early youth in the metropolis of Missouri, and there received the advantages of the parochial and public schools. In 1884, at the age of sixteen years, he left St. Louis, and went to Kentland, Indiana, where he served an apprenticeship at the tailor's trade, at which he was employed in various parts of the Union until 1887, when he came to Sioux Falls, where he followed his trade until 1892, when he engaged in the hotel business, to which he continued to give his attention, as proprietor of the Winsor and Central hotels, finally leading to his appointment to his present office as chief of the local fire department. He joined the volunteer fire department soon after coming to Sioux Falls, and continued with the same after the department was acquired by the municipal government, his ability and fidelity finally leading to his appointment to his present position. He is a man of genial nature and enjoys the esteem and confidence of the people of the city, who realize that he is ever watchful of their interests and ever ready to respond to the call of duty in offering protection to life and property. In politics the chief was formerly affiliated with the Democracy, but at the time of the first nomination of the late lamented President McKinley he transferred his allegiance to the Republican party, of whose principles he has since been a staunch advocate. In 1897-98 he represented the first ward on the board of aldermen of the city. Religiously he is a Catholic, while his fraternal relations are with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 2d of June, 1900, Mr. McKeever was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Houser, a daughter of Adam Houser, of Salem, this state, and their pleasant home is one in which a gracious hospitality is ever in evidence.

THOMAS J. BUSHELL, junior member of the well-known firm of Roberts & Bushell, proprietors of the White Seal cigar factory in the city of Sioux Falls, the largest concern of the sort in the state, is one of the popular and representative business men of the state, and has been a resident of Sioux Falls for more than a score of years, while for seventeen years he held the position of engineer at the state penitentiary here.

Mr. Bushell is a native of Birmingham, England, where he was born on the 4th of July, 1860, being a son of J. G. and Sarah (Bell) Bushell, who still remain in England, his father being a saddler by vocation. The subject secured his educational training in the excellent schools of his native land, and in the city of Birmingham learned the trade of steam-fitting, having become a skilled artisan in the line prior to his immigration to America. He came to the United States in 1879, in April of which year he located in the city of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he was employed at his trade for some time, and later was similarly engaged in the city of Chicago. In 1882 he came to Sioux Falls, under contract with a leading Chicago concern, to take charge of the steam-fitting in the South Dakota penitentiary and the Cataract hotel, and after the completion of the work he was appointed engineer at the penitentiary, where he continued to give most effective service for the long period of seventeen years, at the expiration of which he resigned in order to engage in his present line of business. In May, 1902, Mr. Bushell entered into partnership with John H. Roberts, a practical cigarmaker, and organized the firm of Roberts & Bushell, and in the comparatively brief intervening period they have built up a large and prosperous business, their trade ramifying throughout the state, while they manufacture cigars of the highest grade, employing the most skilled workmen and utilizing select stock. Their large and well-equipped factory is located at 328 South Phillips avenue, and the concern figures as one of the important commercial and industrial enterprises of the city, while the members of the firm are known as reliable, wide-awake and progressive business men, commanding the confidence and esteem of all with whom they have dealings.

In politics Mr. Bushell accords an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party, in whose ranks he has been for a number of years a most active and effective worker, being prominent in the party councils in the state, and being at the present time a representative of Minnehaha county on the state central committee, while for the past several years he has been a delegate to the successive state conventions of his party, as well as to minor conventions. In 1900 he was elected a member of the city council, and was chosen as his own successor in 1902, so that at the time of this writing he is serving his second term, doing all in his power to further the interests of clean and conservative municipal government and being animated by a distinctive public spirit, so that he proves a valuable member of the body. He is one of the leading members of the Ancient Order of United Workmen in the state, being affiliated with Jasper Lodge, No. 21, and in 1900 and 1901 he had the distinction of serving as department grand master of the order in the state. He is also identified with Sioux Falls Lodge, No. 9, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and with Sioux Falls Aerie, No. 318, Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he is president at the time of this writing.

On the 28th of May, 1884, Mr. Bushell was united in marriage to Miss Lena Haugen, a daughter of Otto and Anna Haugen, her father being one of the prominent farmers of Turner county, this state, while she was born in Norway. Mr. and Mrs. Bushell have one child, Florence Belle, who was born on the 5th of August, 1889, and who is one of the popular young women in her social circles.

JACOB SCHLAETZEL, JR., one of the best known citizens of Sioux Falls, and who has the distinction of having been the first mayor of the city after its incorporation as such, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born on a farm in Washington county, on the 16th of May, 1850, and being a son of Jacob and Katharine (Kissinger) Schaezel, both of whom were born in Darmstadt, Germany, the father having been a farmer by vocation and having passed the closing years of his life in Freeport, Illinois, where he died in 1899, his devoted wife passing away in 1885, while all of their eight children are living at the present time. After completing the curriculum of the district schools the subject continued his studies in the Lawrence University, at Appleton, Wisconsin. At the age of nineteen years he secured employment as clerk in a store at Freeport, Illinois, where he remained for a period of six years, gaining practical knowledge, which proved of great value to him in his later and independent business operations. Mr. Schaezel became one of the pioneers of Minnehaha county, South Dakota, where he took up his residence on the 22d of February, 1876, settling in Sioux Falls, which was at the time a straggling little village of about two hundred and fifty population. In the intervening years he has left an indelible impress upon the civic, industrial and business affairs of the city, county and state, while to him has come a due measure of success as the result of his well-directed endeavors along legitimate lines of enterprise. For the first few years after his arrival in the state Mr. Schaezel gave his attention principally to the real-estate and insurance business and to the shipping in of horses, for which he found a ready demand as the tide of immigration set in. For two years he conducted a livery and sales stable in Sioux Falls, and since that time his name has been associated with a large number of important and varied business enterprises, while he has accumulated a competence. He is the owner of valuable property in the city and county and is a stockholder in various industrial and financial concerns, having been at one time a stockholder in the German Bank, and a member of its directorate. As has been well said of him, "There are no negative elements in his makeup; he is energetic and enterprising, and is a good citizen."

In politics Mr. Schaezel accords an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party, in whose cause he has been an active worker, being one of the wheelhorses of the party in Minnehaha county. In 1881, upon the death of Thomas T. Cochran, who has been incumbent of the office, he was elected president of the village council of Sioux Falls, and forthwith showed his progressive ideas and strong power of initiative by vigorously agitating the question of securing to the place a charter as a city, its population and commercial prestige at the time entitling its incorporation as such. He called a meeting of the citizens for the consideration of the matter, and within the autumn of that year definite steps were taken toward the accomplishment of the desired end, a city charter being drafted and other necessary preliminary work accomplished. The president of the village then went to the territorial capital and presented the claims of Sioux Falls to the legislature, which duly passed the bill authorizing the incorporation as a city. At the first general election under the new charter, in 1882, Mr. Schaetzel was further honored by his fellow citizens by being elected the first mayor of the city, receiving a most gratifying support and continuing in tenure of the office for a term of two years, while he gave a most able, careful and business-like administration, the burdens imposed upon him in the connection being heavy, as his term of office was one marked by reorganization and readjustment in municipal affairs, but his vigorous policy was such that harmony and wise administration marked the course of his official career. He was county commissioner for the fifth district during the years 1893-4-5, and was a very active and influential member of the board, while his aid and influence have at all times been loyally given in support of all measures and undertakings for the advancement of the best interests of the city and state.

On the 7th of September, 1871, Mr. Schaetzel was united in marriage to Miss Catharine Brenner, who was born and reared in Washington county, Wisconsin, being a daughter of Peter and Christina (Kissinger) Brenner, both of whom died in Polk, Washington county, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Schaetzel have two children, Marie, who is the wife of Ernest D. Skillman, of Irene, this state, and William A., who is engaged in business at Elk Point. The subject is a member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he has passed the degrees of lodge and chapter.

BENJAMIN L. WALKER, farmer and stock raiser and since 1893 treasurer and tax collector of Lyman county, South Dakota, is a native of Pennsylvania and the son of Abner and Lucinda (Risling) Walker, now living in Hutchinson county, South Dakota, the father being a retired farmer and stock raiser. Abner Walker moved his family to South Dakota in 1870 and located on a homestead near Yankton, where he lived a few years, subsequently changing his abode to Bon Homme county. He became a large land holder and well-to-do farmer and stock raiser in Bon Homme and after acquiring a competence moved to the town of Olivet, where, as stated above, he is now passing the evening of a well-spent life in honorable retirement. Of his four children all are living.

Benjamin L. Walker was born March 26, 1866, in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, and at the age of four years was brought by his parents to South Dakota, where he grew to maturity and has since lived and in the public school of which he received a fair education. Reared amid the stirring scenes of farm life and early taught the varied duties of agriculture, his training has been mostly of a practical character, acquired in the stern school of experience, by coming in contact with the world in different business capacities. The family came to this state when scattering settlements were few and far between, and he experienced his full share of the vicissitudes incident to life on the frontier. He spent his youth on the homestead near Yankton, later assisted his father develop and improve the latter's land in the county of Bon Homme, and on reaching the age when young men are expected to leave home and form their own plans for the future, he turned his attention to agriculture and stock raising, both of which callings he followed with success and financial profit until 1900, when he was elected treasurer and tax-collector of Lyman county, since which time he has lived in the town of Oacoma, the county seat.

Mr. Walker owns a fine ranch of two hundred acres, a part of which is under cultivation, the rest being devoted to live stock, in the prosecution of which business he has met with most encouraging results, making a specialty of the noted Hereford breed of cattle, for which there is always a strong demand at liberal prices. He has made a number of substantial improvements on his place, having good buildings, including a comfortable and attractive residence, which while he occupied was furnished with all the comforts and conveniences calculated to make rural life desirable. The better to attend to the duties of his office, he changed his residence, shortly after his election, to the seat of justice, where he now has a commodious home and with the material growth and prosperity of which town he has been actively identified. Mr. Walker is one of the leading Republicans of Lyman county, and as an energetic and able counsellor he has contributed greatly to the success of Republican principles in the county of Lyman and elsewhere.

In the year 1894 Mr. Walker and Miss Leila Brown, of Iowa, were united in marriage, Mrs. Walker's parents at this time being residents of Lyman county, South Dakota. Her father is a farmer and stock raiser, owning a valuable ranch and devoting especial attention, not only to raising cattle and horses, but to the buying and shipping the same, doing a large and thriving business and rapidly becoming one of the wealthy men of the section of country in which he lives. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have an interesting family of six children whose names are Loretta, Maude, Edyth, Viola, Ivan and Florence, all living and those old enough attending the public schools of Oacoma.

RICHARD L. SMITH is a native of Jennings county, Indiana, where he was born on the 26th of April, 1833, being one of the eleven children born to James P. and Eliza A. (Beecham) Smith. His father was a farmer and each of the eight sons assisted in the work of the homestead place, while during the winter terms they were able to attend the district schools. At the age of eighteen Mr. Smith proved himself eligible for pedagogic honors, securing a license to teach school. He proved successful in his work as a teacher and devoted his attention to this profession for three successive years, while during this time he relegated the work of the farm to his younger brothers and worked at the carpenter's trade during the summer vacation periods. During this time he was giving as much attention as possible to the study of medicine, first carrying on his studies under the direction of his older brother, a successful practicing physician, and then passing two years under the effective preceptorship of Dr. William F. Riley, of Omega, Indiana, who took a great interest in the young man and aided him in more ways than one. The subject, during this time, made his home with his preceptor and in the fall of 1855 he obtained from Dr. Riley a certificate of qualification which enabled him to practice medicine under the laws of Indiana. After a short time he removed to Illinois, being engaged in practice at Decatur for two years and then taking up his residence in Salem, that state, while in the following year he entered the office of Dr. Stephen F. Mercer, of that place, and devoted two years to a systematic review of his professional studies.

At the outbreak of the Rebellion Dr. Smith was among the first to tender his services in defense of the Union. On May 9, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company G, Twenty-first Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and for the ensuing four years and nine months the history of his regiment is coincident with his personal career as a valiant and loyal soldier. He participated in many of the most important battles incident to the progress of the great fratricidal conflict, his regiment being for the greater portion of the time a part of the Army of the Cumberland, and it was his good fortune to escape wounds and sickness, while he never asked for or received a furlough or a leave of absence. He was always present for active duty or for detached service and his fidelity and zeal never wavered during the long and arduous service which he rendered in behalf of the nation's honor and integrity. He was made first lieutenant of his company in October, 1862, prior to the battle of Stone River, in which he was an active participant. He was promoted to captain after the capture of Atlanta in 1864 and received his honorable discharge, at Springfield, Illinois, on the 6th of February, 1866.

After the close of his military service Dr. Smith returned to his former home, in Marion county, Illinois, for the purpose of securing a much needed rest, and there he purchased a farm, which he operated by proxy. In 1868 he made a vigorous campaign for the office of clerk of the circuit court, and he states that in the connection he was "defeated by a respectable majority." In June, 1869, he was appointed by President Grant as superintendent of Indian schools for the northwest, Nez Perces, of Idaho; Shoshones, of Wyoming; and Red Clouds, of South Dakota, resigning in February, 1872. In October, 1872, Dr. Smith entered the employ of the great publishing house of Lippincott & Company, of Philadelphia, and was assigned the management of their educational department for the northwest. In the following year he was appointed steward of the Illinois state prison, at Joliet, retaining this office until 1874, after which he devoted his attention to his profession until 1882, when he came to South Dakota and took up a claim in township 113, range 70, Hand county, where he has ever since maintained his home and where he has developed and improved a valuable farm of six hundred and forty acres. Five acres of his ranch are under cultivation and the remainder is devoted to the raising of hay and to grazing purposes. He raises an excellent grade of live stock, giving special attention to the breeding of horses, in which he has met with marked success. He has not been actively engaged in the practice of his profession for a number of years, but still takes a deep interest in the science and keeps in touch with the advances made in the same.

Dr. Smith has been an active factor in public affairs ever since coming to the territory and the state of South Dakota can find no one more loyal to its interests than is he. He has been a staunch supporter of the principles of the Republican party from the time of its organization. He was the first superintendent of schools for Hand county and a member of the first state constitutional convention, and in 1891 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners of Hand county, serving three years, during the last of which he was chairman of the board. In 1892 he was the nominee of his party for the state senate, but met the defeat which attended the ticket in general throughout the state. In 1902 he was elected to represent his district in the lower house of the legislature, serving during the ensuing general assembly with marked ability and to the satisfaction of his constituents who had honored him by their preferment. He was chairman of the committee on public health and also a member of the important committees on ways and means and education. In March, 1902, the Doctor was made the recipient of a beautiful gold-headed cane, which was presented by the Aberdeen District Medical Society, in recognition of his valuable services as chairman of the house committee first mentioned. The Doctor is a member of Masonic fraternity and of the State Historical Society. In religious matters he is liberal and tolerant, having the deepest respect for the essential spiritual verities.

On the 15th of July, 1872, Dr. Smith was united in marriage to Miss Emma D. White, of Iuka, Illinois. She was born in Bond county, Illinois, and is a daughter of Robert F. White, who was an honored pioneer of Illinois. Dr. and Mrs. Smith have two sons, Lawrence N. W., born in prison, Joliet, Illinois, April 6, 1874, and who is now on the home farm, and Clarence I. W., who was born in Marion county, Illinois, December 7, 1876, and is also on the home farm.

LIZZIAM ARCHAMBEAN, who resides in the pleasant village of Geddes, Charles Mix county, is of English extraction and was born in Canada, in the year 1833, being there reared to the age of seventeen years and securing limited educational advantages in his youth, while he has been dependent upon his own resources from his boyhood days and is worthy of the honored American title of self-made man. At the age noted he located in the lumbering district of Wisconsin, where he secured employment in rafting logs down the Wisconsin river, working in the great timber forests during the winter months. He remained in Wisconsin about four years and then went to St. Louis, where he met a fellow countryman, with whom he remained some time, having been employed in the city and vicinity for two and one-half years, at the expiration of which he went down the Mississippi river to Vicksburg, Mississippi, where he remained one year. He then made the trip up the Mississippi and Missouri rivers into the territory of Dakota, arriving here in the year 1859. He found employment for two years at Fort Randall, and he then began to contract for the cutting of logs for use at the garrison, and also got out considerable timber for use in the building of boats. The white settlers were few and far between during those early years, and the great plains were swept by great herds of buffaloes, while elk, deer and bears roamed about almost unmolested, save as hunted by the Indians. In 1862 Mr. Archambean was united in marriage to Miss Adaline Vassor, and they are the parents of ten children, Battia, Joseph, Mary, Julia, Moses, Louis, Annie, Adeline, Josie and Sophia. Mr. Archambean began farming in South Dakota as early as the year 1867, and he is at the present time the owner of two hundred and forty acres of land, of which eighty acres are under effective cultivation, while the remainder is utilized principally for grazing purposes. He rents the farm and is living practically retired in Geddes. He is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party, and served for some time as road overseer, and both he and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church.

MARTIN HARRIS, of Clark, Clark county, is a native of the old Buckeye state, having been born in Portage county, Ohio, on the 2d of December, 1831, and he is a son of Hosea and Caroline (Skinner) Harris, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in Massachusetts, while both families were early founded in America. The father of the subject removed to Ohio in the pioneer era in that state, and there passed the remainder of his life, having been a mason by trade and vocation. Both he and his wife were persons of lofty integrity, living earnest and worthy lives. Of their four children one is now living, the subject of this review, he having been the second in order of birth. His mother died when he was a lad of twelve years, and his father passed to his final rest about six years later.

Martin Harris remained at the parental home until the same was broken up by the death of his mother, having in the meanwhile secured such advantages as were afforded in the common schools of his native county. At the age of twelve years he became largely dependent upon his own resources, and thus began the stern battle of life when a mere boy. He was employed at farm work for several years, and then learned the carpenter trade, as well as that of cabinet-making, while thereafter he was employed as a builder and in car shops, learning to be a skilled draftsman in the meanwhile. About 1866 he purchased a farm in Geauga county, Ohio, devoting his attention to its cultivation about seven years, after which he was similarly engaged in Marshall county, Indiana, until he came to South Dakota. In 1885 he disposed of his farm in the Hoosier state, and came to Dakota territory, locating in Clark county, where he has ever since resided. He took up two hundred acres of government land, in Merton township, and reclaimed the same from its primitive condition, making it a fertile and productive farm, while to the original claim he added until he was the owner of a well-improved ranch of two hundred acres, equipped with high-grade buildings, in distinct contrast to those which he built upon first coming to the county, for his original dwelling was a primitive sod house. Mr. Harris devoted himself zealously and indefatigably to the cultivation and improvement of his land, and with the passing of the years gained a competency, which enables him to pass the evening of his life in that quiet and dignified repose which constitute the just reward for his long years of earnest toil and endeavor. In the spring of 1901 he disposed of his farm and purchased a good residence property in the county seat, where he has since lived retired from active business. In politics Mr. Harris was formerly a Republican, but in later years has given his support to the Prohibition party, being a zealous advocate of the temperance cause. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and have been active in good works and kindly deeds.

On the 12th of November, 1865, in Kent, Portage county, Ohio, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Harris to Miss Eliza Ferris, who was born in New York on the 31st of January, 1832, being a daughter of John and Hannah (Black) Ferris, the former a native of New York and the latter of Massachusetts. They removed to Ohio in 1834, and there passed the remainder of their lives, Mr. Ferris having been a shoemaker by trade and vocation. Mrs. Harris was the youngest in a family of ten children, of whom she is the only one yet living. The subject and his estimable wife, who has been to him a devoted companion and helpmeet, have three children: Emma is the wife of Albert Bull, who is engaged in the creamery business in Parkston; Grant, who married Miss Ora Page, deals in farm machinery in Clark, and Frank, who married Miss Sadie Keling, now deceased, is employed in the real-estate business in Clark.

HON. E. D. WHEELOCK is one of the pioneers of South Dakota, and has been actively identified with the industrial and general business interests of Codington county since its organization. He is now one of the oldest settlers in the eastern part of the state, and it is but justice to say that few, if any, have been more prominent than he in public affairs or have exerted greater influence upon its material, political and business history.

E. D. Wheelock combines in his physical and mental make-up the best elements of New England manhood, coming of that good old colonial stock that figured so prominently in the struggle for independence and in the war of 1812. The Wheelock family is of English descent and was represented in this country at an early period, the American branch locating in Massachusetts, when the few scattered settlements were but niches in the almost impenetrable forests. Cyrus Wheelock was a son of Henry Wheelock, a farmer and cooper, who spent all his life in Massachusetts. Cyrus Wheelock, also a native of that state, was reared to agriculture, which he always followed. He married Lois Ober, whose father, Peter Ober, also a descendant of an old Massachusetts family, served in the war of 1812, as did also Henry Wheelock, brother of Cyrus. Cyrus and Lois Wheelock reared a family of five children, three sons and two daughters.

E. D. Wheelock, son of Cyrus, was born April 5, 1847, in Johnson, Lemoille county, Vermont, and in 1854 was taken to McHenry county, Illinois, where he grew to maturity on a farm. After attending the common schools he entered an academy at Wauconda, but soon laid aside his studies and, though but a youth of sixteen, enlisted in September, 1863, in Company G, Seventeenth Illinois Cavalry, and served until honorably discharged, in February, 1866, taking part in the campaigns in Missouri and the southwest, his command toward the latter part of the war being sent to quiet the hostile Indians in Kansas and Colorado.

In 1866 Mr. Wheelock went to Iowa, thence the year following, to Steele county, Minnesota, locating near Owatonna, where he engaged in farming, which, with teaching, occupied his attention during the ensuing ten years. Meanwhile he learned the miller's trade, and followed the same at intervals, but his chief employment was agriculture, which he prosecuted until 1878. In that year he came to Codington county and took up a homestead about three miles north of Watertown, but for the last fifteen years his principal business has been buying grain for the Atlas Elevator Company, of Minneapolis, in connection with which he carries on an extensive store at Kampeska, of which place he is also postmaster, having been appointed to the position in 1884, when the office was established.

Mr. Wheelock carries a full line of general merchandise and commands a lucrative trade. He took an active interest in the organization of the county, served for nine years as a member of the board of county commissioners, and in 1895 was elected to the upper house of the state legislature, where he earned the reputation of an able, discreet and judicious member. Mr. Wheelock has been prominent in the Republican party, and his efforts have made him one of the party leaders in the county. He is a wide-awake, enterprising and progressive business man, and his public work has won him more than local repute. His loyalty is of that kind which subordinates other considerations to the public good. He has been successful in his business and has an ample competence.

E. D. WHEELOCK.

Mr. Wheelock was married April 10, 1869, to Miss Eliza McClelland, of Maine, but at that time a resident of Freeborn county, Minnesota. She is the daughter of William J. McClelland, one of the pioneers of that state, and has borne her husband eleven children, namely: Ruby L., wife of O. M. Brown, of Watertown; Bertha S. married Robert Lewis and lives in North Dakota; Edwin M., a traveling salesman; Nellie G., now Mrs. Fred M. Ray, of North Dakota; Emery F.; Cyrus J.; Dickinson O.; Benjamin H. died February 6, 1902, at the age of fourteen years; Clifford R. and Warren W., the last two still members of the home circle.

Mr. Wheelock is an enthusiastic member of the Grand Army of the Republic. In this connection it may be proper to state that his father also served from the beginning of the Civil war to its close as a member of Company F, Ninety-fifth Illinois Infantry, and a brother, L. C. Wheelock, was also in the same command and distinguished himself.

CHARLES K. THOMPSON, whose finely improved farm is located one and a half miles north of Northville, Spink county, was born in Burlington, Kane county, Illinois, on the 2d of February, 1860, and is a son of T. J. and Hannah A. Thompson, both of whom were born in West Virginia, the former being of English and Irish ancestry and the latter of English and Welsh. When they were children they accompanied their respective parents on their immigration to Illinois, making the overland trip from West Virginia with wagons and becoming numbered among the early settlers of Kane county, Illinois, where both were reared to maturity and where their marriage was solemnized. There the father of the subject continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until 1881, when he came to South Dakota, where both he and his wife passed the residue of their long and useful lives, having been honored pioneers of Spink county. They were accompanied by their four sons and one daughter and all are still living in the state except the youngest son, who died in 1891 in Northville, to which he had been removed while sick.

Concerning the early experiences of the family in South Dakota we are gratified to be able to offer the following interesting little narrative, contributed by the subject of this sketch: "I came to the territory of Dakota in December, 1880, and first set my foot on the ice-fettered surface of the 'roaring Jim' river on Christmas day. I came through from Watertown by team, accompanied by my brother, J. R. Thompson, who is now engaged in the practice of medicine in Northville, and who had been in Spink county with our father during the preceding summer and broken a small portion on one of the claims which had been taken up, while they had erected a sod house and stable. Father desired to return to the old home in Illinois for the winter, in the meanwhile making preparations for bringing the remainder of the family to the new home in the spring, together with the household effects and other requisite supplies. He thus requested me and my brother to come out and take care of the stock and keep the primitive little home cheerful during the intervening winter months. Well, I discovered forthwith that this was a big country and that the wind not only had a great sweep but also that it swept! The house had been roofed with boards covered with tarred paper, and to keep the latter in place stones had been placed on the corners. These were not, however, sufficient to hold the roof so closely to the sod as to prevent the gentle zephyrs from sifting the 'beautiful snow' under the edge of the roof and waking us from dreams of home and loved ones. This was the season known as the winter of the big snow, and the snow covered our stable so completely that we were often compelled to feed our stock through an opening in the roof. As it was quite impossible for horses to travel in the snow nearly all travel was done on foot, by means of snow shoes. The snowfall being unusual, the settlers had not prepared for it, and their supply of flour was consumed long before spring opened, and in many cases wheat was taken miles to a neighbor who was fortunate in possessing a coffee-mill in which the cereal could be partially ground and thus made available for food. As for my brother and myself, we had buried near our house a quantity of potatoes which were being reserved for seed, and when necessity came we unearthed these tubers and fared on the same very well for two or three weeks, having only salt to lend relish. It is my opinion that at that time we were located farther to the west than any other settler in the county. At least we saw nothing to the west save occasionally a wolf or coyote. However, on a certain day about a hundred antelope visited our ranch, and we succeeded in catching one of the number, being unable to shoot any of them as we had loaned our only gun to a neighbor. We attempted to domesticate the animal which we had captured, endeavoring to teach it to eat hay and adapt itself to the customs of civilization. Its refusal to comply with our instructions brought it to an untimely end, as we were soon compelled to kill it. Finally came the advent of spring: floods came; folks came; flowers came; harvest came, and Dakota demonstrated that she was a land of glorious possibilities. All seemed to fall in love with their adopted homes and felt that this land of sunshine had much to commend it to favor. While in the early days many stories went forth to frighten prospective settlers, the people of this vicinity have had but one genuine scare, which occurred in 1882. I remember that I had been to Watertown and having secured a ride back as far as the James river was proceeding thence on foot to my home, when I met a man and woman who were driving rapidly from the west with their team and wagon and who stopped long enough to inform me that the Indians were southwest of Northville and moving toward the town, on the warpath. This was somewhat disquieting news and I hurried along to Mellette, where I found the populace gathered at the postoffice, listening to the many rumors which were afloat concerning the Indian depredations. I then hastened on to my parents' home and found some of the neighbors assembled there and provided with divers sorts of firearms, good, bad and indifferent, while complete arrangements were being made for defense, so far as possible, against an attack. Northville sent out scouts and it was soon found that the alarm was without foundation, and peace and quiet soon reigned again. All these scares are things of the past and our section of the state is settled in the main by good, substantial citizens, who are in comfortable circumstances."

Mr. Thompson received his early educational discipline in the public schools of Kane county, Illinois, having attended the high school in Geneva, and having supplemented this discipline by effective study in Pingree Seminary and the Elgin Academy. He was associated with his father in the management of the home farm until he had attained his legal majority, since which time he has been engaged in the same vocation for himself, having been prospered in his efforts and now having one of the attractive and well-improved farms of Spink county. He gave his support to the Republican party from the time of attaining his majority until the close of the first administration of President McKinley, since which time he has exercised his franchise and lent his influence in support of the Prohibition party. As a Republican, he was elected to represent his county in the state legislature in 1897, and in the session of the general assembly had the honor of assisting in the election of Hon. James H. Kyle to the United States senate. He was reared in the faith of the Wesleyan Methodist church, of which both he and his wife are members.

On the 2d of July, 1885, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage to Miss Flora B. Torrence, who was born in Noble county, Ohio, on the 21st of May, 1869, being a daughter of James and Sarah Jane Torrence, who were early settlers in Spink county. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have five children, namely: Theos J., J. Gail, Lois H., Cita M. and John R.

JOHN W. SCHULTZ, one of the leading merchants and representative citizens of Wessington, Beadle county, is a native of Germany, where he was born on the 23d of February, 1835. After his father's death the widow came with her two sons and two daughters to America, the family locating in Cincinnati, Ohio, where she passed the remainder of her life, while of the children our subject is now the only survivor. The early educational discipline of Mr. Schultz was secured in the excellent schools of his fatherland, and he was about fourteen years of age at the time of the family emigration to America. He thereafter attended the common schools in Cincinnati, Ohio, and effectively supplemented the training he had previously received. After attaining years of maturity he devoted his attention to farming in the old Buckeye state until 1855, when he came west as a pioneer of the state of Iowa, locating in Dubuque, Dubuque county, where he was engaged in the mercantile business until 1882, in which year he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and became one of the early settlers of Wessington, where he was engaged in the general merchandise business until 1885, when he removed to Hand county, which lies contiguous on the west of Beadle county, and there successfully continued farming until 1897, when he returned to Wessington, where he now controls the most extensive mercantile business in this section, drawing his trade from a wide radius of country and having the confidence and esteem of the people of this locality, where he has made his home for so many years. He is a straightforward and reliable business man, urbane and courteous at all times and his name is a synonym of honor and integrity wherever he is known. He has ever been a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor, and has been an active worker in its cause. In 1894 he represented Hand county in the state senate, where he made a most creditable record. Though he was candidate on the Republican ticket in the preceding election his personal popularity was such as to enable him to overcome the large Populist majority which was normally given in Hand county at that period, and his election was a merited tribute of popular esteem and good will. He also served one term as a member of the board of commissioners of Hand county. He is identified with the Masonic fraternity and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

DUNCAN EARL, one of the successful farmers and honored citizens of Davison county, is a native of the dominion of Canada, having been born in the province of Ontario, on the 20th of August, 1848, and being a son of Hiram and Ann (Thompson) Earl, both of whom were likewise native of Canada, the former being of English lineage and the latter of Scotch. They became the parents of twelve children, eight of whom are living, while the subject of this sketch is the only representative of the family in South Dakota.

Duncan Earl received his educational discipline in the schools of his native province, where he was reared to manhood and where he continued to follow various pursuits until August 13, 1882, when he came to the territory of Dakota and took up government land in Davison county and also purchased deeded lands, now having a farm of six hundred and forty acres of most arable and valuable land, and having three hundred and fifteen acres under effective cultivation, while the permanent improvements are of substantial nature, indicating the progressive spirit and good management of the owner, who has ever been known as a man of indefatigable industry and sterling character. He is a staunch Republican in politics, and both he and his wife are devoted members of the Methodist Episcopal church, in whose work he takes a very active interest, being a member of the board of trustees of the church of this denomination at Mount Vernon, which is his postoffice address.

On the 18th of February, 1885, Mr. Earl was united in marriage to Miss Abigail Higginson, who was born in the province of Ontario, Canada, being a daughter of William and Candace (Atcheson) Higginson, her father having been a prominent farmer and miller and having accumulated a fortune through his own efforts, his estate being valued at twenty thousand dollars at the time of his death. Mr. and Mrs. Earl have one son, Lorne Talmage, who was born on the 27th day of February, 1891, and who has been afforded excellent educational advantages. Mr. Earl is public-spirited and progressive, his name is a synonym of honor and integrity and he commands the implicit confidence of the community in which he has resided for more than a score of years.

OLAUS L. HANSON, a successful farmer of Yankton county, is a native son of the state and a representative of one of its honored pioneer families. He was born in Yankton county, territory of Dakota, on the 12th of October, 1867, and is a son of Lars and Anne Hanson, both of whom were born in Norway. Lars Hanson was born September 22, 1836, and in 1865 was solemnized his marriage to Miss Anne Olson, who was born February 10, 1839. In 1866 they emigrated to America and came forthwith to the territory of Dakota, locating on the farm which has ever since remained their home, the same being on section 19, range 54, township 94, Yankton county, about two miles northeast of the village of Mission Hill. They were among the early settlers in the county and Mr. Hanson secured his land by government entry, while by well-directed industry he has attained success and is one of the highly esteemed citizens of the county.

The subject of this review received his early education in the public schools of Yankton county and continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-one years, when he engaged in drilling artesian wells, to which line of enterprise he devoted his attention for three years, after which he farmed on rented land until 1898, when he purchased a farm of one hundred and sixty acres, in township 94, range 54, where he continued in agricultural pursuits for the ensuing three years, at the expiration of which he sold the property and purchased another farm of equal area, in township 94, range 55, about one and one-half miles distant from Mission Hill, where he is now successfully engaged in general farming and stock growing.

In politics Mr. Hanson is a Republican and from his youth up he has been a member of the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran church at Mission Hill, of which his wife likewise is a devoted member.

On the 14th of October, 1896, Mr. Hanson married Miss Hulda Matilda Hanson, who was born in Yankton county, July 1, 1878, being a daughter of Nicholas and Ingeborg Hanson, and of this union have been born three children, whose names with respective dates of birth are here entered: Norman Leroy, July 19, 1897; Agnes Isabel, June 17, 1899; and Hannah Olivia, September 22, 1901.

CHARLES W. McDONALD, who is the honored judge of Jerauld county and a distinguished member of the bar of the state, was born in St. Joseph county, Indiana, on the 25th of July, 1845, being a son of Jeremiah and Eleanor (Almeda) McDonald, to whom were born three sons and one daughter. The father of the subject was a master ship carpenter, and was born and reared in the state of Vermont, whence he removed to Indiana prior to the advent of railroads in the middle states. He died at Abilene, Kansas, while his wife died in the Hoosier state. The subject of this review completed the curriculum of the common schools of his native state and then entered the celebrated University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he continued his studies for two years. He studied law under an able preceptor in Mishawaka, Indiana, and has ever been a close reader in a technical line, so that he is thoroughly well informed in the science of jurisprudence, having not only gained precedence as a strong trial lawyer and conservative counsel, but having also been signally fair and impartial in his rulings on the bench, his decisions being based upon the proper application of the law and equity involved. He came to what is now the state of South Dakota in 1873 and in the year 1877 was admitted to the bar of the territory of Dakota. He located in the city of Sioux Falls, where he continued in the practice of his profession until 1882, and in that place he was also the editor and publisher of the Sioux Falls Independent, which was subsequently merged into the Daily Press, which remains one of the important papers of the state. In March, 1882, Judge McDonald came to Wessington Springs, where he has since maintained his home and where he has been in the active practice of his profession save for the period which has represented his service on the bench. Upon the organization of Jerauld county, in 1884, he was appointed clerk of the district court, and continuously held this office until the admission of South Dakota to the Union. He was elected state's attorney for Jerauld county in 1890, again in 1896 and re-elected in 1898. During two years, 1877-8, he was probate judge of Minnehaha county. He was elected county judge of Jerauld county in 1900 and in 1902 he was again elected to this dignified and responsible office, of which he is in tenure at the time of this writing. The Judge is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party and has been a prominent figure in its councils in the territory and state. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, his wife of the Free Methodist church, and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order. It may be noted at this juncture that Jerauld county was organized and settled by temperance people, and there had never been a saloon within its borders from the time of its erection until 1903. The subject is an uncompromising advocate of temperance and of the prohibition of the liquor traffic through legal measures.

In 1866 Judge McDonald was united in marriage to Miss Clara P. Burr, of Mansfield, Ohio, who died in 1879, being survived by one son, Willis B., who is now a resident of California. On the 17th of August, 1882, the Judge wedded Miss Fanny M. Tofflemire, of Wessington Springs, South Dakota, and they are the parents of five children, namely: Robert F., Charles E., Walter H., Leigh L. and Almeda.

GEORGE AMASA PERLEY is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born near the village of Marquette, in what is now known as Green Lake county, on the 18th of November, 1849. His father, Stephen Bartlett Perley, was born in North Sanbornton, Merrimac county, New Hampshire, and his wife, whose maiden name was Sarah E. Wells, was born in Bradford, Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, both being of Puritan ancestry. The father of the subject began his independent career as a farmer on his own land, on which now stands the village of Clinton Junction, Rock county, Wisconsin, of which state he was a pioneer settler. The subject relates appreciatively the following incidents in regard to his honored father: "When I was a child my father was often spoken of as 'Old Ironsides,' by reason of his physical prowess and agility. We had a large horse, weighing sixteen hundred pounds, and so great was its height that a young man employed by my father found it impossible to spring on the back of the animal from the ground. Father was a man of about six feet in height and at that time was fifty-five years of age. He stepped to the side of the horse, gave a spring and passed clear over the steed, with perfect ease, landing squarely on his feet on the opposite side. Near Schoolcraft, Michigan, in 1845, he mowed with a scythe forty acres of timothy hay in thirteen straight days,—an average of more than three acres a day. He was an accomplished vocalist, possessing a fine tenor voice, and he was for some time a member of a church choir in the city of Albany, New York, where he was at the time employed in a spike factory, in which were made the spikes used in the construction of the first railroad built in the United States."

M. V. B. Perley, of Georgetown, Massachusetts, has traced the genealogy of the Perley family, through church and military records, back to the middle ages and into Hungary. The coat of arms shows a shield embellished with a depiction of some sort of fruit, and the motto used in the connection is "E fructibus noscitis eos," meaning "By their fruits ye shall know them." Allen Perley, a native of Wales, landed at Charlestown, Massachusetts, July 12, 1630, and from him the direct line of descent to the subject is traced through Thomas, Jacob, Jacob (2d), John (who was killed in the war of the Revolution), Nathaniel and Stephen B., the last mentioned being the father of the subject of this review. There are today about one thousand Perley descendants in the United States.

George A. Perley received an academic education in the Wesleyan Methodist Seminary, at Wasioja, Minnesota, the greater portion of this discipline having been secured after he had attained manhood. Having been previously in the employ of an experienced English editor and appreciating the handicap entailed by ignorance, he devoted a few years to arduous study and found thereby a new world of thought and a wider sphere of existence and action. He gave up his studies, however, in the spring of 1876, having succumbed to a vigorous attack of "western fever." In April of that year he arrived at the conclusion that the life of the farmer was the most independent of all, if the fortunate individual could own his own farm and be free from debt. He made a prompt decision one evening, and the next morning started on foot for the nearest railway station, that of Dodge Center, Minnesota, whence he started for the great territory of Dakota. After reaching Worthington, Minnesota, he went farther inland on foot, and by securing an occasional ride with freighters' teams, finally reached what is now Moody county, the locality being then seventy miles distant from any railroad, while there were only three white families settled at Flandreau at the time. He took up a homestead and a tree claim, and has developed the property into one of the best farms in this section of the state, while he also owns an additional eighty acres of school land, which he purchased a number of years later, his homestead being located in Grovena township and four miles southeast of the thriving city of Flandreau. Of his life and labors here we can not do better than to quote the words of our subject himself: "Here I have tried to live as independently as possible, even to the part played in the field of politics. In the early days a political nomination was equivalent to an election, and party managers carried offices in their vest-pockets. Public improvements were extravagantly forwarded by shouldering bonded indebtedness on those as yet unborn. These principles I considered radically wrong, and I joined with others in bringing about a reformatory movement through the organization of the Populist party, which finally became defunct, through the compromising work of a few who were willing to sacrifice principle for the sake of the possibility of securing office at the hands of fusion. During the Civil war the prices of labor and all kinds of commodities were very much above the usual level, and after the close of the great conflict a reaction naturally ensued. At this time, for the conservation of their own interests, an organized effort was advocated among the farmers and resulted in the establishing of the Patrons of Husbandry and the Grange. 'Pay as you go, and buy less' was the title of my first paper read before a local assembly of one of these organizations, and by following the plan I thus advocated it has been possible for me to keep on safe ground ever since. I had not been long a resident of the territory before we organized a Farmers' Alliance, while later we organized a citizens' constitutional association, having in view the interests of statehood. In this connection we voiced our sentiments at Canton, on the occasion of the first general meeting for the consideration of the matter of securing admission to the Union. In the last of the territorial days we had a Moody county legislative association, the same having been projected mainly for the purpose of making an organized effort against the everlasting bonding system which townsite proprietors were so inconsistently using at that time, prejudicial to the best interests of the people. In September, 1889, I was assigned work as local observer in connection with the United States signal service, and have ever since held this position. I have been secretary of the Farmers' Mutual Fire and Lightning Insurance Company of Moody county from the time of its inception, in 1889, and also hold a similar position in the Co-operative Grain Elevator Company. In 1903 a farmers' telephone system has been installed, the lines covering a distance of twenty-six miles, and this service, owned and controlled by the farmers, meets with marked appreciation and affords facilities of great convenience and practical value, effectively supplementing the rural free mail delivery and standing in marked contrast to the advantages we enjoyed in the pioneer days."

In politics Mr. Perley maintains an independent attitude, and while he has a deep reverence for the spiritual verities he is an avowed agnostic, showing in this regard the courage of his convictions, as does he in all other relations of life. His family attend the Methodist Episcopal church and contribute to its support. Of his life and labors Mr. Perley has further spoken as follows: "As a young man I decided to try to do something as a teacher in the public schools and to thus make the world better for my having existence. The continual strife for a position and the dependent nature of the profession inclined me to adopt the noble vocation of farming, since in that I could tell the truth and ask no favors. I found an open field that needed working, in both politics and finance, and have occasionally endeavored to lift some of the burdens resting on the people. There is a grand opportunity for labor on both sumptuary and religious questions affecting the human welfare, but the task looks so hopeless that one hesitates to devote his energies to work along these lines. As labor becomes more irksome I shall use my poetic genius in the field of song. At present I will close with this inspiration as a finale good to sing over the grave of this portion of the great American desert of my boyhood:

This old desert of a plain,
With its many fields of grain,
With its horses, hogs and cattle yet unsold,
Causes me to sing the strain,
While in plenty falls the rain,
We are happy with our grasses, grain and gold.

On the 20th of July, 1880, in the city of Sioux Falls, this state, Mr. Perley was united in marriage to Miss Emma Rebecah Irish, who was born and reared in Dodge county, Minnesota, and who was for a number of terms a successful teacher in the public schools of Woodbury county, Iowa, holding a first-grade certificate, and who is a sister of the noted orator, Hon. John B. Irish, of Downieville, California. The first American ancestor of the Irish family came to this country from Wales, and he was for a time in the employ of Miles Standish, whose name is so well known in history and story. Mr. and Mrs. Perley have two children, namely: A daughter, Iva Chrysoma, born July 14, 1881, who is in her third year at the State University at Vermillion. The son, Stephen Elton, who was born March 12, 1883, has ended his first year's study at the Brookings Agricultural College.

JOHN CRAIGON BAIRD is a native of Green Lake county, Wisconsin, the son of John and Mary (McAdam) Baird, and he dates his birth from the 8th day of February, 1858. Reared on a farm and early taught the lessons of industry and thrift which makes that pursuit successful, he grew up with a full appreciation of life and its responsibilities, and after acquiring a fair education in the common schools, he entered at the age of eighteen a store, where he spent three strenuous years, during which time he became familiar with the varied details of the mercantile business. Resigning his clerkship at the expiration of the period noted, he came to South Dakota and settling in Hanson county, spent some time as manager of a branch store belonging to William Van Epps, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota. Severing his connection with those gentlemen, he changed his abode to Douglas county and filed on a homestead, choosing for his location a fine tract of land about three and a half miles east of Armour, which he at once began to improve and for which in due season he acquired a title from the government. Shortly after selecting his homestead Mr. Baird revisited his native state, and while there was married, in 1879, to Miss Ella Whittemore, who was also born and reared in Wisconsin. Returning to South Dakota a little later, he took up, in 1880, his permanent abode on the land already referred to and since that time has greatly improved the same, besides adding at intervals to its area, until he now owns a fine tract of four hundred and eighty acres, one hundred and sixty of which are in a successful state of cultivation.

Mr. Baird is an up-to-date agriculturist, well acquainted with the nature of soils and their adaptability to different crops, and, employing modern methods and the latest and most approved implements and machinery, he realizes bountiful returns from the time and labor expended on his farm. He is also engaged quite largely in the live-stock business, raising large numbers of cattle, horses and hogs, from the sale of which is derived no small part of his income. He has made many valuable improvements on his place, has a substantial and attractive residence and good outbuildings and his home, situated in one of the finest sections of Douglas county, indicates the dwelling place of not only a man of enterprise and progressive ideas, but a gentleman of intelligence, sound judgment and excellent taste, as well. Personally, he enjoys great popularity among his neighbors and friends and as a citizen he is public-spirited and a leader in all laudable movements. He served eight or nine years as school clerk, also held the office of township supervisor for a considerable length of time and is now township treasurer.

Politically he is a pronounced Democrat, and fraternally is identified with the Masonic brotherhood, the order of Maccabees and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

Mr. and Mrs. Baird have a family of eight children, whose names in order of birth are as follows: Grace, Walter, John R., Maude, Robert, Agnes, Frank and Pearl, all living.

PAUL HEINTZ, one of the successful farmers and representative citizens of Moody county, comes of stanch German lineage and is himself a native of the state of Minnesota, having been born in Stearns county, on the 15th of October, 1859. He is a son of Peter and Margaret (Till) Heintz, the former of whom was born and reared in Luxembourg, Germany, and he continued to be there engaged in farming until his emigration to America, at the age of twenty-five years. He was for a number of years engaged in farming in Minnesota, whence he came to Moody county, South Dakota, in 1874, here taking up a half section of government land and improving the same, becoming one of the prominent and successful farmers of this section, where he passed the remainder of his long and signally useful life, being eighty-two years of age at the time of his death, which occurred May 16, 1901. He originally gave his allegiance to the Democratic party, but in later years supported the principles and policies of the Republican party. His religious faith was that of the Roman Catholic church, of which his venerable widow is likewise a devoted member. She now resides in Flandreau and is eighty-four years of age at the time of this writing, in 1903. Of this union were born ten children, and six of the number are still living.

The subject of this sketch received his early educational training in the public schools of his native state and was a lad of fifteen years at the time of the family removal to what is now the state of South Dakota. He was reared to maturity on the home farm in Moody county and eventually engaged in farming on his own account. He now has a finely improved and valuable ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, in Grovena township, his home being located four miles south and one east of the thriving village of Flandreau, which is his postoffice address. Nearly the entire acreage of his farm is under cultivation and he also devotes no little attention to the raising of a fine grade of short-horn cattle and other live stock. In politics he is found prominently arrayed in the ranks of the Populist party, and takes a public-spirited interest in the issues of the day and particularly in local affairs. He has served as director and treasurer of his school district, as a member of the board of township trustees and as overseer of roads, these various preferments indicating the high esteem in which he is held in the community in which he has passed the major portion of his life. He is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church, his wife belonging to the Methodist, and fraternally he is identified with the lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at Flandreau.

On the 5th of January, 1890, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Heintz to Miss Rosa Belle Roberts, daughter of Asahel and — (Hawkins) Roberts, well-known residents of this county, and they are the parents of four children, namely: Beulah, Doris, Wallace and Mary.

FRANK H. CRAIG, supervising mechanic in connection with the Indian school maintained at Greenwood, Charles Mix county, is a native of the domain of Canada, having been born near the city of Toronto, on the 28th of December, 1845, and being a son of Davis C. and Mary J. (Witherel) Craig, both of whom were born and reared in the state of New York, whence they removed to Canada, where they maintained their home about eleven years, the father having been a farmer and mechanic. In 1854 the family removed to Elliott, Minnesota, locating in Fillmore county, where the parents continued to reside until 1881, when they came to South Dakota, where the father of our subject took up government land, in Fillmore county, there passing the remainder of his life. He died in June, 1901, his devoted wife having passed away in September of the preceding year. They became the parents of seven children, of whom four are living, all being residents of South Dakota. In early life Davis C. Craig was a Whig in politics, but he identified himself with the Republican party at the time of its organization and was ever afterward a supporter of its cause. He enlisted as a member of Company C, Third Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, at the outbreak of the Civil war, and was in active service about four years. It may also be noted in the connection that the subject of this sketch enlisted in Company A, Second Minnesota Cavalry, with which he served about two and one-half years, principally under General Sully and in connection with the Indian warfare in the northwest. He received his honorable discharge on the 4th of April, 1866, having made an excellent record as a valiant and loyal soldier.

Frank H. Craig received a common-school education and was about nine years of age at the time of his parents' removal to Minnesota, where he was variously employed for a number of years, finally becoming identified with railroad work, in which he was engaged up to the time of coming to South Dakota, from Chicago, in 1879. He took up a homestead claim in Spink county, on the 16th of June of that year, and there continued to reside until 1891, having been one of the early settlers of the county and one of its popular and influential citizens. He erected the first frame house in the county, and the same was used for some time as a court house. He served for five years as a member of the board of county commissioners and held other local offices of trust, including those of justice of the peace, while he was for many years a school official. In politics he gives an unwavering allegiance to the Republican party and has been an active worker in its cause. Fraternally he is identified with Frankfort Lodge, No. 77, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Redfield Chapter, No. 20, Royal Arch Masons; Frankfort Lodge, No. 83, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and to Sol Meredith Post, Grand Army of the Republic.

In 1891 Mr. Craig disposed of his interests in Spink county and took up his residence in Greenwood, where he has since held the position of government mechanic at the Indian school, in which connection he has accomplished a most satisfactory work. He is the owner of a fine ranch of five hundred and eighty-five acres in Boyd county, Nebraska, and he is also the owner of a fine herd of cattle on his ranch in Nebraska. He has attained success since coming to Dakota and is one of the loyal and public-spirited citizens of the state.

On the 4th of July, 1868, at Harmony, Fillmore county, Minnesota, Mr. Craig was married to Miss Eliza M. Craig, who was born and reared in Canada, being a daughter of John and Elizabeth Craig, the former being a farmer by vocation. Of this union were born eight children, namely: Leslie, Herbert, Claud and Neva, who are deceased; Harold, who remains at the parental home, as do also James E., Bessie and Earl F.

ELISHA K. THOMPSON, one of the honored pioneers of Charles Mix county, was born in Meigs county, Ohio, on the 18th of March, 1822, being a son of Reuben and Falindie (Kent) Thompson, both of whom were born in the state of New York, while they became the parents of five children, of whom two are living. The father of the subject devoted his life to agricultural pursuits, and both he and his wife died in Ohio. The paternal ancestors on both sides were of colonial stock and both families were represented by valiant soldiers in the war of the Revolution, assisting in gaining the boon of independence. Elisha K. Thompson received a common-school education and was reared on the homestead farm to the age of seventeen years, when he came west to Illinois, where he worked as a farm hand and ran on the Mississippi river until his marriage, in 1847. He resided on his farm in Ohio until 1861, when he went to White-side county, Illinois, where he purchased land, to whose cultivation he devoted his attention about eight years. He then moved to Lyndon, Illinois, where he invested in a pump works. In 1877 he disposed of the property and moved to Iowa, where he purchased a farm in Sac county, where he continued to follow agricultural pursuits for the ensuing five years, or until 1882, when he came to South Dakota and took up a homestead claim in Charles Mix county, and on this property, now finely improved, he has ever since continued to reside. When he came to the county the settlers were few, and the Indians were found in the vicinity in considerable numbers, but he found them at all times peaceable and kindly. During the first season of his residence in the county Mr. Thompson states that he secured the best sod crops ever raised in any locality, but the several years of drought which followed brought financial ruin to many of the settlers in this section. A radical change later ensued, the rainfall being more copious and regular, so that crop failures are practically a thing of the past. Mr. Thompson has one of the most attractive homes in the county, having a substantial and commodious residence, around which he has succeeded in raising some very fine maple and cedar trees, which he personally planted and which have now attained such a size as to make the home a picturesque and beautiful one. In politics he was originally a supporter of the Whig party, but upon the organization of the Republican party he transferred his allegiance to the same and has ever since been a stalwart advocate of its principles. He has been a zealous member of the Methodist Episcopal church for the past sixty years, and his loved and devoted wife has also been a zealous worker in and a member of the church.

On the 13th of June, 1847, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Thompson to Miss Nancy Gilman, who was born and reared in Meigs county, Ohio, being a daughter of Henry Gilman, a prominent farmer of that locality, where he also conducted a large saddlery business for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Thompson became the parents of six children, one of whom died in infancy. Of the others we offer the following brief record: Reuben died at the age of eleven years; Nancy died at the age of ten years; Emma is the wife of Henry Van Schoonhoven, a prominent farmer of Charles Mix county; Edward, who married Miss Lulu Tenny, is engaged in the livery business at Platte, this county; and Josephine is the wife of Clarence Vermillion, the leading dry-goods merchant in the city of Mitchell, this state.

ROBERT GORDON, a well-known farmer and stock raiser of Yankton county, was born in northern Ireland on the 15th of September, 1833, his parents being John and Mary (Cane) Gordon, who spent their entire lives on the Emerald Isle, the father there devoting his energies to farming. In 1856 Mr. Gordon of this review came to the new world. He had been educated in his native country and he was trained to habits of industry and frugality. As a young man of twenty-three years he crossed the Atlantic and settled in Rhode Island, where he was first employed in a sugar refinery, occupying a position for four years. On the expiration of that period he removed to Lenawee county, Michigan, where he purchased forty acres of land, continuing its cultivation for four years. He next spent one summer upon a farm in Wisconsin and afterward removed to Porter county, Indiana, locating near Valparaiso. Twelve years covers the period of his connection with the farming interests of the Hoosier state and the year 1878 witnessed his arrival in South Dakota. He has since lived in this portion of the country and as the years have gone by he has gradually advanced until he now occupies an enviable position upon the plane of affluence.

In 1856 Mr. Gordon was united in marriage to Miss A. J. Barnes, a daughter of David and Hannah (Speers) Barnes, who were natives of Scotland and spent their entire lives in the land of the hills and heather. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have become the parents of eight children: John, who married Lucy Robinson and is a farmer; David, who is represented elsewhere in this work; James, who married Anna Barnes and is also engaged in farming; William, who wedded Mary Christopherson and is operating the home place; Mollie, the deceased wife of W. J. Mann, an agriculturist; and three, who have passed away.

Mr. Gordon owns three hundred and twenty acres of rich land, of which one hundred acres is pasture land. He is a general farmer and also raises stock, handling Hereford cattle and Poland-China hogs, of a high grade. He has also bought and sold stock, having all of his farm products raised for this purpose. In his business he has prospered because of his unremitting diligence and his honorable methods. He is straightforward in all of his dealings and has never been known to take advantage of the necessities of his fellow men in any trade transaction. He has planted all of the trees upon his place and his splendidly developed property stands as a monument to his thrift and enterprise. For four years he lost all that he raised because of the grasshoppers and though many a man of less resolute spirit would have been utterly discouraged he continued in his labors, working diligently year after year until success has now crowned his labors. He is a member of the Congregational church and at all times his life has been in consistent harmony with his professions so that he is a gentleman of sterling worth, his name being synonymous with integrity.

GEORGE BEATCH, one of the successful representatives of the agricultural and stock-growing industries of Hanson county, is a native of Houston county, Minnesota, where he was born on the 16th of October, 1871, being a son of John and Annie (Goetzinger) Beatch, both of whom were born and reared in Germany. The father of the subject came to America in 1854 and located in the state of Ohio, where he was engaged in farming for four years, at the expiration of which he removed to Minnesota, taking up government land in Houston county and becoming one of the successful pioneer farmers of that section, where he continued to make his home until 1882, when he came with his family to Hanson county, South Dakota, where he and his sons took up government land under the homestead laws, being now associated in the ownership of a fine farm of two hundred and forty acres, of which one hundred and ten are under cultivation. The subject is also one of the successful stock raisers of the county, where he has been indefatigable in his efforts, assisting in developing the great resources of this section of the state. His boyhood days were passed on the homestead farm in Minnesota, in whose public schools he secured his early educational training, later attending the schools in South Dakota. He is one of a family of eight children, the others being Philip, Maggie, Kate, John, Mary, Minnie and Annie, and the parents and all the children are residents of South Dakota. Mr. Beatch is a Democrat in his political proclivities; fraternally is identified with Spencer Lodge, No. 47, Ancient Order of United Workmen, at Spencer, South Dakota, of which his brother John is likewise a member, while the family are valued members of the Lutheran church.

DAVID S. GORDON, a native of the middle west, manifests in his life the spirit of activity and energy so typical of this section of the country. He was born in Lanawee county, Michigan, July 20, 1863, and is of Scotch-Irish lineage, the family originating in Scotland, although Robert and Jane (Barnes) Gordon, the parents of the subject, came to America from the north of Ireland. It was in the year 1857 that the father crossed the Atlantic and took up his abode in Rhode Island, where he remained for four years, removing then to Michigan in 1861. Purchasing a farm in Lenawee county he continued its cultivation for two years and then he sold his property and went to Wisconsin. After a short time, however, he removed to Indiana in 1865 and bought a farm in Porter county, making it his home for a few years. For four years he lived in Lake county, that state, where he also carried on agricultural pursuits and in 1878 he brought his family to South Dakota, establishing his home in Yankton county. Here he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of government land, upon which not a furrow had been turned or an improvement made. He built a shanty and also a dug-out and four years later he erected a nice residence. He has also built large barns upon his place and still occupies the old homestead, which he has developed into a splendid farming property, its rich fields and excellent improvements giving evidence of his careful supervision and enterprising spirit. Both he and his wife are members of the Congregational church and in its work he takes an active and helpful part. His political faith is that of the Republican party. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have been born seven children: Hannah, who died in infancy, as did the second child; R. J., who married Miss Dunlap and after her death wedded Lucy Robinson, his home being now in Viborg, South Dakota. He has a family of four children and he owns eleven hundred and twenty acres of land, but is living retired in the enjoyment of the fruits of his former toil. Mary J., born November 3, 1861, became the wife of M. J. Mann, who has resided in South Dakota since 1886 and is now a farmer of Yankton county. They had four children and on the 15th of May, 1902, Mrs. Mann departed this life. David is the next younger. James B. wedded Mrs. Mallons and is a farmer of Edwards county, South Dakota. He had three children, of whom two are now deceased. William C. married Mary Christoperson and has three children, their home being on the old homestead. All of the children were provided with good educational privileges and three of the number have been successful teachers. Mrs. Gordon died November 2, 1903.

Like the others of the family, David S. Gordon attended the public schools and in his youth he was also trained to the work of the home farm, remaining with his father until nineteen years of age, when he began teaching school. When twenty years of age he rented a farm and thus continued to operate land for several years. In the spring of 1884 he bought one hundred and sixty acres on Clay creek, Yankton county, all of which was wild, but he has placed many improvements upon the land, has built a fine residence, a large and substantial barn, has planted trees and now has a very desirable property, attractive in appearance. His farm comprises altogether two hundred acres and in connection with the cultivation of the fields he raises high grades of cattle and hogs.

On the 20th of April, 1899, Mr. Gordon was united in marriage to Miss Bertha, a daughter of John H. and Elizabeth (Hornel) Rinker, both of whom were natives of Iowa and at an early day came to South Dakota. The father was identified with agricultural interests for many years and became a well-known farmer but is now living in Sioux Falls. His wife, however, has passed away. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Gordon have been born three children: Ethel E., whose birth occurred January 15, 1901; Adaline M., who was born September 20, 1902, and Robert J., born July 10, 1903. Mr. Gordon endorses the principles of the Republican party by casting his ballot for its candidates.

FRED JACOBS.—The sons of Switzerland have ever been noted for courage and fortitude and for loyalty to their honest convictions and the life record of Fred Jacobs exemplifies those sterling traits of character which have ever marked the sons of the Swiss nation. He was born in Berne on the 15th of April, 1844, and is a son of John Jacobs, who never left his native country. The subject acquired a good education there and lived a life of energy and activity, but believing that his labors would prove more effective in gaining success in the new world, he came to the United States in 1884. Yankton county was his destination and he made his way by the Missouri river until he reached this section of the state. He rented land for nine years and then with the capital he had acquired through his own energy and determination he purchased three hundred and twenty acres of land. Since that time he has sold a portion, but still retains possession of two hundred and forty acres. He has planted all of the trees upon his farm and has made all of the improvements, including the erection of splendid buildings. His fields are well tilled and he raises good grades of stock. One hundred and eighty acres of his land is under cultivation and the remainder is devoted to pasturage purposes. Each year he raises a large number of hogs and also makes a specialty of Hereford cattle.

In 1866 Mr. Jacobs was united in marriage to Miss Magdalena Kupfer, a daughter of Jacob Kupfer, who was a stone-mason and spent his entire life in Switzerland. This worthy couple have become the parents of nine children: Robert, who married Bertha Ezely and is a farmer and dairyman; Emil, deceased; Fred, who wedded Eliza Nordheck, and is a harness maker of Yankton; Alfred, who married Carrie Thompson and served in the Philippine war as a member of Company M, First Regiment of South Dakota Volunteers, while now he is engaged in farming; Max, who wedded L. Peterson, now deceased, and who is a cook in Montana; Ida, the wife of Leonard McCone, a liveryman of Nebraska; Herman, who is assisting in the operation of the home farm; and Paul and Edward, who are under the parental roof. The children have attended the public schools and have been carefully trained in habits of industry and uprightness. In his political views Mr. Jacobs is an earnest Republican and all of his sons support the same party, while five of them belong to the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Jacobs holds membership in the Congregational church and has ever been interested in the movements and measures pertaining to general progress and improvement. The cause of education has found in him a warm friend and he has cooperated in many measures for the public good.

FREDERICK RITTER, a prosperous farmer and stock raiser of Jefferson township, Bon Homme county, is a native of Germany, born in the kingdom of Hanover, August 22, 1841. His father, also named Frederick, died in Hanover, at the age of forty-two, and later the mother came to America and settled in Iowa, where her death occurred some years ago.

Frederick and Catherine (Bloom) Ritter reared a family of three children, one son, the subject of this review, and two daughters, the older of whom, Christina, married Henry Rhoderwolt and the younger, Louisa by name, having died in the land of her birth.

Frederick Ritter was reared and educated in Hanover and at the age of twenty began life for himself as a carpenter. Shortly after leaving home he came to America, arriving in this country in 1864 and settled at Richton, Cook county, Illinois, where he worked at his trade during the ensuing eight years, meanwhile accumulating a handsome property, consisting of several lots and five and a half acres of valuable land in the vicinity of the town. Disposing of these possessions in 1871, he started west and in the spring of the following year settled in Butler county, Iowa, where he followed his chosen calling until 1881. In the spring of the latter year Mr. Ritter came to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, and took up a quarter section of land in Jefferson township, which he still owns and on which he has made a number of substantial improvements, converting it into one of the most productive and desirable farms in the neighborhood. He has also added to his realty from time to time and now owns five hundred and sixty acres of as fine land as the county of Bon Homme can boast, the greater part of which is under a high state of cultivation, besides containing good buildings, fences and many other evidences of prosperity. He is an enterprising farmer and since coming west has taken advantage of every opportunity to improve his financial condition, ranking at the present time with the leading agriculturists and stock raisers of Bon Homme county, as well as enjoying high standing as an energetic, public-spirited man of affairs.

Mr. Ritter not only erected all the buildings on his own place, but has also done considerable mechanical work in the neighborhood and throughout the county. He is a skillful carpenter and for several years after coming to this state his services were in great demand, many of the best residences, barns and other buildings in the surrounding country bearing evidence to his efficiency as a master of his trade. In politics Mr. Ritter votes for the man instead of party and advocates principles which in his judgment make for the best interests of his country. In religion he subscribes to the Lutheran creed and for a number of years has been a faithful and consistent member of the church, contributing liberally of his means to the support of the local congregation to which he belongs.

In the year 1862 Mr. Ritter was united in marriage with Miss Dorothee Deerking, also a native of Hanover, the union being blessed with ten children, namely: Fred, Jr., a farmer and stock raiser of Charles Mix county, South Dakota; Charles, who is interested with his father in farming and the live-stock business; Henry, also at home and a partner of his father and older brother; William, a resident of Charles Mix county, and a farmer by occupation; Annie, wife of Fred Rabece, of the above county; Frank, a member of the home circle; Dora, now Mrs. Henry Evers, of Charles Mix; Helen, Walter and George.

FRANK GABRIEL HERRON, one of the successful business men of Sioux Falls, where he conducts a well-equipped grocery establishment, was born on a farm in Vernon county, Wisconsin, on the 16th of August, 1857, and is a son of William A. and Mira Herron, both of whom are now living in Sioux Falls, while both were natives of Athens county, Ohio, and representatives of pioneer families of the old Buckeye state. When the subject was about twelve years of age his parents removed to Warren county, Iowa, and in the public schools of Indianola, the county seat, he received his early educational training. In 1875 he entered upon an apprenticeship to the printer's trade, in the office of the Indianola Herald, becoming a skilled workman and being engaged in the work of his trade for several years. In 1883 he came to South Dakota and took up his residence in Huron and was in business there for five years. In 1888 he removed to Sioux Falls and until March, 1902, he was employed as foreman in the Brown &

Saenger printing establishment, but gave up that position and, with his son, Bert, established his present prosperous business enterprise, and they, under the firm name of Herron & Son, have gained a place of prominence in the commercial life of the city. In politics Mr. Herron is a staunch Republican but has never sought official preferment, and fraternally he is identified with the local organization of the Masonic order and its adjunct, the Order of the Eastern Star, and also with the Royal Arcanum, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

On the 28th of November, 1883, Mr. Herron was united in marriage to Miss Ida A. Tisdale, who was born and reared in Lake City, Minnesota, being a daughter of Luther J. and Adaline Tisdale, and of this union have been born four children, of whom three are living; Bert F. was born October 11, 1884; Roy was born January 11, 1888, and died on the 7th of February of the following year; Mabel R. was born January 2, 1889; and Charles L., March 6, 1890.

GEORGE SPURRELL, one of the representative farmers and stockmen of Bon Homme county, is a native of the Hawkeye state, having been born in the city of Sabula, Jackson county, Iowa, on the 3d of January, 1855, and being a son of James and Eliza (Ward) Spurrell, both of whom were born and reared in England, where they were married and where four of their children were born. In 1854 they emigrated thence to the United States and located in Jackson county, Iowa, thence in 1855 removed to Clinton county, Iowa, where Mr. Spurrell became a prominent and successful farmer, being one of the honored pioneers of that section and one who wielded no little influence in the community. He continued to reside on the old homestead until he was summoned from the scene of life's endeavors, his death occurring on the 15th of May, 1900, at which time he was seventy-seven years of age. He was a Republican in his political proclivities, and was a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as is also his widow, who still resides on the old home farm. Of their six children we enter the following brief record: Anna died in childhood, before the removal of the family to America; Walter, who was a soldier in the Second Iowa Cavalry Regiment during the war of the Rebellion, died in 1901; John is a resident of Wall Lake, Sac county, Iowa; Arthur has the management of the old homestead farm in Iowa, and also owns six hundred and forty acres in South Dakota; George is the immediate subject of this sketch; and Ellen is married to Seth L. Collins, of Goose Lake, Iowa.

George Spurrell was reared to manhood on the home farm and secured his educational discipline in the excellent schools of Iowa. At the age of twenty-one years he initiated his independent career, becoming at that time dependent upon his own resources, and he has worked his way to success through the medium of energy, industry, integrity of purpose and good management. He purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land in Sac county, Iowa, and was there engaged in farming for three years, after which he was engaged in the same line of enterprise in Plymouth county, that state, until 1891, when he sold his farm of one hundred and sixty acres and removed to Rock county, Minnesota, where he purchased land and also engaged in the real-estate business, retaining his residence there about eighteen months. He then, in August, 1893, came to South Dakota and purchased a ranch of two hundred and forty acres in Springfield township, Bon Homme county, where he has since remained. He has made many improvements on the place, including the remodeling of the house, and the ranch is one of the most attractive and valuable properties in this section, being devoted to diversified agriculture and to the raising of excellent grades of live stock, including shorthorn cattle, sheep, swine and horses. Mr. Spurrell is also the owner of two hundred and forty acres of land in Wilson county, Kansas, the same being located in the oil district, and this property he reunts. He has owned property in several other states, and has traveled somewhat extensively, having visited various sections of the Rocky mountains and owning interests in the gold fields of Colorado. In politics Mr. Spurrell is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party. While a resident of Iowa he served as justice of the peace, but he has never been ambitious for official preferment.

On the 8th of April, 1882, Mr. Spurrell was united in marriage to Miss Christine Kruser, of Wall Lake, Iowa. She was born and reared in Denmark, being a daughter of Maren and Peter P. Kruser, who emigrated to the United States in 1881, and who are now dead. Of the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Spurrell we enter the following brief data: Melvin J. died at the age of sixteen months; Marvin is at the parental home; Cora and Ida are attending the Springfield State Normal School, and Elmer J. is the youngest member of the family, being nine years of age at the time of this writing, and is also attending the Normal School. Mrs. Spurrell and Cora are members of the Congregational church.

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON.—No better index of the material prosperity and general status of any community can be found than in its newspaper press, and in this respect South Dakota is favored in having ably conducted and progressive papers in its various cities and towns, the subject of this review being the editor and publisher of the Avon Clarion, at Avon, Bon Homme county, and having made his enterprise one of successful order as representative of the interests of the attractive town and its surrounding country. He is a thorough newspaper man and the Clarion maintains a high standard of excellence from both an editorial and mechanical standpoint, being a five-column quarto and being issued on Thursday of each week.

Mr. Robinson was born in Delaware county, Iowa, on the 14th of November, 1854, being a son of James and Mary A. (Gregg) Robinson, of whose twelve children he is the eldest of the nine surviving, a brief record concerning the others being here incorporated: Margaret is the wife of Christy Bleakly, of Galva, Iowa; Dr. Thomas is a practicing physician at Gallup, New Mexico; Robert R. is a prominent capitalist and promoter of Manchester, Iowa, and served for twelve years as auditor of Delaware county, that state; Eliza is the wife of Rev. James P. Perry, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church; Alexander has charge of the old homestead farm, in Delaware county, Iowa; John B. is a successful ranchman near Oakdale, Nebraska; Henry E. is a member of the Hollister Lumber Company, of Manchester, Iowa, and is manager of its yards at Elkport, Illinois; and Gregg C. is likewise a member of that company and resides in Manchester, Iowa. The parents of the subject were both born in the north of Ireland, whence they came to the United States when young, their marriage having been solemnized in the city of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in 1853. Immediately afterward they removed to Delaware county, Iowa, becoming pioneer settlers of that state, and there he invested his available cash in land, being able to buy only forty acres. James Robinson was a man of ability and had received excellent educational advantages for his day, having attended school in Pittsburg after coming to the United States and having been there reared in the home of his uncle, who took much interest in the young man. He had the prescience to recognize the possibilities in store for Delaware county through its agricultural development, and upon locating in Iowa in the early days he was able to secure land for about one dollar and a quarter an acre, and after securing his original tract he bent every energy to developing his property, investing every dollar which he could spare in adding to the area of his landed property and finally becoming the owner of ten quarter-sections of the best land to be found in Delaware county, and how his faith has been justified needs no further voucher than to state that the land is now worth one hundred dollars or more per acre. He is now one of the substantial and successful citizens of the county, retaining possession of all the land which he has acquired, while he still resides on the old homestead farm, being about eighty-five years of age and being one of the honored pioneers of the state. He has done much to assist his friends in a financial way and has contributed in large measure to the development and progress of Delaware county, where he is held in the highest confidence and esteem. While he has never sought political preferment he has been called upon to serve in the various local offices of trust and responsibility. He is a man of strong individuality and pronounced views and wields a marked influence in his community, while his inflexible integrity has gained to him the respect of all who know him. He is a staunch Republican in his political proclivities, and both he and his wife are consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church. His ancestors were prominent in the early wars in which England was involved, representatives of the family having been with Cromwell in the battle of Waterloo, having been members of the Enniskillen Dragoons, one of the regiments held in reserve to combat Napoleon's life guards, whom they defeated in a fierce conflict.

WILLIAM J. ROBINSON.

William J. Robinson, the immediate subject of this sketch, was reared on the old homestead farm in Iowa, attending school during the winter months and assisting in the work of the farm during the summer seasons. In the autumn of 1869, when fifteen years of age, he was matriculated in the Upper Iowa University at Fayette, Iowa, where he continued his studies about five years, being there graduated as a member of the class of 1875, and having received from his alma mater the degrees of Bachelor and Master of Arts. The year prior to and that following his graduation he was employed as a teacher in the university, having full charge of the department of mathematics, in which science he excelled. After leaving the university he taught in the public schools of Iowa until 1889, when he took charge of a small college in Tennessee, but he was not pleased with the outlook and retained the incumbency only one year, at the expiration of which he came to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, and purchased a quarter section of land, in Albion precinct, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits and stock growing until 1901, when he sold his property and purchased a quarter section in Sanborn county. In the autumn of 1902, he left the ranch and took up his abode in Avon, where he purchased the plant and business of the Clarion, which newspaper he has since conducted with marked ability and discrimination, making it one of the best county papers in the state. While residing on his ranch he devoted special attention to the live-stock industry, leasing large tracts of land from the Indians and utilizing the same for the grazing grounds for his cattle. He is a man of high intellectuality and much business acumen, and the town of Avon is fortunate in having secured his interposition as editor and publisher of its local paper. In politics Mr. Robinson gives his allegiance to the Republican party, of whose interests his paper proves an effective exponent. In the autumn of 1894 he was elected superintendent of schools of Bon Homme county, and was returned to this office as his own successor in 1896, while in 1902 he was again a candidate for the position, but through a technicality several votes cast in his favor were thrown out, giving the victory to his opponent, who was elected by a majority of only two votes. Fraternally he is identified with Avon Tent, No. 66, Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 4th of August, 1875, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Robinson to Miss Emma E. Glasner, who was a fellow student at the University of Upper Iowa, her home being in Fayette, that state, and of this union have been born four sons—William L. and Robert R., who are editors and publishers of the Tyndall Tribune, at Tyndall, this county; and Leon A. and Earl V., to whom their father will transfer the control of the Avon Clarion in the near future. On August 18, 1903, Mr. Robinson was appointed postmaster at Avon, which position he still holds.

JOSIAH SHELDON.—For a number of years the subject of this review has been very closely identified with the history of Lincoln county, South Dakota, being one of the early settlers and substantial citizens of this part of the state and the founder of the thriving town of Lennox, in which he now resides. Josiah Sheldon embodies many of the sturdy elements of New England manhood and traces his genealogy to an early period in the history of Vermont, of which state his parents, Samuel and Lavina (Ballard) Sheldon, were natives, both born, reared and married in the old county of Franklin. About the year 1850 Samuel Sheldon migrated to Dane county, Wisconsin, of which he was an early settler, and there took up a tract of government land which he cleared and converted into one of the most productive farms in that part of the state. He was a successful agriculturist, a worthy citizen and lived on the place he originally located until his death, which occurred in 1876, his second wife, the subject's mother, departing this life in 1858. By a previous marriage with Permelia Martin, who died in Vermont, he had one child, a son, by the name of Nelson, and to his union with Lavina Ballard four children were born, namely: Harmon, who, with the subject, laid out the town of Lennox, South Dakota, but who is now living a retired life in Wright county, Minnesota; Polly, wife of Sebastian Basford, of Clear Lake, Iowa; Josiah, of this review, and Desire, twins, the latter, who married William Dunlap, dying in the year 1887. By his third wife, Emma Ross, Mr. Sheldon was the father of one child that died in infancy.

Josiah Sheldon is a native of Franklin county, Vermont, where his birth occurred in the year 1842. He enjoyed but limited educational advantages, never attending school after his sixteenth year, and when old enough to work he took his place in the fields, where he labored early and late, helping to run the farm and contributing to the support of the family. After remaining at home until attaining his majority he started out to make his own way and from 1850 to 1876 followed agricultural pursuits in Minnesota, removing the latter year to South Dakota and taking up a claim in the northern part of Lincoln county, where the village of Lennox now stands, this thriving town being a part of the original quarter section which he purchased from the government. In addition to this land he also entered one hundred and sixty acres about one and a half miles west of Lennox and in 1890, in partnership with his brother, laid out the town and began a series of improvements which in due time attracted a thrifty class of people to the locality, many of whom purchased lots and became permanent residents.

Mr. Sheldon moved to the present site of the village before the advent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad in 1879 and donated about forty acres of his land for town purposes, selling all the rest except two lots which he reserved for his own use. He was a member of the first board of trustees of Lennox and in that capacity did much to advance the interests of the town and promote its growth, lending his influence to every enterprise calculated to stimulate business and industry, at the same time giving an earnest and whole-hearted support to measures having for their object the social, intellectual and moral well-being of the community.

In his political affiliations Mr. Palmer is a Republican and he has long been a factor of considerable importance in local party circles, besides manifesting an active interest in district and state affairs, laboring diligently during campaigns and contributing not a little to the success of the ticket as an organizer and worker. His fraternal relations are represented by the Masonic order, belonging to Lodge No. 35, at Lennox, and the Grand Army of the Republic Post, No. 21, which meets at Elsworth, his right to membership in the latter organization depending upon the three years which he gave to the service of his country during the dark and troublous period of the Civil war. Mr. Palmer, on October 18, 1861, enlisted at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, in Company C, Fourth Iowa Cavalry, which was assigned to duty in the Army of the Southwest, where he took part in several noted battles, including, among others, the siege of Vicksburg, and many minor engagements, to say nothing of the long, tiresome marches in which he took part and the numerous vicissitudes and hardships endured while defending the flag and upholding the integrity of the Republic. He was discharged December 5, 1864, at Memphis, Tennessee, with an honorable record, and since leaving the army he has been as earnest and loyal to the government as when fighting in its behalf on Southern battlefields. Mr. Palmer is one of the well-known and widely respected men of Lincoln county, who has dignified every station to which called and whose influence has ever been exercised on the right side of every moral issue. Those who know him best speak in complimentary terms of his many excellent characteristics and his record in the past may be taken as an earnest of continued usefulness and prosperity in years to come.

HARRY L. BRAS, educator, legislator, publisher, postmaster, promotor, politician and all-round good citizen, is a leader among the representative young men who have brought South Dakota to its present high place in the union of states. Energy and persistence are the prime qualifications which have won for him a most enviable position in the state. Few indeed are the enterprises for state development either upon educational or material lines in which he has not been prominently identified. As teacher, school superintendent and publisher of the state's leading educational journal he has made his impress upon the educational policy of the state for all of the period of statehood and before. As a legislator he introduced and pressed to passage the present efficient law for the inspection of food stuffs and dairy products, as well as many other important pieces of legislation. As a loyal citizen of his own city he organized the movement for the removal of the capital from Pierre to Mitchell and was by his neighbors made the manager of the pending campaign for capital removal before the people.

Mr. Bras is the son of Leonard Bras, a successful lawyer, and Mary Hannah DeMott, of South Bend, Indiana. He therefore possesses that mixture of French and German blood which has produced so many strong and notable men. His parents located at Toolsboro, Louisa county, Iowa, where Harry was born October 16, 1862. In 1867 his family removed to New Boston, Illinois, and there he received a thorough common and high-school education and then took a course in the Illinois State Normal University and later completed his studies in the University of South Dakota. For three years he engaged in teaching in Illinois and then, locating at Mount Vernon, Davison county, South Dakota, he took up a tract of government land, but continued to teach for three years, at the end of which period he was elected county superintendent of schools. The country was new, the school system crude, lacking in uniformity and coherence, but he set to work promptly to reduce it to a practicable working system and soon secured the adoption of a uniform course of study, free text-books, raised the standard of teaching and gave to the schools and the teachers an enthusiastic interest in the work. He held the position three terms and declined a fourth nomination to engage in the publication of the South Dakota Educator, the official organ of all the state educational bodies. He still is the publisher of this journal, as well as of the South Dakotan, the organ of the State Historical Society, and the School Board Journal. By his energy and industry he has built up a large and profitable printing establishment and publishing house. From 1890 to 1896 he was a member of the board of trustees of the Madison Normal and for a portion of the time president of the board. From 1898 to 1902 he was a member of the state legislature. He has from the beginning been an active member of the State Educational Association and of the Teachers' and Pupils' Reading Circles and much of the time one of the administrative officers of these bodies. Since 1892 he has been postmaster of Mitchell and is also the treasurer of the Commercial Fire Insurance Company.

On September 2, 1885, Mr. Bras was married to Miss Hattie Betts, of Mount Vernon, and to them four daughters have been born, Elsie Louise, Lillian, Florence and Sarah. Mrs. Bras died in December, 1903. In the prime of his manhood, Mr. Bras, with state-wide acquaintance and unstinted popularity, is still but at the beginning of that career of usefulness and honor which his unflagging industry, integrity and ability give assurance that the community will require at his hands.

HOWARD BABCOCK, attorney-at-law, and for a number of years a leading member of the Sisseton bar, and the present mayor of Sisseton, was born in Waterloo, Wisconsin, December 21, 1867, being the son of Seth C. and Sarah C. (Cole) Babcock, both natives of New York. Seth C. Babcock, a farmer by occupation, was descended from old colonial stock, his family having been among the earliest settlers of York state, and not a few of the name participating in the struggle for independence. He was a veteran of the late Civil war, serving in Company H, Twenty-ninth Wisconsin Infantry, and made an honorable record as a brave and gallant soldier. The Coles also belong to an old family, the early history of which dates from a remote period in the time of the colonies, and the name is still familiar in New York, where they originally located. Seth and Sarah Babcock were the parents of four children who grew to maturity, three sons and one daughter, all living.

Howard Babcock remained in his native town until about eight years of age and in 1875 removed with his parents to Racine, Mower county, Minnesota, where he worked on a farm and attended the public schools and the Spring Valley high school until his eighteenth year. After teaching two terms of school, he spent the ensuing three years in the Cedar Valley Seminary at Osage, Iowa, and at the expiration of that time began the study of law with Judge C. C. Willson, of Rochester, Minnesota, under whose instruction he continued until his admission to the bar in 1892. Mr. Babcock began the practice of his profession at Wilmot, South Dakota, in 1892, and two years later was elected state's attorney, which position he held the constitutional term of four years, proving an able, faithful and untiring official. Retiring from office, he resumed the general practice and when the county seat was moved to Sisseton he changed his residence to that place, and has built up a large and lucrative practice in the courts of Roberts and neighboring counties. Mr. Babcock is one of the leading lawyers of the Sisseton bar, stands high in the esteem of his professional associates and the public, and has earned an enviable reputation in his chosen calling. His success has been as pronounced financially as professionally and he is today one of the well-to-do men of his city and county, owning valuable real estate, besides his interests in the First National Bank and Reservation State Bank, of Sisseton, the First State Bank of Summit and the Citizens' Bank at White Rock. He helped to organize these institutions and has been a member of the directorate of each bank ever since, and at this time he is president of the First State Bank of Summit. He also organized the Sisseton Loan and Title Company and is heavily interested in the Roberts County Land and Loan Company, being president of both institutions. Mr. Babcock owns one of the finest residence properties in Sisseton and a half section in Roberts county, which is under a high state of cultivation and well improved in the way of buildings, fences, etc. He is essentially a self-made man, his professional success and financial prosperity being the result of his own untiring efforts and industry, and it is eminently fitting to claim for him a prominent place among the representative citizens of his adopted state. Mr. Babcock is a member of the Masonic fraternity and at the present time holds the office of junior warden in Sisseton Lodge, No. 31; he is also identified with the Pythian brotherhood, belonging to Reservation Lodge, No. 66.

Mr. Babcock, on January 22, 1895, contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Ella Jones, of Mitchell, Iowa, and their union has been blessed by three children, Dana B., Gordon C. and Carroll H., who are sturdy examples of the boys they raise in South Dakota.

IRA C. HILL, county treasurer of Roberts county and a gentleman of high standing in the business and social circles of Sisseton, is a native of New York, born in the city of Elmira, on March 9, 1848. His father, Felix Hill, was also a New Yorker by birth, being descended from one of the old families of that commonwealth, and his mother, who bore the maiden name of Julia Hoover, came of old New England stock, her father having served with dis-tion in the war of 1812. Felix and Julia Hill were the parents of eight children, five sons and three daughters, all living, the majority well settled in life and greatly esteemed in their respective places of residence.

Ira C. Hill spent the first eight years of his life in the state of his birth and in 1856 accompanied his parents on their removal to Wisconsin, where he lived until 1863. He was reared on a farm, with the rugged duties and wholesome discipline of which he early became familiar, and when old enough he entered the district schools which he attended of winter seasons until a youth in his teens. In 1863 he went with the family to Minnesota, where a little later he tendered his services to the government to help put down the rebellion, enlisting in Company D, Ninth Minnesota Infantry, with which he shared the fortunes and vicissitudes of war for a period of eighteen months, the meanwhile taking part in several campaigns and in a number of hard-fought battles. At the expiration of his period of service he returned to Minnesota, where he followed agricultural pursuits until 1892, when he disposed of his interests in that state and came to Roberts county, South Dakota, where he purchased land and engaged in farming. Later, 1897, he moved to Sisseton, and started a hardware store, to which line of business he devoted his attention until 1900, when he was elected treasurer of Roberts county, which position he still holds, having been re-elected in 1902. Mr. Hill's career has been eminently satisfactory and it is universally conceded that the county has never been served by a more capable or obliging official. He has handled the public funds judiciously, and as a custodian of one of the people's most important trusts has so deported himself as to gain the confidence of his fellow citizens of all parties and shades of political opinion. He has also served two terms as county commissioner and during his incumbency in that office was untiring in his efforts to promote public improvements, but at all times careful and even conservative in the matter of expenditures.

Mr. Hill is still engaged in agriculture on an extensive scale, owning a finely improved farm of four hundred acres in the northern part of Roberts county, all under cultivation, in addition to which he has various other interests, being a heavy stockholder in the First National Bank of Sisseton and in the Citizens' State Bank at White Rock. He has been quite successful in all of his enterprises and is now regarded as one of the financially strong and reliable men of his city and county. He is a member of Sisseton Lodge, No. 31, Free and Accepted Masons, and his name is also found on the records of Reservation Lodge, No. 66, Knights of Pythias, being a zealous worker in both orders, besides at all times exemplifying their principles and precepts in his relations with his fellow men.

Mr. Hill was married in Minnesota, May 27, 1878, to Miss Jennie Rhodes, daughter of Elica Rhodes, of New York, the union resulting in the birth of a daughter, Susie J., at home, and Felix, who is married and lives on the home farm.

JOHN HOLMAN, of the law firm of Gamble, Tripp & Holman, and distinctively one of the leading attorneys of the Yankton bar, is a native of Wisconsin and the son of Sjur and Ragrilda Holman, both parents born in Norway. Sjur Holman came to the United States in 1849, and settled near Deerfield, Wisconsin, where he shortly afterward married Ragrilda Aase, who was brought to this country by her parents in 1845, when about thirteen years of age. After his marriage, Mr. Holman turned his attention to agricultural pursuits and, though beginning in a modest way with but limited capital, he succeeded by good management and consecutive industry in accumulating a handsome competence, so that he is now enabled to spend the closing years of his life in comfortable and honorable retirement in the town of Deerfield. Of the children born to this estimable couple, eight are living at the present time, namely: Mrs. Martha Sterrick, of Omaha, Nebraska; Andrew, who lives in Copper Center, Alaska, of which place he was the first settler and founder; Nel, a graduate of the law department of Wisconsin University, but now publishing a paper in Deerfield, that state; Lewis, who is stationed at the Oknago Indian Mission in British Columbia; John, of this review; Gerina, at home; Edwin, editor and proprietor of a newspaper in Minnesota, and Ella, who is still with her parents.

John Holman was born February 10, 1867, in the town of Deerfield, Wisconsin, and grew up at home, attending for some years the common schools and later taking a full course in the seminary at Red Wing, Minnesota, from which institution he was graduated in the spring of 1887. In the following fall he entered the law department of the University of Wisconsin, and after prosecuting his legal studies for the greater part of two years, was graduated with the class of 1889, immediately after which he accepted a clerkship in the office of one of the leading attorneys of Madison. Young Holman spent about one and a half years in clerical work at the nominal salary of fifteen dollars per month and board, but becoming restive under such manner of living he resigned his position at the expiration of the time noted, and in January, 1891, came to Yankton, South Dakota, where, with something like fifty dollars saved from his meager earnings and about two hundred and forty dollars of borrowed capital, he opened an office and entered upon his career as a lawyer. His first year in this city was one of struggle and self-denial, clients being few and expenses by no means light. By husbanding his resources, however, he managed to acquire sufficient business to keep his bark afloat until the fall of the following year, at which time he was induced by his Republican friends to announce himself a candidate for the office of state's attorney. Arrayed against the candidate for the Republican ticket in that campaign were the combined forces of Democracy and Populism, a fusion which its members confidently believed would sweep the country and capture every office, state, district and county. Notwithstanding the strong opposition, Mr. Holman accepted the nomination and, entering upon the campaign with the determination of doing his best, made a thorough, systematic and brilliant canvass, the result of which was his election by a very handsome majority over a popular competitor. During his first term as prosecutor he formed a law partnership with L. L. F. Cleegee, and opened a branch office at Centerville, Mr. Cleegee looking after the business at the latter place, the subject taking charge of the office in Yankton. At the expiration of his term Mr. Holman was chosen his own successor and at the same time his associate was elected state's attorney of Turner county, in consequence of which their partnership was dissolved, the subject shortly thereafter becoming a member of the law firm of Cramer & Holman, which continued for a period of two years.

After practicing alone for one year, Mr. Holman entered into a partnership with Robert E. McDowell, present private secretary of Senator Gamble, which lasted until the formation of the present legal firm of Gamble, Tripp & Holman in the year 1901. Actuated by a spirit of intense patriotism, Mr. Holman, in May, 1898, sacrificed his law practice, which in the meantime had become large, far-reaching and lucrative, to enter the service of his country in its war with Spain. Enlisting in Company C, First South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, he was soon on his way to the Philippines, where he experienced the vicissitudes and hardships peculiar to warfare with a barbarous foe in a hot and trying climate. Soon after joining the army he was made corporal, subsequently was promoted quartermaster sergeant and still later rose to the rank of lieutenant, which position he held until his discharge, in October, 1899. Returning home, he assumed his law practice, which soon regained its former magnitude, and from that time to the present he has devoted his attention closely to his profession, with the result that he today commands an extensive business and occupies a conspicuous place among the leading members of the Yankton bar.

In the spring of 1900 Mr. Holman was elected mayor of Yankton, and the ensuing fall he was further honored by a third election to the office of state's attorney, in which position he is now serving his fourth term, having been re-elected in the fall of 1902. Mr. Holman's frequent election to important official station demonstrates not only superior professional ability, but a trustworthiness and popularity with members of all political parties such as few attain.

In December, 1900, Mr. Holman was married, in Yankton, to Miss Alice Flanagan, of this city, the union being blessed with two children, a daughter by the name of Susan R. and a son named Bartlett. Mr. Holman is a member of the Masonic order, in which he has risen to a high degree, and he is also identified with the Knights of Pythias and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He was reared a Lutheran and, though still adhering to that faith, he has attended of recent years the Episcopal church of Yankton, to which his wife belongs. He contributes liberally to the support of both these religions, is also alive to all kinds of charitable and benevolent work, and assists to the extent of his ability any laudable enterprise having for its object the social advancement of the community or the moral good of his fellow men.

HARRY L. SPACKMAN, president of the Reservation State Bank, Sisseton, and manager of the Roberts County Land and Loan Company, was born in Stephenson county, Illinois, May 3, 1866, the son of Jonathan W. Spackman, a native of Pennsylvania and by occupation a contractor and builder. Harry L., who is one of six children, three sons and three daughters, was reared to his seventeenth year in the town of Dakota, Illinois, the meantime acquiring a good education in the public schools. He came to this state in 1883, and from the latter year until 1888 he lived in St. Lawrence, Hand county, devoting the greater part of the time to agricultural pursuits, and then went to Sioux Falls, where he clerked in a store until his removal to Sisseton in 1892. Mr. Spackman was one of the proprietors of Sisseton, and to him also belongs the credit of being the pioneer merchant of the town. He opened a general store shortly after his arrival and conducted a very profitable business until 1896, when he disposed of his mercantile interests and engaged in banking and real estate. He was one of the organizers of the Reservation State Bank of Sisseton, and has since been president of the same, and also took a leading part in establishing the Sisseton State Bank, of which he is still an official and heavy stockholder. In addition to this enterprise he is connected with the Roberts County Land and Loan Company, being its business manager, and to his energies and executive ability is due much of the success which has marked the history of the company from its organization to the present time. As already indicated, Mr. Spackman was one of the founders of Sisseton and to him as much as to any other individual may be attributed the rapid growth of the town and its favorable prospects of becoming at no distant day one of the most important commercial and industrial centers in the northeastern part of the state.

Mr. Spackman is a Republican in politics, and a faithful worker for the success of his party. He was chairman of the Republican county committee four years and served six years as county commissioner, to which office he was elected by an overwhelming vote irrespective of party. He is a clear-headed, far-sighted man, knows how to take advantage of opportunities and bend them to suit his purposes, and all of his undertakings have resulted greatly to his financial advantages.

Mr. Spackman holds membership with Sisseton Lodge, No. 38, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Reservation Lodge, No. 66, Knights of Pythias, and is also a zealous worker in the Odd Fellows order, besides lending his influence to other organized agencies for the promotion of benevolence, charity and fraternal relationships. Public-spirited, he hesitates at no difficulty and, optimistic in all the term implies, he has an abiding faith in himself and in his fellow citizens to make South Dakota one of the greatest commonwealths in the galaxy of states.

Mr. Spackman was married, April 10, 1889, to Miss Dora Wampler, or Elsworth, Illinois, daughter of A. J. Wampler, who is now an honored resident of Sisseton. To Mr. and Mrs. Spackman have been born three children, namely: Vera A., Hazel M. and Harrold B.

WILLIAM H. TURKOPP, M. D., is a native of the old Buckeye state, having been born in Columbus, Ohio, on the 12th of April, 1857, and being a son of Henry and Sophia (Thalke) Turkopp. Three other of their children are living, namely: Henry, who still resides in Columbus, as are also Christian and Alwine, the latter of whom is a teacher in the high school of Ohio's capital city. The father of the Doctor was born in Germany, about the year 1828, and came to the United States when he was a lad of about sixteen years of age, locating in Columbus, where he has ever since maintained his home, having eventually engaged in the commission business and having acquired a fortune through his well-directed efforts. His wife was born in Wisconsin and died in 1895.

Dr. Turkopp was reared to maturity in his native city, where he received his preliminary educational discipline in the public schools. In 1876 he began the work of preparing himself for his chosen vocation, taking up the study of medicine and finally entering the Starling Medical College, now the medical department of the Ohio State University, in his home city, where he was graduated in the spring of 1879, receiving the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Prior to entering the medical college he had passed three years in Europe, where he pursued a special course in chemistry, as a preliminary to taking up the other essential branches of the medical and surgical science. After his graduation he again went to Europe, where he took post-graduate medical study in the universities at Berlin, Leipzig, Munich and Vienna, being absent three years and thoroughly fortifying himself for the work of his chosen profession. He then returned to the United States and soon afterward took up his residence in Yankton, where he has since been engaged in the practice of his profession, and where he has attained a high reputation as one of the skilled and successful members of his profession in the state, securing a supporting patronage of representative order. So insistent have become the demands upon his time and attention that he has of late confined himself to an office practice, and he is frequently called in consultation on cases of critical character, his judgment in matters of diagnosis, treatment and surgical exigencies being held in high regard by his confreres, while such is his strict observance of professional ethics that he has the esteem and good will of all.

The Doctor is independent in his political views, having originally been aligned with the Democratic party, but his convictions in regard to matters of public polity led him to support McKinley on each occasion of his candidacy for the presidency. He served one year as coroner of Yankton, having been elected on the Democratic ticket and having the distinction of being the only candidate of that party to attain victory at the polls on that occasion. He is a man of scholarly attainments, is genial and sincere in his intercourse with his fellow men and, is held in unequivocal esteem.

In the year 1882 Dr. Turkopp was united in marriage to Miss Anna Peiffer, of Lakeport, this state, and they are the parents of five children, namely: William, Nora, Sophia, Minnie and John, all of whom are acquiring their education in Columbus, Ohio, their father's native city.

A. W. LINDQUIST.—As the name indicates, the subject of this sketch is of foreign blood, although a native of the United States, having been born near Alma, Wisconsin, on the 4th day of September, 1869. John and Christina (Westling) Lindquist, his parents, both natives of Sweden, came to America in 1850 and settled in Wabasha county, Minnesota. Later he moved to Alma, Wisconsin, and from there to Ortonville, Minnesota, in 1877, where the father engaged in farming. He died December 24, 1902, at the age of seventy-two years, the mother being still a resident of Ortonville. John and Christina Lindquist reared a family of six children, five living, the subject of this review being the oldest of the number. A. W. spent his early years on the homestead near Ortonville, and received his education in the public schools of that place, after which he accepted a clerkship in a mercantile house, holding the same for a period of eight years. Resigning his position at Ortonville in 1891, Mr. Lindquist came to Roberts county, South Dakota, and in February of the same year established himself in the mercantile business at Wilmot, which line of trade he has since conducted, the meanwhile greatly enlarging his stock by adding a general assortment of goods, including all kinds of agricultural implements and farm machinery, and meeting with most gratifying success in his undertaking. His patronage, which includes a wide range, is quite lucrative, and in his well-stocked establishment is found every article of merchandise demanded by the general trade. As a business man he is familiar with the underlying principles of commercial life, being a careful buyer, an accomplished salesman and progressive in the management of his affairs, yet sufficiently conservative as to make few errors of judgment, steering clear of unwise speculations and being satisfied with the sure gains that come from legitimate trading.

In addition to his commercial interests, Mr. Lindquist is a large real-estate holder, owning and personally managing the farms in Roberts county, besides holding a half interest in the old family homestead in Big Stone county, Minnesota. He belongs to the public-spirited class of men that have done much to promote the material advancement of Wilmot and Roberts counties, and he has also achieved considerable reputation as a shrewd, resourceful and far-seeing politician, having borne quite a prominent part in bringing about the re-election of Hon. J. H. Kyle to the United States senate. His influence in municipal, county and state politics has given him considerable prestige among the leaders of his party, not only in the county and district in which he resides but throughout the state as well. Mr. Lindquist is a thirty-second-degree Scottish-rite Mason, belonging to the blue lodge at Wilmot, the consistory at Aberdeen and the Mystic Shrine at Minneapolis, Minnesota. He is a zealous member of this ancient and honorable brotherhood, is well versed in its mystic work and his sterling manhood proves that its principles and precepts had not a little to do in guiding and controlling his daily life and conduct.

Mr. Lindquist was married on May 31, 1893, to Miss Edna Knappen, of Minneapolis, and is the father of two children, Muriel and Phyllis.

HOSMER H. KEITH was born at North Brookfield, Madison county, New York, July 12, 1846, his father having been a farmer and of Scotch ancestry. Besides receiving instruction in the common schools, Mr. Keith was graduated at Whitestown Seminary and afterwards received the honorary degree of Master of Arts from Colgate University at Hamilton, New York. During his young manhood he not only worked on the farm, but, like many other energetic young men of his time, he also engaged in school teaching. He studied law for two years, and then entered the Law School at Albany, New York, graduating in 1870. He was admitted to the bar at a general term of the supreme court in New York in June, 1870, and has since then, first in New York and subsequently in South Dakota, been in the active practice of his profession. He came to Sioux Falls in the spring of 1883. At the election of officers for the proposed state of South Dakota, under the Sioux Falls constitution, he was elected judge of the circuit court of the second district. At the election in the fall of 1888 he was elected a member of the territorial legislature from the counties of Hanson, McCook and Minnehaha, receiving a majority of four hundred and ninety-eight votes over his competitor, J. T. Gilbert, who had been elected to the previous term by a majority of one hundred and sixty-five votes. Mr. Keith was elected speaker of the house of representatives and filled the position with marked ability. He took a prominent part in the division of the territory and the admission of the southern half as a state. He stands high as a public speaker and is always listened to with marked attention. As a lawyer he ranks among the best in the state. When he is employed in a case, his opponents know there is to be a contest from the beginning to the end. He is a sagacious trier of cases, a good advocate and when summoned to a court of last resort he is well equipped and able to make the best presentation of his case. As a citizen he is independent and enterprising and takes an active part in all public matters. For several years he was president of the Commercial Club and Business Men's League of his city.

Mr. Keith is a prominent member of the Baptist church, and is also well known in fraternal circles, belonging to Masonic blue lodge No. 5, the Scottish Rite consistory, the Mystic Shrine and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, all at Sioux Falls. In politics he has always actively supported the Republican party. He was elected city attorney of Sioux Falls in 1901 and has since been retained in that office.

On the 9th of August, 1870, he was united in marriage to Mary Katherine Spear, the daughter of Philitus B. Spear, D. D., of Hamilton, New York, and to them have been born three children, namely: Flora Belle, who was graduated from a ladies' seminary at Hamilton, New York; Edwin Spear, who graduated from Pillsbury Academy, Owatonna, Minnesota, and took two years in Chicago University, is now a successful merchant in Bremerton, Washington; Albert Jackson, who was graduated from Sioux Falls College and the law department of the University of Minnesota, is now practicing law with his father at Sioux Falls.

EDWARD MOSCRIP, son of Thomas and Sally (Reynolds) Moscrip, was born in Delaware county, New York, October 14, 1838. His early years were spent in his native state, where he grew to manhood on a farm, and in the subscription schools of Delaware county he received a fair education, his principal training, however, being of an intensely practical nature, obtained by coming in contact with the world in various capacities. Mr. Moscrip followed agricultural pursuits in New York until the year 1857, when he went to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and engaged in lumbering, continuing that line of business until 1861. In the spring of the latter year he responded to President Lincoln's call for volunteers by enlisting in Company E, Second Wisconsin Infantry, which was part of the celebrated Iron Brigade, the only brigade of western troops in the Army of the Potomac, being the First Brigade of the First Division, First Army Corps, Army of the Potomac, with which he shared all the realities of war in several of the southern campaigns, taking part in some of the bloodiest battles of the Rebellion, among which were the first Bull Run, Gainesville, second Bull Run, Chancellorsville, Fredericksburg, Antietam, Gettysburg, the Wilderness and many others, in all of which his conduct was that of a brave and heroic soldier who never hesitated when duty called and whose record is one of which any veteran might well feel proud. On May 10, 1864, in the battle of Spottsylvania Court House, he was shot in the hip, the injury being such as to render him almost helpless for a year, during which time he received hospital attention at various places, remaining for some time at the Soldiers' Home in the city of New York. Mr. Moscrip was discharged at Providence, Rhode Island, in April, 1865, and immediately thereafter returned to Oshkosh, Wisconsin, where in the spring of the following year he resumed lumbering in the pineries of that state. He was quite fortunate in this business and followed it about seven years, during which time he realized considerable wealth and laid the foundation of his subsequent success as a farmer and stock raiser. In the month of March, 1868, Mr. Moscrip was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Gilmore, of Illinois, and four years later, with his wife and two children, drove from Wisconsin to Lincoln county, South Dakota, and purchased a quarter section of land in LaValley township, which he improved and which he made his home during the ensuing five years. Disposing of his place at the end of that time, he bought the southwest quarter of section 2, LaValley township, which he still owns, converting his land the meanwhile into a finely cultivated and splendidly improved farm, his dwelling and barn, erected in 1900, being among the best buildings of the kind in the community. As a farmer Mr. Moscrip ranks with the most enterprising and successful of Lincoln county agriculturists, and he also has an enviable reputation as a raiser of live stock, his horses, cattle and hogs being carefully selected from the most approved breeds and he seldom fails to realize every year handsome profits from the sale of these animals. Not only as an up-to-date farmer and stock man is Mr. Moscrip known, but he has long been before the people as a leader in various public enterprises, among which may be noted the locating and laying out of highways, the building up of the local school system, also his activity and usefulness as chairman of the town board. He is a Republican in politics, and in 1890 represented Lincoln county in the lower house of the legislature, a position unsought on his part, but filled with credit to himself and to his constituents. Mr. Moscrip belongs to several secret fraternities and benevolent societies, among which are the Masonic lodge at Sioux Falls, the Union Veterans' Union at the same place, and the Grand Army post, which holds its sessions in Canton. The family of Mr. and Mrs. Moscrip consists of one son and two daughters, whose names in order of birth are Annie, Elva and William G. The oldest daughter married Joseph Shebal, a farmer and stock raiser of LaValley township; Annie is the wife of Charles Davey and lives on a farm in Wisconsin, and William G., who married Miss Eva Messner, is a resident of LaValley township and a prosperous tiller of the soil.

A. JAMES GIFFORD, M. D., one of the popular and able young physicians and surgeons of the state, living in the attractive little city of Alexandria, Hanson county, was born in Carroll county, Iowa, on the 26th of July, 1871, being a son of A. J. and S. M. Gifford, the former of whom was born in the state of Pennsylvania and the latter in England, the father being a farmer by vocation. The subject secured his early educational training in the public schools of his native county, and in April, 1882, removed to Miller, South Dakota, where he remained until 1897, when he was matriculated in the medical department of the Iowa State University, at Iowa City, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1901, when the degree of Doctor of Medicine was duly conferred upon him. He came forth well fortified for the work of his chosen profession, and soon after his graduation came to Alexandria, where he entered into partnership with Dr. Maytum, concerning whom individual mention is made on another page of this work, and they were coadjutors in their professional work under the firm name of Maytum & Gifford, until the dissolution of the partnership, February 1, 1904. Dr. Gifford is most appreciative of the responsibility and the exacting duties of his profession and is devoted to its work, in which he has been most successful. He is a member of the South Dakota State Medical Society and takes a deep interest in its work and deliberations, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 20th of May, 1897, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Gifford to Miss Edith Cokayne, a daughter of Charles Cokayne, of St. Lawrence, this state, and of this union has been born one child, a winsome little daughter, Marjorie.

JOHN B. UHRICH is a native of Alsace, Germany, but since the year 1868 has been an honored resident of South Dakota, consequently he can legitimately claim to be one of the old settlers of the state. Christian Uhrich, the subject's father, was a well-known teacher in Alsace and in addition to educational work, in which he spent twenty-four consecutive years, he was also employed for a considerable time in the office of the treasurer of state. He married in his native land Louisa Zabe, and in 1866 came to America, settling in Genesee county, New York, thence two years later moved to Hutchinson county, South Dakota, where he took up land on which he spent the remainder of his days in retirement, dying in the year 1886, his companion departing this life in 1895. To Christian and Louisa Uhrich were born eight children, seven of whom are living, namely: Joseph, a farmer residing in Hutchinson county, South Dakota; John B., of this review; Reichart, of Yankton, this state; Madeline, Christine and Christian, also living in that city, and Victor, whose home is in Hutchinson county. Paul, the only member of the family deceased, was the seventh in order of birth.

John B. Uhrich spent his early life in his native country and grew up pretty much after the manner of the majority of lads in the fatherland. In 1865 he came to the United States and after spending the ensuing two years in Genesee county, New York, came to South Dakota and, in partnership with his brother Joseph, engaged in the draying business at Yankton. Two years later he was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Rapsch, a native of Bohemia, and shortly thereafter moved to Hutchinson county and entered a quarter section of land in township 99, range 59, in which he now lives and which under his labors and efficient management has been brought to a high state of cultivation and otherwise improved. Mr. Uhrich increased his real estate from time to time until his farm now contains five hundred acres of excellent land, in addition to which he recently gave two hundred acres to his son. He has about two hundred acres in cultivation and, in connection with general farming, devotes a great deal of attention to cattle, horses and hogs, having met with most encouraging success both as an agriculturist and a breeder and raiser of fine live stock. It is not too much to claim for Mr. Uhrich distinctive prestige as an enterprising farmer and public-spirited man of affairs. He is a friend of education and for a period of eighteen years was a member of the local school board, in addition to which he has also given his influence and support to all measures having for their object the moral and social, as well as the intellectual advancement of the community.

Politically Mr. Uhrich is a Republican, but he has steadily avoided position in partisan affairs and refrained from seeking the honors or emoluments of office. He and his estimable wife have a large circle of friends and acquaintances and their pleasant home is the abode of an open-hearted hospitality. Mr. and Mrs. Uhrich have a family of four children, the oldest of whom, Victor A., married Tillie Harnisch and lives on the home farm; Rehard, the third in order of birth, is the wife of Charles Peshak, of Spokane, Washington, a tinner by trade; Joseph married Mary Stoberal and lives at Petersburg, Virginia, and Louisa, the youngest of the number, is still with her parents.

ROBERT S. PERSON is one of the honored citizens of the state, of which he has been a resident since 1884. He has been identified with public, educational and civic affairs, and at the present time occupies the responsible position of auditor of the United States treasury for the interior department. He is a resident of Howard, Miner county.

Mr. Person was born in Sheldon, Wyoming county, New York, on the 14th of May, 1857, and is a son of Solomon H. (1820-1861) and Mary (Hamilton) Person (1825-1881), the former of English and the latter of Scotch lineage, while both families became established in America in the colonial epoch. The father of the subject was a farmer by vocation, and both he and his wife died in the state of New York. Robert S. Person received his rudimentary discipline in the district schools of his native county, and later continued his studies in turn in the East Aurora Academy and Cheshbrough Seminary, in the Empire state, and in Beloit College, Wisconsin; he is also a graduate in law, having taken the degree of Bachelor of Laws at Columbian University, in the city of Washington.

Mr. Person's father died when the son was but four years old. At the age of fourteen years Robert severed home ties and after that he was thrown largely upon his own resources and became the architect of his own fortunes. For the next six years such education as he acquired was with the proceeds of his own earnings, either as a hired farm hand in summer or as a teacher of country schools in winter. For several years he was successfully engaged in teaching, having been thus employed in New York, Wisconsin and Dakota territory. In 1884 he organized the first public schools in Woonsocket, Sanborn county, in the then territory of Dakota, and was the principal of the high school at that place for two years. He was also a member of the board of trustees of the State Normal School at Madison for several years.

While he was a student at Beloit College, Mr. Person earned his way by tutoring and by reportorial work for the local press. The latter opened a new and congenial vocation, which afforded him pleasure as well as a source of needed revenue. In 1886 he engaged in newspaper work at Woonsocket, and in 1888 he again located at Howard, Miner county, where he was editor and publisher of the Howard Press until September, 1897, when he disposed of the plant and business to enter upon official duties at Washington, D. C., in connection with the federal government. From 1895 to 1897, inclusive, Mr. Person held the position of secretary of the state senate, and from 1896 to 1898 he was secretary of the Republican state central committee. He has rendered efficient service in the promotion of the interests of the party in South Dakota, and has been an influential factor in the party ranks ever since taking up his residence in the state. In June, 1897, President McKinley appointed him deputy auditor of the United States treasury for the department of the interior, and after having filled that office for a term of four years the late lamented President appointed him auditor for the same department. This appointment was made in May, 1901, and in December of the same year President Roosevelt renewed the appointment, and Mr. Person is still incumbent of the office, in the administration of which it is acknowledged he has demonstrated exceptional efficiency as a public officer. His duties involve great responsibilities, as about two hundred million dollars of public funds annually are advanced through him to agents, whose disbursements in turn must be accounted for to him.

Among the cherished memories of Mr. Person's associations with public men is the fact that for seven years he enjoyed the personal friendship of the late Marcus A. Hanna, United States senator from the state of Ohio and chairman of the Republican national committee.

Mr. Person is a man of public spirit and progressive ideas, and has ever shown a lively interest in all that makes for the advancement and material prosperity of South Dakota, of which he may consistently be termed a pioneer. In politics he is a Republican. His family are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church.

On the 7th of August, 1884, Mr. Person was united in marriage to Miss Ellen A. Persons, who was born in Forbeston, Butte county, California, on the 23d of February, 1857, being a daughter of Dr. Horace T. and Jane (Fenton) Persons. Mr. and Mrs. Person have had six children, of whom four are living, namely: Ellen Bertha, who was born in 1885; Ethel Marion, who was born in 1892; Horace Hamilton, who was born in 1893, and Mary Katharine, who was born in 1897. Helen Hamilton, who was born on the 6th of June, 1888, died on the 23d of February, 1889, and Robert S., Jr., who was born December 17, 1889, died March 29th, 1896.

PHILIP PFATLZGRAFF.—The name of the subject of this review indicates his foreign birth, also the part of the old world from which he came. Philip Pftalzgraff was born November 28, 1852, in Alsace Loraine, at that time under the dominion of France, but now a part of the German empire, being the son of Frederick and Magdalena (Schnaberger) Pftalzgraff, both parents natives of the same province. By occupation the father was a farmer, which trade he followed the greater part of his life, both in Germany and the United States. When a young man he entered the French army and devoted sixteen years to the military service, spending a part of the time as a member of the band, having been an accomplished musician, especially on his favorite instrument, the clarinet. Leaving the army, he resumed his trade and continued to work at the same in his native land until 1854, when he came to the United States and located in Rochester, New York. After spending two years at nursery work in that city, he removed to Cook county, Illinois, where he purchased land and devoted the ensuing fifteen years to agricultural pursuits, changing his abode at the expiration of that time to Butler county, Iowa, where he also developed a farm and continued to live the life of a contented and prosperous tiller of the soil for a period of eighteen years, dying in the town of Dumont on the 6th day of March, 1898. Mrs. Pfatzlgraff, who is still living at Dumont, Iowa, bore her husband seven children, the subject of this sketch being the oldest of the number. The others are George, a farmer of Butler county, Iowa; Fred, a hardware merchant in the town of Dumont; Jacob, who is engaged with his brother in the hardware business; Mrs. Elizabeth Schmitz, of Dumont; Lena, whose husband, Ernest Schmitz, is a general merchant in the above town, and Charlotte, who married William Ahrens, a grain dealer of the same place.

Philip Pfatzlgraff was but two years old when his parents came to this country, consequently he has no recollection of the land of his birth, being to all intents and purposes as much a citizen of the United States as if he had been born on American soil. During his youthful years he attended the district schools of Butler county and having been reared to agricultural pursuits he early became familiar with the rugged duties of the farm and grew up strong of body and with a well-defined purpose to make the most of his opportunities. Being the oldest of the family much of the labor of the homestead fell to him and he discharged the duty faithfully and well, working early and late in the fields and taking from his father's shoulders a great deal of the work and responsibility of running the farm. After remaining with his parents and looking after their interests until twenty-five years of age, he left home to make his own way in the world and in February, 1877, came to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, locating at the town of Loretta, where in due time he engaged in general merchandising.

Mr. Pfatzlgraff's business proved prosperous from the beginning and at this time he is proprietor of one of the largest and most successful mercantile establishments in the town, carrying a full stock of all articles demanded by the general trade, in addition to which he also handles all kinds of produce, which he ships in large quantities to the leading markets of the country. He has an extensive patronage, which is becoming larger every year and at this time the magnitude of his trade will compare favorably with that of any other merchant in the county outside the more populous centers.

Mr. Pfatzlgraff possesses supreme financial ability and has seldom if ever made any but fortunate investments. He owns fine town property, improved and well cared for, and in addition thereto has purchased from time to time valuable farm lands in different parts of the county, including the Henry Tjark place of eighty acres and a quarter section in Jefferson township, half of which is in cultivation. He leases the latter tract, but cultivates his eighty-acre farm, raising large crops of wheat, oats and corn, besides devoting considerable attention to live stock, specially to a fine grade of hogs, in the raising of which he has been quite successful and the proceeds from which add very materially to his income. Mr. Pfatzlgraff has been postmaster at Loretta for over twelve years and manages the office with the same care and consideration manifested in his individual business affairs. He maintains an abiding interest in the growth and development of the town, encouraging all measures for the general good of the community and welfare of the people.

Politically he wields a potent influence for the Republican party, the principles of which he has advocated ever since old enough to exercise the right of ballot, and fraternally holds membership with the Odd Fellows lodge in Dumont, Iowa. He has profound religious convictions and is a firm believer in the truths of the German Lutheran church, with which he has been identified since childhood.

The married life of Mr. Pfatzlgraff dates from 1870, in September of which year he was wedded to Miss Anna Miller, of Dumont, Iowa, who has borne him two children, a daughter by the name of Dora M. and a son, George W., both of whom reside under the parental roof.

LAWRENCE H. WILLRODT, one of the most prominent and successful farmers and stock growers of Brule county, is a native of the province of Schleswig, Germany, where he was born on the 17th of May, 1845. He received a good education in his native land, where he prepared himself for the pedagogic profession, and after coming to the United States he completed a course in a commercial college at Davenport, Iowa. At the age of twenty-two years he emigrated to America and took up his residence in the city of Davenport, Iowa, where he taught a German-American school about five years, being very successful in his efforts. He then opened a book and stationery store in that city, continuing in this line of enterprise nearly a decade, at the expiration of which, in 1880, he came to what is now Brule county, South Dakota, where he entered homestead and timber claims, while later he purchased one and one-half sections additional, having at the present time a fine estate of twelve hundred and eighty acres, of which about three hundred and twenty acres are maintained under a high state of cultivation, while the balance is devoted to the raising of hay and to grazing purposes, as our subject gives special attention to the raising of high-grade live stock, conducting operations on a quite extensive scale. He has shown marked taste and discrimination in the improvement of his farm, and has one of the finest residences in this section, the house and incidental improvements about the same representing an expenditure of about six thousand dollars.

On the 1st of April, 1871, Mr. Willrodt was united in marriage to Miss Mary P. Wagner, who was born and reared in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, she being a niece of Hon. John F. Darby, who was a member of congress from Missouri for a number of years and one of the most eminent members of the bar of St. Louis, while he was also one of the leading bankers of Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Willrodt are the parents of three children, namely: Clara L., who is the wife of John Q. Anderson, a prominent stock raiser of Lyman county, this state; and L. Henry and Laura A., who remain at the parental home, the latter being a student in the high school at Chamberlain.

In his political adherency Mr. Willrodt is stanchly arrayed in support of the principles of the Democratic party and he has long been known as one of its wheelhorses in this section of the state, attending the various conventions as a delegate and being an influential factor in the party councils. In 1901 he was elected a representative of Brule county in the state senate, this being the second general assembly of the state and one whose work tended to make history rapidly for the new commonwealth. He served with ability and his course was such as to gain him unqualified endorsement on the part of his constituents. He is identified with the Legion of Honor in Iowa, of which he became a member in 1879.

WELLINGTON J. MAYTUM, M. D., is engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Alexandria, Hanson county, and is known as an able and successful physician and surgeon. He is a native of the state of New York, having been born in Penn Yan, Cayuga county, on the 11th of December, 1864, and being a son of Charles and Emma Maytum. When he was five years of age his parents removed to Wayne county, Iowa, where his father engaged in milling, and there the Doctor secured his early educational discipline in the public schools, being graduated in the high school at Humeston, as a member of the class of 1885. In 1888 he was matriculated in the medical department of the state university of Iowa, at Iowa City, where he completed a thorough technical course and was graduated in 1891, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly after his graduation the Doctor came to South Dakota and took up his residence in Alexandria, where he has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession, the marked success and prestige which have attended his efforts standing as the best voucher for his ability and earnest devotion to the exacting duties of his chosen vocation. In 1896 he took a post-graduate course in the Chicago Polyclinic, and in 1900 he again took a course of special study in this well-known institution, from which it is evident that he at all times keeps in touch with the advances made in the sciences of medicine and surgery. The Doctor is a member of the South Dakota State Medical Society, and was for six years secretary and treasurer of the same. In 1894 he was elected to the office of superintendent of schools of Hanson county, and in the connection did much to systematize and vitalize the work of education in his jurisdiction, holding the position for two years and making an enviable record. He is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party and takes a lively interest in public affairs of a local nature. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Modern Brotherhood of America and the Yeomen. He is a skilled and successful physician, a loyal citizen and a man who commands unqualified confidence and esteem in the community in which he has lived and labored to so goodly ends.

On the 18th of November, 1895, Dr. Maytum was united in marriage to Miss Lillie May Syferd, who was born and reared in Wayne county, Iowa, being a daughter of John and Eliza Syferd, while she was a resident of Warsaw, Iowa, at the time of her marriage. Of this union have been born five children, namely: Charles K., Genevieve, Cecil, Thelma and Crystal.

HARRIS FRANKLIN. — The qualities which command the largest measure of material success in human affairs are a clearness of understanding that brings into definite view from the beginning the end desired and the most available means of reaching it; a force of will tireless in its persistency; and a quickness of decision that instantly utilizes the commanding points in any case. In the ratio in which they possess these qualities men are great according to their bent, and are the leaders of their fellows from the rightful sovereignty innate in their individual nature. There may be oratorical power—depth of thought and grace of diction—in the conjunction. Subtlety in dialectics and copiousness of technical learning may not be wanting. Social culture and masterful grace in all the bland amenities of life may be present in abundant measure. If so they are only added powers—helpful, but not necessary. For it is the men of action who move the world forward in its destined course, especially in this intensely practical age. Where such men hail from, and the circumstances of their birth and breeding, are usually matters of little moment. Nature has no favored spots for the creation of her choice products. According to her needs and occasions she is all Athens, all Stratford-on-Avon, all Wall street. When a man is required for any specific purpose, she produces him apparently without regard to circumstances and fearlessly flings him into the crisis. She knows her brood, and those she singles out for great events never disappoint her. Sometimes she even proves them in the alembic of stern adversity, and then they come forth from the trial only purified and strengthened for the work before them.

Harris Franklin, of Deadwood, is essentially and notably a man of this character—clear in perception, resolute in pursuit, quick and firm in decision. These qualities have given him force and leadership among men, and wrought out for him a record in commercial and industrial life creditable alike to himself and to the people in whose service it has been made. He was born in Russian Poland on March 18, 1849, the son of Z. and Ellen Franklin, also natives of that country. His ancestors had resided there for countless generations, had flourished and thriven there with the flight of time, had borne their part in the honorable history of their native land in peace and war, and had been content to be numbered among its useful citizens who faithfully performed every public and private duty. It was reserved for him to carry the family name and the qualities that gave it distinction into a distant country and the service of another people. And for this duty his preparation, while neither extensive nor showy, was consistent and sufficient. His mother died in his infancy and he was reared to the age of fifteen by his father, a busy exporter of seeds, principally flax. He received a slender education in the common schools, and was thrown much on his own resources from boyhood. In 1864 his father came to the United States and located at Syracuse, New York. Four years later he died at Des Moines, Iowa. In the meantime the son, in 1866, came to this country alone, and also settled at Syracuse. He began his career in his new home by carrying for two years through western New York a peddler's pack, weighing 100 pounds, and conducting the small traffic it made possible. In 1868 he located at Burlington, Iowa, and opened a small store which he kept with profit until 1871. He then sold out and moved to Nebraska City, Nebraska, where he engaged in a wholesale and retail liquor business, and became one of its traveling representatives and salesmen. He built up an extensive trade, but owing to extraordinary conditions in 1873 he lost all he had. He then went on the road in the interest of a Council Bluffs (Iowa) cigar company, in whose employ he remained two years. At the end of that period he gave up the job and going to Laramie, Wyoming, he again embarked in the wholesale liquor trade. His success in this venture was such that in 1877 he opened a branch store at Cheyenne. The year before this he spent a month in the Black Hills inspecting the business conditions and outlook, with the result that in 1878 he started another branch at Deadwood. The next year he sold all his interests in Wyoming and took up his residence at Deadwood permanently, having passed the greater portion of the time in the Hills after his first visit in 1876. The big fire of September 26, 1879, swept away all his possessions and left him twenty thousand dollars in debt. In this disaster he even lost all his extra clothing except one shirt that happened to be at a Chinese laundry in a portion of the town not visited by the fire. In the following November he again started his liquor business, which he carried on with increasing magnitude until 1890 when the prohibitory law went into effect. Before this, however, in 1881, having been taught by experience that it was unwise to have all his eggs in one basket, he started a cattle industry on a small scale which he gradually enlarged and promoted. In this he was on the highway to big success when the severe winter of 1886-7 caused him considerable loss. But he did not abandon the industry and is still extensively engaged in it. In 1886 he became interested in mining and the next year organized the Golden Reward Mining Company, of which he served as president until 1896. He then sold the greater part of his interest in the company to New York capitalists, gave up the presidency to E. H. Harriman, and became vice-president, a position he still holds. In 1895, turning his attention to finance, for which he has peculiar fitness, he organized the American National Bank of Deadwood, with a capital stock of fifty thousand dollars. That this bank has flourished vigorously under his management is shown by the fact that it now has a surplus and undivided profits amounting to two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars. He was its president until 1902, when he bought a controlling interest in the First National Bank of Deadwood, and since then he has been president of that institution. It has a capital of one hundred thousand dollars, with a surplus of ninety thousand dollars. But he is still one of the directors and the active manager of the American National. When Mr. Franklin organized the Golden Reward Mining Company the Ruby basin district was almost valueless because there was no way of extracting the precious metals from the ore at a profit. He then passed four years in efforts to overcome this difficulty, and was finally rewarded with the discovery of a chlorination process which greatly cheapened the work and made it pay. In 1890 his process was put in operation with complete machinery, and his became the first successful chlorination plant in the world in practical use. Previous to this some such process had been used in Grass Valley, California, but it was never able to bring the cost of treating ores below twenty-five dollars a ton, whereas, during the last two years his plant worked it treated them at a cost of but three dollars and fifty-one cents a ton. This enterprise was the making of the Black Hills as a permanently profitable mining center, but the plant was destroyed by fire in 1899. Since then the company has owned and operated an extensive smelter, and also built a well equipped cyanide plant on the site of the burnt property. In addition to his interest in this company Mr. Franklin has extensive holdings in other mining properties, among them the Deadwood & Delaware smelter, of which he is the head and controlling spirit, and which has recently largely increased its capacity. He is devoted to his various business interests, and has no time or taste for public life. He is therefore independent of party control in politics, and has never sought or desired public office. He is, however, earnestly and intelligently interested in the advancement and general welfare of his city, county and state, and withholds no effort needed on his part to promote them.

On January 1, 1870, Mr. Franklin was married to Miss Anna Steiner, a native of Hanover, Germany, who came to the United States with her parents when she was one year old, and was reared and educated in New York state. She died on January 10, 1902, leaving one child, a son, Nathan E. Franklin, who received his scholastic education in the public schools of Deadwood and was afterward graduated from the department of pharmacy in the University of Notre Dame, in Indiana. He is now cashier of the American National Bank, of Deadwood.

In 1893 a movement was started by the business men of Deadwood to build a first-class modern hotel in the city. Mr. Franklin took a great interest and a leading part in the project, and the result is the splendid hostelry known as the Hotel Franklin, which was named in his honor. The sum of forty thousand dollars was expended in purchasing the site and laying the foundation, then on account of the general depression of business the enterprise lay dormant for about nine years. But two or three years ago, mainly through Mr. Franklin's influence, it was revived and the building was completed. In addition to the expense already incurred, the sum of one hundred and ten thousand dollars more was invested in it, and of this Mr. Franklin put in fifty thousand dollars. The hotel was opened for business in July, 1903, and is one of the most elegant and complete in the Northwest. Mr. Franklin has contributed liberally to other enterprises for the improvement of the town and the advantage of its people, and has probably done more than any other person for the development and progress of the whole Black Hills region. In 1881 he was the promoter and carried to successful completion the first flour mill of Deadwood, with a capacity of two hundred barrels of flour per day. The mill burned, however, in 1897 and was not rebuilt. An electric light plant had been installed and operated a couple of years, when it was abandoned as an unsuccessful enterprise. In 1887 Mr. Franklin came forward with others and bought the plant and put it upon a permanent and successful basis with modern methods. In all the relations of life and in every field of labor in which he has engaged he has exemplified in a signal degree the best attributes of American citizenship, and he has the satisfaction of not only seeing the results of his energy and public spirit blooming and fructifying around him, but of being securely established in the lasting regard and good will of his fellow men wherever he is known.

WILLIAM H. MARTIN.—The city of Sioux Falls is signally favored in having at the head of its police department so able an executive as Chief Martin, who has shown the utmost discrimination and force in the discharge of the executive duties of this important branch of the municipal government. Mr. Martin is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in the town of Ashippun, Dodge county, on the 17th of February, 1850, and being a son of John Duncan Martin and Caroline (Wilks) Martin, both of whom were born and reared in Dundee, Scotland. The future chief received his early educational training in the public schools of his native town, and was reared to the sturdy discipline of the homestead farm. When but fifteen years of age he gave significant evidence of his patriotism and youthful valor by going forth in defense of the Union, whose integrity was then jeopardized by armed rebellion. He enlisted as a private in Company I, Forty-eighth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he proceeded to the front, where he proved himself a faithful young soldier, being mustered out on the 24th of June, 1865, and receiving his honorable discharge. He then returned home and soon afterward entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, becoming a skilled artisan in the line and continuing to follow his trade as a vocation for several years. When twenty-one years of age he was elected constable of his native town, in which capacity he gained his first experience in the handling of malefactors, proving himself a capable officer and remaining incumbent of the position for a period of six years. In 1876 he removed to Waukesha county, Wisconsin, where he was engaged in contracting and building until 1882, when he was appointed deputy sheriff of the county, being inducted into this office on the 1st of January and serving until 1888, making an excellent record. He then came to South Dakota and located in Sioux Falls, where he was engaged in building until May 7, 1890, when he was appointed a member of the police force of the city, serving two years as patrolman and being then, on the 1st of May, 1892, appointed to the position of chief of the police department, giving a most able administration of the office and being reappointed on the 3d of November, 1895, for a term of two years. In 1897-8 he was a guard at the state penitentiary, in this city, and on the 2d of May, 1900, there came a distinctive hark of the popular appreciation of his ability and former services, in his reappointment to the position of chief of the police department, of which he has since remained in tenure. In politics the chief is a staunch Republican, and fraternally is identified with Unity Lodge, No. 130, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Sioux Falls Lodge, No. 262, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; Joe Hooker Post, No. 10, Grand Army of the Republic; and Jasper Lodge, No. 9, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 13th of December, 1876, Mr. Martin was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Best, daughter of John and Margaret Best, of Dousman, Wisconsin, and they have one child, Stella M., who remains at the parental home, being one of the popular young ladies of the city.

CHRISTIAN C. FLEISCHER, D. D. S., whose finely equipped offices are located in the Van Eps building, Sioux Falls, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in the city of La Crosse, on the 13th of November, 1875, and being a son of Frederick and Josephine (Johnson) Fleischer, the former of whom died November 12, 1878, while the mother now makes her home with the subject. The Doctor completed the curriculum of the public and high schools of his native city, and in 1892 was matriculated in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, in the city of Chicago, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1898, receiving his degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery, and being thoroughly well equipped for the active work of his chosen profession. He initiated the practice of dentistry in his home city of La Crosse, where he remained thus engaged until September, 1901, when he came to Sioux Falls and here established himself in practice. He has gained a representative support and has already built up an excellent business, which shows a constantly cumulative tendency, as his abilities and devotion to his work become the better recognized. His office is supplied with the best mechanical devices and laboratory appurtenances, while the operative department is thoroughly modern in its equipment and facilities. Dr. Fleischer has ever given his allegiance to the Republican party, and his religious views are in harmony with the tenets of the Norwegian Lutheran church. He is a bachelor. The father of the Doctor was a native of Norway and was a man of high intellectuality and sterling character. He was for many years prominently engaged in the newspaper business, having been editor and proprietor of the Federalist of Emigranten, which exercised marked power and influence in connection with the colonization and material development of the western states. The subject is a charter member of the Psi Omega dental fraternity.

JOHN A. BOWLER was born April 8, 1861, in North Adams, Massachusetts, and at the age of six years removed with his parents, William and Bridget (Malvey) Bowler, to Sparta, Wisconsin, near which place he grew to maturity on a farm, and in the public schools of which he received his educational training. He remained at home assisting his father until his twentieth year, and then engaged in the implement business at Sparta, but after spending about one year in that town, he, in 1882, came to South Dakota, locating at Groton, where he became a member of the well-known implement and machinery firm of Short & Bowler. This relationship continued until 1884, when the subject purchased his partner's interest and since that time he has carried on business at the old stand, in connection with which he also conducted a branch establishment at Sioux Falls from 1896 to 1899. In 1903 Mr. Bowler bought an interest in the Western Security Company, of Sioux Falls, and from that time to the present he has been actively engaged with the enterprise as president and general manager, its continued success and prosperity being largely the result of his energy and correct business methods.

Mr. Bowler has won a conspicuous place in the business circles of Sioux Falls and Groton and has also been influential in all that concerns the material advancement of the two places, being a forceful factor in promoting all legitimate enterprises and to no small degree a leader in public affairs. He is a zealous and uncompromising Democrat and for a number of years has been prominent in the councils of his party, both locally and throughout the state, his ability as an organizer together with his judicious leadership gaining him such wide and favorable recognition that in 1894 he was chosen chairman of the state central committee. In this responsible and exacting position he demonstrated ability and resourcefulness of a high order and so thoroughly was the party organized under his management and so earnestly and effectively did he conduct the campaign of the above year, that for the first time in its history the state was carried by the Democracy. In the year 1902 Mr. Bowler was the choice of his party for United States senator, and received the full vote of the Democratic side of both houses of the legislature, but failed of election by reason of the large Republican majority. He made a gallant and dignified fight, however, and in addition to receiving the endorsement of the Democracy of the state, won many warm friends among those opposed to him by political ties. He held the chairmanship for a period of six years and the meantime, May, 1899, was appointed by Governor Lee warden of the state penitentiary, the duties of which position he discharged in an able and business-like manner until 1901, his administration being one of the most creditable and satisfactory in the history of the institution.

Mr. Bowler is a man without an enemy, for his large humanity embraces all his race and neither party feuds nor religious differences are able to separate him from his kind nor mar the cordiality of his social relations. Fraternally he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, belonging to the lodge at Sioux Falls, and at various times he has held important official positions in the organization. He is also a Knight of Columbus, at Sioux Falls, being grand knight of the local lodge, and district deputy.

Mr. Bowler was married at Sparta, Wisconsin, December 31, 1883, to Miss Mary E. Linehan, of that place, a lady of valued culture and sterling character and a favorite in the best social circles of her present place of residence.

JOHN C. McVAY.—This honored citizen of St. Lawrence, Hand county, where he is now living practically retired from active business, was born on a farm in Knox county, Ohio, on the 18th of October, 1834, so that he has nearly attained the age of three score years and ten. He is a son of William B. and Sarah (Love) McVay, both representatives of old and prominent families of Pennsylvania. The McVay family is of Scotch-Irish extraction and the original American progenitors came to this country in the colonial days, while the name early became linked with the history of the old Keystone state. Our subject is one in a family of ten children, whose names in order of birth are as follows: Byram B., John C., Mary A., Emily P., William M., Leonard S., Rebecca J., Malinda, Thomas R. and Columbia. Of the number eight are living at the present time. The subject secured his early education in the common schools of his native state and then took a course in an excellent academy at Chesterville, the same being conducted under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal church. He taught and attended school alternately until he had attained the age of twenty-two years. He then, in company with his parents and other members of the family, removed to Illinois, where he passed about one year looking about for an eligible location, and removed to Garden Grove, Decatur county, Iowa, where the honored parents passed the remainder of their long and useful lives. There the subject devoted his attention principally to teaching until he felt that a higher duty called him, the nation being engaged in the great civil war. In August, 1862, he accordingly enlisted in Company A, Thirty-fourth Iowa Volunteer Infantry. His regiment was assigned to the Army of the Cumberland and saw much hard service, participating in a number of the notable battles incident to the progress of the great conflict. In the engagement at Arkansas Post Mr. McVay was wounded in the right foot, being permanently disabled. He took part in the first attack on the city of Vicksburg, under General Sherman, and later was on detached duty for some time, being finally discharged in April, 1863, by reason of disabilities resulting from the wounds which he had received. After the close of his military career Mr. McVay returned to his home in Iowa, where he continued to be engaged principally in the insurance business until his removal to the territory of Dakota, in 1882. He settled in Hand county, where he took up three quarter sections of government land, which he improved and brought under a high state of cultivation, giving his attention chiefly to sheep raising. The family now own two entire sections of land in the county and the name is one which is honored in this section of the state, with whose development and progress it has been so intimately linked from the formative period to the present time. Mr. McVay has continued to reside on his farm until the present time, his home being practically in the village of Miller. He was for many years prominently identified with the insurance business, in which he met with marked success. From this source he laid the foundation for his present competency, and also secured the means to provide exceptionally good educational advantages for his large family of children, whose lives have been such as to amply compensate him for his solicitude and care. In politics Mr. McVay has given a stalwart support to the Republican party from the time of its organization to the present, but he has never had any ambition for public office and has never held such. He has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church for the past fifty years, and his wife was likewise a devoted communicant of the same. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic, at Wessington, South Dakota.

On the 4th of July, 1859, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McVay to Miss Hattie Coffin, of Newton, Illinois. She was born in Pennsylvania on the 14th of August, 1834, and was a successful and popular teacher in Godfrey, Illinois, for a number of years prior to her marriage, having been educated in Oberlin College, Ohio. Mrs. McVay was a woman of noble character and gracious presence, endearing herself to all with whom she came in contact, while she proved a devoted wife and helpmeet during the long period of nearly a half century, being summoned into eternal rest on the 11th of August, 1899. To her loved husband and children the memory of her pure and gentle life rests like a permanent benediction and thus is granted a measure of compensation for her loss. Of this union were born nine children, concerning whom we enter the following brief record: Horace M. died at the age of four years; Herbert H. died at the age of two and one-half years; and William L. passed away at the age of nine months. Bruce graduated at Mitchell University and is principal of the public schools at Highmore, Hyde county; Louise, who was formerly a popular teacher in the public schools, is now the wife of George B. Lincoln, a special agent of the government, in New York City; Winifred is a graduate of Mitchell University and took the state oratorical prize and second in the interstate contest at Fargo, South Dakota. She was likewise a successful teacher and is now the wife of Llewellyn Sage, who is an extensive ranchman near Salida, Colorado; Ward B. took a business course at Mitchell University and is engaged in farming and stock growing in Hand county, South Dakota; Emma Maude is a graduate of Highland Park College, Des Moines, Iowa, and is now pursuing her fourth year as a teacher in the primary department of the public schools of Miller; and Mary Abigail is a successful teacher of music in St. Lawrence, using the famous Burrows kindergarten system in her work with children. The family is one of prominence in the social, religious and educational life of the county and it is eminently gratifying to present this sketch in a work which has to do with those who have wrought well in the great state to which this history is devoted.

LEVI STONE TYLER, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Fire Insurance Company, of South Dakota, whose home offices are in the city of Sioux Falls, was born in Greenfield, Massachusetts, on the 7th of June, 1847, and is a son of Levi and Sarah C. (Harrington) Tyler, representatives of prominent old families of New England. He secured his education in the public schools of his native town, being graduated in the high school as a member of the class of 1861, after which he was for a short interval employed in a clerical capacity in a mercantile establishment in Greenfield. He then became identified with the express business and in the connection was finally advanced to the position of local agent in his home town, where he remained until 1868, when, at the age of eighteen years, he determined to follow the advice of Horace Greeley and "go west and grow up with the country." He visited Cheyenne, Wyoming, and Omaha, Nebraska, and finally located in Des Moines, Iowa, where he clerked in a store about one year, at the expiration of which he removed to Dallas county, that state, and located in Xenia, where he opened a general store, where he built up a successful business, while for two years he served as postmaster of the village. When the first railroad was completed through that section the new town of Perry sprung up on its line, Xenia being a number of miles distant from the railroad, and Mr. Tyler removed his stock of goods to the former place, where he successfully continued business for the ensuing four years, at the expiration of which he disposed of his interests there and returned to Des Moines, where he was again engaged in clerking about two years. He then accepted the position of messenger for the American Express Company on the run between Fort Dodge and Minneapolis, while later he was assigned to the run between Tracy and Pierre. In the spring of 1881 he filed entry on a pre-emption claim in Hand county, this state, and remained on the same until he had perfected his title. He then returned to Tracy, Minnesota, and again became a railway express messenger, in which capacity he was employed until June, 1887, when he was appointed agent for the American Express Company at Tracy, Minnesota, of which office he was incumbent until October 12, 1892. In that year he was elected a member of the Minnesota legislature, representing the sixteenth district, and he proved a valuable working member of the assembly, while he takes justifiable pride in the work he there accomplished in connection with providing for the erection of the new state capitol, in the city of St. Paul. At the close of his term as a member of the legislature he became traveling auditor for the American Express Company, and at the expiration of a year became agent for the company in the city of Duluth, where he remained a short time, being then made the company's agent in the city of Sioux Falls, in 1894. He continued in tenure of this position until 1898, when he was elected to the state senate, being nominated as a silver Republican. After the expiration of his term in the senate he became bookkeeper at the state penitentiary, in this city, retaining the office until 1901, when a change in political domination led to his retirement. In the autumn of that year he opened a general store at Harrisburg, Lincoln county, where he effected the organization of the Tyler Mercantile Company, of which he has since been secretary and treasurer, the business having already grown to be one of very considerable scope and importance. At the convention of the Retail Merchants' Association held in Sioux Falls in January, 1903, he was one of those prominently concerned in the organization of the Retail Merchants' Fire Insurance Company, of which he was chosen secretary at the time, while he is also a member of its board of directors. Through his executive and administrative ability the work of the company has been signally advanced and its affairs are in a most prosperous condition. He is one of the liberal and progressive citizens of the state and is held in high regard in both business and social circles. In politics he was originally a Republican, but in 1896 identified himself with the Bryan Democracy, being convinced that the financial policy of the party as defined in the Kansas City platform is best calculated to further the public prosperity of the nation, and he has ever taken a lively interest in political affairs. Fraternally he is identified with the Sioux Falls lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On the 18th of February, 1873, Mr. Tyler was united in marriage to Miss Josephine Alice Perkins, who was born and reared in Indianapolis, Indiana, while their marriage was solemnized in Dallas Center, Iowa, of which place she was a resident at the time. Mr. and Mrs. Tyler have three children, Persis Uretta, who is the wife of Wellington Andrews, of Sioux Falls;

Nathaniel Stone, who is a resident of Cherokee, Iowa; and Josephine Alice, who is the wife of Sioux K. Grigsby, of Sioux Falls.

HENRY M. JONES, general manager of the extensive business of the B. C. McClossan Fruit Company, of Sioux Falls, and one of the enterprising and popular business men of the state, is a native of Utah, having been born in Wasatch, that state, on the 10th of March, 1870, and being a son of William and Ellen M. (Keliher) Jones, who came to South Dakota in 1877. The father died at Spearfish, this state, in 1886, while the mother is still living, maintaining her home in Lead, this state. The subject of this review secured his preliminary scholastic training in the public schools and then entered the normal school at Spearfish, this state, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1887, which was the first class graduated in the institution. His father had become prominently identified with the cattle industry in this section, and until 1886 the subject worked on the great ranges during the summer months, spending the winters in school. In 1886 he secured employment in the office of the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead, where he remained until 1888, when he became traveling salesman for B. C. McClossan, wholesale fruit dealer in Sioux Falls, being thus engaged until 1897, and thereafter he was employed about one year as traveling salesman for a cigar manufactory in Sioux City. In the spring of 1898 Mr. Jones again entered the employ of B. C. McClossan and in the fall of the same year the business was incorporated, under the present title of the B. C. McClossan Fruit Company, Mr. Jones becoming one of the stockholders of the concern and being chosen secretary and treasurer of the company, while later he was made general manager, in which capacity he has since continued to render most effective service, doing much to promote the expansion of the successful enterprise with which he is thus identified. In politics he has always given his allegiance to the Republican party, but he has never sought nor desired the honors or emoluments of public office.

On the 7th of June, 1899, Mr. Jones was united in marriage with Miss Lois Ray, of Salem, Missouri, and they have a winsome little daughter, Linne Lois, who was born on the 19th of May, 1901.

CHRISTEN C. BRATRUD was born on a farm on Root prairie, Fillmore county, Minnesota, on the 27th of December, 1855, and was thus reared amid the scenes of pioneer life in that state, being a son of Ole C. and Ambjor Bratrud, the former of whom was born in Sigdal and the latter in Eggedal, Norway, from which fair Norseland they came to America and became pioneers of Fillmore county, Minnesota, where by industry and honesty the father attained a position of independence, becoming one of the successful and highly honored farmers of that section. The subject was reared on the homestead farm and early began to assist in its work, while his educational advantages were such as were afforded in the common schools of the locality and period. In 1883 he came to South Dakota and located in Estelline, Hamlin county, where he was engaged in the buying and shipping of grain for the ensuing four years. In the autumn of 1887 he removed to Bryant, in the same county, where he became identified with mercantile pursuits, having an interest in a general store. In the following year he effected the organization of the Merchants' Bank, of that place, and had the supervision of its affairs until 1893. In 1894 he closed out his interests in Bryant and came to Sioux Falls, where he has since been successfully engaged in the real-estate and loan business, his books at all times showing most desirable investments, particularly in choice lands in the southeastern part of the state and residence and business property in the city of Sioux Falls. He is a loyal citizen and takes an active interest in all that makes for the progress and material prosperity of the state of his adoption, the state in which he has attained success through his own well-directed efforts, while he has so ordered his life in all its relations as to merit and receive the unqualified esteem of his fellow men. In politics he exercises his franchise in support of the Republican party and its principles; he is an appreciative member of the Masonic fraternity and both he and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran church in their home city.

On the 20th of November, 1897, Mr. Bratrud was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Marie Strom, who was born in the beautiful old city of Christiania, Norway, on the 1st of January, 1873, being a daughter of Feodor and Elizabeth Strom.

OLIVER S. PENDAR, the virtual founder of the town of Salem, McCook county, which he named in honor of his native place, and one of the popular and well-known citizens of Sioux Falls, where he holds the responsible office of clerk of both the United States circuit and district courts, was born in the historic old city of Salem, Massachusetts, on the 29th of September, 1857, and comes of stanch old colonial stock. He secured his early education in the public schools and was graduated in the Salem high school, where he was reared to manhood. In 1877, at the age of twenty years, he started for the west, believing that better opportunities were here afforded for advancement through personal effort. He was located in the city of Minneapolis for one year, at the expiration of which, in 1878, he cast in his lot with the pioneers of what is now the state of South Dakota, taking up his residence in McCook county, where he took up a timber and a pre-emption claim, in due time perfecting his title to the property, to whose improvement he gave his attention. In 1879 a postoffice was established at the point now occupied by the flourishing little city of Salem and the subject was appointed the first postmaster, while he gave the name of Salem to the same in grateful memory of his home town, while the title was retained by the village which eventually grew up on the site. In connection with his official duties as postmaster he established a general store, in 1879, and continued to conduct the same until 1886, having been the first merchant of Salem and having built up an excellent trade. In the year last mentioned he turned his attention to the real-estate and loan business, in which line he successfully conducted operations until 1890, when he was appointed clerk of the United States district court and removed to the city of Sioux Falls, having received this appointment on the 30th of January, at the hands of Judge Edgerton, who was then presiding on the bench of the district court for the district comprising the state. On the 17th of the following June, Mr. Pendar received from Judge Caldwell the appointment of clerk of the United States circuit court for the same district, which office he still holds. The district clerkship he retained until October, 1891, when he retired from the same, but on the 26th of December, 1896, Judge Carland reappointed him to the office and he has since been in tenure of both, giving a service which has been satisfactory to all concerned. As has been said of him in another published article he is "a genial good fellow, well liked by everybody, and is a competent official." In politics he has ever been an uncompromising Republican, and up to 1888 he took an active part in the political affairs of the territory, having served as a delegate to several territorial and state conventions. He is a Knight Templar Mason and is also identified with the auxiliary organization, the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

In 1883 Mr. Pendar was united in marriage to Miss Mary E. Flint, who was born and reared in his native town of Salem, Massachusetts, the date of the marriage having been November 1st of the year mentioned. She died in July of the following year (1884.)

ERWIN J. TRACY, son of Squire and Graty P. (Leonard) Tracy, is a native of New York, born in St. Lawrence county, that state, on the 21st day of July, 1846. When ten years old he was taken by his parents to Sterling, Illinois, where he entered the public schools, the training thus received being afterwards supplemented by a classical course in the Mt. Morris Seminary, from which institution he was graduated at the age of twenty-four. After finishing his education, Mr. Tracy, in 1871, went to Wisconsin, where he engaged in teaching, spending in all about two and a half years in that line of work, divided about equally between the states of Wisconsin and Illinois. Abandoning the school room, he next embarked in the mercantile business at Arcadia, Wisconsin, where he remained three and a half years and built up a lucrative trade, but at the expiration of that time he disposed of his establishment and in the fall of 1877 came to South Dakota, locating on a quarter section of land near the city of Sioux Falls. During the ensuing twenty years Mr. Tracy devoted his attention exclusively to agriculture, with a large measure of financial success, accumulating the meanwhile a sufficiency of this world's goods to place him in independent circumstances. In the fall of 1897 he quit the farm and, moving to Sioux Falls, engaged in the real-estate and insurance business, which he still carries on and in which he has built up a large, far-reaching and lucrative patronage.

Until 1888 Mr. Tracy was a Republican, but that year he cast his lot with the Populist party, and became one of its active and influential workers in Minnehaha county. He was chosen delegate to four state conventions, was prominent in local politics, but put forth no efforts to advance his own interests, never having been an aspirant for public office. Subsequently he became dissatisfied with the principles and policies of Populism and this disaffection continuing to grow in intensity, he finally withdrew from the movement and returned to the folds of the Republican party, of which he has since been a zealous and uncompromising supporter.

Mr. Tracy, in 1879, was one of the organizers of the town of Wayne; he served as township clerk for some years, also held the offices of township treasurer, justice of the peace and road overseer, and took a leading part in forwarding the various interests of his community, materially and otherwise.

Mr. Tracy is in every respect a representative man, and his present commendable standing in business circles is the result of sound intelligence and clear judgment, directed and controlled by wise forethought. Fraternally he belongs to the Order of Home Guardians and the Improved Order of Red Men, in both of which organizations he has been honored with important official positions. Mr. Tracy was married in 1871 to Miss Flora O. Kipp, the union resulting in the birth of two sons, Lloyd E., of Tacoma, Washington, and Earle H., who makes his home at Hibbing, Minnesota.

WILLIS R. WOOD, who is engaged in the lumber business at Parker, Turner county, is a native of the Badger state, having been born on a farm in Columbia county, Wisconsin, on the 23d of October, 1859, a son of Norman I. and Julia A. (Welliver) Wood, who were pioneers of that state, where the former was a successful farmer. The parents are now living in Green Lake county, Wisconsin. After completing the curriculum of the public schools the subject supplemented this discipline by a course of study, in the Wisconsin State Normal School at Oshkosh, this being in the year 1880. He thereafter taught school for a short time in his native state, after which he removed to Winterset, Iowa, where he was identified with the lumber business until August, 1884, when he came to Parker, South Dakota, as manager of the local interests of the Oshkosh Lumber Company, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, which then maintained a number of lumber yards along the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. He thus continued in the employ of this company about five years, at the expiration of which he became associated with Charles W. Davis, of Oshkosh, in the purchase of the interests of the afore mentioned company in Parker and Alexandria, South Dakota, and since that time the enterprise has been continued under the firm name of W. R. Wood & Company, the business having become one of no inconsiderable scope and importance. In 1895 Mr. Wood purchased of Vale P. Thielman his abstract, land and loan business, at Parker. This enterprise was established by Mr. Thielman in 1870 and was conducted by him for a quarter of a century, thus having the prestige of being the oldest of the sort in the county, its foundation having been contemporaneous with the issuing of the patent of the first quarter section of land in the county, so that it figures as a distinctively pioneer institution. In politics Mr. Wood has ever been stanchly arrayed in support of the Republican party and its principles, and while he takes a deep interest in public affairs of a local nature he has never been a seeker of official preferment. Fraternally he is identified with Parker Lodge, No. 30, Free and Accepted Masons; Parker Lodge, No. 88, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and Monitor Lodge, No. 57, Knights of Pythias, all of Parker. On January 19, 1904, Mr. Wood was united in marriage to Miss E. Belle Waterbury, of Nashua, Iowa.

JOSEPH P. GRABER, the able and popular superintendent of schools of Turner county, was born in Waldheim, Wolinska Gubernia, Russia, on the 18th of October, 1868, a son of Peter and Frances (Waltner) Graber, both of whom came of stanch German lineage. The parents of our subject emigrated to America in 1874, arriving in the new world in September of that year. They came forthwith to the territory of Dakota and the father filed entry on government land one mile south of the present town of Freeman, Hutchinson county, South Dakota, becoming one of the pioneer farmers and stock growers of this section and still residing on his old homestead, one of the honored and influential citizens of the county. His devoted wife died in 1879, and of their six children two are still living.

Joseph P. Graber has passed practically his entire life in South Dakota, being reared to the sturdy discipline of the pioneer farm and early beginning to assist in its work, in the meanwhile attending the public schools during the winter months and showing a distinctive predilection for study and a marked appreciation of the value of education, so that his ambition led him to carry forward his studies into the higher branches. He attended Yankton College and later was a student in the University of Dakota, at Mitchell, pursuing a normal course. He continued to work on the home farm during the summer seasons and attended school winters until the autumn of 1887, when he began teaching in his home district, receiving twenty-five dollars a month, and from that time forward his interest in educational work has never waned but has been manifested in an insistent and helpful way. He continued actively engaged in teaching for eight years, being employed in the country schools except the last three years of this period. For two years he was principal of the public schools of Freeman and for one year was assistant principal of the schools at Menno, Hutchinson county. In 1893 Mr. Graber purchased a farm in the western part of Turner county and was there engaged in agricultural pursuits until the autumn of 1896, when he was elected to the office of auditor of Turner county, serving two terms and with marked acceptability. On the 7th of January, 1901, he was appointed county superintendent of schools, and at the regular election in the following year was chosen as his own successor in this responsible office, whose affairs he has administered with consummate discretion and ability, sparing no pains or effort in bringing the work of the schools up to the highest standard and having shown much executive tact in unifying and systematizing this work. Early in 1902 Mr. Graber became prominently identified with the organization of the First National Bank of Freeman, of which he was made the first president, retaining this incumbency until January, 1903, when he retired, finding that his official duties as superintendent of schools demanded his undivided attention. In politics he has ever been stanchly arrayed in support of the principles of the Republican party.

On the 15th of November, 1893, Mr. Graber was united in marriage to Miss Anna Waltnr, of Childstown, this county, and they have four children, whose names are here given, with respective dates of birth: Edwin, October 31, 1894; Melvin Victor, June 4, 1897; Rex Edgar, April 4, 1899, and Max, December 29, 1901.

WILLIAM HENRY HOLT was born in Willington, Tolland county, Connecticut, on the 13th of July, 1846, and is a son of William Holt, who was likewise a native of the Nutmeg state and a scion of a family long identified with the annals of New England, whither the original progenitors in America came from England in the colonial days. When he was ten years of age his parents came to the west and were numbered among the pioneers of Delaware county, Iowa, where they passed the remainder of their lives, the father having been in the hotel business. In 1863 he moved to Lama county, Iowa, where he was in the drug business. Later he moved to Cherokee county, Iowa, where he died in 1883. The subject's mother died in 1861. The subject completed the curriculum of the public schools and then continued his studies for some time in the Bowen Collegiate Institute, now known as Lenox College, in Hopkinton, that state. He initiated his independent career in 1865 and continued to be engaged in the drug business in Iowa until 1869. In that year he located at Cherokee, Iowa, and was employed in the merchandise business. Two days after his twenty-fifth birthday anniversary he came to Sioux Falls, where he has ever since maintained his home and where he has been successfully engaged in the real-estate business, handling both farm and town property and being the owner of valuable realty in a personal way. He is a liberal and progressive citizen and has ever done his part in furthering enterprises tending to enhance the general welfare and advancement. In politics he gave his allegiance to the Republican party until 1896, when he exercised his franchise in support of Hon. William J. Bryan for the presidency. He is a prominent and appreciative member of the time-honored Masonic fraternity, in which he has not only completed the circle of the York-rite bodies but has also attained to the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, being affiliated with the consistory at Yankton, while he is also identified with the auxiliary organizations, the Order of the Eastern Star and the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. For a number of years he was the recorder and secretary of all the subordinate Masonic orders in Sioux Falls, and in 1884 was grand recorder of the grand commandery.

In politics Mr. Holt is a Republican and was deputy register of deeds for about two years. In 1873 he was appointed sheriff of Minnehaha county to fill an unexpired term, filling the position for two years, while at the same time he was deputy United States marshal. In 1881 he was elected city auditor of Sioux Falls and held the office for thirteen years.

In 1886 Mr. Holt commenced the collection of Masonic publications in the United States and over the entire world, having now one of the best collections in the Union. He also commenced, in 1894, a collection of the literature and publications of the Dakotas, intending to make of it a historical library for the state.

On the 15th of July, 1873, Mr. Holt was united in marriage to Miss Martha Helen Raymond, who was born in the city of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on the 26th of November, 1847, being a daughter of Frank and Martha Raymond, who were early settlers in the "Cream City." Mr. and Mrs. Holt have two children, Martha Etta, wife of Lieutenant E. E. Hawkins, of Seattle; and Edmund R.

GEORGE H. FULFORD, M. D., one of the distinctively representative physicians and surgeons of the state, being actively engaged in the practice of his profession in the city of Sioux Falls, is a native of the state of New York, having been born in Chittenango, Madison county, on the 18th of July, 1854, and being a son of Rev. Daniel and Clara A. Fulford. His father was a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church and a member of the northern New York conference. He was born in England and accompanied his parents to America when a lad of fourteen years, his wife having been born in the state of New York. He was a man of ripe scholarship and noble character and accomplished a goodly work in his high calling. Dr. Fulford received his early education in the public schools of the various towns to which his father's vocation called him, through the itinerant system of the church of which he was a clergyman, and our subject was thus reared in a dozen or more towns in his native state. In 1872 he was graduated in the Ogdensburg Commercial College, and in 1876 was graduated in Ives Seminary, a literary and collegiate institution at Antwerp, New York, winning the gold medal offered for the best development in scholarship and deportment in that year. During the session of 1876-7 the Doctor attended the Syracuse University, and then entered the school of medicine of Boston University, where he completed the prescribed three years' course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1880, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He always took delight in his studies, which he never found irksome, even as a boy, and his early desire was to become a locomotive engineer, but before his graduation in Ives Seminary he had determined to prepare himself for the profession in which he has met with so notable success. During the winter term of 1874-5 he taught in the public schools of Pamela, New York. In 1888-9 he took a full post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic, and in 1893 farther fortified himself for the work of his profession by a clinical course in Chicago. He began the practice of his profession in New Haven, New York, in 1880, and two years later removed to Henderson, that state, where he continued in practice until December, 1885, when he came to Sioux Falls, arriving here the day before Christmas. He has here built up a very large and lucrative practice and is held in high regard in professional, business and social circles. He has been very successful in a financial way since casting in his lot with the state. In politics the Doctor is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and was nominated for the office of county coroner in 1898, but met defeat with the balance of the ticket. He and his wife are valued members of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of whose board of trustees he has been a member for the past seventeen years, while in 1886-7 he was treasurer of the church, as was he also from 1899 to 1901, and in 1902-3 he was treasurer of the building fund of the church. He has been identified with the American Institute of Homeopathy since 1893, with the South Dakota State Homeopathic Medical Society since 1892, and was president of the same in that and the following year, while fraternally he is affiliated with the Masonic order, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Woodmen of America, the Woodmen of the World, the Mutual Benefit Association, the Yeomen, the Court of Honor and the Home Guardians. He is at the present time president of the board of directors of the City Rescue Mission (now called Union City Mission.)

On the 15th of November, 1881, in Henderson, New York, Dr. Fulford was united in marriage to Miss Katie E. Thompson, her parents having been natives of Vermont, while her father was for many years a prominent merchant and influential citizen of Henderson. Dr. and Mrs. Fulford have two children, Allen Thompson, who was born January 4, 1895, and Sydney, who was born February 10, 1896. On December 15, 1903, they adopted a girl twelve years of age, named Ida Florence Fulford.

LEWIS VICTOR PEEK, of Wilmot, was born near Portage City, Columbia county, Wisconsin, September 26, 1862, being one of a family of four children, whose father, William H. Peek, a native of New York, was an early settler of Wisconsin, and by occupation a tiller of the soil. Lewis V. was reared to agricultural pursuits, acquired a strong physique under the rugged but wholesome discipline of the farm and grew to young manhood in Minnesota, to which state his parents removed when he was but a child. Later, in 1882, he accompanied the family to South Dakota and subsequently began clerking in a store at Milbank, but after spending a short time in that town he accepted a similar position in Wilmot, where he sold goods for one year.

In 1887 Mr. Peek was appointed deputy county treasurer and two years later succeeded to the office of treasurer to fill out the unexpired term of William McKissick, discharging the duties of the position until 1893, having been elected for a full term in 1891. Retiring from the office at the expiration of his period of service, he took a claim in the northern part of the county, where the name Victor was given to a township in compliment to him, and a little later he secured the postoffice at Vernon, to accommodate people of that locality. After residing on his claim until the fall of 1894 Mr. Peek was elected cashier of the First State Bank of Wilmot, accordingly he returned to the town and entered upon his duties, discharging the same to the satisfaction of all concerned until January, 1902, when he resigned. He is still interested in the bank, however, being a stockholder and a member of the board of directors, in addition to which he is secretary and treasurer of the Wilmot Land and Loan Company, the organization of which was brought about mainly through his agency and influence. He is also interested in agriculture and stock raising, and owns considerable valuable farm land in Roberts county, which he personally manages, also a fine residence in Wilmot and other city property, his various enterprises having succeeded so well that he is now numbered with the financially strong and reliable men of the community honored by his citizenship.

Mr. Peek has been and is still one of the leading men of Wilmot and since locating in the city he has been very closely identified with its history and development. He served several terms as trustee and mayor under the original municipal government and after a city charter was secured he was also honored with official station, being mayor at the present time. Like the majority of enterprising men, Mr. Peek is a Mason and stands high in the order, belonging to the blue lodge at Wilmot, the chapter at Milbank, the commandery at Watertown, the Scottish Rite at Aberdeen and the Mystic Shrine.

which holds its session in the city of Sioux Falls. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, and their several auxiliaries, and an active worker in the local lodge of the Modern Woodmen of America, with which he is connected.

Mr. Peek, on February 17, 1887, was married to Miss Ida C. Bailly, daughter of Alexander P. Bailly, of Minnesota, and is the father of one child, Stewart Irving Peek, whose birth occurred on April 18, 1896. As already indicated, Mr. Peek is one of Wilmot's valued and highly esteemed citizens. He has borne well his part in life and is now conducting a flourishing business and meeting with the success that is justly deserved.

T. J. HARRIS, postmaster of Wilmot, and one of the early settlers of Roberts county, was born in Illinois, July 28, 1848. His father, Thomas Harris, a native of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, emigrated to Illinois in 1830, became prominently identified with the community in which he lived and spent the remainder of his life in that state, dying some years ago at the advanced age of ninety-three. T. J. Harris is the youngest of nine children that grew to maturity, six of whom are still living. He was reared in his native state, enjoyed the advantages of a common-school education and after beginning life for himself followed different occupations in Illinois and Minnesota until the year 1880, when he came to South Dakota, locating in Roberts county, where he engaged in buying and shipping wheat for several firms, continuing the business until the fall of 1889, at which time he took charge of a large elevator at Wilmot. After managing the latter enterprise for a period of eight years, he resigned his position for the purpose of entering upon his duties as postmaster of Wilmot, to which office he was appointed in 1897 and which he has since held, proving an efficient and popular official and performing his functions creditably to himself and satisfactorily to the public.

In addition to his official relations, Mr. Harris has large agricultural interests in Roberts county, owning two finely improved farms six miles south of Wilmot. He devotes considerable attention to these places, has reduced the greater part of his land to cultivation and realizes from it no small share of his income. Energetic and public-spirited he manifests a lively regard in the affairs of his city and county and being one of the leading Republicans of the same, has achieved much more than local repute as a politician, being widely and favorably known as a judicious party organizer and successful campaigner.

Mr. Harris is a member of the Pythian fraternity, but his acts of charity and benevolence are by no means confined to this order, being a liberal donor to all worthy objects and free to assist those who have met with misfortune or discouragements. Mr. Harris has a fine home in Wilmot and, with his wife, moves in the best social circles of the city. He was married in September, 1900, to Miss Emma A. Stowell, of Massachusetts, whose father, J. T. Stowell, was one of the pioneers of South Dakota, moving his family to the territory in 1880 and taking a prominent part in its subsequent history.

WALLACE S. LECOUNT, like many of the best citizens of this country, traces his ancestry to early French Huguenots, who, leaving their native home to escape religious prosecution, found a refuge in New England. His paternal grandfather was a Revolutionary veteran and also served in the war of 1812. On the mother's side, Mr. LeCount is also of colonial stock, being descended from the old Stark family of Glasgow, Scotland, representatives of which became closely identified with the history of New England, especially of Vermont, where the name of Gen. John Stark, who added luster to the American arms during the Revolution by his signal victory at Bennington, is still held in reverence and respect. W. J. LeCount is a resident of Wisconsin, and for a number of years has been revenue collector for the first district of that state. Nellie Fowler, who became his wife, bore him six children, two sons and four daughters, five of the number still living, Wallace L. being the eldest of the family.

Wallace S. LeCount was born January 9, 1869, in Hartford, Wisconsin. After finishing the high-school course he engaged in newspaper work in Wisconsin, came to South Dakota, and in 1884 established, at Wilmot, the Roberts County Republican. He has a well-equipped office, and issues one of the best and most popular local sheets in the state, it being Republican in politics and an able and fearless party organ. Typographically it is a creditable example of the art preservative, neat in its mechanical makeup, and is devoted to local and state happenings, and is a clean and exceedingly interesting family paper. The circulation is constantly increasing, the advertising patronage is liberal, and with a valuable plant its future influence and prosperity appear fully assured.

Through the medium of his paper, as well as by personal influence, Mr. LeCount has become known as a politician, and has been a member of the Republican state executive committee since 1899.

Mr. LeCount lives in the thriving town of Wilmot and is active in the interests of the municipality and the general welfare. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, being past chancellor of the last named.

Mr. LeCount was married on May 2, 1891, to Miss Emily M. Heimes, of Michigan, daughter of August Heimes.

REV. ULYSSES GRANT LACEY, the able and popular pastor of the Presbyterian church of Miller, claims the fine old Buckeye state as the place of his nativity, having been born near the city of Columbus, Franklin county, Ohio, on the 27th of May, 1867, and being a son of George W. and Mary J. (Patterson) Lacey. The former of whom was born in the state of Ohio and the latter in Virginia. The father of the subject was a farmer by vocation, and both he and his wife live a retired life in Maitland, Missouri. When the subject was but a child his parents removed to Holt county, Missouri, in which state he was reared to maturity. After duly availing himself of the advantages of the public schools and after serving a five-years apprenticeship as teacher, he entered Highland University, in 1893, in northeastern Kansas. After two years of college work he was recommended by Highland presbytery to the seminary. He had in the meanwhile determined to prepare himself for the work of the ministry, and his consecration to this noble calling has been of the most insistent and objectively prolific nature. In 1895 Mr. Lacey was matriculated in the Omaha Theological Seminary, a Presbyterian institution, and there he completed his ecclesiastical course of study and was graduated in 1898. His first charge was in South Dakota, his ordination to the ministry having been subsequent to his graduation by Central Dakota presbytery. Shortly after leaving the seminary in Omaha he became a member of the presbytery of Central Dakota and accepted the pastoral charge of the church organizations in Wentworth, Coleman and Bethel, this state. In this connection he labored zealously and effectively for nearly five years, within which time, with the devoted co-operation of his people, he effected the erection of a church edifice in each of the villages mentioned, and none of these buildings represented an expenditure of less than fifteen hundred dollars. The membership was doubled in the churches in Wentworth and Bethel, while in Coleman the roll of members was augmented by three times the original number represented. During his earnest labors in this attractive but exacting field Mr. Lacey resided in the village of Wentworth, and there the church erected for his use a beautiful cottage parsonage. In September, 1902, Mr. Lacey resigned these pastoral charges to accept the call extended by the church in Miller, and his resignation was a cause of deep regret to his former parishioners, but they released him in order that he might continue his good work in a wider field. Since assuming the pastorate of the church in Miller he has succeeded in increasing its membership near one hundred per cent., while all departments of the church work have been vitalized, the progress in both a spiritual and temporal sense being most gratifying. At the time when he came to Miller Mr. Lacey also had a call to the pastorate of a church in northeast Minnesota, at a salary larger than that offered by the church in Miller. Learning of this status of affairs, the society called a meeting and voluntarily agreed to offer the same compensation as that offered by the Minnesota church, while Mr. Lacey was also most earnestly and insistently urged to remain here, which he did. He is a man of rare pulpit ability, a forceful and logical speaker and one who is thoroughly fortified and grounded in the faith which he exemplifies in his daily walk and conversation as well as in his sacred ecclesiastical functions. He is untiring in his efforts, has unbounded zeal and enthusiasm and his personality is such as to win and to retain to him the high regard of all with whom he comes in contact. While a resident of Wentworth Mr. Lacey drove thirty miles each Sunday in order to hold services in each of the three places assigned to his charge, and in all other portions of his work he has shown the same self-abnegation and the same solicitude for the uplifting of his fellow men. In politics he gives his support to the party for which his father fought for four years and received an honorable discharge in 1865. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient and Accepted Order of Scottish Rite Masons.

On the 23d of December, 1891, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Lacey to Miss Minnie Noland, who was born and reared in Holt county, Missouri, and to them were born two children, Glenn D. and Helen F., born February 14, 1893, and May 23, 1896, respectively.

ROBERT L. MURDY, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in the attractive city of Aberdeen, Brown county, was born in Greene county, Pennsylvania, on the 31st of May, 1869, and is a son of Andrew and Eliza Murdy, the lineage being of Scotch-

Irish derivation. He received his early educational discipline in the public schools of Iowa, having completed a course of study in the high school at Moulton, while later he attended a business college in the city of Keokuk. In 1889 he was matriculated in the Keokuk Medical College, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1892, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. In 1896 he was graduated in the Missouri Medical College, at St. Louis, Missouri, from which institution likewise he secured a degree. In 1901 he took a post-graduate course in a clinical school in the city of Chicago; in 1902-3 he took post-graduate work in surgery and gynecology in Vienna, Austria, and upon his return to America, in the spring of 1903, he took a post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic, so that he is most admirably equipped for the work of his exacting and noble profession. In 1892 the Doctor located in Bowdle, Edmunds county, South Dakota, where he was engaged in practice until September of the following year, when he went to the city of St. Louis for further study. In January, 1898, he returned to South Dakota and located in Aberdeen, where he has since been most successfully engaged in practice save for the intervals given to post-graduate study in various prominent institutions, as previously noted. He is a member of the American Medical Association, the State Medical Society of South Dakota and the Aberdeen District Medical Society, and is held in high esteem in professional circles as well as in the business and social circles of his home city. He has read several interesting and practical papers before the local and state medical societies. He is surgeon for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company and visiting surgeon to St. Luke's Hospital at Aberdeen. In politics he is a conservative Democrat, believing firmly in the generic principles of the party, and fraternally is identified with the Knights of Pythias, Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America. He is not formally a member of any religious body but is an attendant of the Protestant Episcopal church, with whose faith and impressive ritual he is in sympathy, Mrs. Murdy being a communicant of the same.

ROBERT L. MURDY, M. D.

On the 19th of April, 1896, Dr. Murdy was united in marriage to Miss Pearl Collier, who was born in Davis county, Iowa, being a daughter of John and Martha Collier. Of this union have been born two children, Robert C. and Bernice, who lend cheer and brightness to the family home.

P. D. KRIES was born in the city of Elgin, Illinois, on the 5th of July, 1846, being a son of Paul and Sarah A. Kries, who removed thence to Trempealeau county, Wisconsin, in 1865, his father there engaging in farming, to which he continued to devote his attention until his death. The subject was thus reared to manhood in the county noted and there received his early educational discipline in the public schools, after which he prosecuted a course of study in the Galesville University, at Galesville, that county, while it is interesting to recall in the connection that among his fellow students was Hon. Charles N. Herreid, the present governor of South Dakota. After leaving school Mr. Kries was engaged in teaching until March, 1886, when he came to South Dakota and located in the village of Leola, McPherson county, where he engaged in the drug business. He also became the publisher of the Northwest Blade, which he continued in Leola for three years, then removing the plant and business to Eureka, in the same county, where he continued the publication until April, 1894, when he sold out to his partner. In July, 1895, Mr. Kries came to Columbia, and here established himself in the drug business, which he has since continued.

Mr. Kries is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party and has taken an active part in political affairs. In the autumn of 1902 he was elected to represent Brown county in the lower house of the state legislature. He was assigned to the committees on education, public health, libraries and printing. Mr. Kries has ever been a stanch friend of the cause of popular education and has rendered most effective service along this line since coming to South Dakota. Before a meeting of the board of directors of Brown county he read a timely and able article touching the matter of centralizing the work of rural schools in the interest of effective service, advocating the establishing of central high schools in the various townships and thus bringing the higher school advantages accessible to a greater number and materially improving the system as a whole. This article was published by the state department of education and largely circulated throughout the state.

In Leola, McPherson county, this state, on the 8th of November, 1887, Mr. Kries was united in marriage to Miss Hattie M. Cavanagh, who was born in the province of Ontario, Canada, being a daughter of P. and Mary A. Cavanagh, who came to South Dakota in 1886. Mr. and Mrs. Kries have three daughters, Edith, Olive and Ruth, who remain at the parental home and who are to be afforded the best of educational advantages.

NELSON LEE FINCH, president of the Citizens' State Bank of Andover, Andover, Day county, is a native of the Empire state of the Union, having been born in Broadalbin, Fulton county, New York, on the 12th of January, 1873, a son of William W. and Carrie (Lee) Finch, both of whom were likewise born in the state of New York, being of English and English-French lineage respectively. The subject of this sketch attended the public schools of his native town until he had attained the age of ten years, when, in 1883, he accompanied his parents on their removal to South Dakota, the family locating in Andover, Day county, where the father engaged in the mercantile business. Here Nelson continued to attend the public schools until 1889, during which year and that following he was a student in the South Dakota State Agricultural College, at Brookings, as a member of the class of 1893. In 1890 he continued his educational discipline in the Curtiss Commercial College, in Minneapolis, Minnesota, being graduated in July of that year. He then returned to his home in Andover and was thereafter associated with his father in the management of his business affairs until 1895. In January of that year his parents removed to New York state, our subject purchasing at that time his father's general merchandise business in Andover. This enterprise he successfully conducted until June, 1897, when he sold the same to E. C. Toy and soon afterward effected the organization of the Citizens' Bank, of which he continued proprietor and manager until July, 1902, when the institution was reorganized and incorporated as the Citizens' State Bank, and Mr. Finch has been its president from its inception, while Wallace Finch, of Gloversville, New York, is vice-president, and J. W. Krueger, cashier. The bank has a capital and surplus of twenty-five thousand dollars and is one of the solid and well-managed financial concerns of the state. The bank building is a substantial and attractive brick structure and the counting rooms are modern in their equipments and facilities, a portion of the building being utilized for the offices of the Day County Land Company. Of this latter corporation Mr. Finch was one of the organizers, in 1898, and when it was incorporated, in 1902, he was elected secretary and treasurer, which dual office he held until November 1, 1903. In December of the same year Mr. Finch disposed of his stock and retired from the institution.

Mr. Finch was the first president of the Andover Hotel Company, owners of the magnificent Hotel Waldorf, recently erected in Andover, and for several years was a director and executive officer in two other corporations there. He is president of the board of education, and has ever taken a deep and helpful interest in educational affairs and in all else that makes for the well-being of his home town, county and state. Mr. Finch is a member of the Baptist church, and fraternally is a Knight Templar, a thirty-second-degree Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and while he has taken an active part in the promotion of the party cause he has never sought or held official preferment, except that of city treasurer, of which he has been continuously incumbent since 1897. He enjoys the highest popularity in business and social circles and is one of the progressive and able young business men of South Dakota. Mr. Finch is a bachelor.

WILLIAM H. BAYNE was born near Medina, Orleans county, New York, on December 30, 1840. His father was a farmer and William H. devoted his early life to the rugged outdoor labor so conducive to health, physical development and the formation of industrious habits. His education embraced the common-school course and he grew to young manhood well prepared for the duties that awaited him as an industrious and intelligent American citizen. He was a young man in his twenty-first year when the country became alarmed by the threat of civil war and when the rebellion broke out he tendered his services to the government, enlisting in November, 1861, in Company D, Twenty-eighth New York Infantry. He accompanied his command to the front and saw considerable active duty in Maryland and along the Potomac river, but after a few months a severe attack of typhoid fever caused him to be sent to the hospital at Winchester, where he remained under treatment until his discharge, just six months and ten days after entering the army.

In the spring of 1864 Mr. Bayne went to Toledo, Ohio, for the purpose of helping his uncle run a boat on the Miami canal, but soon reaching that city he changed his mind and again entered the military service, joining Company C, of the One Hundred and Thirtieth Ohio National Guards, with which he continued for a period of four months and twenty days. During a part of that time his command was stationed at Johnson's Island, and from there was sent to Virginia, where it did guard duty principally until the expiration of the subject's period of enlistment. On leaving the army Mr. Bayne went to Michigan and, purchasing a small tract of land near the city of Coldwater, engaged in the pursuit of agriculture. After spending fifteen years in that state, he disposed of his land and other interests and in 1880 came to South Dakota and located a claim near Rondel, Brown county. Immediately following this he went to Chicago and began working at carpentry, which trade he had previously learned, and for a considerable length of time he was employed in the town of Pullman, at various kinds of mechanical labor.

Returning to Dakota in 1880, Mr. Bayne secured a tree claim and homestead, which he has since improved and on which he now lives, devoting his original homestead to the raising of live stock. He carries on farming and the livestock business quite extensively and has made a success of both, owning at this time one of the best improved places in the township of his residence, in addition to which he rents considerable land for the prosecution of his agricultural interests. He pays considerable attention to live stock, making a specialty of cattle and hogs, and from this source derives a liberal share of his income.

Mr. Bayne is an enterprising man and a creditable representative of that large and respectable class of yeomen that in a quiet, unostentatious way have done so much to improve the great west and develop its resources. A gentleman of pleasant manner and mien, courteous in his relations with others, he makes friends of all he meets and exercises a wholesome influence among his neighbors and fellow citizens. His sound judgment, practical common sense and correct ideas of right led to his election to the office of justice of the peace, which position he held for a period of ten years, proving an able and discreet dispenser of justice, as is attested by the fairness of his rulings and the impartial manner in which he rendered his decisions. Mr. Bayne is a Republican in politics and remained true to the principles of his party when it was threatened with disruption by the Populist movement of a few years ago. He has never been a seeker after public position, but labors earnestly for the success of the party's candidate, preferring to work for others rather than claim official honors for himself.

Mr. Bayne was married while living in Michigan, but his wife died in California a few years ago. Her maiden name was C. A. Kingsley and she bore him children as follows: Alice

S., who lives in Sioux City, Iowa; Georgia M., wife of John Humphrey, also of that place; Pearl, now Mrs. John Meesh, of California, and Mrs. Ella E. Gay, whose home is in California. In 1884 Mr. Bayne was married to Jennie F. Cool, of Grand Detour, Illinois. Fraternally Mr. Bayne belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic and at different times has filled official position in the local post with which he holds membership.

JOHN H. BOCKLER is a native of Washington county, Wisconsin, where his birth occurred on the 27th day of November, 1861. Born in the country and reared on a farm, he grew up with well-defined ideas of life and its responsibilities, and while still young he laid plans for the future and has lived to carry out the same. He attended school in Winona county, Minnesota, and on attaining his majority came to South Dakota, arriving in Brown county in the year 1882. Shortly after reaching his destination Mr. Bockler pre-empted a claim in Rondel township, seven miles southeast of Warner, and, addressing himself to its improvement, in due time had a good farm under cultivation, from the proceeds of which he has since been enabled to add to his realty until he now owns land to the amount of four hundred and eighty acres, all well situated and valuable. He has devoted his attention to general farming and stock raising and is to-day classed with the enterprising and successful men of the community in which he lives, being well situated financially and an influential factor in the affairs of his township and county.

Mr. Bockler has achieved an enviable reputation by reason of his success as a raiser of fine stock, his horses, cattle and sheep being of superior breeds and among the best to be found in this part of the state. He pays especial attention to the Percheron horse, in the breeding and raising of which he has gained more than local repute; his cattle are of the finest blood and he has also been fortunate in the raising of the famed Cotswold breed of sheep, having been among the first to introduce those valuable animals among the farmers of Brown county. Mr. Bockler's various business enterprises have succeeded according to his expectations and his career since coming west presents a succession of advancements such as few would have achieved under similar circumstances. He has taken an active interest in public affairs, served two terms as county commissioner and was a member of the board that planned and contracted for the new court house. In politics Mr. Bockler is what may be termed an independent, reserving the right to exercise his own judgment as to candidates and principles instead of obeying the dictates of party leaders.

Mr. Bockler, on December 10, 1891, entered the marriage relation with Miss Ida Pansegrau, of Aberdeen, and his family at this time consists of four children, namely: Nora, Herbert, Edna and Ethel. Mr. and Mrs. Bockler are among the highly esteemed people of their community, respected by a large number of friends for their many sterling qualities.

WILLIAM EGELAND, the present auditor of Day county and one of the popular young men of Webster, the county seat, was born in the city of Fargo, North Dakota, on the 7th of May, 1876, and is a son of Bertinius H. and Martha Egeland, the former of whom was born in Wisconsin and the latter in Norway, while their marriage was solemnized in the state of Wisconsin. In 1880 they came to Day county, South Dakota, locating in what is now Egeland township, in the southwestern part of the county, said township being named in honor of Mr. Egeland, who died January 19, 1898. He was elected county auditor in 1894 and at the expiration of his first term was chosen as his own successor, serving one year of his second term.

The subject of this sketch received his early education in the public schools of North and South Dakota, and supplemented this by taking a five-years course in the Augsburg Seminary, at Minneapolis, Minnesota. In March, 1895, he became deputy county auditor under his father's administration and served continuously as such until March, 1901, when he entered upon the duties of the office as auditor, having been elected in the fall of the preceding year. His experience as deputy had well fitted him for the work assigned to him and he has proved a most able executive, gaining unqualified commendation throughout the county. He was elected first on the Populist ticket, and in November, 1902, was elected, received the nomination on both the Republican and Populist tickets, being elected practically without opposition. He is now a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party. His religious faith is that of the Lutheran church and fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Yeomen.

HENRY A. PEIRCE, of Wessington, Beadle county, is a native of Chautauqua county, New York, where he was born on the 11th of October, 1844, being a son of Austin and Mary Ann Peirce, representatives of old and honored families of that section of the Empire commonwealth. The subject passed his boyhood on the homestead farm and after attending the common schools continued his studies in the academy at Fredonia, while later he took a course in the Buffalo Commercial College, being there graduated as a member of the class of 1863, after which he served in the Union army and was a witness of the battle of Gettysburg. After the close of the war he followed mercantile business and farming.

In 1883 Mr. Peirce came to what is now the state of South Dakota, and located in Jerauld county, where he engaged in stock raising, to which line of industry he devoted his attention about five years, being successful in his efforts. He then disposed of his interests in this line and in 1889 came to Wessington and established the Bank of Wessington, which is known as one of the solid financial institutions of the state and which has met with representative popular support and appreciation from the time of its inception. Mr. Peirce is president of the bank and as executive head of the same has directed its affairs with marked ability and discrimination. In politics he gives an unwavering allegiance to the Republican party but has never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of public office. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Royal Arcanum.

Mr. Peirce has one daughter, Julia L., who is now a successful and popular teacher in the public schools of the state of Washington.

JACOB H. COLE, a successful and honored member of the bar of Hand county, is a native of the Hawkeye state, having been born on a farm near the town of Pella, Marion county, Iowa, on the 3d of February, 1859, and being a son of Aart and Hendrika (DeBooy) Cole, of whose ten children seven are living at the present time. The father of the subject was one of a colony of fourteen hundred persons who left Holland, their native land, as a protest against the attempt of the Holland government to establish a state church whose tenets were antagonistic to their faith, and of the number seven hundred settled in Michigan, where they founded the now flourishing city of Holland and settled up a large section of Ottawa county. The remaining seven hundred colonists, among whom was the father of the subject—the only one of his family—proceeded farther west and located in Marion county, Iowa, establishing a sturdy colony and founding the town of Pella, the name being a biblical term, meaning a city of refuge. Aart Cole there engaged in farming, becoming one of the prominent and influential men of the community, and there he married his wife, who was likewise a native of Holland, coming over with her parents, all members of said colony; she is also now deceased.

Jacob H. Cole acquired his preliminary education in the public schools of his native town and later took a course in the local college, in which excellent institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1880, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Arts and one of the Master of Arts three years later. In the fall of 1881 he entered the law department of Drake University, in the city of Des Moines, and there completed the prescribed technical course and was graduated in 1882, being simultaneously admitted to the bar of the state. In the spring of the following year he came to South Dakota and took up his residence in Miller, where he has ever since been engaged in the practice of his profession, being known as an able and skillful trial lawyer and discriminating counsellor and retaining a clientele of representative order. While he has been an active worker in the ranks of the Republican party, to which he gives an unwavering allegiance, he has never sought any office, but in the fall of 1902 he was by acclamation made the candidate of his party for the office of state's attorney, being elected by a gratifying majority and entering upon the discharge of his official duties in January, 1903. He is eminently qualified for the office and his labors as prosecutor can not fail to redound to the best interests of the people through the conservation of justice.

EDWARD J. MURPHY, the local representative of the Mississippi Lumber and Coal Company at Bristol, Day county, was born in Washington county, Wisconsin, on the 29th of March, 1858, being a son of John and Bridget Murphy, who are now deceased. He attended the public schools of his native county and as a youth learned the art of telegraphy. At the age of twenty-one years he was given a position as telegraph operator on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad in Iowa and Minnesota, where he remained until the spring of 1883, when he was made operator of this system at Summit, on the Sisseton Indian reservation in what is now a part of South Dakota. He was thus identified with railroad work of this nature in the employ of the company mentioned for a period of about seven years, at various points in Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota. In 1883 he took up a homestead claim in Valley township, Day county, this state, and since that year has consecutively maintained his home in this county, being one of its early settlers and one who is well known and highly esteemed in the community. He proved up on his claim in due course of time, and still retains the same in his possession, while he also has two other adjoining farms in the county, all being located within a short distance of the village of Bristol, where he has resided since 1901, having become the local agent of the Mississippi Lumber and Coal Company at the time of its organization, in 1901, and having ably and successfully managed its business here. He had previously given his attention to farming and stock growing for a period of eight years. Mr. Murphy was one of those prominently concerned in securing the incorporation of the Day County Co-operative Creamery Association, of which he was secretary for two years, the enterprise having proved very successful. In politics he maintains an independent attitude, having followed the reform movement. In 1885 and 1886 he served as a member of the board of county commissioners, while he has ever shown a deep interest in educational matters and in all else that has tended to conserve the advancement and prosperity of the community, having held various local and school offices. He has erected two houses in Bristol, and in point of consecutive residence here he is now one of the oldest citizens, there being but two or three others now here who had anticipated his location in the village. He is a member of Andover Lodge, No. 115, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In this county, in August, 1886, Mr. Murphy was united in marriage to Miss Alice Larkin, who was born and reared in Green Lake county, Wisconsin, and they have two children, Edward J. and Mary Alice.

ALFRED TENNESON, late member of the firm of Tenneson & O'Leary, dealers in general merchandise in the village of Albee, is a native of Norway, where he was born on the 1st of January, 1873, being a son of Tennes and Johannah Tenneson, who became the parents of five sons and two daughters, six of whom are living. The subject secured his early educational training in the schools of his native place, his father having there been engaged as a merchant and ship owner. and when he was a lad of ten years he accompanied his parents on their emigration to America, the family locating in the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he attended the public schools and later completed a course in the Archibald Business College, in that city, being graduated as a member of the class of 1887. In the following year he came to South Dakota and located in Grant county, where he was employed in the lumber and hardware business of his brother, A. T. Tenneson, until 1892, when he returned to Minneapolis, where he was employed for one year as bookkeeper for the Standard Sash and Door Company. In 1894 he returned to Grant county and became associated with his brother, A. T., in the general merchandise business in Albee, the firm having erected a commodious store building in 1896, in which year he purchased the interest of his brother in the enterprise and forthwith formed a partnership with Daniel O'Leary, under the firm name of Alfred Tenneson & Company. They continued to be thus associated, J. E. Turback becoming a partner under the name of Tenneson, O'Leary & Company, until January 1, 1904, when the firm was dissolved. Mr. Tenneson also had the distinction of being postmaster of the town, having been appointed to the office in 1894 and having remained incumbent of the same ever since that time. In politics he is a staunch Republican. Fraternally he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, in Albee.

On the 21st of July, 1895, Mr. Tenneson was united in marriage to Miss Amanda Petrick, who was born in Wisconsin, being a daughter of William Petrick, who was a successful farmer of Grant county, this state, at the time of his death, which occurred July 11, 1902. Mr. and Mrs. Tenneson have one child, Francis A.

CARL J. GUNDERSON, the capable and popular young manager of the Union lumber yards at Irene, Turner county, is a native of Norway, where he was born on the 30th of No-ber, 1876, being a son of Hans Gunderson, who came with his family to America in 1882, so that the subject of this sketch has been reared under the influences of our national institutions. The family came to South Dakota in 1883 and located in Spring Valley, Turner county, where the father provided a home and turned his attention to farming and stock growing until June 20, 1885, when death called him away. Carl J. received such advantages as were afforded in the country schools in the vicinity of his home and continued to assist in the work of the farm until he had attained the age of fourteen years, when he began an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, becoming a capable workman and continuing to follow this vocation to a greater or less extent for the ensuing ten years. On the 1st of March, 1903, he was chosen manager of the Union lumber yards in Irene, and in this capacity has given most efficient service, while he has so ordered his course as to gain and retain the confidence and respect of all with whom he has come in contact, and is known as an energetic and progressive young business man. In politics he gives his support to the Republican party, and both he and his wife are members of the Norwegian Lutheran church.

On the 6th of March, 1901, Mr. Gunderson was united in marriage to Miss Emma Bruget, who was born in Yankton county,⁸ this state, on the 7th of April, 1878, being a daughter of Jorgen and Olina Bruget, who were numbered among the first settlers in the Mission Hill district of the county. Mr. and Mrs. Gunderson have two children, Olive and Esther.

HARRY E. JONES, cashier of the Bank of Revillo, Grant county, was born in Owatonna, Minnesota, on the 23d of November, 1866, and is a son of Robert E. and Emily K. (Noyes) Jones, the former of whom was born in Ohio and the latter in Vermont. His father located in Minnesota about 1866, and a few years later removed to Humboldt, Iowa, where he was engaged in the hotel business until 1880, when he came to South Dakota as one of the early settlers of Grant county and was one of the founders of the village of Revillo, where he operated a hotel and served as postmaster for a few years. He was one of the influential and honored citizens of the county, being public-spirited and progressive and taking an active interest in the development and material advancement of the county and state. He died in Revillo on the 13th of March, 1903, at the age of seventy years, and his devoted wife survives him. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Thanksgiving day, 1902. The Jones family is of Welsh descent, the paternal grandparents of the subject being both born and reared in Wales. The Noyes family is of English lineage, and the original representatives in America came over in the historic "Mayflower," while the name has ever since been one of prominence in the annals of New England. Robert E. and Emily K. Jones became the parents of five sons and one daughter. John F. is engaged in the grocery business in Revillo; Albert D. is president of the Bank of Revillo; Herbert I. is an engineer at Los Angeles, California; Evan died at the age of thirty years at Revillo, where he was a partner with his brother, J. F.; Grace died in childhood in Iowa; and Harry E.

Harry E. Jones was about five years of age at the time of removal from Minnesota to Humboldt county, Iowa. He later attended school at Milbank, South Dakota, having been eighteen years old at the time of the removal to this state. He attended Marion Business College, in St. Paul, where he was graduated in 1888. Immediately thereafter he became associated with his brother Albert in the establishment of a private bank at Revillo, while in 1891 it was incorporated as a state bank. It is one of the solid financial concerns of the state and does an excellent business, its affairs being conducted upon a basis of ample capital and the best of executive management. In 1904 the present fine brick building, seventy by fifty feet in dimensions, was completed, while a portion of the building is occupied by the hardware establishment of Jones Brothers, of which Albert D. and the subject are the interested principals. They also are prominently identified with the agricultural and stock-growing industry, owning twenty-five hundred acres of fine land in this county. Their success is the more gratifying from the fact that it is the result of their own efforts. When Harry came to the state his financial resources were represented in the sum of one dollar, having given up one of the original two dollars which represented his patrimony, in order to keep a prized bird dog which he brought with him. He read law under the preceptorship of Judge Keeler, of Milbank, and was admitted to the bar of the state in 1889. In politics he is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and fraternally is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which he has been recorder from the time of the institution of the lodge, in 1897. He and his wife are members of the Congregational church, he serving as treasurer.

On the 1st of June, 1889, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Jones to Miss Maude Dunbrack, who was born and reared in Hennepin county, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have six children, namely: Robert D., Verna N., Alta Maude, Evan R., Marguerite E. and Lucille Marie.

DANIEL O'LEARY, one of the prominent young business men and popular citizens of Albee, Grant county, being a member of the mercantile firm of O'Leary & Cahill, comes of staunch old Irish stock and is a native of Watford, province of Ontario, Canada, where he was born on the 21st of February, 1871. He is a son of James and Johanna (Ring) O'Leary, both of whom were born in the Emerald Isle, whence they came to America when young, while both are now deceased. Of the ten children all are living except one, the subject of this review having been the youngest in order of birth.

Daniel O'Leary received his early educational discipline in the public schools of his native province, continuing his studies until he had attained the age of seventeen years, after which he devoted his attention to various pursuits until 1894, when, as a young man of twenty-three years, he came to South Dakota and cast in his lot with the people of the state. He located in Albee and was here engaged in the buying of grain until 1896, when he became a member of the firm of Tenneson, O'Leary & Company, the other interested principal in the enterprise being Alfred Tenneson, concerning whom individual mention is made on another page of this work. This firm was dissolved January 1, 1904, since when he has been associated with John C. Cahill, general hardware, implements and grain. The subject is essentially an alert and public-spirited citizen, and takes a deep interest in local affairs, especially in the advancement of the thriving town of which he is a resident. He accords allegiance to the Republican party, and while he has never been an aspirant for public office he has been loyal to the duties of citizenship and has served for a number of years as a member of the local school board, being a zealous worker in the cause of popular education and aiming to secure the best possible advantages in this line for his home town. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, being affiliated with the local organizations of the same. January 1, 1904, Mr. O'Leary received the appointment of postmaster of Albee.

On the 5th of November, 1896, in Albee, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. O'Leary to Miss Elizabeth Cahill, a daughter of John and Margaret Cahill and a sister of his partner, the family being one* of prominence in Grant county. Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary have three children, namely: Frank J., Roy K. and Elmer W.

JOHN C. CAHILL, one of the representative young business men of Grant county, late manager of the Northwestern Elevator at Albee, was born in Sibley, Osceola county, Iowa, on the 28th of May, 1873, his parents, John and Margaret (Quirk) Cahill, having removed to that state from Wisconsin, while shortly after his birth they took up their residence in Minneapolis, Minnesota, whence they later removed to Fox Lake, Wisconsin, and in 1889 removed to Dakota, near Albee. His father died in February, 1901, as the result of disease which was the sequel of injuries received during his services in the war of the Rebellion. The mother of the subject is still living and resides with her children in Albee. After completing the curriculum of the public schools in Fox Lake, Wisconsin, the subject engaged in teaching in the schools of Grant county, whither he came with the other members of the family in 1889. He gained not little prestige in educational circles in this section, continuing to be actively engaged in teaching until 1896, when he accepted a position as grain buyer for the Northwestern Elevator Company, and was made manager of the elevator of the company at Albee, which position he occupied till January, 1904. In addition to the position noted he also owned a feed mill and wood yard in the village for three years. Since January 1, 1904, he has, in company with D. O'Leary, operated a hardware, machinery and grain business at Albee. It is gratifying to note that Mr. Cahill has been accorded preferment and distinction by his election to the office of president of the village council, of which position he is incumbent at the time of this writing, having been chosen at the incorporation, which was effected in 1902. In politics he is aligned as a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and fraternally is affiliated with Jefferson Lodge, No. 114, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Albee Camp, No. 3265, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 17th of June, 1897, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Cahill to Miss Charlotte Morback, who was born in Iowa county, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Cahill have a winsome little daughter, Hazel Irene. They are prominent in the social life of the community and their pleasant home is a center of refined hospitality.

JAMES EWING was born in Washington county, Illinois, on the 22d of January, 1862, and is a son of Samuel and Martha (Lackey) Ewing. They had nine children: Maggie, Mary, Susan, James, John, Cora, Thomas, Martha and Mamie. The father carried on farming in Illinois for twelve years and then turned his attention to the manufacture of brick and also did a general contracting business in that line. Both he and his wife have now passed away.

In the common schools of his native state James Ewing acquired a fair knowledge of the branches of English learning usually taught in such institution. He accompanied his parents on their removal from Illinois to Colorado, where he resided for four years, at the end of which time he went to Kansas, remaining there a year. He next located in Missouri, where he spent about four years and afterward remained for a similar time in Texas. On leaving the south he made his way to Nebraska, where he lived for two years and thence came to South Dakota. In all these various localities he purchased land and then sold his property at a large profit. The year 1886 witnessed his arrival in this state and he first purchased one hundred and twenty acres of land, of which he became the owner in 1896. Two years afterward he bought an additional tract of forty acres and again when two years had passed he bought a similar amount. When another year had gone by he purchased one hundred and sixty acres near the town of Yankton and upon this tract he now resides, while the remainder of his land is rented, bringing to him a good income. On his home place he is carrying on general farming and stock raising and his life record presents a prosperous career, his advancement in the business world having been gained through untiring diligence, perseverance and through the capable management of his affairs.

On the 28th of October, 1886, Mr. Ewing was united in marriage to Miss Edith Grant, of Yankton, who was born in Canada and was a daughter of Royal and Jane (Schooler) Grant. Her father died when she was but a year old and her mother afterward removed from Canada to Illinois in 1865 and there became the wife of H. A. Dunham, now a prosperous farmer of Yankton county. Her mother died in 1893. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing have seven children: Maude, Leila, Pearl, Mabel, Laura, Lyle and Thelma, aged respectively fifteen, fourteen, twelve, nine, seven, five and two years. The family circle yet remains unbroken by the hand of death and Mr. Ewing is devoted to the interests of this happy household, finding his own happiness in administering to the welfare and comfort of his devoted and loving wife and children.

In his political affiliations Mr. Ewing is an earnest Republican, never faltering in his allegiance to the party when questions of state and national importance are involved, but at local elections, when no issue is before the people, he votes independently. Mr. Ewing was reared in the belief of the Presbyterian denomination, although he is not at present a member of any church. His worth as a man and citizen are widely acknowledged and Yankton county numbers him among its valued representatives, respecting him for what he has accomplished and entertaining for him the warm regard which is ever the logical sequence of genuine personal worth.

CHARLES BOYD FONCANON, who is engaged in the real-estate and loan business in Eureka, and who is a member of the board of commissioners of McPherson county, was born in Millard, Missouri, on the 22d of April, 1869, being a son of Michael B. and Julia S. (Beatty) Foncanon, both of whom were born in Fairfield county, Ohio, the former tracing his lineage to the sturdy Holland Dutch stock which settled in the state of New York in the colonial epoch of our national history, while the maternal ancestry is of Scotch-Irish extraction, the original progenitors in America having come hither in the middle of the eighteenth century and having served with the Pennsylvania troops in the war of the Revolution. The parents of the subject removed to Missouri prior to the war of the Rebellion, having been a resident of the state during the days when it was the center of the border warfare, while the father served as a valiant soldier in defense of the Union, having been a member of the Seventh Missouri Volunteer Cavalry during the war. Charles B. Foncanon received his early education in the public schools of his native place, later attended the North Missouri State Normal School, at Kirksville, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1890.

and thereafter he took a special course in the Missouri State University. After leaving college he was for two years superintendent of the public schools at La Plata, Missouri, and in 1894 he came to Eureka, South Dakota, where he was for four years principal of the schools, and in 1898 he was elected superintendent of schools for McPherson county, retaining this incumbency four years, at the expiration of which he established himself in his present line of enterprise, noted in the initial paragraph, being one of the successful real-estate dealers of this section of the state and also making a specialty of financial loans on real-estate security of approved order.

Mr. Foncanon is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and in the fall of 1902 he was elected county commissioner from the fifth district of McPherson county, in which capacity he is now serving. He is identified with the National Guard of the state, being adjutant of the First Battalion of the First Regiment, with the rank of first lieutenant. Fraternally he is identified with Eureka Lodge, No. 58, Knights of Pythias; Acacia Lodge, No. 108, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Batchelder Lodge of Perfection, No. 6; South Dakota Consistory, No. 4, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, at Aberdeen, and El Riad Temple of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls.

On the 18th of June, 1900, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Foncanon to Miss Ottilia M. Hinz, who was born in Manchester, Wisconsin, November 12, 1879, being a daughter of Louis and Minerva Hinz. Mr. and Mrs. Foncanon have a winsome little daughter, Vivian Maurine, born May 4, 1901.

CHRISTOPH GUENTHNER was born in Crimea, southern Russia, on the 25th of April, 1853, but comes of staunch German lineage, since his grandparents on both the paternal and maternal sides were natives of the kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany, whence they removed to southern Russia, the father of the subject having been born in Russia, and his wife was born after the removal of her parents to the same district in Russia. Christoph Guenther is one of the ten children born to Jacob and Katharine (Meyer) Guenther, and of this number five are now living, namely: Elizabeth, who is the wife of Wilhelm Roth, of southern Russia; Jacob, who resides in Bridgewater, South Dakota; George A. and Mat, who are likewise residents of that place; and Christoph, who is the subject of this review. The father was a successful farmer in Russia and was prominent in public affairs in his district, his death there occurring when he was fifty-two years of age. His widow died at the age of eighty years, in Bridgewater South Dakota.

Christoph Guenther was reared to maturity in his native province, growing up under the sturdy discipline of the farm and securing a common-school education. In 1874, in company with his brother Jacob, he emigrated to the United States, making the present state of South Dakota his ultimate destination. Both brothers took up homestead claims in Hutchinson county, five miles southwest of the present town of Freeman, and in the following year they were joined by their widowed mother and brothers George and Mat, each of whom took up land in the same locality as has the subject. Mr. Guenther continued to devote his attention to the improvement and cultivation of his farm during the ensuing seven years, at the expiration of which, in 1882, he came to the newly founded village of Freeman, where he established himself in the hardware and implement business, in which he successfully continued for nearly a score of years, building up a large and prosperous enterprise. In 1901 he disposed of his interests in this line and purchased the general merchandise business of the firm of Dobler & Buechler, while in the same year he also secured a half interest in the only drug store in the town, with both of which concerns he has since been identified. His general store is well equipped in each department and is one of the leading establishments of the sort in the county, controlling a large trade throughout the tributary territory.

In his political proclivities Mr. Guenther is an uncompromising Republican and he has been an active worker in the party cause. In the fall of 1893 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners, and at the expiration of his term was re-elected, thus serving four consecutive years, being chairman of the board for three years. In the autumn of 1900 he was made the nominee of his party for representative in the state legislature, being successful at the polls and serving during the next general assembly with marked credit and honor to himself and his constituents. He and his wife are prominent members of the German Lutheran church, in which he holds the office of elder. In addition to his other interests Mr. Guenther is the owner of four hundred and eighty acres of valuable farming land in Hutchinson county, and is known as one of its substantial citizens.

On the 18th of April, 1876, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Guenther to Miss Elizabeth Haar, of this county, and they are the parents of ten children, namely: Ferdinand, who is associated in the management of the drug store in which his father is interested; Erhart, who is a student in the medical department of the Northwestern University, in the city of Chicago; and Rosa, Katy, Ella, Charlotte, Alvina, Leah, Ruth and Irene, all of whom remain at the parental home.

EDWARD THOMPSON SHELTON is a native of Berea, Cuyahoga county, Ohio, where he was born on the 28th of February, 1838, being a son of Rev. Henry O. and Ruth (Bradley) Sheldon. The honored father of the subject was for sixty-three years engaged in ministerial labor, being a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal church and being a forceful and eloquent speaker and a man of high intellectuality. His eldest son, H. B. Sheldon, was one of the pioneer clergymen of the Methodist church in California, where he is still engaged in the work of his high calling. Major Lemi Bradley, the maternal grandfather of the subject, was a major in the war of 1812, while his eldest brother was a sergeant in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution. Edward T. Sheldon received his early educational training in the district schools of his native state, and later was for three years a student in Baldwin University, at Berea, Ohio. At the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion he was preparing to enter college, but at once subordinated his personal interests to respond to his country's call. In 1862, at the age of twenty-four years, he enlisted as a private in Company B, Twenty-ninth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, having removed to the Hawkeye state in 1856. He proceeded to the front with his regiment, which was assigned to the Army of the Southwest, and he participated in many of the battles of the great conflict through which the integrity of the nation was perpetuated. Mr. Sheldon became second lieutenant of Company B, and later was made captain of Company I, in the same regiment and being mustered out with this rank. In the fall of 1864 he resigned and received his honorable discharge, the illness of his wife being the primary cause which led to his resignation, while at the time it was thought that the war was practically ended.

After the close of his valiant and meritorious service as a soldier of the republic, Mr. Sheldon returned to his home in Tabor, Iowa, where he was engaged in blacksmithing and farming until 1880, when he went to Leadville, Colorado, where he remained until 1883, when he came as a pioneer to Hand county, South Dakota, where he took up government land, in what is now St. Lawrence township and here improved a valuable farm, upon which he still maintains his home. He now owns four hundred and eighty acres and his place is well improved, having substantial and attractive buildings, good fences, etc., and being one of the valuable places of this section of the state. Mr. Sheldon was one of the organizers of St. Lawrence township and has been prominent in its affairs from the time of taking up his residence here. He devotes a portion of the farm to diversified agriculture and also gives special attention to the raising of high-grade live stock, while he has a small number of registered shorthorn cattle, used specially for breeding purposes.

Mr. Sheldon has been a staunch supporter of the Republican party from the time of its organization until the present time and has been an effective worker in the promotion of its cause. He served for four years as a member of the board of trustees of the State Agricultural College of South Dakota, and from 1895 until 1897 was a valued member of the state board of regents of education, which has control of all state educational institutions. He was also chairman of the finance committee of this board, while he served as secretary of the board for one year. In 1887 he was a member of the council of the territorial legislature, and after the admission of the state to the Union he was elected a member of the first legislative assembly, in which he was a prominent and able worker for the best interests of the people of the new commonwealth. He has ever been one of the leaders in the public affairs of his county and is also one of the prominent men in the councils of the Republican party in the state. Mr. Sheldon has lived up to the full tension of life on the frontier, having been located in the northwest at the time when the strenuous warfare was waged against the border ruffians, prior to the Civil war, and he was personally acquainted with John Brown, the famous raider whose name is so prominent in the history of that crucial epoch, having been a roommate of Brown's son while attending school in Tabor, Iowa. Mr. Sheldon and his wife are zealous members of the Presbyterian church, in which he has served as elder for the past eighteen years, and fraternally he holds membership in Col. Ellis Post, No. 51, Grand Army of the Republic, at St. Lawrence; and in St. Lawrence Lodge, No. 29, Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 28th of August, 1862, Mr. Sheldon was united in marriage to Miss Imogene Hammond, who was at that time a successful teacher in the schools of Mills county, Iowa, and she died in 1874, without issue. On the 29th of December, 1875, the subject wedded his present wife, whose maiden name was Mattie Hobbs, and who was born and reared in North Brookfield, Massachusetts, being a daughter of Frank and Mercy Hobbs, who were pioneers of Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon have six children, namely: Henry E., George F., Albert B., Gladys M., Frank H. and Willard B.

VERY REV. EMMANUEL A. BOUSKA is pastor of St. Wenceslaus' parish at Tabor, Bon Homme county, where he has erected the largest church edifice of the state and the largest, most commodious and with modern improvements equipped school, and has made his parish one of the most flourishing and important in the diocese. He was born in Borovany, Bohemia, Austria, on the 18th of November, 1864, and is a son of Anthony and Barbara (Hruska) Bouska, the former of whom was a native of Borovany, while the latter was born in Radetice, Bohemia, the respective dates of birth being November 29, 1826, and December 3, 1820. Anthony Bouska was a son of Joseph and Anna Bouska, and was the owner of valuable real estate in his native land at the time of his death, which occurred on the 17th of September, 1886. His wife, a daughter of Francis and Mary Hruska, is still living at the old homestead in Bohemia. Our subject received his early educational discipline in the excellent public schools at Bernardice, Bohemia, and took a classical course at Tabor, that kingdom. He afterward enrolled himself in the national army, having passed the required examinations, and after one year of service was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. After the close of his military career Father Bouska entered the University of Vienna, where he studied law for one year, after which he was matriculated in the University of Graz, Styria, Austria, where he took up his theological studies, which he later continued and concluded at Chur, Switzerland, where he passed four years, at the expiration of which he was ordained to the priesthood by Rt. Rev. John Battaglia, bishop of Chur, on the 14th of July, 1888. He was thereafter an assistant priest in Europe until November, 1889, when he came to America and identified himself with the diocese of Nebraska, where he was assigned to a pastoral charge at Crete,

Saline county, where he erected a church and parish house and where he remained until 1892, in which year he came to South Dakota and was assigned a parish at Kimball, Brule county. In 1893 he was transferred, by the late Bishop Marty, O. S. B., to Tabor, Bon Homme county, where he has since labored with splendid success and with unqualified devotion. Here he has accomplished a notable work, since, as before stated, there has been erected under his regime the largest church in the state, the same being forty-six by one hundred and thirty-two feet in dimensions and constructed of hydraulic pressed brick, at an expenditure of twenty-five thousand dollars. Later he built a day and boarding parochial school, connected with the academy, of the same material, the building being fifty-six by sixty-six feet in lateral dimensions and four stories in height. The school at the time of this writing is in direct charge of seven Sisters of St. Benedict, from Vermillion, South Dakota, who work under the general supervision of Father Bouska, while in the school are fifty-two boarders and one hundred and six daily students, making a total of one hundred and fifty-five who are here receiving instruction. The management of the school, connected with the academy, is in the capable hands of Sister M. Clara, O. S. B. In 1899, in recognition of his ability and his peculiar eligibility for the office, Rt. Rev. Thomas O'Gorman, bishop of the diocese of Sioux Falls, appointed Father Bouska diocesan consultor, of which position he has since been incumbent. Since coming to the state Father Bouska has interested himself personally and prominently in political affairs, believing this action to be a duty of citizenship and in harmony with the precepts of the church, and he is today one of the most influential figures in public affairs in Bon Homme and is well known and highly respected by leading citizens throughout the state. At Tabor he has not only been an indefatigable worker in his parish, giving his time and energies to pastoral duties and also to the erection of buildings and the infusing of vigor into all departments of church work, but he has also been one of the most loyal citizens of the thriving little town, at whose cradle he stood, assisting in the organization of the village and having been most influential in its civic and social growth and development. He has brought about the organization of several benevolent societies for his people and is just at present building for them a society hall at an expenditure of three thousand dollars and has had at all times the affectionate regard and earnest co-operation of those among whom he has so zealously and effectively labored. He is known as one of the most able and forceful speakers in his native tongue in the northwest, and is a man of versatile talent and high scholarship, speaking the Bohemian, English, German, Latin and Polish languages and reading with readiness the Greek, Hebrew, Italian, French, Spaniard and all Slavonic languages. He is a member of the Roman Catholic Bohemian Union, the Catholic Knights, the Catholic Foresters and Catholic Workmen.

J. V. DRIPS is a native of the Hawkeye state, having been born in Clinton county, Iowa, on the 16th of April, 1871, and being a son of J. H. and Hannah (Hawkins) Drips, both of whom were born in the state of Pennsylvania. They became the parents of ten children, of whom eight are living. The father of the subject served with distinction in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, passing the major portion of his term of enlistment in Dakota, under command of General Sully, in the work of suppressing the border outlaws and the refractory Indians. He saw much arduous and perilous service, taking part in the memorable battle of Whitestone Hill and many other engagements, while he also assisted in the erection of Fort Sully. He is now living in the city of Clinton, Iowa.

J. V. Drips received his educational discipline in the public schools of Malone, Iowa, and after leaving school he turned his attention to various vocations in Iowa until 1892, when he came to South Dakota and located in Gann Valley, where he purchased the plant and business of the Dakota Chief, a weekly paper, of which he continued as editor and publisher until 1897, when he sold the property to the firm of Dye & Hill, who still continue the publication. Mr. Drips was appointed postmaster at Gann Valley in 1895, under the administration of President Cleveland, and served in this capacity until August, 1897. In 1901 he was again appointed to the office, under President McKinley, and has since remained incumbent, his management of the affairs of the postoffice having met with distinctive popular endorsement and approval. In politics he is a staunch Republican and takes an active part in the local work of the same. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mrs. Drips is a member of the Congregational church. The creamery of which the subject is manager is doing a large and prosperous business and is a distinct acquisition to the industrial enterprises of the county.

On the 3d of July, 1897, Mr. Drips was united in marriage to Miss Rose Miller, daughter of A. W. and Henrietta Miller, well-known residents of Buffalo county, and of this union have been born three children, namely: Joseph H., Victor D. and John V. Mr. and Mrs. Drips are prominent in the social life of the community, enjoying marked popularity in their pleasant home village, while their residence is a center of gracious hospitality.

PETER BARTH is a native of Washington county, Wisconsin, where he was born on the 6th of September, 1858, being a son of Matthias and Mary Barth, the latter of whom died in 1892. The father of the subject devoted the major portion of his active life to agricultural pursuits and is now living retired, making his home with his daughter, Mary, who is the wife of J. Simon, of Grafton, Wisconsin. He was a blacksmith by trade and followed this vocation for a number of years, and he has ever held the unqualified regard of those with whom he has come in contact in the various relations of life. He attained success in temporal affairs and is now enjoying the fruits of his many years of earnest toil and endeavor, having attained the venerable age of eighty-four years (1904). He has been a stanch Republican in politics ever since the organization, and has been for many years a zealous member of the Lutheran church, of which his wife likewise was a devoted member. They became the parents of twelve children, of whom seven are yet living, the subject of this review having been the sixth in order of birth.

Peter Barth was reared on the homestead farm and from his boyhood up rendered his quota of aid in connection with its work, while he secured his educational training in the public schools of his native county, making the best use of the advantages thus afforded him. At the age of seventeen years he initiated his independent career, having been for two years employed as spiker on the Milwaukee & Northern Railroad, after which he located in Winnebago county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming for the following three years. He then returned to Wisconsin and took up his residence in Rock county, where he continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until the spring of 1884, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Hancock township, Bon Homme county, the same having never been furrowed by the plowshare and being entirely without improvements. On the place he erected a small frame house and then bent his energies to the reclamation and improvement of his farm, which continues to be his abiding place, while the entire tract is under effective cultivation and yields excellent returns for the labor expended. Mr. Barth also raises excellent grades of live stock, giving preference to the Hampshire-down sheep and Durham cattle, while on his place are also to be found good horses and swine raised by him. He is energetic and progressive, takes an active interest in public affairs of a local nature and is honored as a loyal and worthy citizen. In 1895 he erected his present commodious and substantial residence, and the other permanent improvements on the place are in harmony therewith. In politics he is not insistently partisan, but votes according to the dictates of his judgment, giving his support to those candidates whom he considers most eligible for the respective offices. He is not formally identified with any religious organization, but gives a liberal support to church work, his wife being a member of the Congregational church.

On the 4th of November, 1885, Mr. Barth led to the hymeneal altar Miss Frances Snow, who was born in Rock county, Wisconsin, being a daughter of Charles D. Snow, who is now one of the prominent and successful farmers of Bon Homme county. Mr. and Mrs. Barth have had four children, Charles, who died at the age of six months; Grace and Clifford, who are attending the district school, and Willard, who is three years of age at the time of this writing, in 1904.

HENRY KLINDT comes of stanch German lineage and is himself a native of the fatherland, having been born in Holstein, Germany, on the 29th of May, 1850, and being a son of Claus and Anna Klindt. He received his early educational training in the excellent national schools of his native land, continuing to attend school at intervals until he had attained the age of twenty-two years and thus gaining a knowledge of many of the higher branches of learning, while for some time he was a student in a prominent military school. After leaving school he turned his attention to fortification work, in which he was engaged until 1876, when, at the age of twenty-six years, he severed the ties which bound him to home and fatherland and set forth to seek his fortunes in America. He settled in the city of Rock Island, Illinois, where he secured a position in a paper mill, in which he was employed for the following three years. He then, in 1879, came as a pioneer to what is now the state of South Dakota, locating in Aurora county, where he was engaged in farming until 1883, when he came to Buffalo county and took up a tract of government land in Grant township, where he has ever since made his home and where he has accumulated a valuable property. He at once instituted the improvement of his embryonic farm, and gradually added to its area by the purchase of adjoining tracts until he is now the owner of a well-improved ranch of sixteen hundred acres, all of which is available for cultivation, though the major portion is devoted to his live-stock enterprise, in which he conducts his operations on an extensive scale, having cattle of the best grade and also raising swine and horses.

Mr. Klindt is a man of broad views and distinctive intellectuality, and he is known as a public-spirited and enterprising citizen, while he has received many patent evidences of popular confidence and esteem. He is a Populist in his political proclivities and has been an active worker in the party cause in his section of the state. In 1887 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners, in which capacity he served four years, and in 1894 he was elected to represent his district in the state legislature, where he made an excellent record, serving two terms, with credit to himself and his constituency. His religious affiliation is with the Lutheran church.

On the 29th of May, 1889, Mr. Klindt was united in marriage to Miss Mary Schultz, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, being a daughter of August and Louise Schultz, who were numbered among the sterling pioneers of Green county, that state. The subject and his estimable wife are the parents of four children, namely: August, Henry, Hazel and Lydia, all of whom remain beneath the home roof tree.

ISAAC LINCOLN.—Among those prominent in the banking and financial circles of South Dakota is Isaac Lincoln, president of the State Bank of Aberdeen, vice-president of the Aberdeen National Bank and president of the First National Bank of Webster, Day county. Mr. Lincoln is a native of the state of Maine, and is descended on both sides from colonial stock, his ancestors having come to New England in 1636, settling on Cape Cod. Mr. Lincoln was born in Brunswick, Maine, and is a son of Dr. John D. and Ellen (Fessenden) Lincoln, who were likewise born and reared in Maine, where the respective families were early established. He secured his education in the public schools of his native town and in Phillips Academy in Andover, Massachusetts. Shortly thereafter he came to the territory of Dakota, where he engaged in farming and stock raising until 1886, when he located in Aberdeen. Besides his banking interests he is engaged in the real-estate business and in farming, having one of the largest stock and grain farms in the county, which he personally supervises. In politics he is a Republican, and fraternally is identified with the Masonic order.

JOSEPH M. PETRIK, one of the successful and popular business men and influential citizens of Tabor, Bon Homme county, was born in Spillville, Winneshiek county, Iowa, on the 16th of August, 1869, being a son of Mathias and Mary Petrik, both of whom were born and reared in Bohemia, Austria, where their marriage was solemnized. They emigrated thence to America and became numbered among the early settlers in Winneshiek county, Iowa, where the father took up a homestead claim of government land and set himself to the task of reclaiming the same to cultivation, meeting with the struggles and hardships which attended the lot of the average pioneer on the broad prairies of this now favored and opulent commonwealth. The subject of this sketch was a child of about two years at the time of his parents' removal to this state, and he was reared to the age of ten years on the home farm, attending the primitive district school as opportunity afforded. At the early age mentioned he went to the city of Chicago, where he completed his educational work in the public schools, being compelled to depend upon his own resources in prosecuting his studies, as the financial circumstances of his parents were such that they could lend him but slight aid. He there continued to attend school until he had attained the age of sixteen years, his labors in the connection having perforce been such as to make him the more appreciative of the advantages which he thus gained, and he then returned to South Dakota, and secured a position as clerk in a general store at Armour, Douglas county, being gradually entrusted with better and more important positions until 1894, when he went to Yankton Reservation, Charles Mix county, and took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, where he remained for three years, during which time he was engaged in preparing the land for farming. A failure of crops on account of a drought caused him to haul all water used by his family and with which to water his stock, for a distance of six miles, the water being procured from a private well situated on a creek bottom. About this time a neighbor, Frank Seip, and wife, were murdered and robbed by one Charlie Basl, and this naturally made Mrs. Petrik nervous and dissatisfied with that locality, so it was decided to dispose of all personal property and allow the tree claim to revert to the government, and in 1897 the subject came to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, opening a store in the village of Tabor, where he has since been successfully engaged in this line of enterprise save for an interim of one year, during which he conducted a store at Scotland. He is now senior member of the firm of Petrik & Honner, general merchants, and the firm has built up a prosperous business, while both of the interested principals stand high in the confidence and esteem of the community. In politics Mr. Petrik gives a stanch support to the Democratic party and has ever shown a proper interest in public affairs, particularly of a local nature, while in 1900 he was candidate of his party for the office of county sheriff, being defeated with the balance of the ticket. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church, and fraternally he is identified with the Knights of St. George and with the local lodge of the Western Bohemian Catholic Union.

Isaac Lincoln

On the 12th of October, 1892, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Petrik to Miss Mary A. Novotny, who was born in Bon Homme county, this state, on the 28th of November, 1876, being a daughter of Joseph and Rosa Novotny, who were early settlers in this section of the state. Of this union have been born five children, namely: George, Louise, Joseph, Edward and Albina, all of whom still remain beneath the home roof.

RUTHERFORD H. FULTON, late postmaster at Avon, Bon Homme county, was a native of the state of Illinois, having been born on a farm in Jo Daviess county on the 2d of May, 1877, and being a son of Peter and Caroline (Whitman) Fulton, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Illinois. Of their twelve children six are living at the present time. Peter Fulton was reared on the homestead farm in the old Keystone state of the Union, where he remained until he had attained the age of eighteen years, when, in 1847, he came westward to Illinois, where he was employed on various farms for a number of years, carefully conserving his resources and thus being finally able to purchase a tract of land in Joe Daviess county, where he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until the time of his death, which occurred in 1897, his devoted wife passing away in the same year. They were worthy church members, and the father was a stanch Republican in his political adhesion.

Rutherford H. Fulton was reared on the homestead farm and acquired his educational discipline in the public schools of Jo Daviess county. In 1896 he went to Plymouth county, Iowa, where he secured employment in the office of the Akron Register, a weekly newspaper. In the following summer he returned to Illinois, where he remained about one year, at the expiration of which, in the summer of 1897, he returned to Akron, Iowa, and purchased a half interest in the publication in the office of which he had worked the preceding year, and there he continued to be actively engaged in the newspaper business until May, 1900, when he disposed of his interests and came to South Dakota, purchasing an interest in a newspaper at Alcester, Union county, and being identified with its publication about one year. He then came to Avon and here established the Avon Clarion, whose publication he continued until the 1st of February, 1903, when he sold the plant and business to W. J. Robinson, having been appointed postmaster of the town in December, 1902. In that office he did much to improve the service and his administration met with unqualified approval while he enjoyed marked personal popularity in the village and surrounding country, his death, on July 17, 1903, being deeply regretted by all who knew him. He was a stalwart Republican in politics and was chairman of the first board of trustees of the village after its incorporation, while he served one term as justice of the peace of the village, and in 1902 was elected to the same office as a county official, but did not qualify, on account of his appointment as postmaster. He was a member of the ancient-craft body of the Masonic fraternity; of Avon Camp, No. 8536, Modern Woodmen of America, and Avon Tent, No. 61, Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 28th of September, 1898, Mr. Fulton was united in marriage to Miss Alice Myers, of Akron, Iowa. Two children have been born, Leon Ernest, born March 6, 1901, died July 10, 1901, and Ruth Hazel, born July 7, 1903.

JOHN S. HEADLEY was born in Granville, Mahaska county, Iowa, on the 2d of December, 1858, a son of William and Ann (Bowman) Headley, and he is the only one of their four children now living. His father was born in the city of Hull, England, about 1824, his father having been a clergyman of the Baptist church. He was reared on a farm, in the home of relatives, as both of his parents fell victim to the dread scourge of cholera and died while he was a mere infant. Upon attaining his legal majority William Headley bade adieu to his native land and set forth to seek his fortunes in America. He located in the state of Vermont, where his marriage was solemnized, and later he emigrated to Mahaska county, Iowa, where he purchased land and devoted himself to farming until his death, which occurred on the 6th of March, 1873. He was a Republican in politics but not an office-seeker, and was a sincere and consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal church, as is also his widow, who now makes her home with the subject, being accorded that filial solicitude which is so justly her due.

John S. Headley was reared on the homestead farm and after availing himself of the advantages of the public schools he continued his educational discipline in Penn College, at Oska-loosa, Iowa. At the age of twenty-one years he put his scholastic acquirements to practical test by engaging as a teacher in the district schools, continuing to teach during the winter terms for several years and working on the farm during the intervening summer seasons. In 1883 he came to South Dakota and took up a pre-emption claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Hutchinson county, together with a timber claim of equal area. His mother and younger brother had preceded him here by one year and both had filed on claims in this same county. The subject here gave his attention to teaching during the winter months, and the balance of his time was devoted to the improvement and cultivation of his farm. In 1889 he was chosen principal of the schools at Parkston, holding this position two years and then residing on his farm until 1894, when he came to Menno, where he was principal of the public schools for the ensuing five years, gaining a high reputation in the educational field here. In the fall of 1898 a fitting recognition of his ability was given in his election to the office of county superintendent of schools, and he served two terms of two years each, making a most excellent record and doing much to advance the cause of popular education in his jurisdiction. During his last term he also contributed the editorial leaders to the Hutchinson Herald, and on the 15th of December, 1900, he purchased and assumed control of the publication, which is one of the leading Republican papers of this section of the state and one which is a true representative of local interests in all lines. In 1902 he was a delegate to the convention of the National Editorial Association at Hot Springs, Arkansas, and in the same year also attended the meeting of the National Educational Association, being held in the city of Minneapolis. He is an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and while not ambitious for official preferment he has served in various minor offices of trust. He and his wife are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in the same he served for several years as superintendent of the Sunday school.

On the 12th of August, 1883, Mr. Headley was united in marriage to Miss Emma E. Watson, who was born in Mahaska county, Iowa, and of their eight children six are living, all remaining at the parental home save the eldest, Lillian O., who is a student in the normal school at Madison. The others are as follows: Lulu A., Georgiana, Muriel, John W. and Frank.

ANDREAS A. WIPF, M. D., was born in southern Russia, on the 12th of September, 1868, being a son of Andreas and Susan (Glanzer) Wipf, to whom were born five children, namely: Sarah, who is the wife of Joseph G. Gross, of Hutchinson county; Joseph A., who is engaged in farming in this county; Susan, who is the wife of Andrew R. Hofer, a farmer of this county; Anna, who remains at the parental home; and Andreas Albert, the immediate subject of this sketch. The Wipf family traces back to Swiss origin, but has been established in Russia for fully a century, representatives of the name having removed from Switzerland into Tyrol, Austria, and thence into southern Russia, where both parents of our subject were born and reared. In 1875 they emigrated to America and came to Hutchinson county, South Dakota, where the father entered a homestead claim on Wolf creek, five miles southwest of the present town of Bridgewater, and there he improved a valuable farm, upon which he died, and where his estimable wife still continues to make her home, being numbered among the honored pioneers of the county.

Dr. Wipf was seven years of age at the time when the family came from Russia, and he was reared to maturity in South Dakota, his youthful days being devoted to working on the home farm and attending the common schools. Later he entered the Dakota University, at Mitchell, and finally was matriculated in the University of South Dakota, in Vermillion, where he continued his scholastic discipline. He then devoted three winters to teaching in the district schools, engaging in farm work during the summer seasons. In 1891 he took up the study of medicine, and in the fall of that year entered that celebrated institution, Rush Medical College, in the city of Chicago, where he completed the prescribed course under the most favorable auspices, being graduated in the spring of 1894, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly afterward the Doctor opened an office in Freeman, where he has since been established in the practice of his profession and where he has attained distinctive prestige as an able and discriminating physician and surgeon. He is a stalwart supporter of the Republican party, but has never held office, save that of county coroner, in which capacity he served four years. He is a member of the South Dakota State Medical Society and is held in high esteem by his professional confreres. Fraternally he is identified with Eureka Lodge, No. 71, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons; Oriental Consistory, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite; El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, the latter two being organized in the city of Sioux Falls, and he is also affiliated with the lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at Bridgewater and the camp of the Modern Woodmen of America at Menno. The Doctor is the owner of a fine farm of one hundred and eighty-five acres, located three miles northeast of Freeman, in Turner county.

On the 26th of June, 1894, Dr. Wipf was united in marriage to Miss Dorothea Hoellwarth, of Hutchinson county, and they are the parents of six children, namely: Claudia, Adeline, Alice, Alfred, Lilly and Kurt.

FREDERICK HAAR, one of the leading dealers in agricultural implements and machinery in Hutchinson county, was born in the southern part of Russia on the 27th of February, 1856, being a son of Jacob and Frederica (Rop) Haar, who emigrated thence to the United States in 1875, coming forthwith to South Dakota and locating in Hutchinson county, where the father filed entry on homestead, pre-emption and timber claims of one hundred and sixty acres each, seven miles southwest of the present village of Freeman, which had not then sprung into existence. He resided on this farm about fifteen years, thence removing to Edmunds county, where he remained three years, and finally taking up his residence in the village of Freeman, where he and his wife have since maintained their home. Both are devoted members of the Lutheran church, and he is a Republican in his political proclivities.

Frederick Haar, the subject of this sketch, was reared to maturity in his native land, where he received the advantages of the common schools, and he was nineteen years of age at the time when he accompanied his parents to the United States, in 1875. He shortly afterward entered claim to a quarter section of government land near that of his father, in Hutchinson county, and after his marriage, in 1876, he settled on his farm and set himself vigorously to the task of improving the same and bringing it under effective cultivation. He continued to be thus identified with agricultural pursuits about six years, at the expiration of which, in 1882, he took up his residence in the newly established village of Freeman, where he entered into partnership with Hon. Christoph Guenther and engaged in the hardware and implement business, in which they continued to be associated for nearly a score of years. In 1901 they disposed of the hardware stock and the partnership was dissolved by mutual consent. Mr. Haar retained the implement business, which he has since continued as an individual enterprise, and his reputation as a careful and upright business man is so thoroughly established that he has continued to control a large and important trade, having the implicit confidence of all who know him. He is a staunch adherent of the Republican party but has never sought office, and both he and his wife are worthy members of the Lutheran church, in which he is serving as elder.

On the 4th of June, 1876, Mr. Haar was married to Miss Dorothy Schmidteall, of Yankton county, and of their fourteen children twelve are living, namely: Gottlieb, who is cashier of the Merchants' State Bank, of Freeman; Jacob, who assists his father in the management of his implement business; Barbara, who is the wife of Reinhold Baer, who is engaged in the hardware business in Freeman; Mina, who is the wife of David Ellwine, of this place; Robert, who is at the parental home; Theodore, who is attending college in Minneapolis, Minnesota; and Lydia, Caroline, Hella, Albert, Bertha and Hugo, who remain beneath the parental roof.

JOSEPH WILHELM WIPF.—The subject of this sketch comes of staunch old Swiss lineage, though his ancestors for several generations have been established in the southern portion of Russia. The original representatives proceeded from Canton Unterwalden, Switzerland, into the Tyrol, Austria, and thence into Russia. Mr. Wipf is one of the enterprising and prominent young business men of Freeman, Hutchinson county, and has been a resident of South Dakota since 1879, in which year his parents emigrated from Russia and became pioneers of this commonwealth, the father having become one of the successful farmers of Hutchinson county.

Joseph W. Wipf was born in the colony of Huterthal, southern Russia, on the 12th of August, 1869, a son of Joseph and Susanna (Wurz) Wipf, who were reared and educated in Russia, the former there learning the blacksmith trade, to which he devoted his attention for a number of years, also engaging in farming. He continued to follow the later vocation after coming to South Dakota, and he died in Hutchinson county, on the 11th of November, 1888, respected by all who knew him. His wife survived him by nearly a decade, being summoned into eternal rest on the 6th of November, 1898. Both were devoted members of the Mennonite church, and the father was a staunch Republican in politics, his life having been one of honest and earnest endeavor.

The subject of this sketch was eight years of age at the time his parents took up their abode on the pioneer farm in this county, and here he was reared to manhood, securing his early educational training in the public schools and supplementing this by a six-months course in the South Dakota State University, at Vermillion—in 1888-9. In 1896-1897 he was matriculated in the pharmaceutical department of the University of Iowa, at Iowa City, and was there graduated as a member of the class of 1897. In 1886 Mr. Wipf began teaching in the district schools of Hutchinson county, and continued in pedagogic work until 1892, in which latter year he held a clerkship as bookkeeper in the Bridgewater State Bank, while during the years 1893-4 he was bookkeeper in the hardware establishment of Meyer Brothers, in Bridgewater. Since 1897 he has been engaged in the drug business in Freeman, owning a half interest in the drug store conducted under the firm name of J. W. Wipf & Company. He also holds a half interest in the Freeman Telephone Company. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and his religious faith is that of the Mennonite church, of which he has been a member since 1889. Fraternally he is identified with Eureka Lodge, No. 71, Free and Accepted Masons, and Menno Camp, No. 3071, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 13th of October, 1897, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Wipf to Miss Mary Graber, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth Graber, of Storkweather, North Dakota, and they became the parents of three children: Evelina, born November 11, 1898; Elva, born September 8, 1901, died two days later, and Edmund Filmore, born January 20, 1902.

CHRISTIAN AISENBREY, the able and popular postmaster at Menno, Hutchinson county, was born in southern Russia, on the 30th of January, 1857, a son of Andrew J. and Elizabeth (Bentz) Aisenbrey, of whose five children the subject is the elder of the two surviving, his brother Carl being a successful hardware merchant of Menno. The parents were both born in southern Russia, the father on the 28th of February, 1821, and the mother on the 7th of July, 1823. The paternal grandfather, Philip B. Aisenbrey, was a native of Germany, whence he removed over the line into Russia in 1803, being there engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death. His son, Andrew, likewise followed farming there until 1874, when he emigrated to the United States, in company with his wife and two sons. He came at once to the territory of Dakota and took up a homestead claim of a quarter section of land in Hutchinson county, there improving a good farm, upon which he continued to reside, an honored pioneer of the county, until his death, in May, 1889. His wife passed away in 1876, two years after coming to what is now South Dakota, both having been devoted members of the German Reformed church.

Christian Aisenbrey was reared on the old homestead in Russia, and there he secured his early education in the common schools, while his knowledge of the English was gained by absorption and self-application after he came to the United States, being seventeen years of age at the time of his parents' emigration to the new world. After locating on the pioneer farm in South Dakota he there continued to assist his father in the improvement and cultivation of the same until the time of his marriage, on the 18th of November, 1877, when Miss Christiana Keck became his wife. He then took up a tree claim of one hundred and sixty acres and a homestead of equal area, improving the property and bringing it under effective cultivation, and there he continued to reside until 1890, when he rented the farm, which he still owns, and removed to the town of Menno, where he served as deputy county treasurer in 1890-1. In 1892 he was elected to the office of treasurer, and upon the expiration of his term of two years was chosen as his own successor. In 1896, after the expiration of his second term, Mr. Aisenbrey purchased the furniture business of Peter Heil, while in 1901 he also purchased the business of his only competitor, David C. Heckenlaible, and he now controls the exclusive furniture and undertaking business of the town, having a large and complete stock and the best of facilities in both departments of his enterprise. His correct business methods and personal popularity insure to him a liberal supporting patronage, and he spares no effort in catering to the demands of his trade. In 1898 he was appointed postmaster of Menno, under President McKinley, and was reappointed in 1902, under the regime of President Roosevelt, being known as one of the most ardent advocates of the principles of the Republican party that can be found in this section. He served for eight years as county assessor, and has been a delegate to the various state and county conventions of his party. He and his wife are valued members of the German Reformed church, in whose work they take a deep interest.

WARREN DIMOCK, of Menno, Hutchinson county, was born in Iowa county, Wisconsin, on the 14th of September, 1850, a son of Warren S. and Lucy J. (Munson) Dimock, of whose seven children the following named five are yet living: Harry A., a druggist of Muscoda, Wisconsin; Almena, the wife of E. G. Schwingle, of Avoca, that state; Asa B., who is likewise a resident of that place, being a farmer and manufacturer; Bertha R., wife of Oscar Spicer, of Mason City, Iowa; and Warren, subject of this sketch, who is eldest of the number.

The father of the subject was born in Susquehanna, Pennsylvania, in 1819, and was there reared and educated, removing thence to Wisconsin in 1855 and settling on a farm near Avoca, Iowa county, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until the spring of 1903, when he removed to the village mentioned, where he is now living retired, having attained the venerable age of eighty-four years, and being well preserved in mind and physical powers. He is one of the pioneers of the Badger state, where he purchased government land soon after his arrival within its borders, and he resided continuously on the one farm for forty-eight years. He is a Democrat in politics and is a man who has ever commanded the unqualified esteem of all who know him. His wife, who was born in the same town as was he, is still by his side, being sixty-eight years of age at the time of this writing (1903).

The subject of this review was reared on the homestead farm and after completing the curriculum of the public schools he continued his studies at the Plattville Normal school, at Plattville, Wisconsin. He taught school for three winter terms, working on the farm during the summer seasons. He continued to be identified with the operation of the home farm until 1886, but in the meanwhile had devoted careful attention to the reading of law. In the year mentioned he located in Muscoda, Wisconsin, where he was engaged in the real-estate and insurance business until 1889, when he came to Hutchinson county, South Dakota, locating in Menno, where he was employed for the ensuing year as assistant cashier in the Menno State Bank. In March, 1890, he was admitted to the bar and forthwith began the practice of his profession in Menno, where he has since resided, having secured a representative clientele and established a high reputation as an able advocate and safe and conservative counsel. He is a stalwart adherent of the Republican party, and in the fall of 1890 he was elected state's attorney for his county, serving one term, while in 1898 he was again called to this office, serving two consecutive terms and making a most excellent record as prosecutor. He is a member of Muscoda Lodge, No. 70, Free and Accepted Masons, at Muscoda, Wisconsin; of Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons, at Scotland, South Dakota; and of Menno Camp, No. 3071, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 15th of December, 1886, Mr. Dimock was united in marriage to Miss Clara A. Stevens, of Monfort, Wisconsin, and they became the parents of two children; Murray S., who died at the age of fifteen months; and Lucy N., who remains at the parental home.

C. BUECHLER was born in southern Russia, on April 13, 1843, being a son of Jacob and Barbara (Krauter) Buechler, of whose thirteen children only four are now living—Michael, a resident of Walworth county, this state; Barbara, the wife of Jacob Eissenbeiss; Joseph, who still remains in southern Russia; and the subject of this sketch. The father was born in France and the mother in Germany. As a young man the former left his native land to escape military service, making his way to southern Russia, where he met and married his wife. He there engaged in agricultural pursuits, in which he continued until his death, in 1866. His widow came to Freeman, South Dakota, in 1875, and resided in the home of our subject until she too was summoned into eternal rest, her death occurring in 1888.

C. Buechler was reared on the homestead farm and after completing the curriculum of the common schools of his native land he entered Schritel College, at Odessa, Russia, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1865. In the following year he began teaching in a parochial school, thus continuing to be engaged until 1873, when he severed the ties which bound him to home and native land and emigrated to the United States. He came forthwith to the territory of Dakota, arriving in its capital city, Yankton, on the 1st of August. He worked one month in a lumber yard, and in the spring of the following year engaged in business for himself by opening a small grocery in Yankton. He succeeded in building up a good trade and became the owner of a house and lot in the city. In February, 1880, he removed his grocery stock to the present town of Freeman, and being unable to sell his house for a reasonable price, he showed his ingenuity and independence by having the same removed to the new town. He employed a carpenter to dismantle the building and at an expense of only eighty-five dollars removed it to Freeman, and three weeks later it was once more ready for occupancy, being used both as a store and residence. At this time Freeman was represented only by the little railroad station and one warehouse, our subject's store building being the only other structure in the embryonic village. He and his wife experienced no little loneliness on account of having no neighbors, and made an earnest effort to induce other families to settle in the town. A short time later George and John Schamber, brothers, made to Mr. Buechler a proposition to purchase his store and business, on the condition that he remain in the town and engage in some other line of enterprise. After due consideration he accepted their overtures, selling his building to them for fifteen hundred dollars. Twenty years later he repurchased the building from the Schamber brothers, who had erected a modern brick building, for the nominal consideration of two hundred and twenty-five dollars, while he recently sold his house and lot for twenty-five hundred dollars, said building being now the oldest in the town. These transactions indicate the changes which have been brought about here in the lapse of years. After disposing of his store Mr. Buechler engaged in the agricultural implement business, and during the years 1880 and 1881 he shipped in carload after carload of cattle, from Wisconsin and Iowa and Minnesota, thus giving a great impetus to the stock industry in this locality. In 1883 he erected a hotel building and conducted the business there until 1888. In the preceding year, 1887, he established the Bank of Freeman, and the institution has become one of the substantial and popular ones of the state. In February, 1902, the business was incorporated, with Mr. Buechler as president and his son Henry C. as cashier, while our subject's wife is vice-president. In 1894 Mr. Buechler engaged in the mercantile business, in which he continued until 1901, when he disposed of his interests in this line. In 1902 he established a bank at Java, Walworth county, and this is meeting with excellent support, being in charge of his son, Henry C. In 1896 Mr. Buechler purchased the grist mills of Freeman, and these he has since continued to operate, while he also owns a well-equipped elevator here and buys and ships grain upon a quite extensive scale. He is the owner of valuable farming lands in Hutchinson county, and also in Virginia and Christian county, Florida.

In politics Mr. Buechler gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and while a resident of Yankton he served two terms as a member of the board of aldermen. In 1885 he was a member of the constitutional convention, as was also he of that of 1889, which framed the present admirable constitution of the state. He was a representative of his county in the first and second general assemblies of the legislature of the new state—in 1890 and 1891, giving most excellent service during these important sessions. In 1896 he was elected treasurer of Hutchinson county, being chosen as his own successor in 1898, and thus serving four consecutive years. He has also been called upon to serve in various village offices. He and his wife are members of the German Reformed church, and he is at the present time a member of the board of trustees of the church in Freeman.

On the 19th of February, 1867, Mr. Buechler was united in marriage to Miss Barbara Zum-baum, who is, like himself, a native of southern Russia, where their union was solemnized. Of their five children three are now living: Maria, who is the wife of G. J. Dabler, of Kulm, La-more county, North Dakota; August S., who is a student in the Barnes Medical College, in St. Louis, Missouri; and Henry C., who is in charge of his father's bank at Java.

ALBERT H. STEFFENS, M. D., D. D. S., of Menno, Hutchinson county, is a native of Prussia, where he was born on the 18th of June, 1874, being a son of Frederick and Sophia (Foerster) Steffens, of whose ten children the seven surviving are as follows: Mary, wife of August Gieseke, of Trenton, Illinois; Gustave, likewise a resident of that place; Louisa, wife of Eugene Lugenbuhl, of Trenton; Otto, a merchant tailor at North Manchester, Indiana; Herman, engaged in the same line of enterprise at Trenton, Illinois; Albert H., subject of this review; and Rudolph, a stenographer, residing in St. Louis, Missouri. The brother August, who died in Camaroon, Africa, in 1893, was a missionary of the Baptist church. The parents of the Doctor were both born in Prussia, where they continued to reside until 1880, when they came with their family to America, locating in Trenton, Illinois, where the father lived retired until his death, which occurred in 1897, at the age of seventy-seven years, his object in leaving his native land having been to enable his sons to avoid the compulsory military service in the Prussian army, while he also was confident that superior opportunities for individual advancement were to be had in the new world. He was twice married, his first wife surviving but a few years after their union and having borne him two children, of whom one is living, William, now a resident of Trenton, Illinois. The mother of the subject still resides in that place.

Dr. Albert Henry Steffens secured his rudimentary education in his native land, having been eight years of age at the time of the emigration of the family to America. He then continued his studies in the public and normal schools of Illinois, in which state he was successfully engaged in teaching for a period of four years. In the autumn of 1894 he began reading medicine under the preceptorship of Dr. T. Gaffner, of Trenton, Illinois, and in the fall of 1896 he was matriculated in the Barnes Medical College, in the city of St. Louis, where he was graduated in the spring of 1900, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Shortly afterward he came to Menno, South Dakota, and here instituted the active practice of his profession, soon securing a representative support as his ability and gracious personality won him popular favor. After coming here the Doctor also took up the study of dentistry and finally completed a course in the Marion Sims Dental College, at St. Louis, where he was graduated in the spring of 1902, receiving the degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. He now gives his attention to both professions, which so admirably complement each other, while he is one of the popular young men of the county and prominent in social circles. He is a Republican in politics and his religious faith is that of the Baptist church.

CHRISTOPH METTLER, one of the prominent and highly esteemed business men of Menno, Hutchinson county, was born in southern Russia, on the 15th of August, 1860, being a son of Andreas and Magdalena (Schnaidt) Mettler, whose ten children are all living. The parents were likewise born in southern Russia but represented stanch German stock, since the respective families removed over the line from Germany into Russia in an early day. In 1874 Andreas Mettler emigrated with his family to America, and forthwith took up his residence in Hutchinson county, South Dakota, becoming one of its pioneers. Here he took up homestead and pre-emption claims, and later purchased additional land, eventually becoming the owner of a landed estate. In the fall of 1879 he engaged in the hardware business in Menno, in partnership with Jacob Schnaidt, and the subject of this review likewise became a member of the firm. In 1888 Mr. Schnaidt assumed the control of the lumber business, which had become a department of the enterprise, and our subject and his father were thereafter associated in the conduct of the hardware business until 1888, when they disposed of the same to give their attention to operation of their well-equipped flouring mill, which they had acquired about five years previously. Upon the death of his honored father, on September 26, 1901, the subject purchased the property and has since successfully continued the enterprise, which is a most flourishing one, having marked value as an acquisition to the industrial interests of this section. Mr. Mettler is a straightforward, energetic and progressive business man and public-spirited citizen, and he is held in the highest confidence and esteem in the community. He gives his support to the Republican party but has never been ambitious for political office, and both he and his wife are worthy members of the German Reformed church.

On November 28, 1883, Mr. Mettler was married to Miss Christina Pressler, of this county, and they have six children, all of whom remain beneath the home roof, namely: Christina, Christoph, Emanuel, Edward, Helmuth and Lydia.

MOSES H. CLAGETT, M. D., of Menno, Hutchinson county, is a native of the fine old Blue-grass state of Kentucky, having been born in Grayson county, on the 16th of March, 1861, and being a scion of stanch old southern stock. To his parents, John G. and Mary J. (Harrold) Clagett, were born eight children, and of the six surviving we enter the following brief record: Charles W. is sheriff of Grayson county, Kentucky; John H. is a successful teacher in Bowling Green, that state; Mary A. is a missionary of the Baptist church in Japan, where she has been stationed for the past fifteen years; Martha J. is the wife of Hon. W. O. Jones, of Litchfield, Kentucky; Emma is the wife of W. P. Adams, of Pleasure Ridge Park, that state; and Moses H. is the subject of this sketch. The father was born in Maryland, in 1818, the family having early been established in the state and being of English extraction. As a young man he removed to that portion of Virginia which later became a portion of Grayson county, Kentucky, and there he continued to reside until his death, having been a successful farmer and a man who commanded unqualified respect and esteem. He was a Democrat and served about eight years as sheriff of his county, being incumbent of this office at the time of the Civil war. He was summoned to his reward on the 28th of December, 1899, in the fulness of years and honors, at the home of his eldest son; the widow is still living.

Dr. Clagett was reared on the old homestead and after completing the curriculum of the common schools he entered Center College, at Danville, Kentucky, where he continued his studies for four years. In 1885 he began reading medicine, his preceptor being Dr. A. J. Slayton, a prominent physician and surgeon then of Milwood, Kentucky, and now of Litchfield, that state. In the fall of the same year our subject was matriculated in the medical department of the University of Louisville, where he was graduated in March, 1887, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine and coming forth well equipped for the active and responsible duties of his chosen profession. He entered practice by establishing an office at Caneyville, Kentucky, where he remained two years, and in September, 1889, he came to Menno, South Dakota, where he has ever since retained his home, having built up a large and representative professional business. In 1893 Dr. Clagett established a telephone system in Menno, and two years later extended its usefulness by constructing a line to Olivet, while in 1898 he disposed of the latter line to the Western Electric Company, still retaining and operating the Menno exchange, which includes about fifty telephones in the village and several in the surrounding country. He is a member of the State Medical Society, in politics holds to the faith in which he was reared, being a staunch Democrat, and fraternally he is identified with Scotland Lodge, No. 52, Free and Accepted Masons; Scotland Chapter, No. 31, Royal Arch Masons, both of Scotland, Bon Homme county; and with Menno Camp, No. 3071, Modern Woodmen of America. He is held in high esteem in professional and social circles and is one of the leading physicians and surgeons of this section of the state.

In October, 1888, Dr. Clagett was united in marriage to Miss Suda Frances Porter, of Caneyville, Kentucky, daughter of George E. Porter, whose parents brought him to Kentucky from Virginia when but a child. Her mother's maiden name was May Hulda Kennedy, of Kentucky. Mrs. Clagett was born in Kentucky and was educated in the public schools there. She has become the mother of four children, all of whom are deceased but one, Mary, who was born July 16, 1889, and is now attending the public schools.

JOHN J. DECKER, a prominent grain dealer of the thriving little city of Menno, is a native of southern Russia, where he was born on the 31st of December, 1868, being a son of John and Katherina (Wallman) Decker, of whose ten children nine are living, all being residents of Hutchinson county. The parents were both born in southern Russia, but the paternal ancestry is of German origin, the grandparents of our subject having removed from Germany into Russia and there passed the remainder of their lives. In 1875 John Decker emigrated with his family to America, making the territory of Dakota his ultimate destination. Upon his arrival in Hutchinson county he took up homestead, pre-emption and timber claims, while by purchase of additional lands at later periods he increased the area of his estate until he became the owner of thirteen quarter sections of the richest land to be found in the state. He and his wife still reside on their attractive homestead, which is pleasantly located on the James river, three miles southeast of Milltown. He is a staunch Republican, and while never ambitious for office, he was nominated, without his personal solicitation, for the office of county commissioner, in the late 'seventies, and was elected by a gratifying majority, giving excellent service during his tenure of the position. He and his wife are consistent and valued members of the German Baptist church.

The subject of this review was about seven years of age at the time when the family came to America and took up their residence on the pioneer farm in this county, and in the public schools he secured an excellent training, so that at the age of twenty years he became eligible for pedagogic endeavor, having been a successful teacher in the district schools during eight winter terms, while during the intervening season he devoted his attention to farm work. During this time he zealously husbanded his resources, and utilized his earnings in a wise and judicious way, acquiring three quarter sections of land, of which he still retains possession, the same being well improved and greatly appreciated in value. In 1901 he rented his farms and established himself as a grain dealer in Menno, purchasing at the time one of the best elevators in the town, after which he purchased another one at about the same location, and he is now one of the largest grain buyers at this point, doing a prosperous business and commanding the confidence and respect of all with whom he has dealings. He also owns extensive mining interests in the Black Hills, and is a substantial and enterprising business man. He is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, but has no ambition for public office, and he and his wife hold membership in the German Baptist church.

On the 12th of June, 1891, Mr. Decker was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Hofer, of this county, and they have three children, Edward, Samuel and Lavina.

ANDREW J. WALTNER, cashier of the First National Bank of Freeman, Hutchinson county, was born on a farm in Yankton county, on the 19th of January, 1877, being a son of John and Mary (Krehbil) Waltner, of whose thirteen children ten are living, the subject being the only one of the number born in the United States. Jacob is engaged in farming in Turner county, as is also John; Benjamin is a resident of Freeman; Joseph and Jonathan reside in Turner county; Frances is the widow of Andrew Kaufman, of that county; Catherine is the wife of John Graber, of Turner county; Mary is the wife of Jacob Preheim, of that county; Caroline is the wife of Peter Graber, likewise of the same county; and Andrew J. is the immediate subject of this review. The parents of the subject were both born in southern Russia, to which locality their respective parents had removed from Germany. In Russia the father was engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1875, when he emigrated to America and cast in his lot with the pioneers of what is now the great state of South Dakota. He purchased one hundred and sixty acres of land in Yankton county, a year later buying an additional quarter section and eventually becoming the owner of five quarter sections, all being exceptionally arable and valuable land. He continued to reside on his farm until his death, which occurred September 10, 1898, at which time he was sixty-five years of age. He was a man of impregnable integrity and was honored by all who knew him. His venerable widow now resides in the home of her daughter, Catherine, in Turner county. The father of our subject was a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, but never sought office in the gift of his party. In his native land, however, he filled various offices of trust, having been for a number of years incumbent of the position similar to that of representative in the legislature in this country. He was a man of excellent mentality, was active and ambitious, and after coming to South Dakota became an extensive buyer of live stock, hides, etc., realizing excellent returns from his efforts in this line of enterprise.

Andrew J. Waltner passed his boyhood days on the homestead farm and after attending the district schools until he had finished the curriculum he entered Bethel College, at Newton, Kansas, where he completed the six-years course in four years' time, being graduated in the spring of 1899. He then passed one year as a teacher in the schools of Kansas, teaching six months in English and the remaining four in German, of both of which languages he has a thorough and technical command. In 1900 he engaged in the grain business at Mound Ridge, Kansas, where he remained two years, at the expiration of which, in 1902, he turned his attention to the music business, which he followed for seven months and made a success out of it, his headquarters being in Mound Ridge, Kansas. In the autumn of the same year he disposed of this business and came to Freeman to accept his present position as cashier of the First National Bank, and he has proved himself a most faithful and able executive, being one of the leading young financiers of this section of the state. He is a Republican in politics, and his religious faith is that of the Mennonite church, in which he was reared.

On the 16th of November, 1899, occurred the marriage of Mr. Waltner to Miss Katie Wedel, of Mound Ridge, Kansas, and they have two children, Richard L. and Medora E.

JOHN GROSS, a prominent banker and capitalist of Freeman, was born in the southern part of Russia, on the 3d of June, 1860, and is a son of Henry and Christina (Schmall) Gross, of whose four children he is the younger of the two surviving, his brother, Philip, being a prominent citizen of Medina, North Dakota. The father of the subject died when the latter was but one year of age, and when he had attained the age of five years his mother also passed away, and he was reared by his maternal grandparents, attending the common schools of his native land until he had reached the age of fourteen, when he accompanied his two elder brothers on their emigration to America, in 1874. They made their way to Yankton, South Dakota, where they separated, the brother returning eastward to Illinois, since which time all trace of him has been lost by the other two brothers. When the subject arrived in Yankton his cash capital was represented in the sum of fifteen cents, and though a mere lad and a stranger in a strange land, he manifested the self-reliant spirit which has been the conservator of his pronounced success in later years. He secured employment in the grocery store of Christian Buechler, a fellow countryman, and when the latter removed his business to the new town of Freeman the subject accompanied him and here remained in his employ about one year. In company with Mr. Buechler he was then concerned in the erection of a new building, and in this they established themselves in the hotel and liquor business, in which they continued about six years, when the partnership was dissolved. Mr. Gross at that time purchased his partner's interest and thereafter continued the enterprise until January, 1902, when he disposed of the same and established the Merchants' State Bank, to whose management he has since given his attention, while the institution has gained a representative support and controls a large business, which is constantly increasing. For many years past Mr. Gross has been prominently and extensively identified with the farming and cattle industry, and at the present time he has about five hundred head of high-grade cattle and owns about twenty-four hundred acres of valuable farming land, in Hutchinson and Turner counties. He is a Republican in his political proclivities, but has never sought official preferment, though he is essentially public-spirited in his attitude. He and his wife are valued members of the German Reformed church, and they hold the high regard of all who know them. Mr. Gross has attained a high degree of success through his own efforts, and his straightforward course and inflexible integrity have marked him as well worthy of all that he has achieved since coming to the state as a poor boy.

February 15, 1888, Mr. Gross was united in marriage to Miss Lydia Levjans, of this county, she likewise being a native of southern Russia, whence she accompanied her parents to the United States in 1885, the family taking up their residence in Hutchinson county. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Gross one is deceased, Clara; the others remain at the parental home, namely: Louisa, Amelia, Annetta, Henry, Leona.

WILLIAM R. CLARKE, one of the prominent and representative farmers and honored citizens of Spink county, has the distinction of being a native of the great western metropolis, the city of Chicago, where he was born on the 2d of November, 1859, being a son of Richard and Fanny Clarke, both of whom were born and reared in Manchester, England, where they continued to reside until 1850, when they came to America and made their way directly to Chicago, where they took up their residence on the 20th of August of that year. The father of the subject is a landscape gardener and florist by vocation, and was long and prominently identified with work along these lines in Chicago, where he is now living practically retired, having attained the venerable age of eighty-four years and still enjoying good health and marked mental vigor.

The subject of this sketch was reared to the age of sixteen years in his native city, where he was afforded the advantages of the public schools. At the age noted he moved to Alden, Minnesota, in which state he passed five years, devoting his attention principally to farming, and he then, in 1881, came to the present state of South Dakota, locating in Spink county on the 10th of May of that year. Three and one-half miles south of the present thriving village of Northville he entered pre-emption and homestead claims, which constitute an integral portion of his present fine landed estate, which comprises eight hundred acres. He has been very successful in his operations and has accumulated a valuable property, his farming being improved with high-grade buildings and other modern accessories and conveniences, while the place is especially favored in its supply of water, being one of marked fertility and yielding large crops of grain and other products, while Mr. Clarke also devotes considerable attention to the raising of live stock of good grade. In politics he accords a stalwart allegiance to the Republican party, but has never been an aspirant for public office. He is prominently identified with the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained to the thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, being identified with the consistory at Aberdeen, South Dakota, and with El Riad Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls, while he is also affiliated with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 16th of November, 1887, Mr. Clarke was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Stewart, who was born at Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, on the 8th of October, 1866, and whose death occurred on the 14th of October, 1900. She is survived by two children, Fanny Marguerite and Richard Stewart.

JAMES T. CAMPBELL, county commissioner of Charles Mix county, was born in Iowa county, Wisconsin, on the 2d of November, 1855, and is the eldest of the six living children of James T. and Wilhelmina (Helmaustine) Campbell, the former of Scotch and the latter of German ancestry. Two of their children died in infancy and those living are James T., Jr. (subject of this sketch), Alexander, Charles, Eliza, Archibald and Frederick. The father was engaged in farming in Wisconsin, and is still living, while his wife passed away in 1878.

The subject was reared on the homestead farm in Wisconsin, assisting in its cultivation during his youth and securing his early educational training in the public schools. At the age of seventeen years he left the parental roof and went to Iowa, where he worked on a farm and also learned the carpenter trade, while he there continued his educational work as opportunity presented, continuing to attend school at intervals until he had attained the age of twenty years and thus rounding out a good practical education, while he continued to reside in Iowa about ten years, at the expiration of which he came to what is now the state of South Dakota, taking up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Charles Mix county, where he has ever since maintained his home, having been among the first permanent settlers within its borders. Shortly after coming here he also bought a tree claim of one hundred and sixty acres, adjoining his homestead. He is now the owner of a well-improved and highly cultivated farm of two hundred and forty acres, while he also rents a half section not far distant, the greater portion of the latter being also under cultivation. In addition to raising the cereals and other products best adapted to the soil and climate he has been very successful in the raising of cattle and swine of excellent grade, and his farm always shows a goodly array of live stock. When he came to the county it was practically an unreclaimed prairie, there being few settlers, while the nearest market town to his farm at the time he located thereon was White Lake, forty miles distant. He has not only witnessed but has materially aided in the development of this section of the state, which is now thickly settled, and as a practical and progressive farmer he considers this as good an agricultural district as is to be found in any state in the Union.

In politics Mr. Campbell is one of the leaders in the local ranks of the Democratic party, and in the autumn of 1902 he was elected a member of the board of county commissioners, defeating the Republican candidate by sixty-five votes, which fact indicates his personal popularity in the county, since it has a normal Republican majority of about two hundred and thirty, he having been one of the two candidates on the Democratic county ticket elected at this time. He has been for many years a member of the school board of his district. Fraternally he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, holding membership in the lodge at Geddes.

On the 11th of June, 1883, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage to Miss Eva Scott, who was born in the state of Illinois and who is a sister of Mrs. Edward Hemminger, of this county. She is a daughter of William and Catherine Scott, both of whom died in Iowa, her father having been a farmer by vocation. She was the youngest in a family of seven children, the others being Erastus, Robert, Edwin, Minerva, Malinda, Ellen and Charles. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have four children, all of whom remain at the parental home, namely: James W., Zella B., Louise and Byron F.

HERMAN H. NATWICK was born September 15, 1859, in Dane county, Wisconsin, and is the son of Henry O. and Elizabeth Natwick, the father for many years a prosperous farmer of that state. Herman H. was reared on the family homestead, where he early formed the habits of industry and studious investigation which have characterized his subsequent career, and after receiving a preliminary education in the public schools, he prosecuted the higher branches of learning for three years in Beloit College. Leaving the latter institution at the age of eighteen, he began the study of law with Judge Miller, of Grant county, Wisconsin, subsequently prosecuting his legal reading and investigation under the direction of Judge Lyons, of La Crosse, in whose office he remained until admitted to the bar in the year 1878.

Mr. Natwick began the practice of his profession the above year, in Brookings, South Dakota, where he built up a large and lucrative business, and with the general business and public interests of which place he was actively identified until 1890. Meantime, in 1884, he was elected to the territorial council, in which body he served two years, was mayor of Brookings from 1886 to 1888 inclusive, and in addition to these public positions he was for four and a half years register of the land office at Chamberlain, having been appointed to the latter post by President Harrison in 1889. Mr. Natwick took a leading part in the organization of the Co-operative Savings and Loan Association of Brookings, of which he was made attorney and business manager and which was moved from that place to Sioux Falls in June, 1894. Since the latter year it has done a large and extensive business, being one of the leading enterprises of the kind in the state and managed by men of ability and wide experience, the official roster at this time including the names of the following gentlemen: R. F. Pettigrew, president; H. H. Natwick, vice-president; C. G. Leyse, secretary, and Hon. A. B. Kittridge, general counsel.

Mr. Natwick changed his residence from Brookings to Sioux Falls in June, 1894, and since that time has made the latter city his home. In 1900 he was one of the originators of the Central Banking and Trust Company, of which he has since been president, and more recently he became the possessor of the Sioux Falls traction franchise, with the object in view of soon supplying the city with a fully equipped and thoroughly up-to-date street railway system. Mr. Natwick's progressive spirit has led him to engage in various important business and industrial enterprises, including, among others, the Queen Bee Milling Company, the valuable property of which he and other parties purchased in the fall of 1902 and which, under the present efficient management, will ere long be completely remodelled and put into successful operation. In addition to his extensive law practice and the business concerns noted, Mr. Natwick has large landed and live-stock interests, owning at this time a valuable farm of one thousand acres, six miles from Sioux Falls, which he has stocked with the celebrated Red Polled breed of cattle, and a ranch of two hundred and forty acres on which are some of the finest blooded horses to be found in the state of South Dakota. In the matter of live stock he is quite enthusiastic, being an authority on fine grade cattle and blooded horses, in the raising of which he has met with the most encouraging success and from the sale of which he derives no small share of his income. Politically Mr. Natwick wields a potent influence for the Republican party, not only in local affairs, but throughout the state, being invariably chosen delegate to state conventions, in which bodies he has served ever since coming to Dakota, and he has also been honored with seats in national conventions, having been a member of the one which nominated Benjamin Harrison for the presidency.

Mr. Natwick is one of the representative men of his city, and few citizens of the state are as widely and favorably known. He stands for progression in all the term implies, has led a very busy life and discharged worthily the duties of every station to which called. Mr. Natwick is a married man, his wife having formerly been Miss Lizzie M. Haskell, a native of Wisconsin. They have had one child, a daughter, Mabel, who was born November 4, 1885, and whose death occurred on the 24th day of December, 1901.

CYRUS WALTZ is of sturdy German lineage, the name having originally been spelled Walz, and is a native of the state of New York, having been born in Watertown, Jefferson county, on the 24th of March, 1844, being a son of William and Louise Waltz, both of whom were likewise born and reared in the Empire state, the respective families having there located in an early day. The subject was reared on a farm and early became familiar with the strenuous toil of tilling the soil, while his educational training in his youth was secured in the common schools of northern New York. This has been most effectively supplemented by personal application and judicious study in later years, as well as by the valuable lessons gained in the great school of experience; He remained identified with farm work until he had attained the age of twenty-two years, when he set forth to seek his fortunes in the west, having arrived in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, in 1869, and having here followed for a number of years his profession of surveyor and civil engineer, for which he had fitted himself while still a resident of New York. In 1872 he was chosen clerk of the United States district court, retaining this position for the long period of fifteen years, and being a valued and trusted official. For fourteen years he was a member of the board of education of Sioux Falls, having been its president for one year and having taken a deep interest in forwarding educational interests here, while for two years he served as county superintendent of schools. He was admitted to the bar of the territory in 1887, having given much time to the technical reading of the law and having thus fitted himself for the active work of the profession, though he has not practiced directly to any considerable extent. In 1898 he was elected city justice of the peace, and re-elected in 1902, of which office he has since been incumbent, and in this capacity he has gained a high reputation for fair and impartial rulings. In politics Mr. Waltz gives his allegiance to the Republican party. Fraternally he is affiliated with Minnehaha Lodge, No. 5, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; of Sioux Falls Chapter, No. 2, Royal Arch Masons; Cyrene Commandery, No. 2, Knights Templar, and El Riad Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

On the 15th of May, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Waltz to Miss Mary A. Benton, who was born in the city of Columbus, Ohio, on the 13th of September, 1853, being a daughter of Porter W. and Harriet (Phelps) Benton. She has the distinction of having been the first teacher in the first public school in Sioux Falls, having been thus employed here during a portion of the years 1870-71. Mr. and Mrs. Waltz have three children, Charles C., who is now engaged with R. G. Dun & Company Mercantile Agency as assistant manager at Buenos Ayres, South America; Harriet L., wife of George W. Stearns, managing editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, and Hope V., wife of M. J. Gochey, of Duluth, Minnesota.

HENRY BRANDON, one of the successful farmers of Lincoln county, was born in Norway, on the 29th of September, 1851, and is a son of Peter and Mary Brandon, who emigrated from the fair land of their birth to the United States in 1866, at which time the subject was a lad of fifteen years, his early education having been thus received in the fatherland. The family located in Fayette county, Iowa, where they remained two years, at the expiration of which the father came to South Dakota and took up a tract of wild government land in what is now Canton township, Lincoln county, where he was joined by his family in the following year. They came through with a wagon and ox-team, the trip consuming three weeks, while in the company's outfit on the journey were sixteen wagons. Peter Brandon built a primitive sod house for the accommodation of his family, and seats in the dwelling were provided by digging down the earth along the sides of the interior to a depth of eighteen inches. Later a small log house was built and finally a frame dwelling of more pretentious order and signifying the prosperity which was attending the efforts of the sturdy pioneers. The father continued to reside on the homestead until his death, in the autumn of 1881, while his widow passed away in June, 1900, both having been persons of sterling integrity and having been held in high esteem in the county. They were devoted members of the Lutheran church, and in this faith reared their seven children,—two sons and five daughters,—all of whom are well placed in life and a credit to their parents. The subject has had charge of the farm from the time of the arrival of the family in the county and the entire quarter section is under excellent cultivation, yielding good returns for the labors expended. He erected his present substantial residence in 1894, this being the fourth dwelling built on the old homestead. He is a Populist in politics and while taking a deep interest in the advancement of local interests has never been an aspirant for office.

HENRY CLAY ANDRUS is a native of the state of Michigan and a scion of one of its honored pioneer families. He was born in Highland township, Oakland county, on the 26th of September, 1844, being a son of Justus L. and Sarah W. (Smith) Andrus, and as his father was a great admirer of Henry Clay the honored name was given to our subject. Mr. Andrus was reared on the old homestead farm, and his educational advantages were such as the common schools of the time and place afforded. In the spring of 1864, at the age of nineteen years, he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a member of Battery H, First Michigan Light Artillery, and joining the command at Chattanooga, Tennessee. He thereafter remained in active service until the close of the war. He was an active participant in the ever memorable Atlanta campaigns, and later his command came back to Nashville, Tennessee, in pursuit of Hood's forces, and it remained in that state until the news of the surrender of Lee was received. Mr. Andrus proved a loyal and valiant young soldier and made a record which will ever redound to the honor of his name. He was mustered out at Jackson, Michigan, July 22, 1865, and then returned to the old home farm in Michigan. He thereafter continued to be actively engaged in agricultural pursuits in his native county until the spring of 1883, when he determined to cast in his fortunes with what is now the state of South Dakota. He came with his family to Aberdeen and shortly afterward took up a homestead claim in what was then New Hope township, his farm being in that portion which was afterward segregated and named Highland township, this title having been suggested by him, in honor of the township in which he was born, in the old Wolverine state. He located on his claim and forthwith began its improvement and cultivation, and today he is the owner of one of the finest farm properties in this favored and attractive section of the state. He not only improved the original claim, but also took up tree claims, and the landed estate now comprises two hundred and forty acres, the major portion being under cultivation while the place is equipped with substantial buildings, good fences, an orchard of apple and plum trees, which are bearing each year, and all represent the tangible results of the well directed efforts of the subject of this sketch. He was, however, not satisfied to thus look only to his personal interests, but from the start evinced a lively public spirit and gave his aid and influence and service in the promotion of all measures and enterprises for the general good. He served for thirteen years as township and school treasurer, and continued to be treasurer of the school board of his district until his removal to Aberdeen. He took up his residence in this city in November, 1897, having a pleasant home and amidst a host of stanch friends he is enjoying the rewards of his former toils and endeavors. He is now a member of the board of education in Aberdeen and is a member of its building committee. Mr. Andrus has ever been a stanch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and has been an active worker in behalf of its cause. In 1896 he was made the nominee of his party for representative in the state legislature, but met the defeat which attended the party ticket in general throughout the state in that campaign, there being a veritable landslide in favor of the Populist party. He is a member of Robert Anderson Post, No. 19, Grand Army of the Republic.

HENRY C. ANDRUS.

In Highland township, Oakland county, Michigan, on the 15th of January, 1867, Mr. Andrus was united in marriage to Miss Amelia Ann Curdy, who was born and reared in the above township, and was a schoolmate of her future husband. Her parents, Thomas and Sarah J. (Lockwood) Curdy, were natives of New York state, from whence they removed to Michigan, and were early settlers of Oakland county, that state, where they continued to reside until their deaths, the father dying March 17, 1898, and the mother on March 1, 1904, at Milford. To Mr. and Mrs. Andrus two sons have been born: Ernest Curdy, who died January 3, 1879, aged nine years, and Homer S., born April 3, 1879.

Mr. Andrus and wife are members of the First Baptist church of Aberdeen, of which he is a deacon, a trustee and superintendent of the Sabbath school. Mrs. Andrus has ever been active in the different lines of church work, has served for four years as organist, is teacher of the young ladies' class in the Sabbath school, and is president of the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. Andrus has led a busy and active life, and his work has not been without success. The world is better for his having lived in it, as his endeavors have been set to a high standard of citizenship, and the communities in which he has resided have felt his influence and been benefited. Perhaps his greatest and most beneficial influence was felt in the pioneer community with which he cast his lot when he came to Brown county, this state. At that time what is now Highland township was without church or Sunday school organization of any kind, and but little, if any, attention was given by the people to the proper observance of the Sabbath day. Sunday was the same as any week day. Aided by a few kindred spirits, Mr. Andrus, in 1884, organized a Sunday school. This was followed in 1892 by the organization of a church, services being held in school houses. The result of this missionary work in Highland township is appreciable today, and Mr. Andrus has his reward in the knowledge that that community stands with any other in the state in regard to law-abiding, religious and God-fearing people. Truly, Mr. Andrus has proven himself a pioneer of South Dakota in the broadest and best sense of the term.

Mrs. Andrus is one of the pioneer school teachers of Brown county. She received a normal school training in Michigan, and upon coming to South Dakota and finding a dearth of school teachers over the country she became a teacher in the district schools of Highland township and taught for nine terms, and then in New Hope township.

Homer A., son of the subject, was educated in the public schools of Aberdeen and at the Agricultural College at Brookings, South Dakota, where he spent two years. He served as a sergeant in Company F, First Regiment South Dakota National Guard, and then became sergeant in Company L, Second Regiment, and is now on detail as sergeant major of the regiment. He is a fireman in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company at Aberdeen.

OSHEA A. FOWLER, judge of the police court in the city of Sioux Falls and recognized as a representative member of the bar of the state, is a native of the old Green Mountain state, having been born in the vicinity of the town of Pownal, Housic county, Vermont, on the 25th of April, 1851, and though a pioneer of a great state he is yet in the very prime of vigorous manhood. When he was but three years of age his parents emigrated from Vermont to Illinois, becoming pioneers of that state, where they continued to reside until 1865, when they removed to Rochester, Minnesota, passing the remainder of their lives in that state, the father having devoted the greater portion of his active life to agricultural pursuits. Judge Fowler secured his elementary educational training in the district schools of Illinois. He was about fourteen years of age at the time of the family removal to Minnesota, and he continued his studies in the public schools of Rochester, that state, being graduated in the high school in 1869. He then set forth to seek his fortunes in the west, arriving in Sioux Falls, Dakota, on the 22d of December, 1870. Here he worked at whatever employment he could secure, incidentally putting his scholastic attainments to practical test, having successfully taught school in the old barracks of the government military post in 1871 and having been for some time successfully engaged in the pedagogic work in Minnehaha county. In the centennial year, 1876, he went to Sibley, Iowa, where he was for one year employed as clerk in a hotel, later traveling about in the interests of a nursery company until 1880, when he returned to Dakota and located in what is now the city of Aberdeen. He erected the first building in the town and opened the same as a hotel, the caravansary being known as the Alpha House. The following spring Judge Fowler disposed of this property and business and became associated with John Hazzard in the erection of a more pretentious hotel, known as the Hazzard House. He disposed of his interest in the property in the ensuing autumn, and his eldest son was the first child born in the town, the date of his nativity having been September 3, 1881. After retiring from the hotel business the subject took up the study of law, under the preceptorship of M. J. Gordon, a pioneer attorney of Aberdeen, continuing to devote his attention to such specific reading for two years, at the expiration of which he established himself in the practice of his profession at Frederick, Brown county, also conducting a land and loan business. In this town he also founded the Frederick Herald, the first newspaper in the town, but he soon disposed of the same. He was admitted to the bar in 1884 and in 1886 returned to Sioux Falls, where he engaged in the general practice of his profession and also acted as attorney for the Insurance Company of Dakota, retaining this incumbency, with the exception of a brief interval, until the company retired from business. Thereafter he continued to devote his attention to the practice of law until he was called to assume his present office, having gained marked prestige in his profession and had to do with much important litigation. In 1896 he was elected police judge of Sioux Falls, and by successive re-elections has ever since remained in tenure of the office, having gained a high reputation for the expeditious handling of business and for just and impartial rulings. In politics Judge Fowler is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, in whose interests he has been an active and zealous worker. Reverting to his labors as a pedagogue, it may be stated that the Judge taught the first district school established in Minnehaha county, while he has ever continued to take a lively interest in educational affairs. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On the 26th of April, 1880, Judge Fowler was united in marriage to Miss Emma M. Smith, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and they are the parents of three children, James O., Lewis M. and Fannie P.

CASPER KENNEDY, editor and proprietor of the Sisseton Standard, also postmaster of Sisseton, was born in Aylmer, Ontario, December 5, 1863, and is one of six children, four sons and two daughters, whose parents, James and Phoebe Kennedy, were also natives of Canada. He was reared in the town of Aylmer, received a high-school education there and in 1882 came to Watertown, South Dakota, and accepted a position on the Courier-News, published by Doane

Robinson, remaining with that paper until 1892. When the reservation was opened that year he became a citizen of Sisseton and began the publication of the Standard, which is recognized as one of the best and most influential local newspapers in South Dakota, and which under his able management has contributed greatly to the building up of the town. Mr. Kennedy is a politician of much more than local repute, and through the medium of his paper has done much to promote the success of the Republican party in Roberts county and throughout the northeastern part of the state. In recognition of valuable services rendered his party, he was appointed postmaster by President McKinley in 1898, and has since discharged the duties of the position to the satisfaction of all concerned, proving a capable, accommodating and most obliging public official. Mr. Kennedy is deeply interested in the welfare of the community in which he resides and is untiring in his efforts to advance the interests and prosperity of his fellow citizens of Sisseton and Roberts county. He served several years on the local board of education, during which time the schools of Sisseton were brought to a high standard of efficiency, and he has also given his influence and encouragement to all enterprises making for the public good along social, intellectual and moral lines, as well as in material affairs. Fraternally he is an active worker in the Masonic order, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Modern Woodmen of America and Knights of Pythias, and religiously is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church of Sisseton and deeply interested in all of the congregation's activities.

RICHARD F. BROWN, M. D., is a native of Seneca county, Ohio, where he was born on the 9th of March, 1858, being a son of Abram G. and Lucretia (Gray) Brown, both of whom were born in the state of New York. The doctor received his early educational discipline in the public schools of the old Buckeye state, and in 1879 was matriculated in Starling Medical College, at Columbus, Ohio, where he completed the prescribed technical course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1882, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine and coming forth well equipped for the active work of his chosen profession. In February, 1882, he located in Plankinton, South Dakota, where he was successfully engaged in the general practice of medicine and surgery until the spring of 1891, having gained a high reputation in his chosen field of endeavor and having been one of the leading practitioners of that locality. Upon retiring from practice, at the time just noted, he came to Sioux Falls, where he established himself in the retail drug business, while in November, 1901, he established a wholesale department, in which the business increased in scope and importance to such an extent that in 1901 he withdrew from active part in the retail trade, still owning his fine retail store, to devote his entire attention to the wholesale business. December 1, 1903, the Brown Drug Company was reorganized, with increased capital and facilities, with B. F. Brown as president; Thomas H. Brown, vice-president; O. A. Brown, secretary, and F. H. Hollister, treasurer. Their building is three stories high, one hundred and twenty feet long and forty-four feet wide and will make one of the best equipped wholesale houses in the county. Their trade territory now comprises nearly all sections of the state and the business is a large and constantly increasing one, while he is known as a straightforward, reliable and progressive business man, commanding the confidence of all with whom he has dealings or comes in contact. In politics the Doctor gives his allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with the lodge, chapter and commandery of the Masonic order, as well as with the allied organizations, the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine.

In November, 1884, Dr. Brown was united in marriage to Miss Minnesota Cook, of Minnesota, who died December 8, 1893, in Sioux Falls. To this union were born two children, Mary R. and Rush A., both of whom remain at the parental home at the time of this writing.

MICHAEL UGOFISKY, one of the progressive and successful agriculturists of Yankton county, was born in Prussia in 1840 and was there reared and educated, obtaining his mental training in the public schools. The favorable reports which he heard concerning the new world, however, attracted him and bidding adieu to friends and native land he sailed for the United States in 1868, making his way into the interior of the country. He settled first at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he remained for four years, being employed in a tannery there. On the expiration of that period he came to South Dakota and, establishing his home in Yankton county, he secured one hundred and sixty acres of land, which he entered from the government. Not a furrow had been turned or an improvement made on the place, but he at once began the task of plowing and planting and in course of time he gathered rich harvests. As he has prospered in his work he has added to his possessions until he now has three hundred and twenty acres, his property holdings being valuable. He, however, suffered many hardships and trials in the earlier years. He lived here during the time in which the grasshoppers destroyed the crops, leaving the settlers almost penniless, because they had no farm products to sell.

Mr. Ugofsky was married to Miss Mary Tooczek and has a family of five children: Valentina, Julia, Annie, August and Xavier. The boys operate a thresher and also a corn sheller and shredder and are energetic young men.

In his political affiliations Mr. Ugofsky is a Democrat and, becoming well informed on the issues of the day, has given a loyal support to that party, which he believes is best calculated to promote the welfare of the nation. He belongs to the Catholic church and is interested in all that pertains to public progress and improvement along social, material, educational and moral lines. He assisted in building schools and churches here and his co-operation has been a helpful factor in many lines of progress. In the development of his farm he has been energetic and industrious and now has a very good property. He planted trees about his home, erected good buildings and in fact has made all of the improvements upon his property. He carries on mixed farming, raising shorthorn cattle, horses and sheep and in addition produces good crops, his fields being planted to the cereals best adapted to the soil and climate.

A. J. NORBY is a native of Appleton, Minnesota, and the son of John J. and Sarah (Thompson) Norby. He is one of a family of five children, two sons and three daughters, and was born January 3, 1877. At the age of four years he was brought to Wilmot, South Dakota, where he spent his childhood and youth and received his preliminary education. After attending the public schools until finishing the usual studies, he fitted himself for active life by taking a full commercial course in a business college, later attending a school of pharmacy in Minneapolis, Minnesota, after which he engaged in the drug business at South Shore, South Dakota. After a short experience at that place he disposed of his establishment and accepted the position of cashier with the Warren Scharf Asphalt Paving Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, holding the same for only a brief time, when he resigned and came to Sisseton, where he was soon chosen bookkeeper and assistant cashier of the State Bank at this place, which relation he sustained until promoted cashier. He held the latter position until August 14, 1902, when he resigned and organized the Citizens' National Bank, of which he was made cashier and a member of the directorate, both of which places he still holds, and in addition thereto is also stockholder in the Farmers' State Bank of Wilmot. While primarily interested in banking, Mr. Norby is connected with several other important business enterprises, notable among which are the Iowa and Dakota Land and Loan Company, the Roberts County Abstract and Title Company and the Sisseton Lumber Company, being secretary and manager of the first named organization, treasurer and director of the second, and vice-president and a director and large stockholder in the lumber company. Although a young man, Mr. Norby has forged rapidly to the front in business circles and now occupies a position in the world of affairs such as few of his age and experience attain. Aside from his relations already referred to, Mr. Norby has been an influential factor in the general business and industrial affairs of Sisseton, every movement calculated to advance the city, materially or otherwise, receiving his co-operation and support. All agencies for the promotion of education find in him a friend and patron, and he is unwavering in upholding whatever he believes to be right and for the best interests of the community. Mr. Norby belongs to the Knights of Pythias, in which he holds the position of chancellor commander, and is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Improved Order of Red Men. His married life dates from the 15th of January, 1900, at which time he was united in the bonds of wedlock with Miss Effie Brown, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, a union blessed with two children, Rocheford J. and Ruth.

HENRY S. MORRIS is not only one of the leading business men and representative citizens of Roberts county, but also one of the earliest settlers of this part of the state and, as his father, W. K. Morris, bore an important part in the early history of eastern Dakota and was one of the first white men to locate within the present limits of Roberts county, it is appropriate that a brief review of his life be given in this connection. W. K. Morris was born in Hartford, Connecticut, September 11, 1842, the son of a city missionary who moved to Washington county, New York, when his son was an infant. In the latter state Mr. Morris grew to maturity and received his education and he moved thence to Minnesota, in 1864, locating in Blue Earth county, where he made his home until 1870. In that year he was selected to take charge of the Good Will Mission in South Dakota, and on December 1st he set forth with two yoke of oxen and a yoke of cows hitched to two wagons containing his family and a modest outfit of household goods. After a journey of fourteen days he arrived at his destination, seeing no white men after passing the town of New Ulin until reaching the mission. Mr. Morris had never seen any Sioux Indians until he reached his field of labor, and at that time could neither speak nor understand their language. In due time, however, he acquired a thorough knowledge of the same and from the beginning his work among the Indians was blessed with beneficial results. He taught at Good Will Mission under the supervision of Rev. S. R. Reggs until 1873, when he was placed in full charge of the school, holding the position during the ensuing seventeen years. In 1890 he went to the Omaha and Winnebago reservation, where he had charge of a school until 1894, at which time he transferred to the church at Pine Ridge agency, when he was licensed a minister. After preaching at the latter place until July, 1897, he gave up his missionary work and settled at Sisseton, Roberts county, near which town he engaged in farming and stock raising, but is now living a life of retirement. Mr. Morris was married in 1876 to Miss Martha T. Riggs, sister of Thomas Lawrence Riggs, of the South Dakota State Historical Society, the union being blessed with five children, of whom Henry S. of this review is the first in order of birth. Mr. Morris is a man of intelligence and culture, and having devoted much attention to South Dakota, its settlement and various interests, he is considered an authority on all matters relating to the history of the state.

Henry Morris, cashier of the First National Bank of Sisseton and president of the Citizens' Bank at White Rock, was born at Stirling, Minnesota, June 21, 1868. At the age of two years he was brought to South Dakota and from that time until a youth in his teens lived with his parents at Good Will Mission, where he received his early educational training. Later he entered the State University of Minnesota and after being graduated from the academic department of that institution in 1891, spent one year as special agent of the government, making land allotments to the Indians on the reservation. At the expiration of the time he was elected clerk of the Roberts county court, which position he held four years, and then came to Sisseton and organized the State Bank, serving as cashier of the same until April, 1900. In the latter year he resigned his position and established the First National Bank of Sisseton, of which he has since been cashier, and is now its vice-president, and in addition thereto he is president of the Citizens' Bank at White Water, an institution he also helped to organize. Politically Mr. Morris is a zealous supporter of the Republican party, and as such has been prominent in its councils and a successful leader in a number of campaigns. He was chairman of the Roberts county central committee in 1896, and rendered valuable service in that capacity.

Mr. Morris is identified with the time-honored Masonic order, and still retains membership with a college fraternity which he joined while pursuing his studies in the State University.

On December 20, 1892, he was united in the bonds of wedlock with Miss Mary Strangsway, and is now the father of four children, whose names are Martha D., Wyllys K., Esther F. and Elizabeth R.

EDMUND COOK was born in the province of Saxony, Germany, on the 20th of March, 1847. After receiving a thorough academic training he entered a commercial establishment and later became a bookkeeper until entering the Prussian army in 1865. In common with all able-bodied young men of Germany, he was obliged to devote a certain number of years to military service, and it so happened that shortly after entering the army the war between Prussia and Austria broke out and it fell to him to take an active and by no means unimportant part in that celebrated struggle. He went through the one campaign of the war, that of 1866, during the greater part of which he was on the staff of General Von Barmeco, commanding the Twelfth Regiment of Hussars, and saw much active service. When hostilities ceased Mr. Cook was honorably discharged, after which he re-entered mercantile life and continued to give it his attention as long as he remained in the fatherland. According to the custom which requires every soldier to report for duty at certain times, young Cook, at the age of twenty, was thus called upon and in due time presented himself at the proper place. To the great surprise and astonishment of the officers, however, the young man came into their presence decorated with the cross of honor, won for brave and meritorious conduct, and with a discharge in his pocket, which fact exempted him from further military duty. Shortly after this he came to the United States, intending to be absent but one year, but after spending some months in this country he became so attached to it and so pleased with the advantages it held out to young men with ambition to rise in the world, that he concluded not to return to Germany. Mr. Cook reached America in 1868 and some time afterwards located at Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he accepted the position of traveling salesman for a wholesale house. He later represented a St. Paul firm on the road for several years. In 1882 he came to Wilmot, South Dakota, and established the general store which he has conducted with success and financial profit to the present time. Recently he began closing out this establishment, the better to devote his attention to his other business enterprises, being vice-president of the First State Bank of Wilmot and a director of the Wilmot Land and Loan Company, besides having large landed interests in various parts of Roberts county.

For several years Mr. Cook devoted considerable attention to live stock and farming and achieved quite a reputation as an importer and breeder of Oxford-down sheep and other high-grade domestic animals. While not so much interested in stock raising as formerly, he now farms quite extensively and to this vocation he proposes to devote the greater part of his time hereafter, finding it not only greatly to his taste, but quite profitable as a source of income. Among his lands is a fine farm of three hundred and thirty acres, contiguous to Wilmot, ten acres within the city limits, and on this place he has made many valuable improvements, including one of the handsomest modern residences in the county, which, surrounded by beautiful grounds, tastefully laid out in gardens, shade trees, walks, smooth lawns, interspersed with flowers, etc., bespeaks the home of a man of wealth, elegant leisure, refined taste and decidedly progressive ideas.

Mr. Cook was married in Plainview, Minnesota, June 1, 1875, to Miss Martha Brooks, daughter of Reuben Brooks, a pioneer of that state and for many years a leading citizen of his community. Mr. and Mrs. Cook have one child, a son by the name of Arthur W. They are among the most highly esteemed people of Wilmot, take an active interest in everything pertaining to the growth and development of the city, are alive to all charitable and benevolent enterprises, and the hospitality of their beautiful home is unbounded.

In his political affiliations Mr. Cook is a prominent Democrat and has perhaps as much influence in his party as any man in northeastern Dakota. He has been a delegate to nearly every county, district and state convention in the last twenty years, and in 1896 was a delegate to the Chicago national convention, in addition to which he has also been nominated for a number of important offices, his election being made impossible by reason of normally overwhelming Republican majorities. Mr. Cook is a thirty-second-degree Scottish-rite Mason, also a Knight Templar, besides belonging to various other branches of the order and he has long been a familiar figure at all the meetings of the grand lodge.

CHARLES WEDDELL, an esteemed citizen of Bon Homme county, engaged in the pursuit of agriculture, was born in Aurora, Illinois, February 11, 1848. Andrew Weddell, his father, a native of Scotland, came to the United States when young and lived for some time in Cleveland, Ohio, where he worked at the blacksmith trade. He married in this country, Louisa —, a native of England, and later they moved to Aurora, Illinois, where they both spent the remainder of their days. Andrew and Louisa Weddell were the parents of seven children, two of whom died in early childhood; those growing to maturity were William; Abbie, now Mrs.

Frank Campbell, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota; Bell, Robert and Charles, of which number Bell, William and Robert are deceased.

The early life of Charles Weddell was spent in his native state and after receiving a good practical education in the public schools, he entered his father's shop to learn blacksmithing. On attaining his majority he left home and in 1870 came to Vermillion county, South Dakota, where in due time he became a driver on the Hedge Stage line, later accepting a similar position with Cheny & Haskall. While thus employed Mr. Weddell drove as far as Ft. Randall and other distant points, managing a four-horse team and a large stage, which carried both passengers and express matter, and his experiences during the seven years in which followed this kind of free out-door life were interesting and at times thrilling and adventurous.

Resigning his position at the end of the period noted, Mr. Weddell entered the employ of the government at the Yankton agency and spent two years at that place, during the greater part of which time he rode the range and looked after the cattle and other live stock belonging to the post. At the expiration of his term of service he took up a claim of one hundred and sixty acres in Bon Homme county, the same on which he has since lived, and, addressing himself to the task of its improvement, he soon had a goodly part of his land under cultivation, besides erecting substantial buildings and making a number of other improvements. His farm is now regarded one of the best in the township and as a tiller of the soil he has been uniformly successful, ranking at this time with the leading agriculturists in his part of the country. Like the great majority of progressive men throughout the west, he does not only rely entirely upon crops for his livelihood and income, but devotes a great deal of attention to live stock, raising cattle, good hogs and horses, being familiar with everything relating to the breeding and proper care of all kinds of domestic animals.

Although a man of domestic tastes and greatly attached to his family, Mr. Weddell has not been neglectful of his duties as a citizen nor of his obligations to the public. He manifests a lively interest in politics, voting the Republican ticket, but has never asked for office nor sought recognition as a party leader.

Mr. Weddell, in the year 1886, took to himself a wife and helpmate in the person of Miss Kate Quatier, a native of Germany, but of Russian descent, the marriage being blessed with seven sons, whose names in order of birth are as follows: Henry, Andrew, William, Charles, Joseph, John and Benjamin, all living.

CLAUS BRANDT is a native of Hanover, Germany, and dates his birth from March 7, 1858. His parents, Claus and Annie (Bredehoeft) Brandt, spent their lives in the kingdom of Hanover and reared a family of six children, the subject of this review being the fifth of the number; the others are Angelus, who lives in Germany; John, a resident of Bon Homme county, South Dakota; Maggie, who has never left Hanover; Martha, deceased, and Annie, whose home is in the state of Kansas.

The early life of Claus Brandt was spent in his native land and he received a good education in the public schools of the same. In 1873, when fifteen years of age, he came to America and, settling in Missouri, engaged in farming, which vocation he followed in that state until 1884, when he changed his abode to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, locating in Jefferson township, where he bought a quarter section of land, to which he subsequently added a similar amount by purchase. Still later he bought an additional quarter section and in the fall of 1903 purchased an additional eighty acres, making his realty at this time four hundred acres, nearly all of which he has reduced to cultivation and improved with good buildings, and from the proceeds of which he has realized a handsome competence.

Mr. Brandt has devoted his attention exclusively to farming and stock raising and his success has been encouraging, he being at this time one of the leading agriculturists of the township in which he resides as well as one of its most enterprising and progressive citizens. In politics he is a decided Republican and an active worker for his party, but he has never asked office at the hands of his fellow citizens, nor aspired to public station of any kind.

On the 3d day of October, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Brandt and Miss Annie Kringer, the latter a native of Prussia and the daughter of John and Mary Ernestine (Schulz) Kringer, who came to the United States in 1869 and settled in Hardin county, Iowa, later removing to Bon Homme, South Dakota, where their deaths subsequently occurred. To Mr. and Mrs. Brandt have been born six children, whose names are as follows: Angelus, John, Henry, Anna, Edward F. and Helena, all living and giving every promise of useful and honorable careers.

JOHN S. SHERIDAN is one of the representative citizens and successful farmers and stock growers of Brown county, his finely improved estate being located three and one-half miles northeast of Columbia. John Stinson Sheridan traces his genealogy in the agnatic line back to stanch Irish stock, his great-grandfather having emigrated with his family from the Emerald Isle to America about the year 1812, and having settled in Rochester, New York, where was born his grandson John, father of the subject of this sketch. This honored founder of the family in America died prior to the family's coming west in 1834. The grandfather, Thomas Sheridan, was married in Rochester, New York. He and a brother, and their families, came west in 1834, locating near Commerce, later called Nauvoo, in Hancock county, Illinois, and while there they mingled with the Mormons, who lived there at that time, and found them to be very good neighbors.

John S. Sheridan was born near Nauvoo, Hancock county, Illinois, on the 19th of December, 1852, being a son of John and Jane (Middleton) Sheridan. John Sheridan was born in 1820, married in 1850, and died in February, 1853. Jane, his wife, was born in Pennsylvania in 1826 and died in November, 1894. From their childhood both were residents of Illinois. The subject of this sketch received his early educational training in the public schools of Illinois, Fort Madison Academy and at Notre Dame, read law in Keokuk, Iowa, and was admitted to the bar of that state in 1881. He continued to there maintain his residence until August, 1882, when he came to Columbia, Brown county, South Dakota, where he established himself in the lumber business about the time of the completion of the line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad through the place. He continued to be identified with this line of enterprise until 1886, and then located on his present fine farm, three and one-half miles north of Columbia. He is now the owner of a well-improved landed estate of eight hundred and eighty acres, nearly all being in the home farm, and of this four hundred and fifty acres are devoted to the raising of grain.

Characteristics of the Sheridan family are moderate thrift, industry and temperate habits, and today the subject's motto, in reference to his farming operations, is not quantity nor extent, but method and thoroughness and all stock the equal of the best. The subject is known as a man of marked public spirit and has taken a deep interest in local affairs, while he has long been prominent in the councils of the Populist party in the state, though being independent in his views and ever manifesting the courage of his convictions. On the Populist ticket he was elected to membership on the board of county commissioners in 1898, and served in this capacity for four years, proving a most loyal and able public official. During the period of his service the county court house and jail were erected. He has been a delegate to the various conventions of his party and ever shown a deep interest in its cause. In religion the subject is a Roman Catholic, while fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In his native town of Nauvoo, Illinois, on the 26th of September, 1883, Mr. Sheridan was united in marriage to Miss Eunice Golden, who was there born and reared, and they are the parents of four children, all of whom are still at home, namely: Genevieve R., Kathleen E., John Leo and Golden Thomas. The Golden family were pioneers of Hancock county, Illinois.

WILLARD H. HUFF, one of the pioneers of Lincoln county, South Dakota, also one of its successful farmers and representative citizens, is a native of New York, and the son of Gabriel and Sarah Huff, who were born in Canada. When about twenty-one and twenty years of age, respectively, they came to New York. W. H. Huff was born in Orleans county, New York, in 1852. When a year old he moved with his parents to Green Lake county, Wisconsin, and subsequently to Dover, Minnesota, where his father purchased a half section of land, which he improved, and on which he has lived and prospered to the present time. In 1873 he came to Lincoln county, South Dakota, and entered a quarter section of land and after proving up on the same, returned to Minnesota, where he is now living a life of retirement, having reached the age of seventy-three years. Mrs. Huff, who died in 1897, bore her husband four children: Sarah, who died in 1896; Willard H., whose name introduces this sketch; Ida, living in Minnesota, and George, who lives with his father and runs the old family homestead in Minnesota.

Willard H. Huff was reared amid the rugged duties of the farm, attended of winter seasons, during his minority, the district schools of Minnesota and remained with his father until attaining his majority. Leaving home at the age of twenty-one, he came to Lincoln county, South Dakota, and took up one hundred and sixty acres of land on section 18, Lynn township, which he at once proceeded to improve and which, through his industry and persevering efforts, has been converted into one of the best and most valuable farms in the locality in which it is situated. Mr. Huff came west with but a meager capital, the sum total of his available cash upon his arrival amounting to only five dollars, but with an energy born of a determination to succeed, he addressed himself to the task of making a home, met and successfully overcame the many vicissitudes and hardships incident to pioneer life and in due time rose superior to every obstacle in his way until acquiring the handsome competency now in his possession. He is an up-to-date farmer, familiar with every detail of agricultural science, raises good crops according to the most approved methods and has expended considerable of his means very judiciously in improvements, among which are a comfortable and commodious residence, good barns and outbuildings and many other evidences to prove his place the home of a man of modern ideas and progressive tendencies. In 1901 Mr. Huff increased his realty by the purchase of an additional quarter section, making him at this time the owner of four hundred acres of fine land, admirably situated in one of the richest agricultural districts of the country, and which, in all that constitutes good farm land and pastorage, is not excelled by any like number of acres in the township.

In politics Mr. Huff is a Republican and for a number of years past he has been one of the leaders of his party in Lincoln county. He served twelve years as supervisor and in 1903 was elected to the lower house of the state legislature, in which body he has already made a creditable record, proving an able and judicious lawmaker, and by his earnest desire to benefit his constituents and the state at large winning the good will of the people of the county, irrespective of political ties.

Mr. Huff, in 1884, was united in marriage with Miss Alice McKillip, of Naperville, Illinois, the union being without issue. Mrs. Huff died on the 20th of September, 1903. Mr. Huff is public-spirited in all the term implies and has encouraged every enterprise having for its object the material advancement of the community and the good of his fellow men, and his influence has always been on the right side of every moral issue.

GEORGE J. CHASE, who is one of the representative farmers and stock growers of Brown county, was born in Steuben county, New York, on the 5th of August, 1853, and is a son of Ezra and Adelaide C. Chase, the former of whom is deceased, while the latter is still living and makes his home in Michigan. As a child the subject accompanied his parents on their removal to Wisconsin, his father engaging in the lumbering business near Palmyra and later at Oshkosh, where he took up his residence in 1862, so that the son George early became familiar with the strenuous life in the lumber woods, while his educational privileges were confined to a somewhat irregular attendance in the common schools. Mr. Chase remained in Wisconsin until 1882, when he came to Columbia, South Dakota, to join his uncle, General Charles B. Peck, who was one of the first to take actively and energetically in hand the work of building up the town, where he erected both the Grand Hotel and the State Bank building, besides having other important interests, including a large tract of land in the county and the best residence in the new town. He remained here about five years and did much for the upbuilding and prosperity of the village and county, being a man of much enterprise and executive ability. He now resides in Houston, Texas, being general manager of the Texas Car Association. He served four years during the war of the Rebellion and after the war took an active interest in political affairs. While a resident of Columbia he served as quartermaster general on the staff of Governor Pierce. He became identified with railroad building when a young man. He was general manager of the Grand Trunk Railroad at Port Huron, Michigan, before coming to South Dakota and was general manager of the Atlantic & Danville Railroad at Portsmouth, Virginia. Upon coming to South Dakota he constructed the line from Ordway to Columbia, at an outlay of eleven thousand dollars. The failure of the new town, which has since regained its prestige and greatly augmented it, changed all his plans and he finally withdrew from the field. He donated the lots for the erection of the county buildings in Columbia, which was then looked upon as the eventual county seat, and his name is one which well merits a place of honor in this history. For three years the subject took charge of his uncle's farming interests here and after the removal of the latter was placed in charge of all his local interests until the same were closed out. Mr. Chase came to his present farm, two and one-half miles north of Columbia, in March, 1885, and here he now owns an entire section of valuable land, which is devoted to the raising of grain and live stock, both departments of the enterprise being made successful through his able management. Three hundred acres are given over to the raising of grain, and upon the farm may be always found a fine herd of shorthorn cattle, together with sheep, swine and good horses.

Mr. Chase gives a staunch allegiance to the Republican party, and has frequently served as delegate to state and county conventions, though he has never been personally ambitious for public office of any description. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In Clintonville, Wisconsin, in 1878, Mr. Chase was united in marriage to Miss Edith Phen, who was summoned into eternal rest on December 26, 1894. She is survived by her two sons, Percy, who is in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, and Charles B., who remains with his father on the home farm. On the 9th of December, 1895, Mr. Chase married his present wife, whose maiden name was Carrie L. Russell. She was born and reared in Wisconsin and was a successful and popular teacher in the public schools prior to her marriage. Of this union has been born one son, Ezra Clifford.

EMIL KREBER, a leading farmer and representative citizen of Bon Homme county, is a native of Alsace-Lorraine, Germany, and was born on November 21, 1869, being one of twelve children, whose parents were John and Magdalene (Schindele) Kreber. These parents immigrated to the United States in 1878 and settled in Iowa, where the father purchased land and engaged in agriculture, in connection with which he also carried on blacksmithing, having learned the trade in his native country. Mr. Kreber did not live long to enjoy the advantages and privileges he found in the new world, as he died about three and a half years after moving to Iowa. His widow survives and at this time makes her home in Plymouth county, Iowa, in which city she is well known and has a large circle of friends.

Emil Kreber was about nine years old when he came to America and until the age of twenty-one he lived at home, assisting with the work of the farm and at intervals attending the public schools. In 1891 he came to Bon Homme county, South Dakota, and, purchasing one hundred and sixty acres of land in section 12, Springfield township, addressed himself to the task of developing a farm and establishing a home, in both of which respects he has been remarkably successful, as is attested by his present high standing as an agriculturist and stock raiser and the commanding position he occupies in business circles and in the domain of citizenship. In the summer of 1899 Mr. Kreber purchased an additional quarter section of land in Springfield township, which he has since developed and otherwise improved, and his farm of three hundred and twenty acres is now considered one of the finest and most attractive country homes in the county of Bon Homme. He raises all the grain crops grown in this part of the state, but makes hay a specialty, devoting a great deal of attention to timothy and clover, besides curing every year many tons of native grass, which he puts up for his live stock. As a raiser of fine cattle and hogs he has achieved enviable repute and he stands today among the leaders of the industry in Bon Homme county, his domestic animals of all kinds being of superior breeds and of as high grades as any in the southeastern part of the state. In addition to agriculture and stock raising Mr. Kreber was engaged for some time in the mercantile business at Tyndall and Springfield. He conducted his stores from the farm, however, in order to give personal attention to all of his affairs, but after a few years disposed of his mercantile establishments, the better to look after the large and steadily growing agricultural and livestock interests which he now commands.

Mr. Kreber takes a keen and intelligent interest in politics and public affairs and for a number of years he has been considered one of the Democratic leaders in Bon Homme county, being a judicious adviser in the councils of his party, an influential worker and a successful campaigner. While ready at all times to work for the success of the party and its candidates, he is not an aspirant for office, preferring to labor for others rather than accept public honors at the hands of his fellow citizens. He is well informed on the leading questions of the day, his opinions have weight among his friends and associates and in many respects he may be considered a leader of thought in his community.

Mr. Kreber was married in Bon Homme county, in 1896, to Miss Mary Guckeisen, who has borne him four children, Carrie, George, Julia and Napoleon. Mr. and Mrs. Kreber are Catholics in religion and staunch and loyal supporters of the Holy Mother church. They enjoy high social position, are popular with a large number of friends and give their influence to all good work and charitable enterprises and to whatever makes for the material and moral welfare of the neighborhood in which they live.

ELIAS S. BECK.—Among the old and well-known families of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, is the one of which the subject of this review is an honorable representative. David Beck, grandfather of Elias S., was one of the earliest settlers of the above county and spent the greater part of his life there, dying a number of years ago at the ripe old age of ninety-four. His wife, Nancy Groff, whose ancestors were also among the first pioneers of Lancaster, departed this life on the old Beck homestead, after bearing her husband six children, whose names were as follows: Martin, David, Abraham, Levi, Eliza and Anna, the majority of whom have joined their ancestors in the life beyond death's mystic stream.

Martin, the oldest of these children, was born and reared in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, and there spent about thirty-four years of his life, as a miller; he also followed the same vocation for six years in the county of Berks, after which he went to Chester, where he engaged in dairy farming for a period of two years, returning to his native county at the expiration of that time and dying in the latter at the age of sixty-seven. When a young man Martin Beck married Miss Rebecca Stone, whose father, David Stone, was an early resident of Lancaster county, also a large land owner and successful farmer, and a man of local prominence. He served a number of years as county commissioner, took an active interest in public affairs and was a politician of considerable note, having been one of the early Whig leaders in the township of his residence. Mr. Stone was one of a committee to secure signatures to a petition to the Pennsylvania legislature for free schools in that state and one of the principal reasons that gave strength to the petition was that so many that signed it had to make their mark. Mr. Stone was the father of seven children: Jacob, for many years a prominent real-estate dealer and business man of Chicago; Elias, a farmer who departed this life in Ohio; Daniel, formerly of Ohio, now a resident of Kansas; Mrs. Rebecca Beck; Mrs. Barbara Reiter; Mrs. Daniel Breniser and Mrs. Samuel Rettew.

Martin and Rebecca Beck reared a family of six children, the oldest of whom was Mary Emma, whose death occurred in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, in the year 1902; Lavina R., the second, is still living in that county, and the third in order of birth is Elias S., whose name appears at the beginning of this article; Ambrose is a successful contractor and builder, of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Alice is living in the county of Lancaster, and Jacob, the youngest of the number, is in the mercantile business at Parker, South Dakota.

Elias Stone Beck was born in West Earl township, Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, on September 6, 1852. His mother died when he was quite young, which event, with other discouraging circumstances, threw him upon his own resources at an early age, consequently his educational advantages were considerably limited, the greater part of his knowledge of books having been obtained by devoting his spare time to study, both at home and in his father's mill, where he began working as soon as old enough to be of any service. After assisting his father until reaching his majority he took a course in the Chester Valley Academy at Downingtown, Pennsylvania, after which he left home and went to Union county, Pennsylvania, where he spent the ensuing five years, teaching school of winter seasons and devoting the summer time to agricultural pursuits. In the month of December, 1877, he was married, in the above county, to Miss Adelia Klapp, whose parents, Peter and Catherine Klapp, were early pioneers of their county and who raised a family of twelve children, Adelia being the eleventh in their order. Thereafter he located in the county of Northumberland, where he taught two years, at the end of which time he sold out and came to Lincoln county, South Dakota, settling in Dayton township on the southeast quarter of section 5, which land he homesteaded, securing a patent from the United States government. Mr. Beck improved his place by erecting substantial buildings, planting orchards and other trees, and now has one of the best cultivated, as well as one of the most valuable farms of its area in the township, besides being quite extensively interested in stock raising, which in connection with agriculture he has prosecuted with a large measure of success ever since coming to Dakota.

Mr. Beck has been honored with a number of public positions of trust, having been a member of the school board for a number of years, also justice of the peace, besides serving in 1898 as clerk of the circuit and county courts of Lincoln county, which position he held for a period of four years, his son succeeding him. He has devoted much of his time and attention to the duties of these and other local offices, also manifests a lively interest in whatever concerns the material advancement of his township and county, and as a zealous supporter of the Republican party, makes his influence felt in the political circles of this part of the state. An enthusiastic friend of education, he has done much to arouse and keep alive a commendable interest in behalf of the public schools, and for a period of twenty years he devoted his attention largely to teaching, during which time he earned the reputation of being one of the most capable and popular instructors in Lincoln county.

The family of Mr. and Mrs. Beck consists of nine children, the oldest being Martin Harrison, who at this time fills the responsible post of assistant excursion agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, with headquarters at Arnold's Park, Iowa; he is also an expert telegrapher and had charge of the important office of city ticket agent of Sioux City, Iowa, on the above line before being promoted to the position he now so ably holds; his wife was formerly Miss Alma Donaldson, and he has a pleasant home in the city where he is located. Ambrose Brady, the second son, is a young man of intelligence, filling, at the present time, the position of clerk of the Lincoln county courts; Warren Elsworth, the next in order of birth, is in the railway service, being operator and assistant agent at Yankton; Estella L., a graduate of the Lincoln county public schools and a young lady of culture and wide intelligence, is still a member of the home circle, as are also the rest of the children, whose names are Ernest S., Mary Ella, William K., David R. and Charles Robert.

JOHN SCHERER was born January 23, 1836, in Hesse Darmstadt, Germany, of which province his parents, John and Catherine (Yager) Scherer, were also natives. His father devoted the greater part of his life to various kinds of public work and was a man of industry and thrift. These parents died a number of years ago in the land of their birth, leaving six children whose names are as follows: John, of this review, Lizzie, Andrew, Mary, Kate and Carl, of whom the subject and Andrew came to America, the others remaining in their native country.

John Scherer attended school in Hesse Darmstadt during his youth and remained at home until eighteen years of age. He then decided to go to America, being fully convinced that he could do better in the great country beyond the sea than in his own land, where privileges were few and the opportunities for rising in the world limited. In due time he landed at New York and from that city proceeded as far west as Henry county, Iowa, where he spent the ensuing year and a half as a farm laborer, after which he went to the southern part of the state, where he remained one year. At the expiration of that time he went to Scott county, Iowa, and engaged in farming for himself until 1866, when he came to Dakota territory, locating east of Yankton, where he entered a quarter section of land which he improved and on which he lived during the three years following. In 1869 he disposed of his real estate in Yankton county and moved to the county of Bon Homme, where he has since resided, purchasing the meanwhile a valuable tract of land in Tabor township, which under his efficient labors has been brought to a high state of cultivation and otherwise improved, being one of the most productive farms and desirable homes of the locality in which it is situated.

Mr. Scherer is a progressive farmer and his influence has done much to promote the agricultural interests in the township of his residence. He has also achieved considerable reputation in the matter of live stock, which he now makes his chief business, paying special attention to horses, cattle and hogs, in the breeding and raising of which his success has been encouraging and his income liberal. He came west in an early day, has kept pace with the growth and development of the country, and contributed of his labor and influence to introduce civilization into Bon Homme county and to bring about results that are now obtained in this highly favored part of South Dakota. In politics he votes for the best qualified candidates regardless of the party to which they belong, and while manifesting a lively interest in public affairs and always standing for good government, he has never departed from his business to seek office or aspire to leadership.

Mr. Scherer, in 1862, married Miss Agnes Congleton, of Butler county, Pennsylvania, who bore him nine children, namely: William, a lumberman living in Dunwoody county, Virginia; Adelia, wife of George Bittler, a farmer of Bon Homme county; Fred, who is engaged in farming and stock raising in Charles Mix county, this state; Mary, now Mrs. Wade Glenn, of Springfield, South Dakota; John a resident of Petersburg, Virginia, and a cabinetmaker by trade; George, a farmer and stock dealer, living in Charles Mix county, South Dakota; Maggie, a member of the home circle; Lee, who died in the year 1902, and Charles, who assists his father in running the farm. The mother of these children departed this life in 1885, since which time Mr. Scherer has kept up his home with the aid of his children, the meanwhile providing well for those leaving the parental roof to start in life for themselves.

ALBERT J. KUHN is a native of Ohio, born in the city of Mansfield, on April 6, 1856. His parents, Joseph and Sarah (Dickinson) Kuhns, were also born and reared in the Buckeye state, and lived in the county of Richland until the year of the subject's birth, when they removed to Elkhart county, Indiana, settling in the woods near the town of Goshen, where in due time the father cleared and developed a small farm. Mr. Kuhns was one of the pioneers of Elkhart county and experienced many of the hardships incident to early life in the back woods, having been poor in this world's goods, but industrious and energetic. He improved forty acres of land and after living on the same until 1862, sold out and migrated to Black Hawk county, Iowa, where he purchased land and followed the pursuit of agriculture during the twelve succeeding years, removing at the end of that time to Grundy county, in the same state. Mr. Kuhns bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in the latter county, made many improvements on the same, but in 1880 disposed of his interests there and came to Lincoln county, South Dakota, settling in Lynn township, where he purchased a quarter section of land, on which he lived until the death of his wife, in June, 1895, since which time he has made his home with his children. Joseph and Sarah Kuhns reared a family of seven children, namely:

Esmeldora, who died in 1902; Arminda, wife of F. A. Ballou; Mrs. Huldah Bothwell; Esther, who married J. W. Wood; Albert J., of this review; Charles, and Artemissa, the latter the wife of J. Elliott.

Albert J. Kuhns was an infant when his parents moved to Indiana, and he spent his early life on the little farm in that state. When about six years old he was taken to Iowa, where he grew to maturity and received his educational training in the district schools, remaining with his parents as long as they lived in that state and bearing his share in cultivating the farm and contributing to the general support of the family. In 1882 he came to South Dakota and the same year bought a farm of one hundred and sixty acres in Lincoln county, which he improved and which, under his energetic labors and successful management, has been converted into one of the best and most valuable farms in the township of Lynn. He still lives on this place and in addition thereto owns a quarter section of fine land in Davison county, besides having large mining interests in Wyoming, where he spent two years prospecting and locating valuable mineral property.

Mr. Kuhns took an active part in organizing the Worthing Elevator Company at Worthing, and served eleven years as president of the same, during which time he realized handsome returns from the enterprise, as it proved a very successful and profitable undertaking. He owns an interest in the Enterprise, one of the leading newspapers of Lincoln county, published at Worthing, and for several years was a member of the municipal board of that town, also a member of the school board, having been identified with the latter body ever since its organization.

Mr. Kuhns is one of the leading Republicans of Lincoln county, and has taken a prominent part, not only in local affairs, but in state politics as well. From 1891 to 1893 inclusive he was clerk of the lower house and in 1895 was chosen as representative, discharging the duties of the office in an able and satisfactory manner and proving under all circumstances faithful to his party and loyal to the best interests of the public.

He was again, in 1897, elected to represent his county in the legislature. He is a charter member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows lodge at Worthing, and has held nearly every position within the power of the organization to bestow and is also identified with the insurance society known as Woodmen of the World, which holds its meetings at the same place.

Mr. Kuhns spent about two years in Colorado and in January, 1882, was married at Grundy Center, Iowa, to Miss Bell Robinson, a native of Mt. Carrol, Illinois, and for a number of years a successful teacher in the public schools. To Mr. and Mrs. Kuhns eight children have been born, viz: Nellie, a student of Canton College, South Dakota; Frank, who was educated at St. Augustine College, served as postmaster of the lower house of the legislature in 1902-3, and is now manager of the home farm; the other members of the family are Joseph, Edith, Mae, Charles, Lloyd and Forrest, all at home. Mr. Kuhns is a friend of education and has given his children every advantage in this direction obtainable, besides taking a prominent part in promoting the efficiency of the schools of Worthing and Lincoln county. He is a man of strong mentality, decided in his purposes, determined in carrying out any undertaking to which he addresses himself, and it is a compliment worthily bestowed to class him with the intelligent, broad-minded and progressive citizens of the state in which he has chosen his permanent place of abode.

PATRICK HEALEY comes of stanch Irish lineage on the paternal side, while the maternal ancestry was of Scottish extraction. He was born in the province of Ontario, Cornwall, Canada, in the year 1838, being a son of Edward and Mary (McDougall) Healey, of whose nine children two are living at the present time. When our subject was a mere child his father met his death in a blizzard on the St. Lawrence river, and this threw the care of the family upon the shoulders of the widowed mother, who survived him by many years, her death occurring in 1862, at the age of sixty years. When the subject of this review was a lad of ten years his mother removed with her children to the city of Chicago, Illinois, which was at that time scarcely more than a village, and as each of the boys necessarily found it his duty to contribute to the support of the family, it is needless to say that Patrick received rather limited educational advantages in his youth. In 1861, when the integrity of the Union was thrown into jeopardy by armed rebellion, he showed his intrinsic loyalty by tendering his services in its defense, enlisting as a private in Company K, Twenty-third Illinois Volunteer Infantry, which proceeded to Missouri, our subject being taken prisoner by the Confederate forces near Lexington, that state. He was later released upon parole, upon the expiration of which he re-enlisted, becoming a member of Company K, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, the command going into the Shenandoah valley of Virginia, where it served under General Sigel and General Sheridan. In 1864 the regiment was sent to Richmond, Virginia, the Confederate capital, and Mr. Healey was still in active service at the time of Lee's surrender. He received his honorable discharge in July, 1865, having served during practically the entire period of the war and having taken part in many spirited engagements, including some of the most notable battles incident to the progress of the great fratricidal conflict. He was discharged in Richmond and then returned to Illinois. There, in 1869, was solemnized his marriage to Miss Bridget Lamb, who was born in County Mayo, Ireland, and of this union have been born six children, all of whom are living, namely: John, Edward, Joseph, Maggie, Julia and Mamie.

In 1881 Mr. Healey came to Brule county, where he took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, and on the same he has ever since resided, having developed the farm into one of the valuable properties of the county and being held in high esteem in the community in which he has so long made his home. In politics he is a staunch Republican and his religious faith is that of the Catholic church, of which both he and his wife are members, while fraternally he is a comrade of Kinzie Post, No. 34, Grand Army of the Republic, at Chamberlain, which is his postoffice address, his farm being located one mile distant.

THOMAS J. GRIER.—The vast mineral wealth in the Black Hills of South Dakota has made that region noted far and wide, and the great mining industry which has here been prosecuted with such signal success has given the locality a representation second to that of no other mining district in the world. The foundation of this reputation is due to the extensive and successful operations of the celebrated Homestake Mining Company, which for many years has poured forth its stream of riches with the regularity of a never-failing spring, the supply of gold at this time being apparently as inexhaustible as when the vast treasure was first discovered. The business management of the Homestake, which has for more than a generation never failed to declare a liberal dividend, creates admiration among miners and mining experts everywhere and leads to the belief that those having the undertaking in hand possess not only wide experience in their special lines of endeavor, but are also men of intelligence and mature practical judgment. The man who has been responsible for the uniform advancement and to whom more than to any other is due the high reputation and wide prestige the mine enjoys is Thomas J. Grier, the present efficient superintendent, a man not only thoroughly familiar with every detail of the mining industry, but the possessor of business tact and executive ability of a high order, as his nearly twenty-eight years of successful management abundantly attest.

Thomas Johnston Grier is a native of Canada and dates his birth from May 18, 1850, having first seen the light of day at Pakenham, in the province of Ontario. His father, James Grier, born and reared in Ireland, and for many years a successful mechanic and manufacturer of carriages in the town of Iroquois, Ontario, was a man of much more than ordinary natural and acquired intelligence and was to a large degree a moulder of opinion in his community and a leader in its public affairs. He possessed a strong character and spotless integrity, and for a period of twenty-six years served as postmaster of Iroquois, during which time he earned the reputation of an able, faithful and obliging official. His wife, who before her marriage bore the name of Eliza Patterson, was of Canadian birth and, like him, spent nearly all her life in the province of Ontario. Thomas Johnston Grier spent his childhood and youthful years in Iroquois and after completing the lower branches of study in the schools of that town, finished his education by taking a high-school course. His first practical experience was as a clerk under his father in the postoffice, and while holding this position he devoted his leisure time to the study of telegraphy, subsequently resigning his place to enter the employ of a telegraph company in the city of Montreal. After remaining some time in that place, and becoming an experienced operator, he took employment in the Western Union Company's office at Corinne, Utah, and later rose to the position of chief operator with that company at Salt Lake City. Severing his connection with the telegraph service, Mr. Grier, in 1878, entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead, Dakota territory, as head bookkeeper, the duties of which position he discharged in an eminently satisfactory manner until 1884, when he was promoted to the superintendency of the company's mines in the Black Hills, which responsible position he has since held. The career of Mr. Grier since taking charge of the position he now so ably fills has been a distinguished one, as the marked ability displayed in the management of such a large and important enterprise sufficiently attests. His superior judgment is apparent in the manner in which he has conducted the affairs of the company, from the selection of the heads of the various departments down to the most minute detail of the business. He has been exceedingly critical in choosing men for the various posts, selecting and installing only those capable of performing successfully the duties assigned to them, being quick to recognize ability, prompt to reward the same, and making merit alone the stepping stone to advancement. At times he has had charge of as high as twenty-five hundred workmen, between whom and himself the most amiable relations always existed, and this too at a period when the industrial world was in a state of almost constant agitation, growing out of a failure of employer and employe to understand and appreciate the mutual relations of their respective interests.

T. J. Lier

In addition to his official connection with the Homestake Mining Company, Mr. Grier is identified with various other business enterprises, being president of the First National Bank of Lead City, and vice-president of the First National at Deadwood. He is an able and far-seeing financier, with a practical and comprehensive knowledge of all questions relating to banking, and to his correct business methods and safe, conservative management the monetary institutions with which he is connected are indebted for a large measure of their prosperity and for the high reputation they now sustain among the leading banks of South Dakota. Mr. Grier is greatly interested in the growth and development of his adopted state, and to the extent of his ability encourages every means to these ends. He is a man of strong intellectuality, broad human sympathies, and imbued with fine sensibilities and clearly defined principles, has made his presence felt wherever his lot has been cast and in whatever capacity his abilities have been exercised.

Mr. Grier is an active member of the Masonic order and the Episcopal church represents his religious creed. He was married on August 8, 1896, to Miss Mary Jane Palethorpe, of Glasgow, Scotland, and the fruits of which union are four children, Thomas Johnston, Jr., Evangeline Victoria, Lisgar Patterson and Ormonde Palethorpe.

HENRY H. HEATH is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born on the homestead farm, in McHenry county, on the 18th of April, 1846, and being a son of Watson R. and Mary (Thompson) Heath, of whose eight children four are yet living, the subject having been the seventh in order of birth. Back to that cradle of much of our national history, the Old Dominion state, must we turn in tracing the genealogy of Mr. Heath in the agnatic line. The original American progenitors emigrated hither from England and took up their abode in Virginia prior to the war of the Revolution, the name becoming one of prominence in that famous old commonwealth, while members of the family were active participants in both the war for independence and that of 1812. The name has ever stood for loyalty and unqualified patriotism, and in the connection it may be consistently noted that four older brothers were in the Union army of 1861-5, Wesley A. being the elder. The latter also did effective service in the Indian warfare in the great northwest in the early days, having been an adjutant of the Sixth Iowa Cavalry, and aide on the staff of General Sully in his last expedition through Dakota and having participated in the battle of the Bad Lands and in numerous other engagements with the wily aborigines.

The subject was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, and after completing the curriculum of the district schools of his native county, he took a three-years course in the high school at Belvidere, Illinois. He then entered Eastman's Commercial College, in the city of Chicago, where he completed a thorough business course. In 1869 Mr. Heath went to California, where he remained about one year, and in 1871 he removed to western Iowa, where he was successfully engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1882, when he disposed of his interests in that state and came to Sanborn county, South Dakota, taking up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in Afton township, and here continuing to give his time and attention to the great basic art of agriculture, while he added to his landed estate from time to time until he became the owner of a finely improved farm of three hundred and twenty acres, which he sold in October, 1902. He continued to reside on this homestead until the spring of 1903, when he removed to the village of Artesian, where he established himself in the real-estate business, having the best of facilities and having already built up a large and profitable business, his success being due to his energy and good judgment and to the fact that he commands unqualified popular confidence and esteem.

Mr. Heath has taken an active part in political affairs from the time of coming to the county, and is known as a public-spirited citizen and as a man of broad intellectual grasp. In the autumn of 1898 he was elected to represent his district in the state legislature, making an enviable record and being chosen as his own successor in the election of 1900. He was assigned to membership on a number of important committees and was a valuable working member of the house during the two terms of service. He was concerned in the organization of Sanborn county, and has been prominent in its public and civic life during the intervening years, while he has been a delegate to the various conventions of his party in the county and state. Fraternally he is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In Lawrence, Illinois, on the 30th of October, 1884, Mr. Heath was united in marriage to Miss Mina E. Anderson, who was born and reared in Lawrence, being a daughter of J. Lee and Lydia (Thompson) Anderson, the former of whom was a bee man by vocation. Mr. and Mrs. Heath have two children, namely: Harrie H., who was born on the 31st of May, 1889, and Helen, who was born on the 14th of September, 1899.

GEORGE C. BRIGGS, who is presiding with marked ability and distinction as judge of the court of Hand county, is a native of the old Granite state, having been born in Hinsdale, Cheshire county, New Hampshire, on the 15th of June, 1857, and being a son of Erastus and Sylvia (Chamberlain) Briggs, both representatives of old and honored families of New England, where was cradled so much of our national history. The father of the subject was a clergyman of the Baptist church, and was born in Michigan, whither his parents emigrated from New England, while his devoted wife was a native of New Hampshire.

Judge Briggs received his elementary education in the common schools of Vermont, and later continued his studies in Powers Institute, at Bernardston, Massachusetts, and the Kimball Union Academy, at Meriden, New Hampshire, in which latter institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1877. He then began reading law in the office of his uncle, Benjamin F. Briggs, one of the leading members of the bar of the city of Boston, and completed his technical studies under the preceptorship of Hosea W. Brigham, of Whitingham, Vermont, being duly admitted to the bar of the old Green Mountain state in the year 1880. He was thereafter engaged in the practice of his profession at Whitingham, that state, for one year, and in August, 1883, he removed to Cropsey, McLean county, Illinois, where he was engaged in teaching in the public schools until April, 1884, when he came to Miller, South Dakota, where he has ever since been identified with the active work of his profession. He is thoroughly grounded in the science of jurisprudence and has marked facility in the proper application of his knowledge in the handling of cases coming before him. The Judge is a man of positive character and has never lacked the courage of his convictions, while his personality is such as to command to him the respect of even those who differ with him or even resent his adjudications of litigations in which they are involved. In politics he is a stalwart advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party and has ever taken an active interest in public affairs. In 1898 he was elected county judge, and was chosen as his own successor in 1900 and again in 1902, so that he is now serving his third consecutive term on the bench, a fact which indicates the proper estimate placed upon his services. He also served for several years as justice of the peace and held other local offices. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the Baptist church, and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 29th of September, 1886, Judge Briggs was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude S. Sherman, who was born and reared in Dover, Windham county, Vermont, being a daughter of Edwin F. and Sophia (Menifield) Sherman.

MORGAN E. JONES, one of the honored pioneers of Cambria township, Brown county, is a native of Wales, though he has passed practically his entire life in the United States. He was born on the 5th of August, 1841, being a son of Evan and Mary (Jones) Jones, who immigrated to America when he was two years of age, locating in La Crosse county, Wisconsin, where his father engaged in agricultural pursuits, being one of the pioneers of the Badger state, where both he and his noble wife passed the remainder of their lives. They became the parents of five children, of whom four are living at the present time.

The subject of this sketch was reared to maturity on the homestead farm, having the experience common to the farmer boys of that pioneer epoch in Wisconsin and early beginning to aid in the work of clearing the land and assist in its cultivation, while his educational advantages were such as were afforded in the common schools of the locality and period. He continued to reside on the old homestead for more than thirty years, having become the owner of the property, and in 1881 he disposed of his interests there and came to Brown county, South Dakota, arriving here in the spring of that year and taking up a homestead claim in section 33, Cambria township, which is his present farm. He has made the best of improvements on his place and the same is one of the model farms of the county. He also bought a relinquishment on a tree claim, which he has within the past few years given to his son Frank, while he later bought another quarter section, in the same township, which he presented to his son John, so that he is favored in having the members of his family in close proximity to the old homestead, since his two married daughters also are located not far distant.

Mr. Jones was reared in the faith of the Republican party and gave his support to the same until the presidential campaign of 1896, when he showed the courage of his convictions and voted for Bryan for president. He has served for many years as a member of the school board of his district, and has been a member of the board of township trustees from practically the time of its organization until the present, a fact which indicates the high estimation in which he is held in the community. He was reared in the Congregational church, but he and his wife are now members of the Welsh Calvinistic Methodist church at Plana.

In La Crosse county, Wisconsin, on the 25th of December, 1866, Mr. Jones was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Protheroe, who likewise was born in Wales, whence she accompanied her parents to America in early childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Jones have six children namely: Abbie, who is the wife of Earl B. Holmes, a successful farmer in this township; Frank, who married Miss Maggie Jones, is engaged in farming in the same township, as is also John, who married Anna Owens; Morgan remains on the homestead farm; Mary Elizabeth is the wife of Edward L. William, of this township; and Charles remains beneath the parental roof.

ROBERT D. ROBERTS, a native of Wales, was born on April 24, 1840, but when a child of about six or seven years of age was brought to the United States and grew to maturity in Columbia county, Wisconsin. He attended the public schools at intervals during his minority, was reared on a farm and early profited by the wholesome discipline and rugged usages of outdoor labor, such a mode of living being conducive to strong physical growth, and the symmetrical development of mental and moral attributes. Inheriting a natural liking for agriculture, he decided to devote his life to the tilling of the soil, accordingly he began the same on starting out to make his own way, and followed it in Wisconsin until the year 1879. Disposing of his interests in the above state at that time, Mr. Roberts changed his abode to Castleton, North Dakota, but after spending the ensuing three years there, came to Brown county, South Dakota, and in 1882 took up a pre-emption claim of three hundred and twenty acres, near the site of Plana, which he still owns. Three years later he moved to his present home, four miles north of the town, where he owns a fine tract of eight hundred acres, the greater part under a high state of cultivation, and on which are to be seen some of the best improvements in the county. As a farmer Mr. Roberts is easily the peer of any of his fellow citizens thus engaged, being practical in his work and management, progressive in the matter of cultivation and making a close and careful study of agricultural science. His specialty is grain, in the raising of which he has achieved an enviable reputation. He devotes from seven hundred to eight hundred acres of his land to wheat alone, and harvests as high as nine thousand five hundred bushels per year, besides raising large quantities of oats, corn and vegetables, for all of which he receives good prices. He is also largely interested in live stock, which industry he prosecutes with encouraging financial results, devoting especial attention to fine graded cattle, in addition to which he breeds and raises a large number of horses and hogs, realizing from his animals a handsome and steadily increasing income. Mr. Roberts possesses sound judgment and fine business ability and understands how to take advantage of circumstances and to mold conditions to suit his purposes. Energetic and far-seeing, he does things on a large scale and is not satisfied with any but the best results. His labors have been wisely directed, his affairs economically administered, and the success with which his efforts have been crowned bear evidence to his resourcefulness and masterly management, and show him to be a man of much more than ordinary acumen and forethought. A staunch, uncompromising Republican and an influential party worker, Mr. Roberts has never entered the domain of politics as an aspirant for office, having no time to spare from his business affairs to seek public honors at the hands of his fellow citizens. He has been a delegate to a number of conventions, however, and labors earnestly for the success of his party's candidates, but is by no means narrow in his views, being liberal in discussing the issues of the day, although firm and unyielding in the support of what he considers right and for the best interests of the people. As a citizen he is broad-minded and intelligent, and with commendable public-spirit, encourages all enterprises for the advancement of his adopted state, discharging his every duty in an unselfish and praiseworthy manner, and making his life conform as nearly as possible to the progressive, American spirit of the times.

Mr. Roberts married, in Wisconsin, Miss Catherine Rowlands, whose family, like his own, came from Wales, and settled in Columbia county, that state, a number of years ago. After a happy wedded experience of eight years' duration, Mrs. Roberts departed this life in 1889, leaving two sons, John and Rees, both at home. The former, after completing the public-school course, was graduated in 1903 from the Archibald Business College, and at this time assists his father in the latter's business affairs, being a young man of intelligence, an accomplished accountant and well calculated to manage the important interests confided to him. The younger son is also well educated and, possessing native ability of a high order and an aptitude for business, will no doubt develop into a useful man and a praiseworthy citizen, an honor to his family and a credit to the community in which he was born and reared.

HON. DANIEL D. JONES, a native of Fox Lake, Wisconsin, was born March 15, 1862, and at the age of twenty years came to Brown county, South Dakota, with the growth and development of which he has since been very actively identified. Immediately following his arrival he bought a relinquishment near the site of Plana, later took up the quarter section on which the town stands and in 1886, when the Great Northern Railroad was being constructed through this part of the country, platted the village and offered the lots for sale. With an abiding faith in the growth and ultimate importance of the village as a trading point and favorable place of residence, he erected a store building which he stocked with a miscellaneous assortment of merchandise and at once embarked in the goods business. The venture proved highly satisfactory, for the rapid growth of the town and adjacent country assured him a large and continuously increasing patronage and within a comparatively brief period his trade had so grown in magnitude and importance that he found himself on the high road to prosperity.

Meanwhile Mr. Jones used his influence to attract a thrifty class of people to the community and he also became a power in public as well as business affairs. A Republican in all the term implies, he manifested such zeal in political matters that in 1894 he was elected to represent Brown county in the state legislature; he served during the fourth session of that body and during his incumbency was placed on some of the most important of the house committees, including among others, the judiciary and the warehouse committees. Mr. Jones retired from the legislature with an honorable record and the good will of his constituents of all parties and from the expiration of his term until 1899 devoted his attention closely to mercantile business, in addition to which he also became largely interested in real estate. In the latter year he received the nomination for clerk of the Brown county courts and in the election which followed defeated the former incumbent, C. C. Fletcher, a popular man and formidable competitor, by a very decisive majority.

The better to discharge his official functions, Mr. Jones, shortly after the election, disposed of his mercantile establishment and, moving to the county seat, entered upon the duties of the clerkship. He proved an able and popular clerk, was courteous and obliging to all who had business to transact in the office, and his relations with the public were as pleasant and agreeable as his conduct was upright and exemplary. His term expiring in January, 1903, he at once turned his attention to his private affairs, not the least of which has been the improvement of Plana, where he has erected a number of buildings of different kinds, and in addition thereto he has aided very materially the growth and development of Aberdeen.

As indicated in a preceding paragraph, Mr. Jones has dealt considerably in real estate and at the present time he owns nine hundred and sixty acres of fine land in Brown county, the greater part being in the vicinity of Plana. He has improved much of his real estate, thus largely adding to its value and has extensive agricultural and live-stock interests from which he receives a liberal share of his income. He is also associated in the grain business with E. G. Perry under the name of Perry & Jones, the firm thus constituted operating seven elevators in many places, the largest being in Aberdeen, from which city the business is conducted.

Mr. Jones has long been interested in the general growth and development of his adopted state, and has unbounded faith in its future. He has encouraged everything calculated to promote the welfare of Plana and its populace, stands for public improvements and has done as much perhaps as any one individual to advertise the advantages of Brown county to the world as a favorable locality for agriculture and stock raising and as a safe place for the investment of capital. Personally Mr. Jones is a gentleman of unblemished character, as well as his career in public places and as the custodian of important trusts, has always been above reproach.

Mr. Jones was married in Wisconsin, in 1884, to Miss Maggie Jones, who departed this life on the 8th day of February, 1901, leaving one daughter, Mabel, now pursuing her studies in the high school.

OLE W. EVERSON is a native of the far Norseland, having been born in Norway, on the 10th of June, 1854, but he is essentially American in spirit and breeding, since he was an infant at the time when his parents, Henry and Stana Everson, left their native land and emigrated to America. For the first five years the family resided in the state of Illinois, whence they removed to Faribault county, Minnesota, where the father engaged in farming and where the subject was reared to maturity, receiving his educational training in the common schools. When about eighteen years of age he left the parental roof to engage in the active duties of life on his own responsibility. He served an apprenticeship at the carpenter trade, which he continued to follow as an employe of one man for eight years, in western Minnesota. He then, in April, 1878, came to what is now the state of South Dakota, as one of the pioneers of Brown county, being accompanied by his brothers, Benjamin and John, and a brother-in-law, William R. Howes, and all took up government land in the beautiful valley of the James river. They took up squatter's claims, and when the government survey was completed, in 1880, they filed formal entry on their land, while as soon as possible each of the party also took up a tree claim. In the summer seasons the subject returned for the first two years and worked at his trade, returning to his claims in the winter, in order to be able to perfect his title to the same. His mother came here in the fall of 1879, her husband having died in Minnesota, and the two other brothers here took up their permanent abode in the spring of the same year, the family being thus numbered among the first settlers in this section of Brown county. The subject instituted the improvement of his farm and for two years he added materially to his income by working at his trade in Orway and Columbia. Since that time he has practically given his entire attention to his farming enterprise, having now a well improved estate of five hundred and sixty acres, of which one hundred acres are on the west side of the James river, while the value of the place is increased by the fact that on the same is a fine growth of natural timber, covering about thirty-three acres and including ash, box elder and willow trees. Four hundred acres are under cultivation and devoted principally to the raising of wheat, while the one hundred acres on the opposite side of the river are given over to grazing purposes, the live stock raised by Mr. Everson being of a high grade. He was reared in the Republican faith and continued to support the principles of this party until the reform movement was inaugurated by the organization of the Populist party, when he transferred his allegiance to the same, later voting the Democratic ticket when a fusion was effected. He now holds himself independent of partisan lines and votes in accordance with the dictates of his judgment. Mr. Everson has not wavered in his allegiance to the state of South Dakota and has found his faith justified in the magnificent development of her resources, his satisfaction with conditions here having not been lessened by a tour of inspection and investigation which he made in Washington and Oregon in 1902. He is sparing no pains in the further improvement of his farm, and in the rich bottom lands is successfully growing fruit trees, having a fine orchard well matured at the present time. Early in the spring of 1879 Mr. Everson built the first frame house in Brown county, and the same constitutes a portion of his present substantial and attractive residence.

In this county, on the 12th of May, 1883, Mr. Everson was united in marriage to Miss Della Bigsby, a stepdaughter of Daniel Farley, one of the sterling pioneers of the county. Of this marriage have been born five children, namely: Henry James, Frank Marion, Stana Maria, George Marshall and Henrietta Jane.

PETER C. CLELAND was born on a farm near Whitewater, Jefferson county, Wisconsin, on the 30th of November, 1847, being a son of James and Mary (Wilson) Cleland, both of whom were born and reared in Scotland, where their marriage was solemnized on the 21st of April, 1837. About three years later they emigrated to America and located in Jefferson county, Wisconsin, on the farm near Whitewater, where they passed the residue of their earnest and useful lives, the father of the subject being summoned to that "undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveler returns," on the 16th of October, 1888, while his devoted and loved wife entered into eternal rest December 10, 1893, each being seventy-six years of age at the time of death.

Peter C. Cleland was reared on the pioneer homestead and his educational advantages in his youth were such as were afforded in the district schools. At the age of seventeen years he left school to respond to the call of higher duty, enlisting as a private in Company B, Third Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and joining his regiment at Atlanta, Georgia, while he served under Colonel Hawley and accompanied Sherman on his memorable march to the sea. Mr. Cleland was present at the surrender of General Johnston, at Raleigh, North Carolina, and thence marched with his command to the city of Washington, where he participated in the Grand Review, there receiving his honorable discharge in June, 1865, having served nine months and having proved a loyal and valiant soldier. After his return home he attended school during one winter term and thereafter continued to assist his father in the work of the home farm until he had attained his legal majority, when, on February 22, 1869, he started for the territory of Dakota, making Clay county his destination and here taking up a homestead claim in Spirit Mound township, where he began to make improvements and place the farm under cultivation. In the spring of 1875 Mr. Cleland left the farm and started for the Black Hills, but when about half the distance had been traversed his goods were burned by the government, which means was taken to stop immigration to that section, and our subject then returned to his farm. Two years later, however, he again set forth for the forbidden country, which he reached in due time, remaining in the Black Hills about six months and devoting his attention to prospecting and mining for gold. He then returned to his home and has ever since been actively engaged in farming, now having a well-improved place of one hundred and sixty acres, and receiving excellent returns for the labors expended in tilling the willing soil. Mr. Cleland has been identified with the Populist party from the time of its organization, and has attended every state convention of his party in South Dakota. He and his wife are valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church at Bloomingdale, and Mr. Cleland is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, Miner Post, No. 8, at Vermillion.

On Sunday, March 12, 1876, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Cleland and Miss Nellie Kimball, the ceremony being performed in the home of the bride's parents, in Spirit Mound township. She was born in Kane county, Illinois, on the 10th of April, 1855, being a daughter of Jonathan and Hannah Kimball, who came from Illinois to Clay county in 1868, being numbered among the early settlers in Spirit Mound township, where they passed the remainder of their lives, the death of the father occurring January 23, 1893, while his wife passed away August 6, 1895. Mr. Kimball was one of the prominent and influential citizens of this section, and was a member of the committee which framed the first state constitution and also that which framed the present constitution. Mr. and Mrs. Cleland became the parents of three children, namely: Annie Belle, who was born June 20, 1878; Blanche Lenore, who was born April 21, 1882, and died February 14, 1888; and Philip J., who was born December 31, 1885. The family is prominent in the social life of the community and the pleasant home is a center of cordial hospitality.

ROBERT T. SEDAM was born in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, on the 15th of February, 1839, being a son of Robert and Eve Sedam, representatives of early settled families in that section of our national domain. He received most meager educational advantages in his youth, his actual schooling being confined to six months, but his alert mentality and determination have enabled him to overcome this preliminary handicap, and through self-application, observation and active association with men and affairs he has gained a broad fund of practical knowledge and is recognized as a man of strong intellectuality. In May, 1839, at the age of six weeks, Mr. Sedam accompanied his parents on their removal to Freeport, Stephenson county, Illinois, where he was reared to manhood, the family having located on a farm in Stephenson county, as pioneers of that section.

Mr. Sedam continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits in Illinois until there came the call to higher duty, as the integrity of the nation was imperiled through armed rebellion. On the 19th of April, 1861, he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting as a private in Company C, Fifteenth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he proceeded to the front, his regiment being assigned to the Army of the Tennessee. He continued in active service for four years, six months and twelve days, receiving his honorable discharge, at Springfield, in July, 1865, after having made a record as a valiant and faithful soldier and having participated in many of the most notable battles of the great conflict. In October, 1864, at Acworth, Georgia, Mr. Sedam was captured by the Confederate forces under General Hood, and was held a prisoner in Andersonville for seven months and twelve days, enduring to the full the horrors and privations of that ill-famed prison pen. After the close of the war Mr. Sedam returned to Ogle county, Illinois, where he continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until 1881, in October of which year he came to what is now the state of South Dakota, and took up the first claim in the present township of St. Lawrence, Hand county, filing a homestead entry. He continued to be actively engaged in farming and stock growing until October, 1895, when he took up his residence in the village of St. Lawrence, where he is now in the employ of F. A. Altenow, who is here engaged in the general merchandise business.

In politics Mr. Sedam has ever given a staunch support to the Republican party, and in 1893 he was elected to represent his district in the state legislature, serving one term, during the third general assembly. He is now chairman of the board of education of his home town and chairman of the Hand county Republican committee. He is a prominent and honored member of the Masonic fraternity, being identified with Lodge No. 39, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; and St. Lawrence Chapter, No. 24, Royal Arch Masons, in each of which he has passed the official chairs. He is high priest of his chapter at the time of this writing, and in 1894 he had the distinction of serving as grand high priest of the grand chapter of the state. He also holds membership in St. Lawrence Lodge, No. 29, Ancient Order of United Workmen, in which he has held the office of master three years, while in 1895 he was grand foreman of the grand lodge of the order in the state. He manifests his deep interest in his old comrades in arms by affiliating with Colonel Ellis Post, No. 53, Grand Army of the Republic. His wife is a zealous and active member of the Methodist Episcopal church.

On the 1st of October, 1865, in Beloit, Wisconsin, Mr. Sedam was united in marriage to Miss Emeret M. Buckley, who was born in Genesee county, New York, and who was reared and educated in Illinois, being a daughter of Ebenezer and Emily Buckley. Mr. and Mrs. Sedam have eleven children, whose names, in order of birth, are as follows: Robert, John, Edward, Howard, Fred, Almeda, Jennie, Fannie, Ralph, James and Eva.

JOHN E. WEST is a native of the Empire state of the Union, having been born in the city of Syracuse, New York, on the 22d of May, 1848, and being a son of Henry and Elizabeth (Bloomer) West. He was reared in his native commonwealth and there secured a common-school education. When but fifteen years of age he manifested in a significant way his loyalty to the Union, the country being then in the period of the great Civil war. In 1863 he enlisted in the Fourteenth New York Heavy Artillery, proceeding with his command to the front and taking part in a number of the most hotly contested battles incident to the farther progress of the war, among the number being Spottsylvania, the Wilderness, Petersburg and Fort Steadman. He received his honorable discharge in Washington City, 1865, having proved himself a valiant young soldier and gaining the right to be designated as a youthful veteran. He retains an interest in his old comrades in arms and perpetuates the associations of his army days by retaining membership in the Grand Army of the Republic.

After the close of the war Mr. West was variously employed in the state of New York until 1874, when he secured the position of fireman on the New York Central Railroad. Four years later he was given an engine and continued in the employ of that great system for eight years. In 1883 he entered the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, and in this connection established his residence and headquarters in Aberdeen, which has thus been his home for the past score of years, during which time he has had runs out from this point, now hauling the passenger train west of Aberdeen. He has ever been self-controlled and clear-minded in his thirty years of service as an engineer and his record has not been marred by serious accidents. He is a popular member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and also of the time-honored Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained the thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Republican party, taking an intelligent and lively interest in the questions and issues of the day.

At Bowdle, Edmunds county, South Dakota, on the 13th of February, 1889, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. West to Miss Mamie C. Barndt, who was born at St. Mary's, Ohio, and reared at McComb, Hancock county, Ohio. They have two daughters, Florence and Helen. The parents of Mrs. West were L. T. and Louise (Crawford) Barndt. The father was born at New Lexington, Perry county, Ohio, and died at Everett, Washington, on December 7, 1903, at the age of seventy-one years. The mother, who is still living, was also born in Ohio.

JAMES H. POND is a native of Calhoun county, Michigan, where his birth occurred on January 7, 1853. His father, James E. Pond, a native of Franklin county, New York, and a farmer by occupation, was one of the pioneers of Michigan, settling in the county of Calhoun as early as 1842, and taking an active and prominent part in its development. He married in Michigan Eliza Stillson, daughter of Baker Stillson, who was also an early settler of Calhoun county, moving there about the year 1844. The boyhood and youth of James H. were spent on the family homestead in Michigan, and after a preliminary training in the common schools he entered the high school of Marshall, from which institution he was in due time graduated. Later he took a course in the Northern Indiana Normal at Valparaiso, after which he taught of winter seasons in his native county, until 1880, when he came to South Dakota, and took up a homestead in Brown county, about six miles north of Aberdeen. From that time until 1897 he devoted his attention to farming and to the improvement of his land, also taught several terms the meanwhile and earned an enviable reputation as a successful instructor and able manager of schools. Since coming to South Dakota Mr. Pond has improved two farms and now owns three hundred and twenty acres of fine land in Brown county, nearly all of which is in a high state of cultivation.

In 1882 Mr. Pond effected a copartnership with G. L. Farnham in the real-estate business, opening an office in Ordway, which place at that time entertained hopes of becoming the state capital. After one year the firm was dissolved, from the expiration of which time until 1897 the subject devoted his attention to agriculture and educational work, meeting with encouraging success in both lines of endeavor, especially the former. In the latter year he discontinued farming and since then has been engaged in the real-estate business, his operations the meanwhile taking a wide range and returning him liberal profits. Mr. Pond handles all kinds of real estate and commands a large and lucrative patronage, buying and selling lands and city property in nearly every county of South Dakota, besides acting as special agent for C. E. Gibson, of Boston, who owns about one hundred and fifty farms in this state, the renting and management of which are left entirely to the subject's judgment and discretion. He is empowered to sell or trade these farms when he can do so to advantage, also inspects other lands which his employer contemplates purchasing, the latter being guided very largely in the matter by such representations and suggestions as the subject makes. In addition to the Gibson agency, Mr. Pond has charge of about fifty farms in Brown county owned by other parties, which he rents, manages, sells or trades, as the case may be, and in an early day he rendered valuable service to settlers by locating claims and otherwise assisting them to get a start in the new country. While thus engaged he met with many thrilling experiences and not a few dangers, traveling as he did over all parts of the country in all seasons. Upon several occasions he encountered terrific blizzards, from some of which he narrowly escaped with his life, and in all experienced hardships and suffering in which were tested to the utmost his strength and endurance.

Through the medium of his business Mr. Pond has been instrumental not only in advertising the advantages and remarkable natural resources of South Dakota to the world, but in attracting to the state an intelligent, enterprising class of people, who have accomplished great results in the matter of its material development. He is first of all a business man, and as such ranks with the most enterprising and progressive of his contemporaries, and everything making for the prosperity of his city and county or for the welfare of his fellow men receives his encouragement. In politics he affiliates with the Democratic party, but is not a partisan in the sense of seeking official position.

Mr. Pond was married on April 7, 1886, at Ordway, to Miss Lizzie Smith, daughter of Captain William Smith, one of the pioneers of 1880.

BENJAMIN H. RICE holds the responsible position of superintendent of the Brown County Hospital, in the city of Aberdeen. The hospital was established in the year 1891, as a private institution, but with no farm in connection. Two years later, in recognition of the exigent needs, the county effected the purchase of the property, which occupied an entire block in the northern part of the city, and at once enlarged the buildings, to which various additions have since been made from time to time, to meet the demands placed upon the noble institution. The hospital is equipped with modern appliances and conveniences and has at the present time accommodations for about forty patients or indigent persons. The hospital department is maintained as entirely separate from the infirmary proper, and those from any class in life can secure treatment and care, as well as the unfortunate wards of the county. The hospital had three superintendents prior to the incumbency of Mr. Rice, who was appointed to the office in April, 1901, by the board of county commissioners, and his retention in the office offers the best voucher for the fidelity and discrimination which he has brought to bear in the discharge of his duties.

Mr. Rice was born on a farm in Green Lake county, Wisconsin, on the 1st of December, 1851, being a son of Benjamin H., Sr., and Judith (Colvin) Rice. When he was thirteen years of age his parents took up their residence in Olmstead county, that state, and later to Pope county, Minnesota, where our subject was reared to manhood, having grown up under the sturdy discipline of the farm, while his educational training was secured in the common schools. He continued to reside in or near Sauk Center, Minnesota, until 1882, when he came to Brown county, South Dakota, arriving here in May and taking up a pre-emption claim of government land, which he improved and proved upon, while he also secured a homestead claim in the same township of Allison, and upon the same continued to reside until he was appointed to his present position. This homestead farm of one hundred and sixty acres is well improved and under excellent cultivation, and he retained possession of the property until 1901, when he sold the same. He was one of the very first settlers in the township mentioned and is highly esteemed in the county which has so long been his home. In politics Mr. Rice has been a most ardent worker in the cause of the Republican party, but has never sought official preferment as a candidate for elective position. Fraternally he is identified with the lodge of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Frederick, this county, this village being in the vicinity of his old homestead, and he has passed the official chairs in the same and been a delegate to the grand lodge of the state.

In Pope county, Minnesota, on the 24th of May, 1878, Mr. Rice was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Higginson, who was born in Watertown, Sanilac county, Michigan, whence she accompanied her parents on their removal to Minnesota when a young lady of nineteen years. She is a daughter of George and Jennie Higginson, both of whom are now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Rice have no children.

JOHN S. HART.—Among the leading commercial enterprises represented in the thriving city of Aberdeen is that conducted under the title of the J. S. Hart Lumber Company, and of this important concern, which operates a chain of several retail lumber yards throughout the state, the subject of this sketch is the executive head, while he is known as one of the representative business men of Aberdeen, in which city he has made his home and headquarters since 1898. In 1898 Mr. Hart engaged in the retail lumber business in Aberdeen, and the enterprise so rapidly increased in scope and importance that in 1900 it was found expedient to increase its facilities, and Mr. Hart then associated himself with George H. Hollandsworth, of Sioux City, Iowa, and effected the incorporation of the business under the present title, while the company is capitalized for one hundred thousand dollars. Since the incorporation retail yards have also been established in Ipswich, Faulkton, Mellette, Warner, James, Columbia, Houghton and Plana, while the main offices of the company are in Aberdeen. It is scarcely needless to state that full and complete lines of lumber and builders' material are kept in stock at all times and in each of the several yards, while the concern has grown to be one of the largest and most important of the sort in the state. The company gives employment to a corps of about twenty-five men and the business is conducted with that progressive and alert spirit so characteristic of the west.

John S. Hart, who has been mainly instrumental in the building up of this enterprise, is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born in Clinton county, on the 10th of December, 1863, and having passed his boyhood days on the farm, while his educational training was secured in the public schools of his native state. He is a son of H. A. and Mary Jane Hart, the former of whom was born in the state of Ohio and the latter in Indiana. In early days the father was a trader on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. He removed to Iowa in 1847, purchasing a large tract of land near Camanche, in Clinton county. He then returned to Indiana, but in 1859 he came back to Iowa and built on his land, at the same time building a flouring mill, which he operated for several years, carrying on farming operations at the same time on a large scale. He raised a family of four sons and four daughters, of whom seven are still living. He died in 1885, aged seventy-seven years. His widow survived until 1902, when she died, aged seventy-three years.

In his political proclivities, though never ambitious for any official preferment, Mr. Hart is a Democrat, and fraternally he has attained the thirty-second degree in the Masonic order, having completed the round of the York and Scottish rites so far as conferring of degrees in America is possible. He is an enthusiastic sportsman and finds recreation afield and afloat during his vacations, while he is one of the prominent and popular members of the Aberdeen Gun Club.

At Charter Oak, Iowa, on the 12th of August, 1889, Mr. Hart was united in marriage to Miss Celia M. Marshall, who was born and reared in that state, being a daughter of Clark T. and Dora Marshall. Of this union have been born three children, Harry, Maud and Cloe M.

CALVIN MARCELLUS GIDDINGS sprang from pioneer stock, his father, Jabez Giddings, a native of New York, having been one of the first settlers of Stevenson county, Illinois, moving to that state before the land was surveyed, and living for some time as a squatter. Calvin M. Giddings was born in Lena, Illinois, January 10, 1859, and until his sixteenth year remained on the home farm, assisting with the varied duties of the same. At that age his father gave him his time, after which he worked as a farm laborer in the neighborhood until the following fall, when he went to Mason City, Iowa, making the trip on horseback. He remained about three years at that place, devoting two years of the time to farm work, and in the fall of 1875, with a young man of his acquaintance, went to Texas, with the object in view of engaging in the live-stock business. On arriving at his destination, however, he changed his mind, and instead of investing in cattle, decided to become a cotton planter. He raised two crops of cotton, but the conditions not being favorable, neither proved profitable, but on the contrary resulted in the loss of nearly all his capital. Somewhat discouraged by his ill success, he shook the dust of Texas from his shoes and in the fall of 1879 returned to Iowa, bringing with him six horses, which represented all that he had saved from his experience in cotton culture. After spending the fall and winter of the above year in Iowa, he started the following spring for Dakota, shipping his horses to Milbank, which place he reached in due time and from which he drove the animals through to Brown county. On June 21, 1880, he entered a tract of land at the land office in Watertown, his claim being one of the first taken in Aberdeen township. Moving on his claim in the spring of 1881, he at once began developing his land, one of his first improvements being a small board dwelling, the only house of the kind within a radius of several miles. He hauled his lumber from Watertown, one hundred miles distant. Mr. Giddings was the second permanent settler in Aberdeen township, the first having been a man by the name of Britzius.

In the spring of 1881 Mr. Giddings moved to his place and on July 31st, of the same year, took to himself a wife and helpmeet in the person of Miss Harriet Bland, who with her brother, Charles Bland, came to South Dakota, in May, 1879, both entering land in Brown county. Mrs. Giddings is a native of England and came direct from that country to South Dakota, and in due time proved up on her claim, receiving a deed for the same from the government. Her brother improved a fine farm, and after making it his home for a period of twenty years, emigrated to Oregon, where he now resides. The marriage of Mr. Giddings and Miss Bland was the first event of the kind solemnized in the county of Brown. Shortly after it took place the happy couple moved to the bride's place. Since coming west Mr. Giddings has purchased land in various parts of the country, owning at this time in Brown county alone over two thousand acres, the greater part of which has been brought to a high state of cultivation. He gives special attention to farming, which he has made quite successful, his wheat crop for a number of years past averaging fifteen thousand bushels a year, in addition to which he also realizes returns from the sale of live stock, much of his land being well adapted to cattle raising.

Mr. Giddings has bought and sold a great deal of real estate since coming to Dakota, has broken thousands of acres of virgin prairie, and made many fortunate investments, being now not only one of the largest land owners in Brown county, but also one of its most enterprising farmers and well-to-do men. He has traveled extensively over the western states and territories, from Texas to California, visiting many points of interest, made a trip to the Hawaiian islands; besides traversing all parts of South Dakota, comparing the relative merits of the different localities. Among them he prefers the county in which he now lives and, having been remarkably fortunate in all of his business affairs, here purposes to make it his permanent place of abode.

As a farmer Mr. Giddings is energetic and exercises sound judgment in the matter of tillage. He is systematic in his plans, uses the best modern machinery and implements and never fails to realize large returns from the time and labor expended on his fields, his wheat for a number of years, averaging forty bushels to the acre, and oats often running as high as one hundred and ten. He raises the finest grades of cattle and hogs, and, though paying less attention to live stock than to agriculture, no little share of his income is derived from the latter source. In politics Mr. Giddings is not a partisan, but supports the party which best represents his principles, though of recent years he has given support to the Prohibition party, being strictly a temperate man with a strong antipathy for the liquor traffic. Fraternally he belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and religiously attends the Methodist church, of which body his wife is a faithful member.

Mr. and Mrs. Giddings are the parents of five children, namely: William J., Leander J., Luther E., Horace B. and Paul C. Mr. Giddings is a friend of higher education, and has done much to promote the interests of the same in the county of his residence. He has given his children the best advantages in this direction obtainable, the three oldest being graduates of first-class educational institutions, while the other two are now pursuing their studies under favorable auspices.

WILLIAM HENRY MORGAN, attorney-at-law and one of the leading members of the South Dakota bar, was born in South Elgin, Illinois, on June 23, 1851. His father is Manly S. Morgan, one of the leading pioneers of Illinois, who in early life was a mechanic, but for many years has been an extensive horticulturist and grower of products for early market, owning large forcing plants. William Henry spent the years of his childhood and youth in his native town, and after receiving his elementary education entered Wheaton College, from which institution he was graduated in 1878. Later he began the study of law and subsequently became a student of the Union Law College, Chicago, where he was graduated and in 1887 was admitted to the bar. Meantime, 1882, Mr. Morgan came to South Dakota, and took up a homestead near Westport, Brown county, after which he returned to Illinois and completed his legal education as noted above. Returning to Dakota in 1889, he opened an office in Aberdeen, where he has since devoted his attention almost exclusively to a general practice, and meeting with success. Mr. Morgan served one term as probate judge, aside from which he has held no official position. He has taken an active interest in public affairs since coming west, and was an influential leader in the reform movement, which sent Hon. J. H. Kyle to the legislature, and later to the United States senate. He still manifests a lively regard for whatever concerns the welfare of his city, county and state, and as a public-spirited citizen, gives an earnest support to any and all measures making for these and other laudable ends.

Mr. Morgan was married at Wheaton, Illinois, June 23, 1880, to Miss Minnie Weamer, step-daughter of Rev. Dr. James B. Walker, a distinguished divine of that state and the author of several popular and scholarly works, one of which, "The Philosophy of the Plan of Salvation," has been translated into several of the leading languages of the world, as well as many dialects. Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have no children of their own, but some years ago they opened their home to a lad by the name of Charles Walker, whom they reared from boyhood to manhood.

Religiously Mr. Morgan is a Congregationalist, as is also his wife, both being members of the church in Aberdeen. Fraternally he is identified with the Modern Brotherhood of America and politically, he is a Democrat.

FRANK F. THOMPSON was born in Brown county, Wisconsin, on the 5th of November, 1856, being a son of Franklin and Lydia (Putnam) Thompson. He passed his youthful days in Illinois and Michigan, and completed the curriculum of the public schools in the latter state, being graduated in the high school of the city of Grand Rapids as a member of the class of 1874. His father was for a half century engaged in the hotel business, and our subject early became actively associated with him in the conduct of the same. He thus gained a most excellent training for this line of enterprise and finally engaged in the same on his own responsibility, having conducted a hotel at Morley, Michigan, for several years, and coming to Claremont, Brown county, South Dakota, in 1883, and took up a homestead claim of one hundred and sixty acres of government land and followed farming for about six years. He then engaged in the hotel business in Claremont, at which he continued until 1898, when he was elected sheriff of Brown county, when he of course took up his residence in Aberdeen, the county seat. He gave a most effective administration during his first term and was chosen as his own successor in the election of 1900. He has ever been a staunch adherent of the Republican party and was elected to the office of sheriff on the ticket of his party. He retired from this office, with a most enviable record to his credit, on the 5th of January, 1903, and seven days later was appointed to his present office, that of chief of police of Aberdeen. He still owns the hotel in Claremont, the same having been rebuilt in 1902 and having modern equipments throughout. The popular chief is identified with the Knights of the Maccabees and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He is a man of genial personality and has a host of friends in Brown county. He was formerly a practical devotee of the "national game," having played base ball in the Inter-State league, comprising the states of Michigan, Indiana and Illinois, and his interest in the sport is still of insistent order, as is shown in the fact that he never fails to attend local games save when duty calls him elsewhere.

At Morley, Michigan, in 1876, Mr. Thompson was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Lyman, who died in Claremont, in 1890, leaving two children, Samuel R. and May. In 1892 Mr. Thompson wedded Miss Josie Holt, of Brown county, and they have three children, Grace, Roy and Glenn.

ALBERT W. FOSSUM, D. D. S., of the firm of Fossum Brothers, the well-known dentists in the city of Aberdeen, is a native of Lansing, Iowa, where he was born on the 22d of June, 1874, being a son of Andrew C. and Walbord (Olson) Fossum, both of whom were born in Christiania, Norway. The father of the subject is a well-known and successful contractor of Aberdeen, to which place he came with his family in 1881. Dr. Fossum received his elementary educational discipline in his native town, and was a lad of seven years at the time of the family removal to Aberdeen, so that he has passed practically his entire life here. He completed the curriculum of the public schools of this city, and in 1895 was matriculated in the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, in the city of Chicago, where he completed the prescribed course in that excellent institution, being graduated as a member of the class of 1898, and receiving his degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery. After his graduation he returned to Aberdeen and established himself in the practice of his profession. He has given close attention to business, is thoroughly skilled in both the operative and laboratory phases of his profession and his efforts have been attended with most gratifying success, since he has built up a large and representative practice, his well-equipped offices being located in the Wells building, on Main and Third streets. His brother, Carl, has been his assistant and coadjutor since 1901 and is likewise a thoroughly competent workman. Dr. Fossum is a member of the South Dakota Dental Association and also of its executive committee, and it was largely due to his efforts that the annual meeting of the association for 1904 is to be held in Aberdeen. In politics the Doctor is a staunch Republican, but is not active in this field and has never been an aspirant for office.

On the 11th of August, 1899, Dr. Fosum was united in marriage to Miss Nellie Louise Wilson, a daughter of Frederick D. Wilson, who was formerly engaged in the grocery business in Aberdeen. Of this union have been born two daughters, Helen and Muriel.

GEORGE S. PERRY was born in Berkshire, England, on the 12th of January, 1853, and is a son of William and Charlotte (Hobbs) Perry, the father dying in Cleveland, Ohio, in April, 1880, aged about sixty years, and the mother at Mitchell, South Dakota, on December 24, 1889, aged seventy-three years, six months and thirteen days. The subject received his early educational training in his native land, and was twelve years of age at the time of his parents' emigration to America. The family located in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, and here Mr. Perry soon gave distinctive evidence of his predilection for mechanical pursuits, since when he was but fourteen years of age he was not only acting as engineer in a manufacturing establishment, but also had the general charge of the factory during the illness of the owner. At the age of seventeen he secured a position as fireman on the Cleveland & Wheeling Railroad, and two and one-half years later had been promoted to the position of engineer. He thus continued in the service of the road noted for another year and then entered the employ of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, with headquarters in the city of Pittsburg. He remained with this company until the great strike of 1877, at which time he entered the employ of the Canada Southern. When the Vanderbilts secured control of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, in 1879, Mr. Perry was assigned an engine and operated the same in connection with the building of the road westward from Glencoe, Minnesota, to Ortonville, South Dakota, his conductors at the time being Andrew W. Glenn and Charles Dean, with whom he has ever since been associated in the same relative capacity, their official alliance, if so it may be termed, having thus continued for nearly a quarter of a century. They continued with the extension of the road to Bristol, and reached Aberdeen, South Dakota, in 1881. Mr. Perry also worked on construction to Ashton and Ellendale and was then given the passenger run to Milbank. In June, 1883, he was the driver of the engine on the construction of the track southward to Woonsocket, where the extension from the south was met. He was given the first passenger run on this branch, between Aberdeen and Mitchell, and for twenty-one years he has continued to thus traverse this branch. In thirty years of service Mr. Perry has never had a serious wreck and has never personally been injured in any accident. He has confined his attention exclusively to the demands placed upon him as an engineer, taking pride in his work, knowing its responsibilities and realizing that it is worthy of his best efforts. He is a veteran and trusted employe of the company and has the high regard of all who know him. He is identified with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and also with the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained to the Knights Templar degrees, being a member of the various bodies of the order in Aberdeen, where he has a pleasant home and is well and favorably known. He is a staunch Republican in politics.

At Saint Thomas, Ontario, Canada, on the 6th of July, 1878, Mr. Perry was united in marriage to Mis Leila Whitcomb, daughter of S. W. Whitcomb, who was for many years an engineer on the New York Central Railroad. Mr. and Mrs. Perry have five children, namely: George W., Cora, Dean, Floyd N. and Leila M. The first named was educated in the Goldie College, Wilmington, Delaware.

HON. ERNEST MAY is a native of Ebertshausen, Germany, where he was born on November 8, 1847. His father was a contractor and lumber dealer in that place, and it was there that the son grew to the age of twenty years and received his education, and also learned his trade as a gunsmith. In the spring of 1867 he came to the United States, believing that there were better opportunities in this country for a young man, and on his arrival he made his way to St. Louis where he secured a position in the pattern department of an iron foundry. In 1869, early in the year, he determined to come farther west, and, going by rail to Sioux City, proceeded from there up the Missouri to Montana. He located at Helena and for some time was engaged in prospecting and mining there, then started a grocery at Pioneer, a mining camp not far from Butte, having had previous experience in this business in Helena. In July, 1876, he started with a party of pioneers for the Black Hills, coming down the Missouri to Bismarck and from there to Crook City where the party arrived on August 11th. From there Mr. May went to Deadwood and began mining in Deadwood gulch, working on the famous Wheeler claim, which he and some others bought. He was occupied there until fall when he was taken sick and obliged to return to St. Louis, where he was under the doctor's care until the following spring. He then returned to Deadwood, and disposing of his interests in that neighborhood, took up his residence at Lead, then a small hamlet of uncanny log huts and tents. Here he put up a log shanty on the site of one of his present buildings on Main street, its successor being the first brick structure built in the town. In partnership with George Johnson he opened a grocery in the shanty, the firm name being May & Johnson. About 1880 he bought Mr. Johnson's interest and took in as a partner his cousin, Louis May, the firm then becoming E. & L. May. Three years later he bought his cousin out, and from 1883 to March 1, 1901, he conducted the business alone. When the firm changed in 1883, however, the log store was replaced with the brick one which now stands on the lot. Mr. May, although engaging in other business, never lost his interest or slackened his energy in the mining industry. He was one of the first men to secure claims in the Bald Mountain district and is entitled to the credit of assisting to bring that district to the attention of the mining world. The first valuable interests which he acquired were in the original Golden Reward and Silver Case lodes. In 1886 he was one of the organizers of the Golden Reward Mining Company, with himself as one of the principal stockholders. He was also interested in the Tornado Mining Company, which was the second company to ship ore from the Black Hills district, the freight and treatment charges being twenty-seven dollars per ton at that time. It has since proved to be the largest producer in the Bald Mountain district. A few years later he came into control of the Harmony Mining Company. In 1888 he organized the Double Standard Company and sold his interest in the Golden Reward to its present owners. In 1892 he and his associates sold the Double Standard, the Tornado and the Harmony groups of mines to the Golden Reward, and at different times sold claims to the Horseshoe Company. At one time Mr. May was the largest claim owner in the whole Bald Mountain district. Down to the spring of 1903 he was also heavily interested in what was known as the Realization group, but in that year he sold his interest therein to the Penobscot Mining Company. He has at present extensive holdings in other valuable properties, among them the Wasp No. 2 Mining Company and claims in the Yellow creek and Ragged Top districts. He is also largely interested in the cattle industry in various places, is a member of the Crescent Live Stock Company of Nebraska and the Antler Land and Cattle Company, of Big Horn county, Wyoming. He also has extensive mining interests in the Wood river district of the latter state. In 1892 he became a member of the firm of Lehman & Company, general merchants, at Lewistown, Montana, and was connected with it until 1902, when he sold his interest. He is now one of the principal real-estate owners of Lead and is a stockholder and vice-president of the First National Bank of that town. In the public affairs of his county and state he has always taken an active and helpful interest, and in politics has from his early manhood been a zealous supporter of the Republican party. He was one of the first aldermen of Lead, serving continuously for eight years. In April, 1904, he was again selected to represent his ward in city council. In this position his capacity for administrative duties became so manifest that in 1902 he was elected to the lower house of the state legislature.

ERNEST MAY.

In January, 1884, Mr. May was married at Lead to Miss Gertrude Roderick, a native of New York. They have two sons, Ernest R., Jr., and William F. Mr. May is a thirty-second-degree Mason and belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

JOHN K. SEARLE, deceased, late of Lead, was born in Devonshire, England, on June 1, 1851, and was reared and educated in his native land. In 1870, when he was nineteen years old, he came to the United States and located at Dixon, Illinois, where he remained five years. Being without a trade or any special business, he wrought at various occupations, saving his money and making his way slowly but surely to independence and comfort. In 1875 he went to Harlan, Iowa, and spent a portion of the year. The gold excitement over the Black Hills then breaking out, he came to that region, arriving at Deadwood on January 7, 1877, having been delayed some time at the Red Cloud Indian agency because of the hostility of the savages. After reaching the Hills he went to work at placer mining, carrying on his operations all over the Hills, and also working at a number of mines and mills, being one of the first men employed by the Homestake Company, when it started business. In 1883 he severed his active connection with the mining industry and opened a meat market and butcher shop at Lead, an enterprise which he conducted till his death, November 27, 1903, while recuperating at his old home in England. Beginning with a small outfit and on a very limited scale, he steadily enlarged his business until he had the most extensive and important of its kind in this part of the state, conducting both wholesale and retail trade of considerable magnitude over a wide extent of country. He was also interested in mining to some extent, and had a voice of force and influence in all the commercial and political operations of the community, being accounted one of the leading business men and public spirits of his locality. He was a Republican in politics, close and loyal in allegiance to his party, and ever earnest and effective in its service. He served as a member of the city council of Lead and during the last eleven years of his life had been school director. In fraternal relations he was connected with the Odd Fellows and the Elks, in both being highly esteemed for the activity and usefulness of his membership. He was also a member of the Order of the Sons of St. George.

In September, 1880, at Lead, Mr. Searle was married to Miss Julia Lee, a native of Norway. They have one son, Charles, who was born and reared at Lead and received his education in the schools of the town, being graduated from the high school in 1900. He was associated with his father in business, and is widely known as one of the rising, progressive and capable young business men of the town, and since the death of his father has taken entire charge and management of the business. It is high praise, but a just meed to merit, to say that he is a worthy follower of his father's excellent example, and has exhibited qualities of manhood which will enable him to take up the work of that estimable man and carry it forward to its destined success and power. He also belongs to the Elks lodge at Lead and takes an active part in its fraternal and social life.

TIFFANY BROTHERS.—Among the leading commercial enterprises in Aberdeen may be mentioned the Aberdeen Steam Laundry, which is conducted and owned by the subjects of this brief sketch, the firm controlling a business which extends into the most diverse sections of South and North Dakota and also into Minnesota, local agencies being maintained in the various towns. The equipment and accessories of the establishment are the best modern type and work is turned out with expedition and in such style as to retain the patronage of those who have once availed themselves of its conveniences. The laundry was established in January, 1900, and in the same employment is given to a corps of from twenty-five to thirty persons, while the work is all under the direct supervision of a thoroughly skilled and experienced foreman, the equipment of the laundry representing a financial investment of about twenty-five thousand dollars. The interested principals are William J. and Oliver M. Tiffany, both of whom are actively identified with the conducting of the rapid growing business. Prior to coming to Aberdeen they had been engaged in the same line of enterprise in Northfield, Minnesota, for a period of five years, so that they fully understood how to secure the best results and give the most satisfactory service to their patrons.

W. J. and O. M. Tiffany were born near Northfield, Minnesota, the former on July 4, 1872, and the latter on June 18, 1877, the sons of Mathew Tiffany, who was born in Oneida county, New York, and married Elizabeth Steadman, of

New York state. The parents removed to Minnesota during the early 'seventies.

W. J. attended the district schools and put in four years at the Northfield high school. He received his business training as a clerk in a dry-goods store at Northfield, where he spent two and a half years. He then engaged in the laundry business in Northfield.

O. M. attended the district schools, graduated from the Northfield high school, and also graduated from Carlton College (Northfield) in 1898. He then taught school one year, after which he joined his brother in the laundry business. They came to Aberdeen together.

W. J. married Minnie Miller, a native of New York state, who is the daughter of Jay Miller, of Glenn, New York. Six children have been born of this union: Ernest W., Jay M., Stanley M., Dewey E., Lillian V. and Irene V.

O. M. married Maude McGandy, of Marshall, Minnesota, daughter of James McGandy, and they have one child, Earl.

FLOYD C. DARLING, deceased, was a native of the great Buckeye state, having been born in Warren, Trumbull county, Ohio, on the 18th of February, 1853, and being a son of Russell and Mary (Laraway) Darling. He received his educational training in the public schools of Ohio, and as a youth became identified with the great railroading industry. At the age of twenty-two years he engaged as locomotive fireman on the line of the Erie Railroad, between Cleveland and Youngstown, Ohio. He was faithful and capable and in due time advancement came, and in 1879 he was placed in charge of an engine. In 1883 he came to Aberdeen, and was given an engine on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, which he continued to run until his death. He was punctilious and careful in the discharge of his responsible duties and to this fact was due the excellent record he made, no serious accidents having marred his experience as an engineer.

In politics Mr. Darling was a member of the Republican party, and he held the Knights Templar degree in the York Rite of the Masonic fraternity, and also the thirty-second degree in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, being a popular member of the various bodies of the order in Aberdeen, including the temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He was also a knight commander of the Court of Honor and was also a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

In Titusville, Pennsylvania, on the 20th of June, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Darling to Miss Margaret McCauley, who was born in Pennsylvania. Of this union were born six children, concerning whom we enter the following brief record: Viola is the wife of Arthur W. Oliver, of Victor, Colorado; Etta is the wife of Orville Gard, of Aberdeen; Nellie is the wife of John Clawson, of Aurora, Illinois; Margaret is employed in one of the leading mercantile establishments in Aberdeen, and Ruby is a member of the class of 1906 in the high school. Flora, the fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. Darling, died in Cleveland, Ohio. The eldest daughter was formerly the wife of the late Eugene A. Lamb, who was proprietor of the Aberdeen marble works and brick yard, and three children were born of this union, Gertrude, Francis and Marie. Mrs. Darling is a member of the Catholic church. Mr. Darling died April 3, 1904.

FRED I. DOTEN was born on July 29, 1855, at Spencer, Massachusetts, and is the son of Isaac W. and Fidelia (Wright) Doten, the former a native of Maine and the latter of Massachusetts. The forefathers of both came to this country in colonial times, and were prominent in the early history of New England, Mr. Doten's great-grandfather serving as an officer in the American army through the Revolution. The father was a physician, practicing most of his time as such in Massachusetts, and dying at Spencer when a comparatively young man. The sheriff grew to manhood in his native state, remaining there until he was twenty-one years old and getting his education in the district schools of Middlefield. Early in 1877 he left his native heath for the wild and undeveloped Black Hills region, traveling by way of Yankton and arriving at Rapid City on May 1. He passed the first summer prospecting on Rapid creek and in the autumn moved to Deadwood where he has had his home almost continuously since that time. He engaged in various pursuits necessary and profitable in the early days, such as driving stage, farming and running a hack line. In 1894 he went to Terry and put on a line of hacks to run between that place and Lead which he owned and managed until the beginning of 1901, when he gave it up to take charge of the office of sheriff of the county, to which he was elected in the fall of 1900 by a large majority of the people without seeking or desiring the nomination himself, being the candidate of the Republican party, to which he has always belonged. In his management of this office he has been very successful and has won high commendation from all classes of his fellow citizens. He is brave, keen and honest, true to every public interest and ever considerate as well of private rights and the feelings of all, proving with force and impressiveness that the public judgment which singled him out for the place was good and wisely heeded. He mingles freely in the fraternal life of the community, belonging to the Knights of Pythias and the United Workmen at Terry, and the Eagles, Red Men and Elks at Deadwood.

On June 8, 1896, Mr. Doten was married at Terry to Miss Mary Zink, a native of Kansas and daughter of William L. Zink, one of the prominent citizens of the Hills who settled in this region when she was only one year old.

HENRY NOBLE was born January 26, 1852, at Garnadilla, Iowa, and there grew to maturity on a farm. During his boyhood and youth he attended the public schools of his neighborhood, and until his twenty-fifth year remained under the parental roof, assisting his father in running the home place and contributing his full share to the support of the family. In 1877 Mr. Noble severed home ties and engaged with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad as fireman, the duties of which position he discharged until 1879, when he was promoted engineer, with headquarters in the town of McGregor. In 1883 he was transferred to Mitchell, South Dakota, and after remaining ten years at that place, removed to Aberdeen, where he has since resided, being on the run between these two points. Mr. Noble's run is one of the most important on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul system in the west and his responsibilities are therefore very great. During his long period of service he has rarely been absent from duty, and his efficiency and faithful service have been such as to gain the unbounded confidence of his superiors. Fraternally Mr. Noble is a Knight Templar and a thirty-second-degree Scottish-rite Mason, being one of the leading members of the order in the city of his residence and honored at different times with important official station. He is also an influential factor in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and as a citizen enjoys in a marked degree the confidence and esteem of the community. Blessed with a strong physique and endowed with an ardent nature, he is exceedingly fond of field sports and out-of-door amusements, and during his vacations finds his greatest enjoyment with the rod and gun.

In 1872, while residing in his native state of Iowa, Mr. Noble was united in marriage with Miss Phila Pickett, a union which has been blessed with two children, Lila, a teacher in the public schools, and a son by the name of Field.

EMORY C. LASHLEY is a native of Cumberland, Maryland, where he was born on October 12, 1855, and the son of David H. and Sarah (Ash) Lashley, natives of Virginia. In 1856 the family moved to Washington, Iowa, where they remained until 1868, then settled at Lincoln, Nebraska. Here they were veritable pioneers, there being but three houses in the town when they located there. The father engaged in the lumber business and made that town his home until 1879, when he moved to Furnas county in the same state, and built a grist mill which he conducted until his death. The son had but limited opportunities for securing an education, as the school facilities at Lincoln in his day were meager and primitive, and he was taken there at the age of thirteen. He at once went to work with his father in lumbering, and a few months later began clerking in a clothing and furnishing store, in which he was employed until he reached the age of seventeen. For two years from 1873 he worked on the range in western Kansas, then, after a short visit to his home, went to Colorado and during the next two years prospected and mined in different parts of that state. In 1877 he came to the Black Hills, arriving at Deadwood on April 3d and going to work immediately for H. B. Young on his mining property, which was afterward sold to the Homestake Company, remaining with Mr. Young until July. He then found employment with Moses and Fred Manuel, who at that time owned the principal claims that later formed the Homestake group. When they sold their properties to the Homestake Company he went into the employ of that organization, beginning work for it the same morning when it acquired this property. He was shift boss of miners and laborers for this company until 1894, except during one year when he was prospecting in Montana, and while working for the company acquired mining claims of his own which are of great value. In 1894 he resigned from the service of this company and in partnership with J. B. Tortat leased the Golden Crown mine, near Lead, for six months. Four months were consumed in boring a tunnel in search of good veins of ore which had disappeared and then they were again discovered and found to be rich and profitable. Two months later the owner sold the property and Mr. Lashley leased other mines and prospected in various places throughout the Hills, working also at different times for the Homestake Company. In 1901 he took a position with this company, intending to remain in its employ, but in the fall of the next year he was elected register of deeds on the Republican ticket, and on January 1, 1903, resigned his position with the company and took charge of his office. He has not, however, abandoned his interest in mining and still owns a number of very promising claims. On February 16, 1882, he was married to Miss Katie Kostamo, a native of Finland, the marriage taking place at Lead. They have two children, Florence B. and Charles H. Mr. Lashley's fraternal affiliations are with Lodge No. 747, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, at Lead, the United Workmen and the Miners' Union of Lead.

SAMUEL SCHWARZWALD was born on February 16, 1848, in Prussia and is the son of Jacob and Fuerda (Kohn) Schwarzwald, natives of that country where their families lived for many generations. In 1857 the family emigrated to the United States and located in New York city, where the father became a successful dealer in horses. Here the son grew to the age of sixteen and was educated in the public schools. In 1864 he went to Augusta, Georgia, where he passed seventeen months working in a dry-goods store. He then returned to New York, and in June, 1867, again left the city for a distant point, going to St. Joseph, Missouri, by rail and from there up the Missouri to Fort Benton, Montana, whence he made his way overland to Helena. In that city he wrought at various occupations until 1869, then went to Cedar Creek, and until 1873 carried the mails between that place and Forest City. At the end of that period he returned to Helena, and during the next three years was a salesman in the clothing store of Gans & Klein, one of the leading mercantile establishments of Montana's capital. In the summer of 1876 he came to the Black Hills, making the trip by boat from Fort Benton to Bismarck and from there overland to Deadwood, arriving at that place on August 12. Here he began dealing in grain and produce and soon built up an extensive trade, handling all the grain and similar commodities brought into the Hills by trains. In the fall of 1877 he opened a new and second-hand furniture establishment, having bought the lot on which he is now doing business in 1876 and built a frame house on it for a store. Since 1879 he has devoted his time entirely to furniture, and in 1894 erected the storehouse he now uses for the purpose, adding the adjoining building three years later. In addition to his mercantile enterprise he has always been interested in mining, dealing principally in stocks connected with the industry, making a success of that as he has of his other ventures, and occupying a leading position among the business men of the community. He is an active Republican in politics and has during the whole of his manhood been zealous in the service of his party; and he has been equally energetic in the matter of public improvements and the progress and development of every good undertaking for the advancement of his section and the comfort and convenience of its people.

On January 19, 1903, at Chadron, Nebraska, the subject was married to Mrs. Gussie (Lowenthal) Nathan, a native of Brooklyn, New York. He finds pleasure and relief from the cares of business in two of the fraternal orders, being an esteemed member of the Elks and the Eagles.

CHARLES P. PINSONNAULT is a native of the province of Quebec, Canada, where he was born on May 22, 1862, the son of Charles and Louise (Quintal) Pinsonnault, also natives of that country. He received his education in his native land, remaining there until he reached the age of eighteen years. Then, in 1880, looking upon the mining regions of the United States as affording more extensive and better opportunities for thrift and enterprise than any portion of the Dominion at that time, he came to the Black Hills, making the trip by rail to Bismarck and from there by stage to Deadwood, arriving at the latter place on June 15th. He clerked at Central City until December 10th, when he came to Lead and entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, working in the mills for a period of three years, and during that time acquiring a good knowledge of amalgamating. He was employed in this branch of the industry for six years in a subordinate capacity, and in 1893 was made chief amalgamator of what was then the Highland and is now the Amicus mill. In the interest of his line of the mining business he visited the Columbian Exposition at Chicago for observation and study and brought back much new light and many valuable hints. He still holds his position and is well established in the confidence and regard of his employers and his fellow men and having devoted all his mature life so far to the study of his business, he has acquired a knowledge of it, both technical and practical, that is scarcely surpassed anywhere. He has also made good use of his earnings, becoming possessed of valuable mining claims adjoining the Golden Reward properties, which are full of promise, and a number of desirable pieces of real estate at Lead, among them a handsome residence in which he lives. He is a member of the Commercial Club of the town and is active in pushing forward the development and progress of his community. In fraternal relations he is connected with the Modern Woodmen of America, and has rendered excellent service to the order, representing his portion of the state in the general convention at Kansas city in 1899, and at Indianapolis in 1903. He is also a member of Lead Hose Company No. 1.

On December 22, 1887, at Piedmont, in this state, Mr. Pinsonnault was married to Miss Corinne Mochon, a native of Montreal. They have three children, Hector A., Eugene P. and Lucile.

ABRAM L. READ is a native of Fairfield, Iowa, where he was born on July 18, 1860, and is the son of William M. and Matilda (Bottom) Read, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of England. His father was a miller and followed his craft at Fairfield, where the son grew to manhood and received his education. At the age of thirteen he began to assist his father in the mill during the vacations between the school terms, and when he reached the age of twenty turned his attention to farming, remaining there aiding in the work on the farm three years. In the spring of 1883 he came west to Colorado where he worked in the mining mills for one year, then passed a year in traveling over various western states. In 1885 he made a journey with teams to the Black Hills, stopping at a number of places on the way and arriving at Lead in May, 1886. He soon after entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company, in its mill at Terryville, where he learned the work of amalgamating and remained until the mill closed in 1893, being at the time chief amalgamator. He pursued a year's course in the School of Mines at Rapid City, and in 1894 came to Lead and secured a position as chief amalgamator in the Golden Star, a two-hundred-stamp mill and one of the two largest mills of the kind in this part of the country. He saved his money and invested it in mining property and claims, of which he now owns a considerable and valuable body. He also bought real estate at Lead, where, in addition to his beautiful residence, he has other valuable property. On May 3, 1900, he was married at Lead, to Miss Emma Robbins, a native of New York. Mrs. Read was formerly a teacher in the public schools of Lead for a number of years. They have one son, Robert R. Mr. Read is an earnest and devoted member of the Masonic lodge at Lead, and he and his wife are prominent and active in the social life of the town where they have a host of friends who find their home a center of refined and considerate hospitality and social enjoyment. As chief amalgamator for the Golden Star Mining Company, Mr. Read has a position of importance and responsibility, and it is but just to say of him that he meets its exacting requirements in a masterful manner and in a way that has secured for him the utmost confidence and regard of his employers.

GEORGE W. CURTIS is a native of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, born on July 9, 1856, and is the son of Samuel and Elizabeth (Gibbard) Curtis, who were born and reared in England. The father was a farmer in Wisconsin, and the son grew to the age of twenty years on the paternal homestead, receiving his education in the district schools of Oakfield in his native state, and acquiring habits of useful industry and thrift on the farm. In 1876 he went to Minnesota, and after passing a few months in that state, in the spring of 1877 outfitted at Long Prairie with ox-teams and came with a party across the country to the Black Hills, where he prospected for a year. In 1878 he located at Lead and entered the employ of the Homestake Mining Company in the first mill owned and operated by it, the old No. 2 mill, which the company renamed the Highland mill. This was his first experience in amalgamating and he was new to the business. But by continued and studious application he soon mastered it, and in this line of activity he has been since steadily employed. At the end of nine months he was made night foreman of the mill, and he served in this capacity until 1879, when he returned to Wisconsin on a visit to his parents. In the following spring he came back to Lead and went into the company's new Highland mill as amalgamator, and six years later was made head amalgamator of this mill. He served in that position until February, 1896, and was then transferred to the Homestake mill as head amalgamator. This is a two-hundred-stamp mill and one of the largest this company has. From that time until now he has filled the position acceptably and has risen to a high place in the confidence and esteem of both the company and the community in which it operates, being now one of the oldest and most trusted employes of the establishment. He mingles freely in the social life of the town and surrounding country, and is an active participant in all phases of their productive enterprises. A valued member of the Odd Fellows lodge at Lead, he has been of great service to the organization through his intelligence and energy and his breadth of view in lodge affairs. On January 6, 1886, he was married at Lead to Mrs. Florence G. (Ashton) Nelson, a native of Ohio. They have four children, Leo A., Hazel, Gertrude and George W., the latter having died at the age of two years and four months.

JAMES McQUILLEN, of Lead, was born on August 15, 1843, at Jackson, Michigan, where his parents, Nicholas and Elizabeth (Riley) McQuillen, settled on their arrival in this country from Ireland, where they were born and reared.

They came to America in 1826, and believing there was greater opportunity for enterprise and thrift in the unsettled West than in the East, proceeded at once to the territory of Michigan and, accepting the hard conditions of life in the wilderness, began to build a home and win an estate by hard work and stern endurance of every privation. The father was a mechanic and found his skill in great demand in the new country. The son was reared to the age of eighteen in his native place and was educated in its schools. In 1861, fired with the same spirit of adventure and self-reliance that had impelled his parents, he made a trip to California by way of New York and Cape Horn, and on arriving at his destination after a tedious and perilous voyage he engaged in prospecting and mining. He was at Sacramento when the presidential election of 1864 took place, and there he cast his vote for Mr. Lincoln's electors. He remained in California and Nevada until 1872, all the while connected with the mining industry, then returned to Michigan and secured employment in the copper mines around Lake Superior. Six years were passed in that region and occupation, and in the early part of 1878 he left for the Black Hills, where he was destined to find his future home, arriving in April. In July following he began an engagement with the Homestake Mining Company, which has continued until now, and he is now one of the oldest of that company's employees in continuous service. When he began to work for this corporation it had no mills, but one was erected during the same month that his work there began. He was assigned to the amalgamating department of the work, and with this he has been connected ever since. For ten years he has been night foreman of the stamp mills of the Homestake Company and by his fidelity and conscientious and intelligent performance of his important duties he has won a high place in the regard of his employers and the men in the mill. He has been careful of his earnings, investing them judiciously in mining property and other real estate, and he now has valuable possessions in each. His mining interests are very promising, and can hardly fail to be of great value in time. He stands well in the community, and takes an active and serviceable interest in every phase of its advancement. He belongs to the United Workmen, and he and his family are members of the Catholic church.

On July 18, 1880, at Houghton, Michigan, Mr. McQuillen was married to Miss Katie Halloran, a native of that state. They have one daughter, Katie, who was born at Lead and is now the wife of Herbert Richardson.

CHARLES K. WEEDON, of Central City, is a native of Columbiana county, Ohio, where he was born on November 23, 1835, and is the son of James and Nancy (Mankin) Weedon, who was born and reared in Virginia. They settled in that portion of Ohio when it was on the wild frontier, and there they established a home and developed a good farm, remaining until 1843, when they moved to Wayne county, Illinois. There the father took up a homestead and again began to redeem the virgin soil from its wildness and make it fruitful with the products of cultivated life. The parents remained in that county until death ended their labors; and there also the son grew to manhood and was educated in the district schools near his home and at the high school in Fairfield, the county seat. After leaving school he assisted his father on the farm until February, 1862, when he enlisted in defense of the Union in Company E, Seventh Illinois Cavalry, in which regiment he served three years, mostly in the armies of the West. He participated in a number of important engagements, making a gallant record as a soldier and being mustered out as a non-commissioned officer at Gravelly Springs, Alabama, in 1865. He then returned to his Illinois home, and after spending some time in farming, engaged in the livery business at Fairfield. In the spring of 1877 he came to the Black Hills, arriving at Deadwood on March 7th. He at once went to work in the mines at Golden Gate near Central City, where he was employed two years. In 1879 he purchased property and built a livery barn at Central City, and since that time he has been conducting one of the leading livery businesses in this part of the state, being by continuous application to the same enterprise one of the oldest business men in the place. In political faith he is a staunch Republican and during the whole of his mature life he has been active and effective in the service of his party. In 1893 he was elected county assessor of Lawrence county, and was re-elected in 1895. During the two years following the close of his second term he was in the office as deputy, thus serving the county six years in connection with the valuation of property for taxation. In local affairs, independent of political considerations, and in every good undertaking for the advancement of his community, he has always been zealous and energetic. While devoting his attention to other business he has kept up his interest in mining and owns a number of valuable properties and claims.

On March 15, 1867, Mr. Weedon was married at Memphis, Tennessee, to Miss Lizzie McCoy, a native of Wisconsin, who died on August 24, 1901, and was buried in the cemetery at Deadwood.

ANDREW H. LUNDIN was born in Sweden on August 24, 1848, and remained in his native land until he was twenty, receiving his education and learning his trade as a blacksmith there. In 1868 he came to the United States, and after working at his trade for nearly five years in various parts of the East, went to California in 1873, and during the next three years was employed at his craft in San Francisco and at mines in other parts of the state. In 1876 he returned east on a visit, and the next spring came to the Black Hills, arriving in May. A few months were passed in different portions of this region, then in September, 1877, he settled at Lead, where he has since maintained his home. His first engagement here was, as a blacksmith for the Golden Star mine, and later he worked for the Highland in the same capacity. This was before these properties belonged to the Homestake Company, and when it acquired them he accepted employment with it, remaining in its service until 1882. In that year he took charge of the shops of the Black Hills & Fort Pierre Railroad at Lead, this line at that time belonging to the Homestake Company. When it was sold to the Burlington in August, 1901, he left its employ and took a year's rest. In the fall of 1902 he built his present shop on Prince street, and here he has worked up a large and profitable business in blacksmithing and making wagons. He has been thrifty all the while as well as industrious, and has acquired considerable real estate of value in the town and extensive mining interests. On April 19, 1882, he was married at Lead to Miss Helen Brakke, a native of Wisconsin. They have three children, Alfred, Willard and Helen. Mr. Lundin is a devoted and zealous member of the Masonic order and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, holding his membership in the lodges of these fraternities at Lead. No man in the town or neighborhood stands higher in the general estimation of the public, and none deserves a higher place in public regard and good will.

WILLIS HUNT BONHAM is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born on a farm in Jasper county, on the 13th of January, 1847, and being a son of Levi M. and Mary (Hunt) Bonham, both of whom were born in Virginia, whence they accompanied their respective parents to Ohio in childhood, being there reared to maturity and there married, while they became numbered among the sterling pioneers of Illinois, the father developing a good farm in Jasper county, while he also was a civil engineer and did no little work in this line and in his younger days was a successful teacher. The family records in the agnatic line available to the subject date back to a few years prior to the war of the Revolution, and indicate that ancestors of the line removed from Massachusetts to Maryland and Virginia.

The subject of this sketch received a common-school education, and as a youth was studious and industrious, making the most of the opportunities afforded him. He left the home farm at the age of twenty years and learned the trade of painting and decorating. In 1873 he removed to Denver, Colorado, where he worked at his trade until 1877, when he came to the Black Hills, being one of the pioneers in this section of South Dakota. He located in Deadwood and shortly afterward drifted into the newspaper business, with which he has ever since been successfully identified. He began at the foot of the ladder and finally became the publisher of a paper and attained a success greater than any of his competitors, finally bringing about the consolidation of the two leading papers, which he now owns and publishes. At the time of the Civil war he enlisted in a regiment of Illinois volunteers, but was mustered out after three weeks, by reason of his being under the required age. Mr. Bonham has proved one of the valuable and progressive citizens of Deadwood, in whose affairs he has ever maintained a deep interest. He served as city clerk from 1882 to 1887, and has been helpful along every line of local enterprise of a public nature. He had much to do with the organization of the efficient city fire department, with which he became identified in a personal way at the time of its inception, having served as foreman and later as chief engineer. In politics he gives an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party and is an active worker in its cause. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Improved Order of Red Men, Eagles and other social organizations, while in his younger days he was an active member of the Presbyterian church.

CHARLES A. RANDALL was born in Logansport, Indiana, on July 9, 1871, and he is the son of Charles H. and Augusta (Thissel) Randall, natives of Massachusetts. The father was a pattern maker and lived in Logansport until the close of his life. The son grew to manhood there and after being graduated from the high school attended an excellent college at Urbana, Illinois, where he pursued a course of special training in architecture. On leaving this institution he went to Chicago and passed three years in an architect's office to get the benefit of practical work in his profession. In 1893 he returned to Logansport and opened an office there, soon becoming one of the leading architects of northern Indiana, his work calling him to all the surrounding towns. He made plans for and built many of the principal public buildings that were erected during his stay there. In 1901 he closed out his interests in Indiana, and coming to Deadwood in this state, formed a partnership with O. C. Jewett, who had been actively engaged in the profession for a number of years in the Black Hills. In April, 1902, Mr. Jewett died, and since then Mr. Randall has continued the business alone. When it was determined by a number of the leading citizens of Deadwood to build a hotel in the town that would do justice and be a credit to the place, he was asked to draw plans and specifications for the structure, and when he submitted his drawings they were promptly approved, and the hotel was built according to them. This was his first great work in Deadwood, and the house stands a lasting monument to the enterprise of the people of the city and of his own skill and capacity. Since the completion of this edifice his work has constantly increased, and there is already a noticeable improvement in the character of the buildings erected in the city, and there is also excellent promise that this improvement will go on to larger and still better results. He is thoroughly in love with his profession, and approaches every duty in connection with it with the breadth of view and public-spirit of a progressive and far-seeing man, and also with a conscientious devotion to the highest ideals and the most praiseworthy motives.

LAFAYETTE COWDIN is a native of Wyoming county, New York, where his birth occurred on the 10th day of June, 1854. Reared on a farm, he grew up a strong, well-developed lad and at an early age learned to appreciate the dignity of honest toil and to rely upon his own exertions in the matter of obtaining a livelihood. He attended at intervals during his youth the public schools of his native place, and after assisting his father on the farm until twenty years old, he severed home ties and turned his face towards the great west, starting in September, 1876, for South Dakota, with the Black Hills as his objective point.

Reaching Deadwood on the 24th of the following month, Mr. Cowdin accepted a position with his brother-in-law, G. W. R. Pettibone, in whose company he came west, the latter shortly after their arrival opening a store in the town of Gayville. After clerking there for a short time the subject was sent to Sydney to buy goods, which being accomplished he returned to Gayville and looked after the store until the following spring, the meanwhile doing considerable prospecting for himself in different parts of the country. The following summer he returned to the Hills where he was variously engaged until the next spring, when he started in an express business in Deadwood, beginning in a modest way with one horse and a light wagon with which he soon secured a lucrative patronage. Some time later, in the fall of 1878, he began carrying passengers from Deadwood to Rockfort, his being the first public conveyance between the two places, but after devoting a few months to staging, he discontinued the business to run a springing wagon in the former city. Subsequently he was engaged in hauling lumber to Deadwood, which line of work he followed until February, 1880, and then took up a ranch on Alkalie creek, where he turned his attention to agricultural pursuits.

After farming one summer, Mr. Cowdin sold his ranch and returning to Deadwood, resumed staging, running from that city to Galena. This proved a remunerative enterprise and he continued it until May, 1883, when he sold out and located at Sturgis, where he has since been engaged in the livery business. Shortly after settling in his present place of residence, he purchased a well-equipped barn on Main street, which with the improvements since added is now the largest and most successful establishment of the kind in the city, one of the best patronized and most popular livery barns in this section of the state. Mr. Cowdin keeps a number of the finest horses obtainable, both for saddle and driving purposes, and his rolling stock is first-class and up-to-date, consisting of carriages, buggies, phaetons, broughams and other vehicles, all of modern style and selected with an eye to beauty and comfort as well as to utility. Without invidious distinction, it has been asserted that Mr. Cowdin is without doubt the most popular business man in Sturgis, being kind and obliging, cordial in his relations with his patrons, genial in disposition and the life of any social circle in which he may be found.

Mr. Cowdin is a married man and the father of an interesting family that is well known and favorably regarded by the best social element in the city of Sturgis. His wife was formerly Miss Martha Tourtillott, a native of Minnesota, and the ceremony by which her name was changed to the one she now bears was solemnized at Fort Pierre, South Dakota, on December 1st of the year 1884; the three children born to this union are Emma B., Edna L. and M^r. J.

JOHN SCOLLARD, proprietor of the Hotel Scollard in Sturgis, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in Washington county, Wisconsin, on the 3d of January, 1852, and being a son of Patrick and Elizabeth (Murphy) Scollard, both of whom were born in Ireland. They were numbered among the early settlers in Wisconsin, and passed the closing years of their lives in that state. The subject was reared on the homestead farm and completed the curriculum of the public schools of his native state, having taken a course in the high school in the city of Milwaukee. After leaving school he followed various occupations in Wisconsin until the centennial year, 1876, when he came to the Black Hills, being numbered among the adventurous spirits who initiated the march of progress and development in this section. In 1878 he became proprietor of the Hotel Scollard, in Sturgis, and has ever since conducted this caravansary, having made improvements upon the building from time to time and now having a modern and well-conducted house,—one well meriting the patronage which it is accorded. In politics Mr. Scollard is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Democratic party, and though he has never sought official preferment he has ever taken a deep interest in public affairs, particularly of a local nature, and is known as a progressive and loyal citizen. He served as a member of the constitutional convention of 1889 and has served two terms as mayor of Sturgis. He has been affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows since 1878, being now a member of Bear Butte Lodge, No. 46; while he is also identified with Rathbone Lodge, No. 78, Knights of Pythias, and with Sturgis Aerie, No. 225, Fraternal Order of Eagles.

On the 21st of January, 1875, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Scollard to Miss Margaret Donnelly, who was born in the state of New York, on the 5th of February, 1855, being a daughter of Patrick Donnelly. Mr. and Mrs. Scollard are the parents of two children, as follows: Mabel, who was born in Sioux City and died at the age of nine years in 1884, being buried in the cemetery at Sturgis; Gertrude, who was born in Deadwood in 1878 and was the first white female born in that place. She was educated in the public schools and at the Sacred Heart Convent at Omaha, Nebraska.

MOSES HAINES, of Lawrence county, South Dakota, came to the United States from the British possessions, being a native of New Brunswick, where his birth occurred on the 23d of February, 1846. His boyhood, which was uneventful, was spent amid the quiet scenes of the parental home, and at intervals until his sixteenth year he attended the public schools, acquiring, by close application, a knowledge of the branches constituting the prescribed course of study. At the above age he left home and entered upon his career as a self-supporting actor in the affairs of life, going first to the state of Minnesota, where he worked at lumbering for different parties until 1868, when he decided to seek his fortune further west. Yielding to a desire of long standing, Mr. Haines went to Montana, where he turned his attention to mining, in the prosecution of which he traveled extensively over that territory, visiting the different mining districts, but meeting with only fair success in his operations. He remained in that part of the county until the discovery of gold in the Black Hills, in 1876, when he made for the new land of promise, joining a company on March 4th of that year, which, under the leadership of one William Langston, started from Bozeman, and came in via what is now Spearfish and arrived at Deadwood the latter part of the following May. The men comprising this company were among the first to reach the Black Hills, and at the time of their arrival the present flourishing city of Deadwood was nothing but a small collection of tents and a few insignificant log shacks, occupied by hardy and daring adventurers, who made everything in the shape of comfort secondary to the one absorbing desire for gold. After spending about two months in Deadwood and vicinity, Mr. Haines came to the foot hills on Whitewood creek, where he spent the greater part of the summer and following winter, and the next spring he took up his present ranch, four miles from the town of Whitewood, and began farming and stock raising. In the course of a few years he had a goodly portion of his land in cultivation, also increased the number of his cattle the meanwhile, and in due time became one of the successful agriculturists and stock men on Whitewood creek, which reputation he still enjoys. He added to his real estate from time to time, made a number of good improvements on his ranch, and his cattle interests continued to grow apace until, as stated above, he found himself one of the leaders of the industry in Lawrence county, as well as an influential factor in the civil affairs of the same.

In 1897 Mr. Haines moved his family to Whitewood and has resided in the town ever since, though still owning his ranch and giving personal attention to his large and constantly increasing cattle and other live-stock interests. He was married in Crook City on the 8th of May, 1891, the lady of his choice being Miss Hattie Jones, of Iowa, who departed this life on December 12, 1897, leaving, besides her bereaved husband, a daughter by the name of Nettie.

Mr. Haines is a gentleman of high character and excellent repute, and enjoys to a marked degree the confidence of the people with whom he mingles.

JAMES H. MCCOY, who is now serving on the bench of the fifth judicial circuit of the state, was born on a farm near Oakley, Macon county, Illinois, on the 14th of July, 1855, the son of Benjamin F. and Minerva D. (Helm) McCoy, the former of whom was born and reared in Greenbrier county, Virginia, where he devoted his active life to agricultural pursuits. He is now a resident of Oakley, Illinois, of which state he is an honored pioneer. His wife was born near the city of Baltimore, Maryland, in 1830, and died at Oakley, Illinois, in 1889.

The subject of this sketch pursued his studies in the district schools during his boyhood days and then entered the high school at Decatur, Illinois, where he fitted himself for matriculation in the Illinois Wesleyan University, at Bloomington, being graduated in the law department of that institution as a member of the class of 1880. During the following two years he gave his attention principally to teaching in the public schools of his native state, and in 1883 he was appointed special field examiner for the United States pension department, with headquarters in Louisville, Kentucky. In July, 1885, he was dismissed from this position on account of "offensive partisanship," and the following month he opened a law office at Britton, Marshall county, Dakota territory, there continuing in active practice until 1893, when he removed to Webster, Day county, South Dakota, where he built up a large and important law business, remaining in practice there until January, 1900, when he transferred his residence and professional headquarters to the city of Aberdeen. His practice was of general character, and from 1890 to 1901 he probably tried as many civil cases as any other attorney in the circuit, this fact standing in unmistakable evidence of his ability and the confidence reposed in him by the public. In 1887 Judge McCoy was appointed county auditor of Marshall county, and two years later was elected county judge of that county, being re-elected in 1892. In 1901 he was elected to his present exacting and responsible office of judge of the circuit court of the fifth judicial circuit, embracing the counties of Brown, Beadle, Day, Grant, Marshall, Spink and Roberts. His rulings on the bench have shown him to be possessed of a clear, judicial mind, a thorough knowledge of the minutiae of the law, and a desire to subordinate all else to the ends of justice, so that he has but augmented his hold upon popular confidence and esteem. On April 27, 1904, at the judicial convention held at Webster, the Judge was renominated by acclamation for a second term of four and a half years as judge. The Judge is an uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Republican party, in whose cause he has rendered effective service, having served as chairman of the central committees of both Marshall and Day counties. Externally he is identified with the Masonic order, having served two years as senior warden of Coteau Lodge, while a resident of Webster; he is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

In Springfield, Illinois, on the 27th of June, 1883, Judge McCoy was married to Miss Hanna F. Heath, and they have two children, Lelah K., who was born March 11, 1886, and James C., who was born October 18, 1892.

WAMPLER LEMUEL COCHRANE, PH. D., superintendent of the public schools of Aberdeen, is a native of Mercer county, Pennsylvania, born in the town of Clarksville, October 22, 1870, and nine years later accompanied his parents to Sullivan county, Missouri, where he lived on a farm until a youth of seventeen. Meanwhile he acquired his preliminary education in the public schools, and at the age noted entered Humphrey's College, Missouri, from which in due time he was graduated. While prosecuting his collegiate course he devoted his vacations to teaching, and, better to fit himself for the latter profession, subsequently became a student of the normal school at Kirksville, Missouri, where he pursued his studies until 1900, when he graduated with the class of that year. Prior to finishing his professional course at Kirksville, Professor Cochrane served as principal of schools at Glenwood and Browning, Missouri, also held a similar position for some time in the town of Craig, and in 1899 was elected superintendent of the public schools of Moulton, Iowa. Entering upon his duties at the last named place immediately after his graduation, he held the position during the ensuing three years, and at the expiration of that time resigned to take charge of the schools of Aberdeen, South Dakota, to which place he was chosen by the unanimous vote of the board of trustees. Professor Cochrane's work in this city has fully justified the board in the wisdom of their choice, his labors as an organizer as well as an educator giving new life and impetus to the schools of the city, and making the local educational system not only the leading one in South Dakota, but among the best in the United States, as prominent educators who have investigated his efforts and critically observed his methods cheerfully admit. Since taking charge of his present position he has inaugurated and carried to successful issue a number of radical reforms in the matter of instruction and management, including, among others, a new and greatly improved course of study, which is conceded to be one of the most thorough in the state, and making professional training as well as scholarship a prerequisite on the part of the teacher. The present corps of teachers, carefully selected with reference to intellectual culture and professional training, are either normal graduates or hold diplomas from other first-class educational institutions, and their tenure depends entirely upon fitness, the incompetents in due time being weeded out, and only those of high order of ability as instructors being retained. There are now in Aberdeen six school buildings of the latest and most improved style of architure, all neatly finished and supplied with the necessary furniture and educational appliances. A building but recently erected is said to be one of the finest specimens of school architecture in the state, if not the best. It is seventy by one hundred and forty feet in area, two stories high, contains twenty-two commodious, well-lighted rooms, with a seating capacity of three hundred, and with furniture and other necessary appliances, represents an outlay considerably in excess of fifty thousand dollars. The high school has long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the best institutions of the kind in the country, its graduates being received by the leading colleges and universities of South Dakota and other western states without examination, and it also articulates with the Chicago University, Columbia University at Washington, D. C., and with all the first-class educational institutions in the land.

In addition to his duties as superintendent Professor Cochrane is in great demand at certain seasons as an institute lecturer, his services in this capacity being highly prized wherever he has labored. Since locating at Aberdeen he has not only been active in promoting the city's educational interests, but has also contributed in no small degree to its general prosperity, being interested in all movements and enterprises making for the material advancement of the community and the social and moral good of his fellow men. Fond of athletics and healthful outdoor sports and amusements, he has used his influence to encourage the same among young people of the city, especially among students, and it was largely through his efforts that a finely equipped gymnasium was added to the splendid school building recently erected.

Professor Cochrane, in 1895, contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Alice Knight, of Linneus, Missouri, one of his classmates in college, and later a successful and popular teacher, the union resulting in the birth of one child, a son by the name of Harrold. Religiously Professor Cochrane and wife subscribe to the Methodist faith and belong to the church of that denomination in Aberdeen.

WARREN D. LANE, one of the successful attorneys of the Roberts county bar and member of the well-known law firm of Barrington & Lane, Sisseton, was born near Cresco, Iowa, May 10, 1867, the son of Abraham and Sarah (Darling) Lane, natives of Pennsylvania and New York respectively. Abraham Lane was a farmer and public-spirited citizen, and for many years enjoyed distinctive prestige in his community as an enterprising man of affairs. Of his family of seven children only three are living, Rev. Louis L. Lane, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Sisseton; Theron W., an attorney practicing his profession at Bridgeport, Washington, and Warren D., whose name furnishes the caption of this review. Mr. Lane moved to Iowa in 1851 and died in that state in 1879, at the age of forty-eight; his widow subsequently came to South Dakota and settled on a claim east of Wilmot, later changing her residence to the town of Bristol, where he departed this life in the year 1897.

The early life of Warren D. Lane was spent in Iowa, and his youthful experiences were similar to those of the majority of lads reared in close touch with nature on the farm. After attending the public schools of Cresco until the age of sixteen, finishing the high-school course the meantime, he accompanied his mother to South Dakota, settling in 1883 on the claim in Roberts county, alluded to in the preceding paragraph, where he devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits, until engaging with his brother in the furniture business at Wilmot two years later. Actuated by a laudable ambition to increase his scholastic training, he and his brother disposed of their furniture business in 1892, and entered the Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois, from which institution he was graduated four years later with the degree of Bachelor of Science. Subsequently he took the degree of Master of Science at the University of Minnesota, and in 1898 was graduated from the same institution with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, after which he began the practice of his profession at Sisseton, where in due time he forged to the front as an able and energetic attorney, winning a conspicuous place among the leading members of the Roberts county bar. Since then he has been admitted to practice in the higher courts of South Dakota and the supreme court of the United States, and by unflagging industry has built up a large and lucrative legal business.

While well grounded in the principals of the law and familiar with every branch of his profession, Mr. Lane has won especial distinction as an advocate, being regarded as one of the strong, logical and eloquent public speakers of the west, in consequence of which his services are eagerly sought in important jury trials and in cases requiring clear exposition of technical points of law and profound discussion before courts. While a student of the University of Minnesota, he represented that institution in the inter-collegiate debate with the Iowa University and at the Northwestern University he was elected class orator and won the Lyman F. Gage prize for extemporaneous debate, and was elected to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa Society, besides gaining various other honors for public discourse and scholarship.

The same year in which he opened an office in Sisseton, Mr. Lane was nominated by the Republican party of Roberts county for state's attorney, to which office he was triumphantly elected and the duties of which he discharged for two consecutive terms. He has always manifested a deep and abiding interest in political questions, and since coming west has been actively identified with the Republican party, being one of its leaders in this part of South Dakota, while as an organizer and campaigner his reputation is widely known throughout the state.

Primarily devoted to his law practice, and making every other consideration subordinate thereto, Mr. Lane is also interested in various business and industrial enterprises, being president of the Iowa and Dakota Land and Loan Company, vice-president of the Roberts County Abstract and Title Company, and a stockholder in the Citizens' National Bank, besides having large and valuable real-estate interests, owning a valuable homestead near Sisseton and considerable property within the corporation. Mr. Lane belongs to several secret and benevolent organizations, notable among which are the Masonic fraternity, Knights of Pythias and Improved Order of Red Men, in all of which he has held important official station.

Mr. Lane and Miss Maude Cross, of Wilmot, South Dakota, daughter of Edwin and Lyle (Smith) Cross, of Minnesota, were united in the bonds of wedlock on June 28, 1899, the marriage resulting in the birth of two children, Everett, who died September 5, 1900, at the age of five months, and Frances F., born August 25, 1902.

GEORGE N. WILLIAMSON has been successfully engaged in the practice of law in the city of Aberdeen, Brown county, for the past twelve years, and is one of the representative members of the bar of the state.

He is a native of the state of Minnesota, having been born in Rochester, Olmsted county, on the 20th of December, 1865, and being a son of Nathan N. and Mary Williamson, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in New England, while they were numbered among the pioneers of Minnesota, the father having been for many years engaged in the contracting business at Rochester. The subject received his early educational discipline in the public schools of Oronoco and Rochester, Minnesota, and then entered the law department of the University of Minnesota. He was admitted to the bar of his native state in 1889 and the same year to that of the new commonwealth of South Dakota, since he located in Aberdeen in 1892 and here initiated the active work of his profession, in which he has been most successful, being an able trial lawyer and a duly conservative counselor, he is a close student of his profession and gives careful preparation to every cause which he presents before court or jury. In politics he is an independent Republican and while he takes an active interest in public affairs and in the success of the party cause, he has never been ambitious for political office. He has attained the thirty-second degree in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite Masonry, and is also identified with the Knights of Pythias.

On the 15th of April, 1896, Mr. Williamson was married to Miss May M. Mackenzie, who was born in the city of St. Paul, Minnesota, on the 3d of August, 1875, being a daughter of Alexander C. and Annie Mackenzie. Of this union have been born three children, Alan N., Marjorie and Helen.

FRANCIS M. MURPHY.—Born and educated on the western verge of Missouri, removing in his youth to southern Colorado, and coming to the Black Hills in the full flush and vigor of his manhood, and having thus been practically a pioneer in three states of the great West, the late Francis M. Murphy, of Pennington county, was the very embodiment of its spirit, the broad sweep of its vision, the prodigious enterprise that drives its activities, and its daring faith which laughs at impossibilities and challenges fate herself into the lists ready to meet her on almost equal terms. His life began on December 22, 1843, in Platte county, Missouri, and he lived there until he reached the age of sixteen years, receiving in the public schools of that county all the book learning he ever got from academic teaching. In 1859, when he was just completing his sixteenth year, he accompanied his parents to Colorado, and with them settled in the southern part of the state. There he united with his father in extensive farming operations, working for a few years at a salary and then becoming a partner in the business. This relation continued until 1870, when he was married and started a similar enterprise in raising stock and general farming for himself. This he conducted with success until 1879, when he deemed it wise to try his fortunes amid the glowing promises of the Black Hills, and leaving his family at their Colorado home, he came directly to Rapid City, arriving in November, and bringing with him a band of cattle as a basis of operations. He took a squatter's claim on Rapid creek, five miles southeast of the city, and in the following spring, after the government survey had been made, filed on the land he had taken up, and this he made his home until his death. It is still occupied by his widow and children, and shows in its development and the well disposed and valuable improvements he made on it the character of his enterprise and progressiveness. He remained in this section until the spring of 1880, then returned to Colorado, closed out his interests there, and brought his family to their new abiding place. The cattle he brought with him on his first trip had wintered well and were in good condition for the enlargement of his stock industry, and he at once widened its scope and increased its proportions to more imposing magnitude, at the same time preparing to carry on in connection with it a vigorous general farming business suited to his circumstances. He worked hard to get his land fully irrigated and in good condition, and in all his undertakings in this connection, was very successful, being accounted at his untimely death, on March 26, 1900, one of the leading individual farmers and cattle growers in this part of the state. Being energetic, progressive and public-spirited, his influence in business circles and along industrial lines was felt far and wide, and was always wholesome and elevating in its effect; and his death was universally felt to be a loss to the county and state in which he had cast his lot, as well as a personal bereavement to the admiring friends whom he numbered by the host. He took an active part in public affairs also; and although a Democrat in politics, and a staunch supporter of his party in state and national issues, he was not partisan, but patriotic in local affairs, and clearly saw and ardently worked for the best interests of the community without reference to party or personal considerations. He was buried at Rapid City with many demonstrations of popular esteem, and his last hours were brightened with the reflection that his enterprise and capacity had secured ample provision for the comfort of his family after his decease. He belonged to the Masonic fraternity, with membership in the lodge at Rapid City.

FRANCIS M. MURPHY.

On October 10, 1870, Mr. Murphy was united in marriage with Miss Sarah J. Morris, a native of Missouri, but living at the time in Arapahoe county, Colorado, where the marriage occurred. They became the parents of four children, Isaac M., David R., Mary E. (Mrs. Haas) and Edna. The sons are now, in connection with their mother, carrying on the business. They have taken up land of their own, and with their mother hold everything in common; and although it is high praise, it is but a just meed to merit to say that they are in every way worthy followers of their father.

JOHN ROTH, one of the representative farmers and stock growers of Grant county, was born in Hohenzollern, Germany, on the 22d of May, 1858, and he is the son of Florian and Sophia (Beuter) Roth, both representatives of stanch old German stock. The mother died in Germany in 1858, and in 1887 the father came to America, and he now resides on a farm about three miles distant from that of our subject. In the family were three children, of whom the subject of this sketch is the only son. Fanny is the wife of Adna Woolsey and resides near Summit, South Dakota; and the younger sister, Josie, is the wife of John L. Roth, who resides near Rochester, Minnesota.

John Roth, whose name initiates this review, was reared in his native place, and received his educational discipline in the excellent national schools of Germany, where he continued to reside until he had attained the age of seventeen years, when, in 1875, he severed the ties which bound him to home and fatherland and set forth to seek his fortunes in America, depending entirely upon his own resources and being at the time unversed in the English language. That he has so admirably succeeded in making his way to the goal of definite prosperity and independence, stands to his perpetual credit and stamps him as a man of energy, perseverance and inflexible integrity. He first located in Mower county, Minnesota, where he found employment at farm work, while he showed his ambition to advance in knowledge by attending school during the winter terms, making the best use of his advantages and soon gaining an intimate command of the language of his adopted country. In 1879 he came to South Dakota, and in June of that year filed entry on his present homestead, which was then thirty-five miles distant from the nearest railroad point, the little village of Gary, in Deuel county. He took up his residence on his claim and bent all his energies to its improvement and cultivation, the results of his efforts being evident in the attractive buildings and other improvements to be seen on the place today, including fine groves of trees, good fences, etc., while the entire tract is available for cultivation and yields good returns for the labors expended. He gives his attention to the raising of various cereals best adapted to the soil and climate, and also to the raising of live stock of excellent type. In 1892 Mr. Roth was one of the organizers of the Evangelical Mutual Insurance Company, of which he has been secretary from the start, having proved a most able and discriminating executive and giving no little time to the work involved in the handling of the affairs of the office, while it may be said that this is the largest mutual company in the state, now having policies indemnifying to the extent of more than three and one-half millions of dollars, while its business extends into diverse sections of both North and South Dakota. The political proclivities of the subject are indicated in the stanch support which he accords to the Republican party, and he manifests at all times and seasons the loyalty of a progressive and public-spirited citizen. Both he and his wife are devoted and zealous members of the Evangelical Association, and he is at the present time secretary of the local congregation, which has an attractive church edifice three-fourths of a mile west of his home.

On the 18th of February, 1882, were uttered the words which united the life destinies of Mr. Roth and Miss Sarah Haber, who was born and reared in Minnesota, and they had one child, Kate. Mrs. Roth was summoned into eternal rest on the 25th of September, 1883, at the age of twenty-seven years, and her remains were interred in the cemetery about seven miles east of the home farm. On the 23d of May, 1884, Mr. Roth was united in marriage to Miss Emma Loraff, who was born in Germany, and of this union have been born seven children, all of whom are living, namely: John F., Emma L., Fannie B., Wesley C., Caroline I., Reuben S. R., and Carl F.

C. BOYD BARRETT, of Aberdeen, South Dakota, is descended on the paternal side from one of the old families of Maryland, while on the maternal side from the old Carr family, of Virginia. His family experienced in full the vicissitudes and misfortunes which fell so heavily upon so many of the sterling old families of the south during the period of the Civil war, but they were willing to make all these sacrifices, though theirs was to become eventually the "lost cause."

Major Barrett was born on the ancestral plantation, in Loudoun county, Virginia, on the 23d of May, 1838, being a son of John F. and Caroline (Wade) Barrett, both representatives of prominent old families of that commonwealth. The father of the subject followed the vocation of a planter until he was summoned from the scene of life's labors and was a man of prominence and influence in the community, having been a captain in the state militia and having held various local offices of public trust. Both he and his wife were devoted members of the Presbyterian church, in which he served as elder for many years. Major Barrett was reared under the gracious influences of the old homestead and received a good academic education. As a youth he became a member of a cavalry company in the state militia, and was in active service with his command in guarding the Potomac at the time when John Brown made his famous raid. At the outbreak of the Civil war this company became a part of the Sixth Regiment of Confederate Cavalry, and later was assigned to the Thirty-fifth Virginia Battalion, under General E. V. White. It was the portion of our subject to take part in thirty-eight of the pitched battles incidental to the progress of the great internecine conflict, and he was in active service during practically the entire period of the war. His command was in service in northern Virginia, being for much of the time in the Shenandoah valley and the Piedmont region, under "Stonewall" Jackson. He also took part in the Pennsylvania campaign, participating in the battles of the Wilderness, Antietam, Sharpsburg and in the Gettysburg campaign, under command of the gallant General Wade Hampton, and he was with his regiment at Appomattox at the time of General Lee's surrender. For some time he was assigned to detail duty on the staff of General Lawton, of Georgia. Major Barrett was three times wounded in action, and thrice had his horse killed from under him. He was captured in a skirmish in Clark county, Virginia, in 1862, and was confined for four months in the federal prison in the city of Washington, being one of the one hundred and thirty-five prisoners who were the last to be exchanged before the close of the war. His widowed mother, in the midst of alarms and menacing turbulence, had bravely remained on the old homestead, in company with one devoted old slave. The fortunes of the family fell to the lowest ebb and the beautiful old plantation was a scene of havoc at the time when our subject returned. He had been reported killed in the battle of the Wilderness, and his mother had been bowed under this additional sorrow, knowing not that he was still living until he put in his appearance at the old home. He devoted four years to endeavoring to restore the prestige and prosperity of the plantation, but was eventually compelled to abandon this devoted service. He removed to Alexandria, Virginia, where he was engaged in the hotel business for five years and then took up his residence in Washington, D. C., where he engaged in mercantile business, continuing this enterprise until 1883, when impaired health, resulting from the injury received in a wound through the right lung while in service, compelled him to seek a change of climate. He accordingly came to South Dakota and located in the village of Aberdeen, Brown county, where he continued in the hotel business until 1884, and he then purchased the Aberdeen Republican, now known as the Aberdeen Democrat. He retained the original name, but changed the political policy of the paper, making it an excellent advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and he successfully conducted the paper until 1893, when President Cleveland conferred upon him the office of receiver of the United States land office in Aberdeen. He continued incumbent of this position four years, after which he again became editor of the Republican, having retained possession of the property. He sold the plant and the business in 1902, after having been closely identified with its fortunes for more than a decade and a half. He is a vigorous and able writer, and made the paper a force and power in the political affairs of the state. He has ever been a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Democracy and has been prominent in its councils and formed the acquaintanceship of its leading men. In 1894-5 he was a member of the Democratic congressional committee. Mr. Barrett is an elder in the Presbyterian church and is a Mason. He married Mollie D. Fadeley, of the same county in Virginia, and they have two children: C. Boyd, Jr., and Caroline B. Mr. Barrett is also engaged in the real-estate and insurance business, the firm being Barrett & Son.

MARTIN R. HENINGER comes of stanch old Virginia stock and is himself a native of the state of Missouri, having been born on the homestead farm, in Monroe county, on the 29th of November, 1851, and being a son of William W. and Eliza J. (Stalcup) Heninger, both of whom were born in the Old Dominion state, whence they came westward as pioneers of the state of Missouri, where the father devoted the remainder of his life to agricultural pursuits. The subject of this sketch was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm and after completing the curriculum of the common schools, took a course of study in Central College, at Fayette, Missouri. When he was seventeen years of age his father died and he then left school to assist in caring for the widowed mother and the seven other children of the family. He remained on the old farm until 1882, when he came to South Dakota and located in the village of Ordway, Brown county, where he followed the lumber trade for one season and then, in February, 1883, removed to Westport, where he was successfully engaged in the lumber business until July, 1902, since which time he has maintained his home in Aberdeen. While a resident of Westport he did the banking exchange business of the town, affording accommodations that were duly appreciated by its business men, while in the vicinity of the town he also owned a fine farm of four hundred and fifty acres. He disposed of his interests in Westport in January, 1902, and came to Aberdeen, where he purchased an interest in the Aberdeen Gas and Electric Light Company, of which he has since been vice-president, and to this important enterprise he has since devoted the major portion of his time and attention, while he also has other capitalistic interests.

The father of the subject was a stanch Union man during the war of the Rebellion, and thus the son was reared in the faith of the Republican party, to which he has ever continued to give an unfaltering allegiance, while he has taken an active interest in its cause and been prominent in public affairs of a local nature. He was a delegate from Brown county to the state constitutional convention in 1889, held in the city of Sioux Falls, and was appointed by Governor Sheldon a member of the state board of regents of education, but he resigned the position shortly afterward, feeling that the demands of his private business would not permit him to give the requisite attention to official duties. He was elected clerk of Brown county in 1895 and served for two years, giving a most able and satisfactory administration. He has been frequently a delegate to the county, state and district conventions of his party and been an active factor in its councils. He is identified with the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained the Knights Templar degrees and also with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 9th of July, 1882, Mr. Heninger was united in marriage to Miss Mary A. Way, who, like himself, was born and reared in Monroe county, Missouri, and they have three children, Nora L., Mabel H. and Mildred D., all of whom still remain beneath the home roof and lend cheer and brightness to the family circle.

IVOR D. DAVIS is one of the popular citizens and representative business men of Aberdeen, where he has been engaged in contracting and building for more than twenty years, within which period he has erected many notable buildings in this city and in other sections of the state, having gained a high reputation in his chosen vocation, not less by reason of his technical knowledge of its details than on account of his invariable fidelity to the terms of his contracts and his inflexible integrity of purpose in all the relations of life.

Mr. Davis comes of sturdy Welsh lineage and was born in the beautiful little city of Racine, Wisconsin, on the 5th of March, 1854, being a son of Samuel and Maria (Thomas) Davis, both of whom were born in Wales. The paternal grandfather of the subject emigrated with his family from Wales to America in the thirties and located in Racine, Wisconsin, becoming one of the honored pioneers of the town. He was a splendid Welsh scholar. There also his son, Samuel, became a prominent carpenter and builder, continuing his residence in Racine until his death, while his wife also died there. They became the parents of four sons, the two youngest being deceased, while the subject of this review was the second in order of birth.

Ivor D. Davis received his educational discipline in the public schools of Racine and there learned the trade of brick-mason, being engaged in the active work of the same in Wisconsin until 1883, when he came to Aberdeen, South Dakota, arriving on the 20th of March, and forthwith establishing himself in business as a contractor and builder, while the many fine buildings which have been erected by him in the intervening years, offer adequate testimony to the success and prestige which he has attained. He has erected many of the finest buildings in his home city, including the Mead block, the McArthur building, the Jackson block and the Ward hotel. In Huron he built the Groton building, and in Bowdle the Mason block, while in a number of other towns are found fine modern buildings which testify to his skill and ability. His own residence in Aberdeen is one of the many attractive and thoroughly modern homes which grace the city. In politics Mr. Davis is a staunch supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and while he has never sought office, he served four years as a member of the board of aldermen and has at all times shown himself to be a loyal, progressive and public-spirited citizen. Mr. Davis has attained prominence in the time-honored Masonic fraternity, with which he has been identified since 1879, and in which he has received the thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, being thus affiliated with South Dakota Consistory, No. 4, at Aberdeen, while he is also a member of El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in which latter he was made a knight commander in the Court of Honor, at Washington, D. C., in October, 1903. Mrs. Davis has been a leading member of the Order of the Eastern Star and a representative of the local organization in the grand chapter of the state. It may be consistently noted in the connection that our subject and the members of his family all have the inherent musical taste and ability typical of the Welsh stock, and that he became a member of the first cornet band established in Aberdeen, this being April, 1883, while Frank Dilly was leader of the same. Mr. Davis continued an active member of this organization until 1889.

On the 17th of July, 1878, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Davis to Miss Winifred Griffith, who was likewise born and reared in Racine, Wisconsin, and of Welsh extraction, being a daughter of Evan R. Griffith, one of the early and prominent settlers of the town. Mr. and Mrs. Davis have four children, Marie, Arthur, George and Jeannette. The elder daughter is at the time of this writing incumbent of the position of bookkeeper in the office of the Aberdeen News.

ANSEL T. GREEN has a well-equipped machine shop in the city of Aberdeen and is one of the honored and successful business men of Brown county. He was born in Jefferson county, Wisconsin, on the 31st of May, 1851, and is a son of Charles W. and Eunice Green, both of whom were born in the state of New York, while they became numbered among the pioneers of Wisconsin. The paternal grandfather of our subject removed with his family from New York to Wisconsin about 1837, being numbered among the very early settlers of the Badger state, where he devoted the remainder of his life to agricultural pursuits, which also constituted the vocation of the father of our subject. Charles W. Green showed his loyalty to the Union at the time of the Civil war, since he enlisted in the Twentieth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until the close of the war, having received his honorable discharge in August, 1865. He was an active participant in a number of the more notable battles of the great conflict, the first being the engagement at Perry Grove, while his regiment was stationed for nearly two years at Galveston, Texas, from which point it made numerous trips and was in active service, crossing the gulf of Mexico several times and being present at the surrender of the city of New Orleans, as well as of Vicksburg. After his return to Wisconsin he resumed his trade of carpentering and he continued his residence in that state until 1898, when he removed to St. Johns, Michigan, where he and his devoted wife now maintain their home, having celebrated their golden wedding in 1900.

Ansel T. Green passed his boyhood days at Whitewater, Wisconsin, and while his father was absent as a soldier he left home and passed some time in other sections of the state, in the meanwhile having pursued his studies in the common schools. After his father's return he went to Fort Atkinson, Wisconsin, where he served a three-years apprenticeship at the machinist's trade, becoming a skilled artisan in that line. During the ensuing three years he was employed at his trade at various places in Wisconsin and then located in the city of Milwaukee, where he remained three years, at the expiration of which he removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he maintained his home until 1883, having in the meanwhile, in 1877, made a trip into what is now the state of South Dakota. In 1883 he came once more to this section of the Union and took up his abode in Aberdeen, which was then a small frontier village, and here assumed the position of foreman in the newly constructed round-house of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, retaining this incumbency until 1892. He then resigned the position and opened a small machine shop on his own responsibility. His ability in his trade had become known and his business has steadily increased in scope and importance from the time of its initiation, and he now has a well-equipped shop, in which is installed the most improved lathes, slotters, planers and other machines, including a corrugating mill roll, which is the only one in the state. In 1901 Mr. Green began the manufacturing of outfits for the drilling of artesian wells, and this department of his enterprise has proved most successful. In the connection he has added a foundry to his plant, as well as a pattern shop and warehouse, while he has abundant reason to feel satisfied with the success which he has attained since starting business on his own responsibility, and is thus one of the loyal and public-spirited citizens of Aberdeen, one of the most attractive and thriving cities in the state. He is a man of marked intellectuality, a reader of good literature, and one who keeps in touch with the current affairs of the hour. In politics he gives his support to the Republican party, and while he has never sought or desired public office, he has consented to serve as a member of the board of education of Aberdeen, his interest in the cause of education prompting him to this course. He and his wife are members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and he is a member of the board of trustees of the church of this denomination in Aberdeen.

On the 9th of June, 1880, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Green to Miss Delphia Conrad, who was born in the state of New Jersey, she being a resident of Minneapolis, Minnesota, at the time of her marriage. They have four children, Alberta, who is now a successful and popular teacher in the public schools at Frederick, Brown county; Mabel, who is similarly engaged at Claremont, Brown county; Leo, who is employed in his father's establishment; and Paul.

JOHN S. VETTER has the distinction of being a native of the great western metropolis, the city of Chicago, where he was born on the 4th of March, 1857, being a son of George and Ursula (Knecht) Vetter, both of whom were born in the kingdom of Wurtemberg, Germany. There also was born the paternal grandfather, George Vetter, who is a land owner and a man of influence in his community, having lived a retired life in Wurtemberg for a number of years prior to his death. The maternal grandfather of our subject was a merchant tailor by vocation. George Vetter, Jr., father of him whose name initiates this review, came to America before attaining his legal majority, arriving in 1849 and remaining a resident of Canada until 1851, when he removed to the city of Chicago, which then gave slight evidence of becoming a great metropolis. There he was for a time employed in the old Gage foundry and later became a minister in the German Evangelical church. He continued to be identified with the Illinois conference of this church until his death, and was assigned to various pastoral charges under its jurisdiction. In 1866 he was sent to Germany by the general conference of the church in the United States, passing two years in his fatherland and one year in Switzerland, and being accompanied by his family. He had previously served one year in the Union army during the war of the Rebellion, having enlisted as a member of the Seventy-sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry and having been in the command of General Grant a portion of the time, while he was incumbent of the office of sergeant of his company at the time of his discharge, on account of physical disability. The father died in Aberdeen March 14, 1903. They became the parents of three children, of whom the subject is the youngest.

John S. Vetter was reared in Illinois, and after attending the public schools in various towns and cities in which his father was established as pastor, he entered Northwestern College, at Naperville, that state, where he continued his studies for two years. He then took up his abode in Kankakee, that state, where he became book-keeper in the clothing establishment conducted by his uncle, John G. Knecht, with whom he remained five years, at the expiration of which he returned to Chicago, where he was for some time identified with the men's furnishing-goods business. In 1882 Mr. Vetter came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up homestead, pre-emption and tree claims in Brown county, twelve miles northwest of Aberdeen. He at once began the work of developing and improving his property and still owns the same, while he has since added to his landed possessions until he now has a fine estate comprising two entire sections, while the same is devoted to diversified agriculture and to the raising of live stock. The permanent improvements on the place are of excellent order, and include a fine artesian well, sunk to a depth of eleven hundred feet. He raises principally wheat and corn, having had ninety acres of the latter in 1903, while he gives special attention to the growing of the short-horn type of cattle and the raising of hogs.

In politics Mr. Vetter is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and has been an active worker in its cause. In 1891 he was chosen clerk of the courts of Brown county, in which capacity he served four years, and in 1885-6 he was deputy sheriff, this being in the formative period of the history of the county, when lawlessness was often in evidence, making the office no sinecure. On the 1st of February, 1898, Mr. Vetter was appointed register of the United States land office in Aberdeen, and on the 1st of March, 1902, was reappointed, by President Roosevelt, being the present incumbent of this responsible position and having given a most able administration of the affairs of the office. He has passed the degrees of York Rite Masonry and is also identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Arcanum, while he and his wife are zealous members of the Presbyterian church.

On the 12th of September, 1889, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Vetter to Miss Elizabeth Cole, who was born in New Jersey, being a daughter of James Cole, who came to South Dakota in 1883, and resided in Edmunds county on their removal to the state of Nebraska. Mr. and Mrs. Vetter have two children, James H. and Ursula E.

ANTHONY H. OLWIN is a native of the old Buckeye state and a representative of one of its sterling pioneer families. He was born on a farm near the city of Dayton, Ohio, on the 8th of February, 1856, and is a son of Joseph and Margaret (Hiestand) Olwin, the former of whom was born in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and the latter in the state of Virginia, while both are now deceased. The Olwin family is of stanch German extraction and was founded in Pennsylvania in the colonial era of American history. Joseph Olwin accompanied his parents on their removal from Pennsylvania to Ohio in early 'twenties, and the family settled in Montgomery county, where the grandfather of our subject, with the assistance of his sons, developed a good farm, he and his wife there passing the remainder of their lives, honored by all who knew them. In 1863, after the death of his parents, Joseph Olwin removed to Crawford county, Illinois, where he remained seven years, at the expiration of which he returned to Ohio and located in Miami county, where he engaged in farming and stockraising, continuing to there maintain his home until he was summoned from the scene of life's activities, his devoted wife also passing the closing years of her life in said county. He was very successful in his industrial and business operations, was a man of sterling integrity and one who ever showed a loyal interest in all that concerned the welfare of his home county, state and country. At the time of the building of the old Indiana, Bloomington & Western Railroad through Miami county he laid out and platted on a portion of his farm the village of Laura, a town which has grown to be one of considerable importance, the line of railroad mentioned having become now a portion of the main line of the Big Four system.

The subject of this review is the eldest in a family of eight children, and received his preliminary educational discipline in the public schools of Illinois and Ohio, after which he completed a course in the Miami Business College, at Dayton, Ohio, said institution having been at the time conducted by Prof. A. D. Wilt, who is one of the successful educators of the state. After leaving school Mr. Olwin devoted the major portion of his time for four years to teaching in the public schools of his native state, meeting with success in the pedagogic profession. It may be consistently noted at this juncture that he later devoted three years to the study of law, with the intention of following the work of the legal profession as a vocation, but after coming to the west he found it expedient to abandon his plans in this direction, though his technical knowledge has proved of much practical value to him. After giving up his work as a teacher Mr. Olwin entered the employ of the publishing house of Van Antwerp, Bragg & Company, of Cincinnati, Ohio, and for two years gave attention to introducing their revised school books in the state of Ohio. He then took a position with the Indiana, Bloomington & Western Railroad Company, part of what is commonly known as the Big Four, and assisted in securing the right of way for its line through central Ohio, from Springfield straight westward, and was successful in his efforts. He thereafter was for one year engaged in the general merchandise business at Phillipsburg, Ohio, and at the expiration of this period disposed of his interests there and came to Aberdeen, South Dakota, arriving in March, 1883. He came as representative of the firm of Thomas Kane & Company, of Chicago, selling school, church and bank furnishings and also buying bonds, and he continued with this concern in this section of the Union for two years, covering a wide territory, with Aberdeen as headquarters, and he then resigned his position and entered into partnership with Jewett Brothers in the grocery business in this city. Two years later he purchased the interests of his partners and individually continued the enterprise until 1892, when he sold out and engaged in the dry-goods business, under the title of the Olwin-Hall Dry Goods Company. One year later he purchased the entire business and conducted the same for the ensuing five years under the name of the Olwin Dry Goods Company. He then, in 1897, admitted to partnership Mr. Robert H. Angell, and they have ever since been associated, under most amicable and pleasant relations. "Mr. Angell is a native of the state of New York and a thorough and able business man, having come to Aberdeen for the purpose of thus identifying himself with Mr. Olwin. On the 1st of January, 1903, they incorporated the business under the firm name of the Olwin-Angell Company, which still obtains. In the same year they erected their present splendid store, one of the most attractive business structures in the city, while it is eligibly located on Main street, adjoining the new federal building. The block is fifty by one hundred and thirty-six feet in lateral dimensions, two stories in height, with basement, while it is lighted from three sides, making the elegant salesrooms the more attractive. The building has a front of terra cotta and plate glass, is modern in design and construction, and is a model establishment. The company carry a select and comprehensive stock of dry goods, carpets, cloaks, furs, shoes, millinery, etc., and control a large, representative and constantly increasing retail trade, while their jobbing department has found its business so distinctively augmented each year as to furnish further proof of the legitimacy of Aberdeen's claims as one of the best wholesaling and jobbing centers in the state.

The fine store is modern in all its appointments and conveniences, having among other provisions most attractive waiting and toilet rooms for the accommodation of patrons. Mr. Olwin is a man of genial and gracious presence, and this fact, as coupled with his inflexible integrity and liberal business policy, has gained to him the confidence and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact, while he enjoys distinctive popularity in both the business and social circles of his home city. He is public-spirited and progressive and is a valuable acquisition to the business circles of Aberdeen, as is also his partner and able coadjutor, Mr. Angell. In politics he gives his allegiance to the Republican party, fraternally is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and in religion subscribes to the creed of the Presbyterian church.

On the 31st of March, 1885, Mr. Olwin was united in marriage to Miss Huldah M. Mutz, who was born and reared in Ohio, being a daughter of Peter Mutz, a prominent and influential farmer of Miami county, that state.

CHARLES H. ALLEN is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born in Osage, the official center of Mitchell county, on the 17th of March, 1857. His father, Joseph Allen, was born and reared in Ohio, and removed thence to Illinois in an early day, being a jeweler and watchmaker by vocation. He married Abigail Allen, and they remained for several years in Illinois and thence removed to Iowa, where they passed the remainder of their lives. They became the parents of sixteen children, of whom the subject of this review was the fifteenth in order of birth. The father served as surgeon during a portion of the Civil war, and two of his sons were also valiant soldiers in the Union army, while one of them, Jeremiah, sacrificed his life on the altar of his country. Our subject passed his boyhood days in his native town, where he secured his early educational training in the public schools, his elder brothers having received collegiate advantages. In 1870, when but thirteen years of age, he set forth to see somewhat of the world, making a tour of several of the western states and being absent from home for a period of nine years, within which time he learned the trade of stone cutting, to which he devoted his attention until 1879, when he returned to his old home, where he remained a few months, after which he located in Nebraska and engaged in farming, and was practically starved out during the memorable grasshopper plague. He returned home in 1881, was married in February of the following year and forthwith came to what is now the state of South Dakota, arriving in Aberdeen on the 1st of March, 1882. He took up a claim in the county and finally perfected his title to the same, and he then engaged in the draying business in Aberdeen, continuing in the same for five years, during which interval he also dealt in horses, buying and selling upon an extensive scale and meeting with good success. In 1897 he sold out his transfer and draying business and established his present enterprise, in the handling of wood and coal. He has a well-equipped yard, two hundred and fifty by three hundred feet, in the business district of the city, while the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad adjoins his yards on the north, so that his transportation facilities are unexcelled. In 1903 Mr. Allen handled twenty-two hundred cords of wood, secured principally from Minnesota, while each year he handles a large amount of coal of all grades, keeping a large supply on hand and handling from three to five thousand tons annually, while the extensive ramifications of his business necessitate the employment of a considerable number of men and teams. He is the owner of eleven quarter-sections of land, the greater portion being located in Brown county, to the west of Aberdeen, while nearly all the property is under cultivation and well improved. He also owns an attractive modern residence in the city which has been his home for many years. He is progressive and public-spirited, is a staunch Republican in his political proclivities, and for four years represented the fourth ward in the city board of aldermen. Externally Mr. Allen is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which he was for four years an officer in the grand lodge of the state; and also with the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 4th of February, 1882, at Osage, Iowa, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Allen to Miss Ida M. Owen, who was born in Belcher-town, Massachusetts, being a daughter of C. M. Owen, who became an extensive farmer in Iowa, owning a large tract of land in Mitchell county. Mrs. Allen is a woman of gracious presence and was graduated in Wheaton College, Illinois, while she is prominent in the social life of Aberdeen. Mr. and Mrs. Allen have two children, C. Lewis, who is deputy clerk of the supreme court of the state, at Pierre, and M. Estelle, who is a student in the Aberdeen high school at the time of this writing. The son completed the curriculum of the public schools and thereafter continued his studies in the college at Brookings, where he was graduated. He then went to Sioux Falls, and he has practically served as deputy clerk of the supreme court since that time, his preferment coming as the result of his ability and sterling characteristics, while he is one of the popular, well-known and distinctively talented young men of the state.

CHARLES N. HARRIS.—The subject of this sketch, who is engaged in the active practice of his profession in Aberdeen, South Dakota, is one of the pioneer members of the bar of Brown county. Charles Nelson Harris was born in Readstown, Vernon county, Wisconsin, on the 1st of September, 1856, and is a son of Joseph and Sarah E. Harris, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Ohio, while both trace their genealogical lines back to English origin. The Harris family settled near Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, at an early epoch in the history of the old Keystone state, and John Harris, who laid out that town and who was captured and tortured by the Indians, was an uncle of the grandfather of the subject. As a young man Joseph Harris removed to Ohio, where he was married, and he and his wife thereafter became numbered among the pioneers of Vernon county, Wisconsin, where he was engaged in farming, becoming one of the prominent and influential citizens of that locality. The father still resides in Wisconsin. The mother died in 1880, at the age of forty-six years.

Charles N. Harris received his early scholastic discipline in the public schools of his native state, and in 1879 was matriculated in the law department of the celebrated University of Wisconsin, at Madison, where he was graduated as a member of the class of 1879, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws and being admitted to the bar of the state in that year. He initiated the practice of his profession in Viroqua, the county seat of Vernon county, in the same year, and there remained until January, 1882, when he came to the territory of Dakota and established himself in practice in Aberdeen, which was then a small village. Here he has ever since engaged in the work of his profession and with the rapid settling of the country and magnificent advancement of the city, which is now one of the most progressive and attractive in the state, he has found his legal business constantly cumulative and has been concerned in much of the important litigation in the courts of this section, retaining a large and representative clientage, and being held in high regard in business, professional and social circles. He is a staunch Democrat of the Jeffersonian type, and, as he personally states the case, has not become imbued with any of the "new-fangled" notions which have drifted the party from its firm moorings and caused its success to wane in recent years. He is a thirty-second-degree Mason, being affiliated with Aberdeen Consistory, No. 4, of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite. He and his wife attend the Presbyterian church, of which the latter is a member.

On the 1st of October, 1879, Mr. Harris was united in marriage to Miss Dora E. Bouffleur, who was born in Springville, Wisconsin, in June, 1858, being a daughter of Philip and Mary Bouffleur, and of French extraction in the paternal line. She died in August, 1888, leaving three daughters: Edna S., Minnie M. and Genevieve

L. In November, 1892, Mr. Harris was married to Jessie G. Campbell, of Aberdeen, a sister of Judge Campbell, of that place.

WALTER FRANCIS MASON was born in Sparta, Monroe county, Wisconsin, on the 19th of November, 1858, being a son of Merville and Electa Maria (Pixley) Mason, his father having been a mechanic by vocation, but having been well educated in Hamilton College, New York, whence he removed to Wisconsin in the pioneer epoch, there turning his attention to teaching. He located in what is now the city of Milwaukee, and an idea of that city's status at the time may be gained when it is stated that he had charge of its entire public-school system and taught all the pupils in one room. He died in Greenwood, that state, in March, 1898, at the venerable age of seventy-six years and honored by all who knew him. His wife, who was educated in Oberlin College, Ohio, preceded him into eternal rest by about one year, having passed away in July, 1889. Our subject secured his early educational training in the public schools of his native state, having been graduated in the high school at Neillsville, Wisconsin, as a member of the class of 1875, while later he entered the literary department of the Wisconsin State University, at Madison, where he took the modern classical course and then entered the law department of the same institution, in which he was graduated in 1884, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Mr. Mason passed his boyhood days on a farm, and from November, 1877, to June, 1884, in the intervals of attending school, he taught school and worked on farms, by which means he earned the money with which to complete his collegiate and professional studies. In September, 1884, he located in Marinette, Wisconsin, where he opened an office, but in the spring of the following year he removed to Thorp, that state, where he was engaged in practice until the spring of 1887, when he married and soon afterward changed his location to Faulkton, Faulk county, Dakota, where he successfully continued in the practice of his profession for the ensuing four years. From 1888 to 1891 he held the office of city attorney of Faulkton, and in 1890-91 he was the local attorney for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company. In December of the latter year he came to Aberdeen, in order to have a wider sphere for his professional endeavors, and here he has since maintained his home, having built up a large and important business in the special lines of real-estate, law and probate practice, in which lines he is considered an authority. In politics Mr. Mason is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and both he and his wife are zealous and valued members of the Congregational church.

At Neillsville, Wisconsin, on the 24th of February, 1887, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Mason to Miss Etta B. Bryden, who came to that state from Nova Scotia in 1882. Of this union have been born six children, whose respective names and dates of birth are here given: Merville, April 13, 1888; Clarence Linden, November 5, 1889 (died October 3, 1895); Arthur Hugo, May 14, 1892; Alice Bryden, October 19, 1894; Miriam Buland, June 4, 1898; and David, September 25, 1901.

JOHN E. ADAMS.—Among the prominent members of the bar of the state of South Dakota is the subject of this sketch, who is established in the practice of his profession in the city of Aberdeen, being one of the pioneer members of the bar of Brown county. Judge Adams was born in the city of Paterson, New Jersey, on the 13th of May, 1857, and is a son of John and Sarah J. Adams, both of whom were of Scotch-Irish extraction. When he was a child his parents removed to Pennsylvania, and he there secured his early educational discipline, after which he took a course of study in Allegheny College, at Meadville, that state, while he took up the study of law, made rapid progress in his technical reading and assimilation of legal lore, so that he secured admission to the bar of the Keystone state in 1880. In the spring of 1882 he came west to Iowa, locating in the southeastern part of the state, where he engaged in the practice of his profession until the following spring, when he came to the territory of Dakota and located in Columbia, which was then the county seat of Brown county. There he soon built up a good practice and gained marked precedence in his profession, while in 1887 he was elected mayor of the town, serving one term. When the county seat was removed to Aberdeen, he transferred his residence to the new capital of the county. In 1890 he was elected county judge and presided on the bench for two terms, while in 1900 he was elected mayor of the city, serving one term and giving an admirable and progressive administration. He is one of the loyal and public-spirited citizens of this fine little city and is held in the highest esteem in professional, business and social circles. He is a staunch Republican and has taken an active part in furthering the interests of his party in the state. He has attained to the maximum degree, the thirty-third, in Scottish-rite Masonry, and is one of the prominent and appreciative members of this time-honored fraternity in the state, while he is also identified with the Knights of the Maccabees, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. He and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church and are prominent members of the thriving parish of St. Mark's church, one of the leading and most prosperous ones in the missionary diocese of the state.

On the 12th of August, 1888, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Adams to Miss Martha E. Wilkinson, who was born in the city of Kankakee, Illinois, on the 15th of April, 1867, being a daughter of William H. and Mary Wilkinson. Of this union have been born five children, all of whom still remain at the parental home, namely: Maple F., Merle E., Constance M., Mildred and Doris L.

OTTO PETER THEODORE GRANTZ is a native of Germany, born November 9, 1835, in Tönning, duchy of Schleswig, the son of Jürgen and Amalia Grantz, the former coming to America in 1849, and settled in California, his wife having died in Germany in 1840. Jurgen Grantz was one of the first to arrive in the gold fields of the Pacific coast and he continued mining in California and other western states and territories until his death, which occurred in Idaho, when he was sixty-eight years old. Mrs. Grantz died when the subject was five years old and another son, who came to the United States, departed this life in the latter part of the fifth decade.

Otto P. T. Grantz was reared in his native land and received a good education in the schools of Tonning, which he attended at intervals during his childhood and youth, finishing his intellectual training at the age of fifteen. Later he entered a mercantile establishment and after becoming familiar with the business, became manager of stores, in which capacity he continued in Germany until the year 1858, when he came to the United States.

On coming to this country Mr. Grantz settled in Iowa, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits, but after spending one year in that state removed to Illinois, where he, during the ensuing three years, also devoted his attention to tilling the soil. Severing his connection with farming in 1862, he crossed the plains and on August 24th reached Oregon, where he engaged in mining for several months, when he left that state for Boise Basin, Idaho, arriving at the latter place in January, 1863. During the thirteen years following he devoted his time and energies to mining in various parts of Idaho, but in November, 1876, left that country and came to the Black Hills, which has since been his field of action, making his home the greater part of the time at Deadwood, of which city he has long been an honored resident.

Mr. Grantz has devoted nearly forty-two years to mining and it goes without saying that during this long period he has become thoroughly familiar with every phase of the important industry which is so intimately associated with the developments and prosperity of the great west. In the main his undertakings have prospered, success has characterized his career and today he occupies a conspicuous place in business and industrial circles, besides being identified with enterprises and measures having for their object the advancement of the city and state and the promotion of the general welfare. In the spring of 1863, while a resident of Idaho, Mr. Grantz volunteered to fight the Indians, who were then on the war path and causing the settlers much trouble, and he experienced considerable active service before the hostiles were repulsed and peace was restored. He has ever been ready to respond when duty calls, his services at all times are at the disposal of his adopted country and as a citizen he is as loyal to the government and its institutions as any American-born reared under the protecting folds of the stars and stripes. In state and national affairs he is a Republican, but in local matters cares little for party ties, giving his support to the candidates who in his judgment are best qualified for the positions to which they aspire.

Mr. Grantz stands high in Masonic circles and is identified with a number of the most important branches of the order, being a member of Deadwood Lodge, No. 7; Dakota Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons; Golden Belt Lodge of Perfection, No. 3; Rose Bruce Chapter, Rose Croix, No. 3; Council Knights of Kadish, No. 3; Black Hills Consistory, No. 3, thirty-second degree K. C. O. H.; Naja Temple, Deadwood, and Deadwood Chapter, No. 23, Order of Eastern Star. These different relations with the ancient and honorable order have brought him into close contact with the leading members of the brotherhood throughout the state, among whom he is held in the highest personal esteem. He has also been elected at different times to important official stations in the order, in all of which he discharged his duties ably and consistently, proving worthy the confidence reposed in him and a credit to the organization by which the honors were conferred.

On February 3, 1877, Mr. Grantz was united in the bonds of wedlock with Miss Christina Johnson, the ceremony being solemnized in the city of Deadwood. Mrs. Grantz was born in Sweden, and is a daughter of John and Johanna Johnson, who were also natives of Sweden. This marriage has been blessed with four children, Theoline, Otto, Lillie and Nellie, the second of whom died in infancy.

JOHN P. BELDING, deputy United States marshal, with headquarters in the city of Deadwood, was born in Madison county, New York, on the 12th of July, 1837, being a son of Esdon and Chloe (Goodrich) Belding, the former of whom was born in Connecticut and the latter in New York. James Belding, grandfather of the subject, was an active participant in the war of 1812, and was a son of one of the gallant soldiers who rendered yeoman service in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution. As a young man Edson Belding removed from Connecticut to the state of New York, where he engaged in farming, while both he and his wife passed the closing years of their lives in Binghamton, that state. Our subject was reared in his native county, where he received a good common-school education, and he continued his residence in the old Empire state until 1857, when, as a young man of twenty years, he decided to anticipate the advice of Horace Greeley and "go west and grow up with the country." He made his way to Missouri, and was there engaged in railroad construction until the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, having made his headquarters for the greater portion of the time in the city of St. Louis. In June, 1861, he tendered his services in the defense of the Union, enlisting in the Ninth Missouri Volunteer Cavalry, with which he continued in service until 1864, when he received his honorable discharge, with the rank of captain. His regiment was principally on detached duty and engaged in scouting service, in which line it made a most excellent record.

Shortly after his discharge Captain Belding set forth for Montana, where the gold excitement was then at its height, resulting from the discoveries made in Alder gulch, where now nestles the still somewhat isolated village of Virginia City, one of the oldest towns in the state and yet one that remains without railroad facilities. Mr. Belding had the distinction of making the major portion of the perilous trip in a company whose guide was that honored and famed frontiersman, "Jim" Bridger, the pathfinder. While enroute the party had a number of skirmishes with the Indians. Near a stream called Gray Bull, east of Livingston, Montana, they were surrounded by the Indians, but Colonel Bridger, who had lived among the Crow Indians, went out and had a pow-wow with the investing and menacing band, whom he promised not to bring through another party of men, and on this condition the party in question was permitted to proceed unmolested, while it is to be said to the credit of Bridger that he did not violate his word, this trait in his nature having commanded him the confidence of the Indians in earlier days. Mr. Belding arrived in Alder gulch in July, 1864, and joined the throng of placer miners in the stirring camp. He remained there for a period of a few months, meeting with fair success, and when, in the following winter, gold was struck in Last Chance gulch, now the Main street of the attractive capital city of Montana, Mr. Belding, in company with Jefferson Lowrey and a dentist named Howe, laid out the first plat of the present city. He there remained until 1868, when he joined the stampede to Miner's Delight, on South Pass, in Wyoming, but the placer prospects failed to yield returns, and the venture proved a failure. Mr. Belding then found his finances at a low ebb and set forth to strike the line of the Union Pacific Railroad at Green river, and he there secured employment in connection with the construction work, the track reaching Green river in the fall of 1868, after which he assisted in the work of projection until the line made a junction with Central Pacific at Promontory Point, head of Salt Lake, an event of great historic interest. Mr. Belding then made his way up the Snake river to Shoshone Falls, Idaho, in which locality he engaged in mining in the placer diggings for three years, being moderately successful. He next engaged in prospecting in the vicinity of Salt Lake, and in the spring of 1876 struck out for the Black Hills, coming to Cheyenne, Wyoming, and thence with team to Custer, in which camp he arrived on the 18th of February of that year. There he met with negative success and he accordingly moved over into Deadwood gulch, where he met two old Montana friends, Webb and McClellan, with whom he located some water ditches on Whitewood and Whitetail creeks, and after they had completed one ditch they sold out at a good profit to the Homestake Mining Company. Mr. Belding then made a trip to the east and upon his return, in 1879, again located in Deadwood. In the following year he was elected sheriff of Lawrence county, serving two years. In the winter of 1882-3 the territorial legislature appointed a committee of nine to locate a territorial capital, and the subject was chosen as the representative of the Black Hills district. The committee finally chose Bismarck as the most eligible location. After the discharge of this official duty Mr. Belding again turned his attention to mining, while he also served as justice of the peace. In 1897 he was appointed to his present office as deputy United States marshal, of which he has since been incumbent, having made an excellent record in a most difficult district, as two Indian reservations are within the jurisdiction and involve much work on the part of the deputy marshal, who is compelled to make frequent visits to the same in addition to his other labors. In October, 1902, Walking Shield, a Brule Indian, was hanged at Sioux Falls. He had given much trouble and had been arrested on several occasions by Mr. Belding for minor offenses, before he was finally taken on the charge of murder, which resulted in his conviction and execution. Mr. Belding is an uncompromising Republican in his political proclivities, and has been an active worker in the party cause, having attended numerous party conventions both during the territorial epoch and since the admission of South Dakota to the Union. He is a member of the National Mining Men's Association and the Business Men's Club of Deadwood, while fraternally he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 31st of December, 1880, Mr. Belding was united in marriage to Miss Della Torey, who was born and reared in Illinois, being a resident of Nebraska at the time of her marriage. Of this union have been born three children, Jessie, Augusta and Gladys.

HON. HENRY E. PERKINS, of Sturgis, Meade county, is a native of Windsor county, Vermont, born on December 1, 1864. He was educated in the schools of his native state, being graduated from the State Normal at Randolph, largely making his own way through the institution by clerking between the terms while his schoolmates were having the usual summer enjoyments of life in hunting, fishing and kindred pleasures. While so engaged in a grocery store his integrity, strict attention to duty and business ability won him recognition as a very promising young business man and ere long the leading hardware merchant of Bethel in his home county induced him to accept a position in his store. Through Mr. Spaulding, of Spaulding & Delehant, of Lead, Captain Seth Bullock, of the hardware house of Star & Bullock, of Deadwood, heard of him and offered him a position. This was accepted by wire and he arrived at Deadwood in October, 1883. He remained with the firm until 1886, when he became assistant postmaster of the town, and after a year of service in that position he removed to Sturgis to take the position of bookkeeper in the First National Bank of that town. Having special fitness and adaptability for banking, he made rapid progress in this institution, and in 1895 was chosen cashier. Two years later the bank was reorganized as the Meade County Bank, and he was retained as cashier of the new corporation, a position which he still holds. He is also one of the heavy stockholders in the concern. He has been thrifty as well as capable, and has acquired considerable mining property of value in the Black Hills and Arizona, and maintains a beautiful home at Sturgis which he and his accomplished wife make a center of refined and generous hospitality and agreeable social life. In politics he is an unwavering supporter of Republican policies and candidates and is very active and effective in the service of his party. In 1900 he was elected mayor of Sturgis and has held the office continuously since that time. He is always energetic in behalf of every good enterprise for the benefit of the community, and as president of the Commercial Club from its organization he has through it and by his personal efforts done a great deal to promote the cause of irrigation in his portion of the state. He is also the South Dakota committeeman of the National Irrigation Association. So forceful and serviceable for the general welfare has he been that in 1902 he was elected state senator of the fortieth senatorial district, comprising Meade and Butte counties, and his value as an organizer and party worker was demonstrated by years of service as secretary and treasurer of the Republican county central committee of his county. He belongs to the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias, the United Workmen and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

On October 14, 1893, at Sturgis, Mr. Perkins was united in marriage to Miss Carrie Francis, the only daughter of Charles Francis, a pioneer in the Black Hills and South Dakota generally, and all of his life here a prominent and influential citizen, a sketch of whom will be found on another page of this work. Mr. and Mrs. Perkins have three children, Esther L., Charles E. and Lillian K. In official life Mr. Perkins has shown the same industry, integrity and marked ability that characterize him in business, and the same agreeable manner and charming personality that he has in social life, wherein he and his wife have long been prominent.

SAMUEL T. VOORHEES was born on October 5, 1851, at Irvington, New Jersey, and there he remained until he reached the age of eighteen and received his education. In 1869 he moved to Indiana and the next spring to Coles county, Illinois, where he was engaged in the lumber business for three years. In 1873 he came farther west to Nebraska, and, getting together an outfit for the purpose, he went with others hunting buffaloes in Texas, being on this trip until the fall of 1875. He then came to the Loop river country and hunted deer during the winter. In 1876 he moved into the Black Hills, journeying through a section full of hostile Indians, and coming through Custer City, which then consisted of a few tents and rude shacks. He arrived here in March with one companion, and they hunted through the Hills, being in search of elk and deer for the most part, selling their meat at the mining camps and later disposing of the skins. They also did some prospecting and, being pleased with the country, they returned to Nebraska in the fall for supplies, and after wintering in that state, returned to the Hills in the spring with a large outfit and party, coming by way of Buffalo Gap on what is known as the old Kearney trail. They located at Crook City and in March Mr. Voorhees settled on Oak Grove ranch at the head of Spring creek, four miles from Sturgis. Here he engaged in the stock business and also conducted a road house, his location being on the main trail from Lincoln, Sidney and Pierre, and one of the principal camping places on this end of the road. In 1877 the settlement was attacked by Indians, but the whites escaped without loss. Mr. Voorhees was the first settler between Rapid City and Sturgis except one, and saw the country in all its native wildness. He remained on his ranch raising stock until 1886, frequently making trips to Minnesota to buy cattle. In the fall of 1878 he brought in the material for the erection of a building on the site of the present town of Sturgis, this being the first building within the present limits of the town, which had just then been laid out. In 1885 he placed his ranch in charge of a manager and opened a flour and feed store at Sturgis, handling also wagons and farm implements. Some little time afterward he contracted with the government to furnish supplies to Fort Meade, and in 1888 opened a hardware store in a brick building where his present business is conducted. He also built the first large warehouse in this section and occupied himself in forwarding freight to Deadwood in connection with his other business. He owned several freighting outfits which were always kept busy. In 1889 he enlarged his business and also his store to accommodate it, adding furniture and undertaking departments. During the first two years of his mercantile career at this point he was in partnership with a Mr. Miller, but since the dissolution of this partnership he has been alone. Adjoining the large and modern store he now occupies, the old storehouse he first used is still standing. Keeping pace in business with the progress and requirements of the country, in 1896 Mr. Voorhees opened a general store at Galena, which he placed in charge of a manager and which he still owns. In 1899 he built and equipped a cyanide plant on Whitewood creek four miles from Deadwood. In this enterprise he has a partner. They work over tailings with good results and the undertaking has been very profitable. In 1902 he sold his ranch, having previously sold his cattle, but is still interested in raising and handling horses, and since 1897 he has been interested in mining around Galena. He owns considerable property in Sturgis and has always been deeply and intelligently concerned for the welfare and advancement of the town. He is an ardent Republican in politics and is earnest and effective in the service of his party, but he has never consented to accept office of any kind. Being an active member of the Modern Woodmen of America, he has risen to prominence in the order and holds a state office in its organization. He is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On April 8, 1888, Mr. Voorhees was married at Sturgis to Miss Catherine Miller, who died in December of the same year, leaving one child, Harry. On December 25, 1890, also at Sturgis, Mr. Voorhees married a second wife, Miss Dana Eveleth, a native of Boston, Massachusetts.

HERBERT C. BURCH, M. D., is one of the leading representatives of the noble and beneficent school of homeopathic medicine in the state, and is actively engaged in the practice of his profession in Redfield, the capital of Spink county, while he is also known as a public-spirited citizen and is well worthy of the high regard in which he is held in professional, business and social circles.

Herbert Corydon Burch was born in Brookfield, Madison county, New York, on the 13th of August, 1868, and is a son of William C. and Clara L. (Burdick) Burch, who still maintain their home in Brookfield, the father having been throughout life a farmer by vocation. The subject is a direct descendant of Jeremiah Burch, of Stonington, Connecticut, who there had a large grant of land prior to 1670; and also of John Clarke, who came from England to Newport, Rhode Island, in 1638, being associated with Roger Williams in founding the colony of Rhode Island. He obtained from King Charles II the famous charter of the Providence and Newport plantations. Direct ancestors of the Doctor were prominent officers in the Continental army during the war of the Revolution and were early settlers in central New York.

Dr. Burch passed his boyhood days on the homestead farm and after completing the curriculum of the public schools continued his studies in the Brookfield Academy, where he prepared himself for teaching, having in the meanwhile formulated definite plans for finally adopting the profession of medicine. Even as a boy he was an avid student and reader and early determined to seek a wider field of endeavor than that afforded on the farm. He was engaged in teaching in various country and village schools from 1885 to 1888, in which latter year he was matriculated in the Hahnemann Medical College, in the city of Chicago, where he was graduated in April, 1890, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. Later he took special post-graduate work in surgery and gynecology. Immediately after his graduation he located in Paxton, Illinois, where he was engaged in practice until December, 1891, when, by reason of a desire to locate farther west, he came to South Dakota and established himself in practice at Miller, Hand county, where he remained until June, 1894, when he came to Redfield, where he has built up a very large and representative practice, having one of the best equipped offices in the state and being well known in professional circles all over South Dakota. He is a member of the South Dakota State Homeopathic Medical Society and of the Quadri-State Medical Society, of Sioux City, Iowa. He was a staunch Democrat in his political proclivities and is an influential factor in its councils in the state, while he takes a great interest in all public affairs. He was commissioned first lieutenant and assistant surgeon in the Second Regiment of South Dakota National Guard in 1902, and in the same year was honored with election to the board of aldermen of Redfield, being re-elected in April, 1903. He became affiliated with the Knights of Pythias in 1895 and in the following year became a member of the state grand lodge of the order, of which he was grand chancellor in 1901-2. He has served as master workman in his lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and is also identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and the Modern Brotherhood of America, as well as a number of other fraternal and social organizations.

HERBERT C. BURCH, M. D.

In the city of Cleveland, Ohio, on the 3d of May, 1893, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Burch to Miss Flora A. Crumb, who was born and reared in that city, being a daughter of Charles and Lucy M. Crumb, who removed to that city from Brookfield, New York, in the early 'sixties, Mr. Crumb being for many years prominently identified with banking interests and being now retired. Dr. and Mrs. Burch have one son, Clayton B., who was born in Redfield, April 6, 1895. Mrs. Burch is a woman of gracious presence and is prominent in the social life of the community.

JOHN G. WENKE was born in Germany on August 8, 1853, and received a moderate education in the state schools of his native land. At the age of fourteen he bade adieu to the scenes and associations of his childhood and came to the United States alone, making his way to Nebraska where he joined an uncle who had a farm near where the town of Hooper has since been built. The next year his parents also came to this country and, settling near Hooper, engaged in farming there. He remained with them a year assisting on the farm and attending school in the neighborhood. In the spring of 1872 he went to Fremont and secured employment in a grocery store, remaining there until the spring of 1877, when he came to the Black Hills, making the journey by the Elkhorn Valley route and Buffalo Gap, coming with teams and a stock of hardware for himself, and arriving at Deadwood in May. He at once opened a hardware store at Deadwood and conducted it successfully for a number of months, but in the fall changed his location to Central City where he continued his operations until the fall of 1887. In 1884 he moved to Sturgis and opened a hardware store on the site now occupied by H. O. Anderson & Son, with the elder Anderson as his manager, he continuing his business at Central City. In 1887 he sold his interests there and took charge of the Sturgis store in person, conducting it until 1889 when he sold out to Mr. Anderson. During the next three years he was not in business of any special kind, but in the spring of 1902 he started his hardware store on Main street, and since then has been actively engaged in carrying on this enterprise in partnership with Mr. Bitney, the firm name being Bitney & Wenke. They also have a general store at Seim, one hundred and thirty miles northeast of Sturgis, which is an enterprise of magnitude and importance in that section. In 1883 Mr. Wenke became interested in raising horses on a large scale, taking up a ranch on Bear Butte creek, five miles from Sturgis, for the purpose. This he has well irrigated and much of it is under an advanced state of cultivation. When he sold his town business in 1887 he devoted his entire time to the cattle industry and raising horses until he bought into his present mercantile business, and is still largely interested in stock. He also has considerable real estate of value in the town of Sturgis and large interests of worth elsewhere. In the public life and government of his town and county he has always been actively and serviceably interested and, although never consenting to take office himself, he has been a potent factor in determining who shall. He is an earnest Republican in politics and influential in the councils of his party, having served as chairman of the county central committee for a number of years and been a leading member of the state central committee during the last two years, having been recently selected for two years more.

On November 11, 1890, Mr. Wenke was married at Sturgis to Miss Nellie P. Rodebank, a native of Omaha, Nebraska. They have five children, Frieda, Flora, Margaret, Mellie and Esther. Mr. Wenke is prominent in the Masonic order, belonging to the lodge at Sturgis and the Mystic Shrine at Deadwood. He is also a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

HENRY O. ANDERSON is a native of Sweden, born November 15, 1842, and in his native land he grew to the age of eighteen and received his education. At the age named he moved to Norway, where he remained five years and served his apprenticeship at cabinetmaking. In 1866 he emigrated to the United States and located for a year at Waupun, Wisconsin, then moved to Neenah, in the same state, where he remained three years working at his trade. In the spring of 1870 he came to South Dakota and took up his residence at Yankton, having made a trip through this section in the previous fall for inspection. He took up land near Yankton, but while developing it wrought at his trade, living in the city. He at once became active in the public affairs of the county in which he lived and in 1873 was elected to the lower house of the state legislature, and was re-elected at the end of his term, being the candidate of the Republican party. During the last two years of his residence there he was engaged in conducting a meat market and butchering business. In the spring of 1876 he left Yankton for the Black Hills, making the trip by way of Pierre and settling at Deadwood where he worked at his trade for a year. The next spring he returned to Yankton and formed a partnership with three other men for the purpose of installing and conducting a planing mill in the Hills. This was known as the Gayville Planing Mill and was a profitable undertaking. Mr. Anderson was connected with it until 1883, when he sold his interest and in 1884 he moved to Sturgis, putting up a frame house for business where his business block now stands. He formed a partnership with J. G. Wenke and together they carried on an extensive hardware trade until 1889, when Mr. Anderson bought his partner out and after that until 1891 he conducted the business alone. It grew in magnitude and flourished to such an extent that in 1893 he was obliged to enlarge the store, which he did by erecting a brick store on the adjoining lot and then added a stock of furniture to what he already had and also opened high-grade undertaking parlors. In the autumn of 1891 he took his son Albert into partnership with him and the firm name became H. O. Anderson & Son. The establishment is one of the largest and most progressive in this portion of the state, and is a popular emporium for everything in its various lines of trade. The firm is also extensively engaged in the stock industry, having a large and well-developed ranch on Elk creek. He has always taken an active and patriotic interest in politics on the Republican side, and although averse to public life in every way, consented once to serve the town as mayor, but he has here steadfastly declined to become a candidate for any other office. On November 15, 1867, he was married to Miss Inga M. Nordgran, a native of Sweden, the marriage occurring at Neenah, Wisconsin, during his residence there. They have two children, Albert and Edna. Mr. Anderson belongs to the Odd Fellows and the United Workmen, holding his membership in the lodges of these orders at Sturgis.

PETER LAURIN, farmer and stock raiser and one of the enterprising citizens of Meade county, South Dakota, was born in Montreal, Canada, on the 17th day of August, 1848. He spent his early life in his native city, received a fair educational training in the schools of the same and remained with his parents until sixteen years of age, meanwhile turning his hands to various kinds of employment. In 1864 when a mere youth, he severed home ties and went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he took a Missouri river steamer for Fort Benton, Montana, thence proceeded to Virginia City, where he engaged in placer mining. After remaining at and in the vicinity of that place until attaining his majority, he returned to Montreal to visit his old home, and while there went into the grocery business, to which he devoted his attention during the five years following.

Becoming somewhat restive and longing for the wild, free life of the west, Mr. Laurin, at the expiration of the period noted, disposed of his stock of goods, and in the summer of 1876 started for the Black Hills, going via Pierre and reaching Deadwood in October of the same year. From there he went to Bald Mountain, being attracted by the recent discovery of gold at the latter place, but not meeting with success as a miner, he soon returned to Deadwood, and engaged in the wood business on City creek, continuing the same with profitable results for a period of two years. In the spring of 1878 he went to Bear Butte creek, Meade county, and took up his present ranch, four miles east of Sturgis, which he at once proceeded to improve and reduce to cultivation, the meanwhile continuing his wood business at Deadwood. Mr. Laurin began operations on his ranch under very favorable auspices, but the first year met with a serious loss in the burning of over one hundred tons of hay and about the same time all of his stock of wood was destroyed by the fire that raged with such violence in the vicinity of Deadwood and along City creek. In due time, however, he recovered from these reverses and applying himself closely to his labors, soon had the greater part of his land in cultivation, also well stocked, besides making a number of substantial improvements in the way of buildings, etc. Shortly after settling on his place he engaged in freighting between Pierre and the Black Hills, devoting the winter months to this kind of labor and the rest of the year to farming and stock raising, but it was not long until he abandoned teaming to look after his agriculture interests, which continued to grow in magnitude and importance with each succeeding year. Finding live stock more profitable than farming, he gradually added to the latter interest and of recent years has given it the greater part of his attention.

Mr. Laurin is a Republican in politics, and a staunch and uncompromising supporter of his party, being active in its councils and an untiring worker in the ranks. While zealous in the defense of his principles and ready at all times to make sacrifices for the same, he is not an office seeker nor an aspirant for leadership or any kind of public distinction, having no ambitions to gratify in these directions.

Believing in using the good things of this world and getting out of life all the pleasure and satisfaction it has in store for him, Mr. Laurin has provided liberally for himself and family, being the owner of a comfortable home. His domestic circle at this time consists of a wife and three children, his marriage having been solemnized on February 11, 1888, at Russellville, Illinois, with Miss Lizzie Paul, a native of that state, and a lady of excellent character, who has presided over his home with loyal devotion and proved in every sense of the word a faithful companion and true helpmeet. The children are all daughters, whose names are Marie, Lucile and Aline.

WILLIAM MEYER, deceased, traveler, explorer, pioneer, miner, farmer and stock raiser, was a native of Germany, born in the province of Hanover, on the 3d day of May, 1831. During his youthful years he attended the schools of his native land, and at the age of sixteen ran away from home and made his way to the United States, reaching this country in 1847 and spending the ensuing two years in Cincinnati, Ohio. While in that city, young Meyer turned his hands to any kind of work he could find to do, but becoming somewhat tired of the life he was obliged to lead, and desiring to see more of the world, especially the great west, which was then attracting people from all parts of this country and Europe, by reason of the discovery of gold in California, he joined, in 1849, a company of adventurous spirits and started overland for the New Eldorado. He was the youngest member of the party, being but eighteen at the time, yet he manfully held up his part of the work, endured the hardships of travel with the fortitude of a veteran, and shared the vicissitudes of the long, tiresome and trying journey much better than the majority of his comrades.

Mr. Meyer was one of the first to reach the California gold region, and for a number of years thereafter he devoted his attention to placer mining in various parts of the country, meeting with good success at times, but occasionally experiencing discouraging reverses in which he lost much of his hard-earned wealth. After remaining in California about thirteen years, he became animated by a strong desire to go to Alaska, where rich finds had been located a short time previously, but to reach that far-away, sterile country meant a journey of hardships and dangers more numerous and of much greater magnitude than those experienced while crossing the plains. Nothing daunted, however, he and two other young men as brave and daring as himself procured an outfit and in 1862 started for the far north, going through British Columbia, thence over a wild, rough and in many places almost impassable country, which until they penetrated it had never been explored by white men. After many dreary weeks and months in the wilderness, suffering from fatigue, hunger, cold and other vicissitudes, the three finally reached their destination and at once proceeded to search for gold by the placer method. The country being virgin territory, they were fortunate in locating a good claim and applying themselves diligently to the work before them, it was not long until each found himself the possessor of what miners are wont to term a "rich stake." Amply repaid for their trip, the little company, after a year's experience, returned to California, where the subject resumed mining, continuing the same until 1868, when he went to Virginia City, Montana, near which place he operated for some time in what is known as the Alder gulch. After spending two years in various parts of Montana, Mr. Meyer, in 1870, took up land on Meadow creek, not far from Virginia City, and engaged in farming, but after seeing his crops eaten up by the grasshoppers, he discontinued tilling the soil and entered the employ of the government at the Crow agency.

In the spring of 1876 Mr. Meyer again started out in search of gold, being one of a party of two hundred who went to the Black Hills, going via Spearfish and arriving at their objective point the month of May following. After spending that summer in Deadwood Mr. Meyer and a friend by the name of Fletcher bought an outfit for cutting and making hay and, beginning operations on Bear Butte creek, they succeeded in putting up during the fall about two hundred and fifty tons, from the sale of which they realized handsome profits. To market the hay cost them about fifty dollars per ton, but once in Deadwood it found ready purchase at from one hundred to one hundred and fifty dollars a ton, the margin amply compensating them for their labors and the necessary expenditures.

Mr. Meyer in the spring of 1877 built a small house at the mouth of Boulder canon, on Bear Butte creek, to which he soon removed his family, but his experience at this place was by no means encouraging as the Indians that fall burned about one hundred and fifty tons of hay, which he had stacked along the creek, and not long afterwards stole all of his mules, seven in number, also several head of cattle, leaving him entirely destitute of live stock, which greatly crippled his further efforts in the business of hay making. Thinking to recover his animals by laying the matter before the proper authorities, he walked a long distance to the Indian agency, but his efforts proving absolutely futile, the redskin disclaiming all knowledge of the theft and nothing was done to compensate him for the loss.

In the year 1877 Mr. Meyer located the ranch six miles east of Sturgis on which he spent the remainder of his life, removing his family to the same the following year. He inaugurated and carried to successful issue a system of improvements which in due time made his ranch one of the finest and most valuable in the western part of the state, a reputation it has since sustained. Among these improvements is a large and commodious stone residence which, supplied with all the comforts and modern conveniences obtainable, is one of the most attractive and desirable country dwellings in Meade county, his barns and other buildings also being of modern design, well constructed and admirably adapted to meet the purpose for which intended. On removing to this place, Mr. Meyer again turned his attention to agriculture and stock raising and met with encouraging success from the beginning, the Indians never troubling him again, nor did he suffer any reverses from failure of crops or from other sources. He continued making improvements and adding to the value of his land as long as he lived, also increased his live stock until he enjoyed the reputation of being one of the most successful agriculturists and cattle raisers in the valley, of which himself and Mr. Fletcher were the original settlers.

Mr. Meyer was married in Virginia City, Montana, on March 3, 1870, to Miss Amelia Meyer, also a native of Germany, one child resulting from this union, a son by the name of Fred H., whose birth occurred on the 13th of April, 1873. After a long, active and useful life, fruitful of great good to the people with whom he mingled and the community at large, Mr. Meyer, on July 16, 1896, passed gently into the valley of shadows, and three years later, lacking one day, his faithful wife followed him to the silent land and now lies by his side amid the quiet shades of the beautiful cemetery at Sturgis.

Fred H. Meyer, whose birth is noted in a preceding paragraph, first saw the light of day at Meadow Creek near Virginia City, Montana, and spent his early years at that place, and on the farm at Bear Butte creek, receiving his preliminary education in the latter locality. Subsequently he attended the public schools of St. Louis, Missouri, the training thus received being supplemented by a course in a normal school at Spearfish, South Dakota, after which he assisted his father in running the ranch until the latter's death, when he succeeded to the ownership of the property. He carries on successfully the work so auspiciously begun, has added much to the value and attractiveness of the home and is continually making improvements which speak well for his energy and public spirit. Mr. Meyer is recognized as one of the rising men of Meade county, and has already a well-established reputation in business and social circles, his standing as a farmer and stock raiser being second to that of none of his contemporaries, while as a citizen deeply interested in everything concerning the welfare of the community, his influence has ever been exerted in behalf of the right as he sees and understands the right. A worthy son of a worthy sire and inheriting many of the latter's sterling attributes and sturdy characteristics, he lives as becomes an intelligent and progressive member of society, and thus far in life has brought no discredit to the good name his family has long borne, but on the contrary by an upright course of conduct has continuously added to its luster and enhanced its honor. Mr. Meyer was married on the 22d day of December, 1898, to Miss Amelia Berger, a native of Germany, who was brought to this country when quite young, and who has borne him two children, William F. and Francis L.

GREGOR CRUICKSHANK was born in Inverness-shire, Scotland, on the 15th of November, 1852. He was reared in the schools of the same, and when a youth in his teens entered upon an apprenticeship to learn the stone-mason's trade, completing his term of service in his twentieth year. In 1873 he came to the United States and for some time thereafter followed his trade in St. Paul, Minnesota, later doing considerable masonry work in the cities of Minneapolis, Stillwater and Huron, besides spending the greater part of two years in the timber region of Minnesota. Mr. Cruickshank, in 1873, went to New York and after working for some time in that state, returned to his native land for the purpose of revisiting his home and the scenes of his childhood. After spending several months with relatives and friends he went to Glasgow, where he found employment at his trade, but later left that city for Liverpool, England, at which place he spent one year on the police force. Resigning his position at the expiration of the time noted, he again returned to Scotland where he was engaged for two years as foreman on a railroad and after severing his connections with that line of work, he went to Inverness-shire, his native place, and took up the pursuit of agriculture on the home farm. His experience as a tiller of the soil covered a period of two years, at the end of which time he made his second voyage to the United States, sailing in September, 1883. On arriving at his destination he came direct to South Dakota, locating in the Black Hills, where his brother Alexander was then living, and accepted a position with the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead City. His first work with this great corporation was in the ditches, but after some months he resumed his trade and did considerable stone and brick laying in Spearfish, including the state normal school building, one of the finest structures in the state. Later he re-engaged with the Homestake Mining Company, as foreman of masonry work, which responsible position he still holds, being one of the company's faithful and trusted employes.

Meantime, 1885, Mr. Cruickshank took up land on Alkali creek, fifteen miles from Sturgis, which he converted into a fine ranch, and since that date he has devoted a great deal of attention to stock raising, in connection with his duties at the mine. His ranch, which contains about three thousand acres of rich grazing land, is in excellent condition and fully answers the purpose for which intended, being well improved with good buildings, fences and other accessories necessary to the successful prosecution of live-stock raising. Mr. Cruickshank, in 1896, purchased for his brother Alexander a ranch three and a half miles east of Sturgis, on Bear Butte creek, where the latter has since lived and prospered as a stock man, the two working to each other's mutual interests, and their efforts have been crowned with the most encouraging success.

While exercising personal supervision over his ranch and his large and constantly growing live-stock interests, Mr. Cruickshank spends the greater part of his time in Lead City, where, as already indicated, much of his attention is required to attend to the duties of his position with the Homestake Company. His various enterprises have resulted greatly to his financial advantage, and he is now in independent circumstances, owning, in addition to his ranch and live stock, considerable real estate in Lead City, also valuable mining interests in various parts of the country, besides a large amount of capital invested in different business and industrial enterprises. His success since coming west has been remarkable, and his career bespeaks for him a soundness of judgment, a fertility of resource and executive ability of an order far higher than those with which the great majority of his fellow men are endowed.

Mr. Cruickshank has been actively identified with the material interests and public affairs of the city and county in which he lives, and is also a politician of more than local reputation, being one of the staunch Republicans of his part of the state and an aggressive party worker. Like the majority of wide-awake, enterprising men of every community, he manifests a decided interest in secret benevolence work, holding membership with the Masonic fraternity of Lead City, the Mystic Shrine, at Deadwood, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and the Master Workmen of America, at the former place, besides being a leading spirit in the order of Scottish Clans of America, an organization composed of his fellow countrymen throughout the United States.

Mr. Cruickshank was married in Glasgow, Scotland, June 18, 1878, to Miss Annie McLennan, a native of that country, and has a family of six children, whose names are as follows: John M., Robert, Donald M., Jessie A., Roderick A. and Edwin W.

MILES M. COOPER, farmer, stock raiser and also ex-member of the South Dakota house of representatives, is a native of Jennings county, Indiana, and dates his birth from November 16, 1845. Like the majority of country lads, he was reared on the farm, early became familiar with the rugged duties and wholesome discipline of the same, and of winter seasons attended the public schools of his neighborhood, acquiring a fair knowledge of the branches constituting the usual course of study. When a youth of sixteen he left home and after spending several years in the northern part of the state, yielded to a desire of long standing by making an extensive trip through the west. Young Cooper started on this journey in the spring of 1864, crossing the plains to Montana, thence to Virginia City, where he engaged in placer mining, operating for some time in Alder gulch and various other places and meeting with reasonably fair success as a gold seeker. He spent the greater part of three years in the above section of country, but in 1867 went to Wyoming and entered the employ of the Union Pacific Railroad Company, whose main line was then in process of construction.

After devoting the ensuing three years to railroad work, Mr. Cooper severed his connection with the company and from 1871 to 1873 inclusive was engaged in the live-stock business, buying cattle in Kansas and shipping them to various eastern markets, also selling to different parties in that and other states. Discontinuing this line of business he spent the succeeding three years at and in the vicinity of Fort Bridger, Wyoming, devoting his attention the meanwhile to prospecting and mining, in addition to which he also took a number of contracts for various kinds of government work north of the fort, completing the same in due time with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of his employers. In the spring of 1877 he joined a party at Cheyenne and started for the Black Hills country, arriving in Deadwood the following April, and immediately thereafter engaged in farming in Boulder Park, east of the city. In connection with agriculture he did considerable freighting at odd times, between Deadwood and Pierre, and to these lines of work he gave his time until the spring of 1883, when he disposed of his interests in the Black Hills and came to Meade county, taking up a fine tract of land about six miles east of Sturgis, on which he has since lived and prospered as a farmer and stock raiser.

Mr. Cooper exercised excellent judgment in the selecting of his ranch, his place being admirably situated for agricultural and live-stock purposes, and by his labors and judicious management it has become one of the most productive and valuable farms in the county of Meade. He has added a number of substantial improvements, including among others a fine modern residence, supplied with all the latest comforts and conveniences calculated to make country life desirable, and his business affairs have so prospered that he is now in comparatively independent circumstances, with a liberal competence laid up against possible adversity and for his declining years.

Politically Mr. Cooper wields a strong influence for the Democratic party, of which he has been a zealous supporter since old enough to exercise the rights of citizenship, and for a number of years past he has been a prominent factor, not only in local affairs, but in public matters of district and state import. In the fall of 1889 he was elected to represent Meade county in the general assembly, and his record as a law-maker proved so satisfactory to his constituents that he was again chosen in 1891. While in the legislature he was untiring in his efforts to promote the interests of his county and state, serving on several important committees, taking an active part in the general deliberations of the house and earning the reputation of one of the hardest workers in the body, as well as winning recognition as a leader on the Democratic side, his party, however, being in the minority.

Mr. Cooper is a man of great energy and has done much to advance the material prosperity of Meade county, giving his encouragement and support to all enterprises with this end in view. Public-spirited in all the term implies, he has frequently lost sight of self in his endeavors to promote the public welfare and today there are few men in western Dakota as widely known or who in a greater degree enjoy the esteem and confidence of the people regardless of party ties. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to the lodge at Sturgis, and is also identified with the local lodge of the Ancient Order of United Workmen at the same place, having been honored with high official station in both organizations.

On March 9, 1881, occurred the marriage of Mr. Cooper, his wife having formerly been Miss Mary P. Ranft, who was born and reared in the state of Ohio. The union has resulted in an interesting family of eight children, whose names are as follows: Otto P., Allyn R., Harold M., Lawrence, Edith, Jefferson, Edna and Bryan.

WILLIAM H. CHASE is a New Englander, having been born in Kingston, New Hampshire, on the 9th of June, 1828. Reared in his native state, he early acquired the industrious habits characteristic of the youth of that section of the Union, and after attending the schools of Kingston until old enough to plan for his future, learned carriage making, which trade he followed in New Hampshire until reaching the age of twenty-six years. In 1844 he went to Iowa and located a tract of government land, but after holding it for a brief period, sold his right and, returning home, remained about one year with his parents, when he again turned his face westward. After spending a short time in Iowa, he went to Minnesota, where he remained one year, but at the expiration of that time returned to the former state and took up land in Jackson county, on which he engaged in farming and the raising of live stock.

Mr. Chase prospered in his undertakings and continued the same with increasing success until the year 1863, when he laid aside the implements of husbandry in response to the call for volunteers to assist in putting down the great rebellion. Enlisting that year in the Second Iowa Infantry, he served until the close of the war, after which he returned to Jackson county, where his family were living. From that part of the state he moved to Iowa county, where he lived and prospered until 1881, in the spring of which year he sold his land and migrated to the Black Hills, South Dakota, settling on a ranch near Bear Butte creek, which his son Charles had taken up some time previously. Purchasing the ranch, Mr. Chase at once addressed himself to its improvement and in the course of a few years reduced a considerable area to cultivation, also erected a comfortable dwelling and made many other improvements besides getting a substantial start in the way of live stock. From that time to the present his progress has been steady and substantial, and he is now one of the successful agriculturists and stock raisers in his part of the county, owning eight hundred acres of fine land, one hundred of which are under irrigation, and in a high state of tillage, the rest being devoted to cattle raising, which industry he makes a specialty. In the course of time the original dwelling was replaced with the handsome modern residence which the family now occupies. A general system of improvements was inaugurated and carried to completion as rapidly as possible, and at this writing Mr. Chase is no longer under the necessity of laboring for a living, enjoying the fruits of his many years of toil and thrift, with an ample competency laid by for old age.

Mr. Chase has been a loyal supporter of the Republican party ever since its organization and is one of its firm adherents in Meade county. Until quite recently he took a very active interest in public affairs, attended the various conventions of his party, local, district and state, but repeatedly refused to stand for office, although well qualified to fill positions of honor and trust. He is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic and takes pleasure in meeting his comrades who shared with him the vicissitudes of war during the dark days of the rebellion, being one of the leading spirits in the local post to which he belongs.

Mr. Chase was married in Jackson county, Iowa, to Miss Sarah Simeral, of Indiana, whose parents moved to the former state when she was only ten years old. Four children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Chase, namely: William S., Charles H., Addie May and Sarah B.

MARTIN H. JOHNSON, deceased, was born in Southport, New York, June 25, 1833, grew to manhood in his native state and after acquiring a good intellectual education in the schools, received a thorough practical training in the various business affairs with which he early became familiar. While still a young man he engaged in lumbering and continued that line of business in New York until about twenty-five years of age, when he went to Potter county, Pennsylvania, where he erected several large saw-mills and engaged in the manufacture of lumber upon a very extensive scale. Mr. Johnson operated his mills quite successfully and in due time built up a business of large proportions, becoming in the course of a few years the leading lumber man in the above county and one of the largest in the state. By judicious management he acquired a large fortune, but subsequently met with a series of business reverses, which crippled him financially and from the effects of which he never entirely recovered. In hopes of bettering his condition, he wound up his affairs in Pennsylvania and in the fall of 1879 started for the Black Hills, reaching Boulder Park the same season and spending the winter at that place. The following spring he arrived in Deadwood, and from there, after a short time, came to Bear Butte creek and took up a ranch about fourteen miles east of Sturgis, where he turned his attention to stock raising and agricultural pursuits. He had no sooner moved to his new home than he began a system of improvements, and he continued prosecuting the same until his ranch was conceded to be the finest in the country, as he spared neither pains nor expense in beautifying the place and providing comfortably for his family.

Mr. Johnson carried on farming and cattle raising exclusively until the year 1887, when he again resumed the lumber business, erecting a large steam saw-mill in the hills, which he operated very successfully during the eight years following. This enterprise fully met his expectations and it was not long until he began to recover from the losses entailed by his previous reverses. His other interests also proved quite fortunate, and his success in his different fields of endeavor not only redounded greatly to his financial advantage and made him one of the wealthiest men of his community, but also gave him high standing in business circles, both locally and throughout the state. A short time before his death he built an elegant and imposing modern dwelling on his ranch, besides expending a liberal sum in other improvements, and at this time his place is considered one of the finest and most desirable country homes in the county of Meade.

Mr. Johnson was an influential member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he rose to a high degree, and he was honored with important official position in the order from time to time. He was a man of intelligence, widely informed and kept in close touch with the trend of events, having been a careful observer, a student of public affairs and a natural leader not only of matters of business, but in the domain of thought. He always manifested a lively interest in politics, but was never a partisan nor an office seeker, preferring the life he led to the honors and emoluments of public station. He attained the ripe age of nearly seventy years, dying December 18, 1902, honored and respected by all who knew him. Mr. Johnson was one of nature's noblemen, true to every trust reposed in him, devoted to the cause of right and with a character above reproach, and a life fraught with great good to the world, he will long be remembered as one of the strong, stalwart men of his adopted state. Since her husband's death, Mrs. Johnson has managed the homestead and, like him, she exercises sound sense and discriminating judgment in the practical affairs of life. She is ably assisted by her two sons and a daughter, who take upon themselves much of the burden and responsibility of business cares and who, inheriting the many sterling qualities and characteristics of their excellent parents, give promise of great usefulness in the future.

JOHN J. FOLKHARD was born in Pottsville, Pennsylvania, May 14, 1855, but when quite a young man removed with his parents to Tiffin, Ohio, where he spent his early life and received his education. At the age of fourteen he started out for himself, going to Indianapolis, Indiana, and for about one year thereafter he worked for a street railway company in that city. In 1870 he enlisted in the Seventh United States Cavalry and went to Kansas, from which state his command was afterwards sent south to break up illicit distilling in various parts of Kentucky, remaining in that section until the spring of 1873, when the regiment was ordered to Fort Snelling, Minnesota. Mr. Folkhard was detailed as mounted messenger at department headquarters in the city of St. Paul, and served under General Terry as such until the expiration of his period of enlistment in 1875, when he was honorably discharged at that place. On leaving the army he entered an engineer's office in St. Paul, but after spending one summer in that capacity went to Bismarck, Dakota, where he joined the force under General Miles for service against the Nez Perces Indians in Montana. Going to Fort Lincoln, he enlisted in Troop A, Seventh Cavalry, but being too late to take part in the campaign he was detailed for duty at that post and there remained until his command was sent to Fort Meade in the summer of 1879. Mr. Folkhard finished his period of service at the latter place in August, 1882, and after his discharge took up a ranch on Alkali creek and turned his attention to agriculture. He made a number of substantial improvements on his land, reduced the greater part of it to cultivation and in 1885 set out the fine, large orchard which is now bearing and from which he realized every year profitable returns. After devoting several years exclusively to farming he began raising live stock, and since engaging in this industry has prosecuted the business with success and financial profit, being at this time one of the leading cattle men in his part of the country.

Mr. Folkhard's ranch lies about five miles southeast of Sturgis and for advantage of situation, fertility of soil and beauty of scenery it surpasses any like area of land in this section of the state. He has beautified a part of the place by planting trees and otherwise adding to its attractions, and for several years past it has been a favorite resort for tourists and pleasure seekers, scarcely a summer month passing in which there are not a number of picnics held on his grounds. In addition to the beautiful groves and orchards, which yield grateful shade, there are many cool springs on the place, besides other attractive features which cause it to be eagerly sought during the warm seasons by those requiring rest and healthful recreation. Mr. Folkhard deserves great credit for furnishing the public such a pleasant and attractive resort, and the people who enjoy its restfulness have not been slow in recognizing his generous spirit and appreciating his open-hearted hospitality. He is deservedly popular in his community, has many warm personal friends and stands very high in the esteem of all with whom he comes in contact. He has mingled much with the world and by coming in close touch with all classes and conditions of people his mind has been broadened, his views of men and things have become enlarged and he stands today among the energetic, public-spirited citizens of his adopted county and state.

EDWARD H. SPRINGER, whose death occurred January 31, 1904, a native of Washington county, Maine, was born May 20, 1844, and grew to maturity on a farm, receiving his education in the public schools and when old enough to begin life for himself he engaged in agriculture and the lumber business, in connection with which he also operated a sawmill for a considerable length of time. He continued to reside in his native state until the fall of 1875, when he disposed of his interests there and went west, locating at Virginia City, Nevada, where he remained until the spring of 1877, devoting about nine months of the time to running a livery stable for another party, the balance of the interim being devoted to mining in various parts of the country. In May of the latter year he started for the Black Hills and, arriving at Deadwood on the 20th day of the month, immediately went to work excavating a site for a mill, which being finished, he helped build the mill, one of the first enterprises of the kind in that part of the territory. Later he secured a position in a mill at Black Tail, but after continuing for some time in that capacity, resigned and started a boarding house in the same town, which he ran until the spring of 1878, when he went to Lead City and engaged in the same line of business, renting a large log building which in a short time became a popular resort for the traveling public, to say nothing of its large and lucrative local patronage.

While proprietor of this establishment, Mr. Springer did a thriving business, as it was the largest boarding house in the place at the time, and the influx of travelers and settlers was so great as to tax it to its utmost capacity to provide entertainment. He received liberal compensation for his accommodations and some idea of the magnitude of his patronage may be learned from the fact that within two months after opening the house he succeeded in saving enough from his earnings to erect a large hotel of his own. The latter, which was the first building in Lead City, especially designed for hotel purposes, stood near the property of the Homestake Mining Company, and he subsequently sold it to the managers of that enterprise and, purchasing a lot on Main street, then in the outskirts of the town, but now in the principal business part of the city, put up another public house, which he conducted with most gratifying success until the year 1886, when he disposed of it for a handsome sum.

Meantime, 1880, Mr. Springer purchased land on Bear Butte creek, which he converted into a large and valuable ranch still in his possession, and on which he has since been engaged in the live-stock business, making a specialty of cattle raising. After selling his city property in 1886, he moved his family to the ranch and here he has made his home ever since, prosecuting his business the meanwhile with success and profit until he was recognized as one of the leading live-stock men in his part of the state, also ranking with the most enterprising and public-spirited citizens of the Black Hills. Mr. Springer was not sparing in the matter of improvements, becoming the owner of one of the finest ranches in the country, the buildings on which and other evidences of prosperity bespoke the home of a man of energy, thrift and progressive ideas, who believed in using the good things of this world to wise and commendable purposes. He provided comfortably for those dependent upon him, was liberal in his benefactions to all worthy enterprises and, as already stated, gave his countenance and support to the material development of his section of the country, besides lending his influence to whatever tended to the moral welfare of the community in which he lived. In politics he was a straight-out Republican of the most orthodox type and an active party worker, and but few conventions were held in his township and county in which he did not appear as a delegate. Mr. Springer was a close and intelligent observer, a wide reader and his influence as a leader in public as well as political affairs was duly recognized and appreciated by his fellow citizens, among all of whom he was held in high personal regard. He was encouraged and ably assisted in his business by the estimable companion and helpmeet to whom he was united in the bonds of wedlock on January 12, 1873. Mrs. Springer, like her husband, is a native of Maine, having been born and reared in Danforth, that state, under the maiden name of Jennie Hodnett. Inheriting the sturdy and amiable qualities, characteristic of her New England ancestry, she has performed well her part in life, and since coming west she has won a warm and permanent place in the esteem and confidence of the large circle of friends with whom she associates.

JOHN B. SUTTER.—The subject of this sketch was born October 27, 1848, in Switzerland and lived in his native land until twenty-one years of age, growing to manhood on a farm and receiving a good education in the public schools. In 1869 he came to America and joined certain relatives who had preceded him to this country and who at the time noted were living in Buffalo county, Wisconsin. After spending the ensuing two years in that state as a farmer, he went to Sioux City, Iowa, near which place he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until the spring of 1875, when he joined the "Witcher Party," and started for the Black Hills. This was one of the first companies that penetrated the Black Hills country and a full account of the trip and incidents relating thereto will be found in another part of this volume. Mr. Sutter shared with his comrades the vicissitudes of travel and adventure and, arriving at the site of Custer City on the 17th of the following July, spent the interim between that time and the next September prospecting over various parts of the country. In the latter month he accompanied General Brook's command to Sidney, and from there returned to Iowa, making the long trip to Sioux City on foot and meeting with many interesting experiences on the way.

In May, 1876, Mr. Sutter again started for Dakota and, coming via Pierre, reached Deadwood in due time, and during the next five years devoted his attention to prospecting and mining in the vicinity of that place and elsewhere. At the expiration of that time he went to Sturgis and for some months thereafter was employed at Fort Meade, where he remained until taking up his present ranch, on Alkali creek, in the spring of 1897. The following spring he moved his family to the new home and since that date he has been quite extensively engaged in agriculture and live stock, being at this time one of the leading farmers and cattle raisers in Meade county. His ranch, which lies about five miles southeast of Sturgis, is admirably situated and, with the improvements made since he took possession, is now one of the finest places of its area on the creek, being fertile, well watered and especially adapted for the purposes to which it is devoted. Mr. Sutter is a man of great industry and his labors have been abundantly rewarded as is attested by his beautiful home, large herds of fine cattle and other evidences of prosperity by which he is surrounded. He manifests a lively interest in public affairs, takes an active part in politics, and is recognized as one of the influential Republicans of the county, but he has persistently declined to accept office, having no ambition in that direction. Mr. Sutter, on July 17, 1888, was united in marriage with Miss Mary Utz, a native of Germany, who departed this life September 12, 1902, leaving five children, namely: Nina, Olga, Julia, George and Louisa.

Of the business and social standing of the subject of this review it is unnecessary to speak, further than to state that few men of his neighborhood enjoy in as marked degree the respect and confidence of the public. His time and attention have been closely devoted to his manifold interest and to the enjoyment of his home; he possesses a generous nature, is especially considerate to those near and dear to him and his many friends, who respect him for his genuine worth and who will no doubt be pleased to see his history in the record of his adopted state.

WILLIAM H. HALL was born in Lawrence county, Ohio, in the year 1838. When a mere lad his parents moved to Lee county, Iowa, thence to the county of Polk, where he spent his childhood and youth and enjoyed such educational advantages as were afforded by the pioneer schools of the state. After assisting his father with the work of the farm until his young manhood, he learned blacksmithing and later worked at the trade in the city of Des Moines, until reaching the age of twenty-two, when he went to Colorado and engaged in the overland freighting business.

Mr. Hall spent about eight years freighting between Omaha and Denver and other western towns, and in 1868 went to Wyoming, where he was similarly engaged for some time, later freighting from Corinne, Utah, to Boise City, Idaho, and neighboring points until 1871. In the latter year he went to Nevada, where he followed the same kind of work until the spring of 1876, when he returned to Corinne, Utah, and established a freight line between that place and the cities of Helena and Butte, Montana, continuing the business with profitable results during the succeeding three years. Disposing of his interests in Utah and Montana in 1879, Mr. Hall the following spring came to the Black Hills and began freighting from Deadwood to Cheyenne, but after operating for some time between these two points, he opened a line from the former place to Pierre, where he continued operations until 1885. Discontinuing freighting the latter year, he took up land on Alkali creek, Meade county, and the next spring moved to his ranch and addressed himself to the task of its improvement. In a short time he had a goodly number of acres in cultivation, also considerable live stock, and his progress as an agriculturist and cattle raiser during the next few years was in every respect most gratifying. Mr. Hall followed farming and the cattle business until the year 1903, when, finding himself the possessor of a competency of no small magnitude, he disposed of his live-stock interests with the object in view of spending the remainder of his days in the peaceful quietude of retired life, to which his long period of strenuous activity so honorably entitled him. Blessed with an abundance of this world's goods and surrounded by everything calculated to minister to his comfort and enjoyment, he is now resting from his labors, though still managing his business affairs and keeping alive a keen interest in current events, besides devoting no small part of his attention to what concerns the welfare of the community in which he resides.

Mr. Hall has always been energetic in the performance of his duties, and while meeting with not a few discouragements in the course of his long and active experience, he has overcome the obstacles in his pathway and now, in the evening of life, can look back over a career which has been well spent and fraught with much good to himself and to his fellow men. He is a western man in the full meaning of the term and since boyhood his life has been very closely identified with this great section of the Union. He has done his share in promoting the varied interests of his adopted county and state, has always stood for progress and advancement and still gives his influence and encouragement to measures and enterprises with these ends as their object. Although past the meridian of life, he retains to a marked degree the possession of his physical and mental powers and, despite his sixty-six years, he is almost as active and energetic as in the days of his prime, and still able to accomplish that which would tax to the utmost the strength of the great majority of younger men. Mr. Hall is a Democrat and for many years has rendered valuable service to his party, as a counsellor, leader and active worker in the ranks. In whatever relation of life considered, whether in business or social circles, he is always the same honorable and honored gentleman, whose intelligence, wholesome influence and genuine worth merits the high regard which is universally given him.

SAMUEL H. MARTIN, an early settler of South Dakota and for a number of years a successful stock raiser and public-spirited citizen of the county in which he resides, is a native of Iowa, born in the city of Keokuk, on the 3d of May, 1852. When he was a child his parents moved to Stephens Point, Wisconsin, thence, eight years later, to Ripon, the same state, where he spent his youthful years and received his education, attending first the public schools, after which he took a course in Ripon College. Subsequently he became a student of the Whitewater Normal School, and after leaving that institution went to Atchison, Kansas, where he engaged in business until the fall of 1876. Leaving the latter place at the date indicated, he located in the town of Peru, where he turned his attention to the manufacture of flour, but after conducting that line of business until the following spring, disposed of his interests in Kansas and came to Dakota, arriving at Deadwood on the first day of June, 1877.

After reaching his destination Mr. Martin spent some months prospecting and mining in various parts of the Hills, but the next winter worked in a sawmill, preparatory to engaging in farming and the live-stock business. In the spring of 1878 he took up a ranch on Whitewood creek, sixteen miles from Sturgis, and at once began improving the same and reducing a part of it to cultivation. Being among the first settlers on the creek he enjoyed exceptional advantages in the matter of location, and it was after a very careful inspection of this part of the country that he made a selection which in every way has proven judicious, his ranch being one of the finest and most admirably situated for agriculture and stock raising in the county. Mr. Martin was a leading spirit in establishing Meade county, in 1879, and served as chairman of the board of commissioners, by which the organization was consummated. He took an active and prominent part in putting the local machinery in motion, was largely influential in directing and controlling public affairs for several years thereafter, and in the fall of 1890 was elected to represent the new county in the state legislature. He served one term in that body, proved an able, industrious and painstaking representative, and made a record creditable to himself, to his constituency and to the state. In politics he was always a Republican until 1896, since which time he has been affiliated with the Democratic party, and as such has exercised a strong influence in party circles, being a skilled organizer, a judicious counsellor and an able leader. He is a decided factor in current public and political affairs, proving of great importance in the solution of local party problems, and there is seldom a convention in which he does not appear as a delegate or an influential worker.

Mr. Martin, on September 1, 1881, was united in marriage to Miss Clara Shaykelt, of Ripon, Wisconsin, the marriage, which took place in a tent, on the bank of the Belle Fourche river, South Dakota, being the first ceremony of the kind solemnized in what is now Butte county. Since that time he has lived on his present ranch, which included the site on which General Brook's army encamped in 1876, and his home is beautiful for situation and well supplied with the comforts and conveniences calculated to make country life pleasant and desirable. Mr. and Mrs. Martin have a family of four children, three daughters, Margaret, Agnes and Gertrude, and one son, by the name of John, their birth occurring in the above order. Mr. Martin was initiated into the Masonic order while a resident of Ripon, Wisconsin, and since coming to South Dakota he has been identified with the lodge in Sturgis; he is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, at Whitewood, and manifests an active interest in the work and deliberations of both fraternities.

THOMAS W. THOMPSON.—The name of Thompson is well known in the Black Hills, being identified, not only with the material development and various business interests of this part of the west, but also with its public and political affairs, Col. Charles F. Thompson, the honored father of the subject of this review, having been one of the broad-minded men of South Dakota and an influential factor in matters concerning the vital interests of the state. Col. Thompson was born in Susquehanna county, Pennsylvania, December 2, 1827. When a youth of eleven years, he accompanied his parents on their removal overland from New York City to Green county, Wisconsin, where he grew to manhood and received his education. During the war of the Rebellion he carried on an extensive grain and wool business in the city of Milwaukee, and later engaged in lumbering in different parts of Wisconsin, meeting with success in his various enterprises. He was reared a Republican and early became a prominent worker and a leader of the party in his adopted state, but in 1872 supported Horace Greeley for President and was later the Democratic candidate for congress in 1874, but failed of election by a small majority. It was shortly after making this race that he went west to engage in the live-stock business, purchasing sheep in Iowa, and with his son, Thomas W., driving them to Colorado, but owing to a destructive disease which broke out among his flocks and the depredations of the Indians the enterprise ended disastrously. In the year 1876 Colonel Thompson moved to the Black Hills and, as already indicated, soon became interested in various business enterprises in this section, notable among which was the building of a toll road from Deadwood to Lead City. He also operated a grocery and provision store in the latter place, which had a large and lucrative patronage and in 1878 he was appointed treasurer of Lawrence county, to fill out the term made vacant by the regular official proving a defaulter. In addition to the interests already enumerated, Colonel Thompson engaged quite extensively in mining and stock raising and for a number of years was one of the most widely known and highly respected public men of the Black Hills. He gave personal attention to the toll road, which proved a great financial success until the advent of the railroad, owned a two-thirds interest in the enterprise and was president of the company at the time of his death. He was one of the organizers and leading members of the Black Hills Pioneer Association, always manifested active interest in schools, churches and institutions for the advancement of the community's social and moral interests and manifested a lively regard for the welfare of his fellow men. The death of Colonel Thompson, which occurred on March 31, 1892, was greatly deplored by the people among whom he exercised such a marked influence for good and his name and achievements will always occupy a conspicuous place in the history of the section of the country in which he finished his life work.

Thomas W. Thompson, the oldest and only son of Col. C. F. Thompson, was born in Green county, Wisconsin, on the 3d of January, 1858. Blessed with good parentage and excellent home influence, he grew up with well-defined ideas of life and duty, and in the public schools received an education which, though by no means finished, was sound and practical, and, with the valuable knowledge subsequently acquired in various business capacities, was sufficient to enable him to carve out an eminently useful and honorable career. At the early age of sixteen years young Thompson, as already stated, accompanied his father to Iowa, thence drove sheep to Colorado, where he helped look after the flock until overtaken by the unfortunate conditions which resulted in almost complete financial loss. In the spring of 1876 he came with his father to the Black Hills and assisted in constructing the toll road alluded to in a preceding paragraph and later entered his father's store in Lead City, but did not continue very long in the latter capacity, preferring the free outdoor life of the freighter to the somewhat uninteresting occupation of selling goods. The summer following his arrival he made three trips from Deadwood to Sidney, as driver of a freight wagon, and when his father took charge of the county treasurer's office, he became the latter's deputy, continuing to discharge the duties of the position until the latter part of 1878. In January, 1879, he took up land in Big Bottom, between Whitewood and Crow creek, and in March following returned to Wisconsin, where, on May 1st, of the same year, he was united in marriage with Miss Ellen M. Wooster, a native of that state, the ceremony being solemnized in the town of Brodhead.

Immediately after this event Mr. Thompson and bride set up their domestic establishment on the ranch in Big Bottom and under auspicious circumstances began to make the most of their opportunities. He inaugurated a system of improvements, which soon made his place one of the most desirable in that section of the country and, giving his attention to farming and stock raising, principally cattle, in due time found himself on the high road to financial prosperity. He continued the live-stock industry with marked success until 1889, when he moved his family to Whitewood, and started a livery stable, which business he carried on in connection with the management of his ranch until 1892. In the latter year he sold his barn and seven years later disposed of his ranch and live-stock interests, receiving handsome prices for all of his properties. Meanwhile, in partnership with T. O. Mitchell, under the name of Mitchell & Thompson, he engaged in buying and shipping grain, erecting a large elevator in Whitewood, and this line of business the firm carried on until 1894, when the manufacture of flour was added. In the latter year the present large and finely equipped mill was built and since that time it has been kept running at its full capacity to supply the growing demand of the trade, doing both custom and merchant work. In connection with handling all kinds of grain and making flour, in both of which branches of business they lead competition in their part of the country, Messrs. Mitchell and Thompson are extensively engaged in cattle raising, making a specialty of blooded Herefords and other high-grade breeds. They own large tracts of fine grazing land in the vicinity of Whitewood, giving employment to considerable numbers of men and are recognized as the leading live-stock dealers of the district in which they operate.

Like his father before him, Mr. Thompson early manifested decided predilection for public affairs and he is today almost as widely known as a politician as a business man. He has long been a power, not only in the local Democracy, but in party matters of state import, having been largely instrumental in promoting the success of the ticket, besides being called to various positions requiring the exercise of ability and sound judgment. He was a member of the convention of 1889, which formed the present constitution of South Dakota, and took an active part in its deliberations, serving on several important committees, besides bearing his full share of the general discussions during the regular sessions of the body. He has also been his party's candidate for the principal county offices and for the legislature, but, by reason of the normally large Republican majority, was not always elected, yet he never becomes discouraged nor tires in pushing the cause which lies so near his heart. Fraternally he belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen and for some time has been prominently identified with the Pioneer Association of the Black Hills. To Mr. and Mrs. Thompson have been born two children, a daughter, Carrie E., and a son, Charles F.

REV. CHARLES SECOMB, born Salem, Massachusetts, 1817. Congregationalist missionary in Dakota from 1867. Died at Springfield, 1899.

FRANK COTTLE.—For more than twenty years prominent and active in the commercial and public life of South Dakota, and earnestly devoted to its interests in every way, Frank Cottle, of Smithville, the postmaster and leading merchant of the place, has made his mark in legible and enduring phrase in the history of the state and risen to consequence and influence among its people. He was born on April 19, 1853, near Augusta, Maine, and when he was a year old the family moved to Charlestown, Massachusetts, his father having secured employment there as master mechanic or chief engineer in the Boston navy yard. Here, in the midst of the highest intellectual development and activity, and surrounded by all the concomitants of the most cultivated life, Mr. Cottle grew to the age of sixteen and received a good education. But in boyhood he made two trips west to Nebraska, and the spice of western life lingered on his palate in an impressive way, keeping up a continual longing for the enjoyment of more of it. So at the age of twenty-three he once again turned his steps towards the setting sun and came west to Des Moines, Iowa, where he remained five years, during a portion of the time clerking in a grocery store and then conducting one of his own. In 1883 he made a trip to the Black Hills with a party of fortune seekers, and on his way back found what he deemed a good opening for merchandising on Mitchell creek at a point where the freight trains between Pierre and Deadwood crossed the stream. Here he bought a general store which he conducted until the completion of the railroad through this section, when freighting became unprofitable and was largely abandoned. His was the only store on the trail, and as he conducted it in a progressive and enterprising way, carrying an extensive stock embracing everything required by its patrons, he did an enormous business with freighters and travelers and carried on considerable trading with the Indians, whose language he thoroughly mastered. He also had large cattle interests and was easily the leading business man in all this section of the country. In 1887 he came to the Cheyenne river, and buying another person's claim to land he filed on it and built the store and residence he now occupies. Hither he moved his stock of merchandise and his cattle, and here he has since dwelt and carried on his extensive business of various kinds. When the surveys were made later he realized his necessity for more land, and he has since secured an additional body of considerable magnitude, having now the finest estate on the Cheyenne. In politics he is an earnest and devoted Republican, and in the service of his party he has ever been active and zealous. In 1898 he was elected a member of the state legislature, and he has been postmaster at Smithville from the establishment of the office.

Frank Cottle.

On May 29, 1900, at Rapid City, Mr. Cottle was married to Miss Martha Christensen. They have three children, Antoinette, Clara and Albert Henry.

GEORGE VINCENT AYRES was born on a farm in Northmoreland township, Wyoming county, Pennsylvania, on the 1st of November, 1852, and is a son of James L. and Patience Maria (Vincent) Ayres. James Leonard Ayres was born in New York City on the 11th of May, 1810, and his death occurred at Beatrice, Nebraska, on the 11th of December, 1892. At Kingston, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the 11th of November, 1837, the Rev. Benjamin Bidlack pronounced the words which united him in wedlock to Miss Patience Maria Vincent, who was born in Beakman township, Dutchess county, New York, on the 19th of October, 1819, and who still maintains her home in Beatrice, Nebraska. Of the genealogy in the paternal line, the subject has practically no authentic data, but on the maternal side the line is clearly traced for several generations. His mother was a daughter of Richard and Hanna (Albro) Vincent, who were married in 1806, the former being a son of Reynolds and Patience (Bull) Vincent, he being a son of Richard and Rachel (Mabee) Vincent. The maternal grandparents of the subject removed from Dutchess county, New York, to Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, in 1820.

George V. Ayres early accompanied his parents to the west and was reared amid the scenes and conditions of the pioneer era, while his educational advantages in youth were such as were afforded by the schools of the early days, his discipline in the line being completed in the public schools of Beatrice, Nebraska. His experiences were those of the average boy located on a frontier farm, where neighbors were few and far removed from each other. He passed through the hardships of western frontier life from 1859 to 1866, having few associates aside from the members of his own family, while there was much of self-denial and deprivation. All had to work hard, the facilities for pleasure and recreation were few, but happiness and contentment were not lacking. In 1857, when he was about five years of age, his parents removed from Pennsylvania to Franklin township, DeKalb county, Illinois, where they took up their residence in March of that year. In the fall they removed to McDonough county, where they passed the winter, and in the spring of 1858 located in Hancock county, remaining until the fall of the same year, when they located in Buchanan county, Missouri, and in the following spring took up their abode in Nemaha county, Kansas, where all were so afflicted with chills and fever that one member of the family was not able to care for another. In the spring of 1860 they removed to Gage county, Nebraska, locating on a farm five miles east of Blue Springs, remaining until the spring of 1866, when they removed to the town of Beatrice, in order that the children might secure educational advantages. The family made the entire trip from Pennsylvania to Nebraska in a wagon drawn by oxen. In 1864 our subject and his father crossed the plains from Beatrice to Fort Kearney and Julesburg, returning home just in time to escape the Indian massacre of that year. He remained in Beatrice with his parents, attending school in winter and working on neighboring farms in summer, until the spring of 1870, when he secured a position in a local drug store, where he learned the business, remaining in this establishment until February 28, 1876, when he resigned, and on the 1st of the following month started for the Black Hills, then practically unknown and still a part of the Sioux Indian reservation. The trip was made via Cheyenne, Wyoming, where our subject and companions hired a team and wagon loaded with provisions, and on the 8th of March started across the country, by way of Fort Laramie, for Custer City, in the Black Hills, reaching their destination about noon on the 25th of the same month, in the midst of a fierce snow-storm. The party was on the road between Cheyenne and Custer City for a period of seventeen days and snow fell on ten of these days, while at times the weather was severely cold, entailing no little discomfort, as the party was poorly equipped, having no tents and being compelled to sleep out of doors each night during the entire trip. Their team was overloaded, so the men in the party walked nearly the entire distance of three hundred miles. At Indian creek they encountered a large party of Sioux Indians, but as it was cold and blustering they made no attack upon the party. At Cheyenne river, however, the Indians attacked them about three o'clock in the morning, but fortunately none of the party was injured.

Mr. Ayres remained in Custer City until May, 1876, when he pushed on to Deadwood, arriving there on the 23d of that month. Being unable to secure employment as a druggist or in the mines, he associated himself with others and entered into a contract to cut one hundred thousand feet of saw logs for the firm of Thompson & Street. Just before the completion of this contract Mr. Ayres suffered an attack of mountain fever, a disease which was prevalent and often fatal in the northern hills at that time, and after recovering sufficiently to travel, he returned, in July, to Custer City. In making this trip he overtaxed his energies and the result was that he suffered a relapse, being ill during the remainder of the summer. His friends greatly feared that he would not recover, but finally recuperated and being now without funds he again began "hustling," doing considerable prospecting and also working at carpentering with his partner, who was a competent workman in the line. In the latter part of October, 1876, he secured a position in the general merchandise store of Harlow & Company, in which establishment was located the office of the Cheyenne & Black Hills stage office. He remained with this firm until the next July, at one time having had charge of a branch store at Sheridan, on Spring creek, and in the latter part of the month mentioned, he engaged in placer mining in Sunday gulch, near Hill City. The mine did not prove a success and in September Mr. Ayres resigned his interest to his partners and started for Deadwood in search of employment, riding from Custer to Jenny's stockade in a buckboard and thence to Deadwood on top of the stage coach. He reached his destination "flat broke," as the expression goes, being finally able to secure work and provide for his temporary needs. In the latter part of September he returned to Custer for the purpose of voting in connection with the election to determine the location of the county seat, and while there he received a telegram stating that R. C. Lake would give him a position in his hardware store in Deadwood. He immediately started for that place, walking thirty-five miles of the intervening distance, through snow nearly a foot deep. The morning following his arrival he entered the employ of Mr. Lake in the capacity of bookkeeper and salesman, and from this point his success became assured, his present business being conducted on the same site, where he has labored for more than a quarter of a century. In the spring of 1882 he secured an interest in the business, as junior partner, under the firm name of Ismon & Ayres, Mr. Lake remaining in the concern as a special partner. In the spring of 1884 Mr. Ismon sold his interest to H. B. Wardman, whereupon the firm title became Ayres & Wardman, so continuing until 1895. In the spring of that year the business was incorporated by Mr. Ayres, Mr. Wardman and A. J. Malterner under the name of Ayres & Wardman Hardware Company, the subject becoming president and general manager and thus continuing until March 18, 1900, when he and Mr. Malterner purchased the interests and stock of Mr. Wardman, the corporation being cancelled on the 1st of the following May, while the two principals then formed a co-partnership under the firm name of George V. Ayres & Company, under which title the extensive enterprise is conducted at the present time.

In his political allegiance Mr. Ayres is an uncompromising Republican and is well fortified in his conviction as a matter of public policy. He was a member of the city council of Custer City under the provisional government, in 1876-7, before the treaty was signed by which the Indians abandoned their claim to the Black Hills in favor of the federal government. He was receiver of public moneys in the United States land office at Rapid City from January 2, 1890, until June 8, 1893, having been appointed by President Harrison and resigning after the election of President Cleveland. He was a member of the city council of Deadwood from May, 1900, to May, 1902, when he declined a renomination.

Mr. Ayres is one of the prominent and honored Freemasons of the state, his record in the connection being a noteworthy one. He was raised to the sublime degree of Master Mason June 27, 1874, in Beatrice Lodge, No. 26, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Beatrice, Nebraska, and later served the same as secretary and junior warden. On the 16th of April, 1882, he dimitted from this lodge, and on the 7th of the following November affiliated with Deadwood Lodge, No. 7, of which he still remains a member. He served as junior and senior warden of this lodge in turn, and November 7, 1884, was elected worshipful master of the same, in which capacity he served three successive years, while he was again elected to the office December 2, 1902, and served one year. Never having previously held any office in the grand lodge, he was "taken from the floor" and elected deputy grand master of the grand lodge of Dakota, on the 13th of June, 1888, while on the 12th of June of the following year he was elected grand master of the grand lodge of the newly admitted state of South Dakota, having the distinction of being the first to hold the office and serving for one year. On the 13th of July, 1875, Mr. Ayres received the final degree in Livingston Chapter, No. 10, Royal Arch Masons, at Beatrice, Nebraska, of which he served as secretary in the same year. In 1880 he dimitted from this chapter and affiliated with Dakota Chapter, No. 3, at Deadwood, on the 8th of that month, while on the 22d of the following December he was elected its treasurer, serving three years, after which he was secretary of the chapter for six successive years from December 12, 1883. January 10, 1904, he was elected high priest, for a term of two years. On the 13th of June, 1895, he was taken from the floor of the grand chapter of the state and elected deputy grand high priest, while on the 12th of June, 1896, he was elected grand high priest, serving one year. On the 9th of October, 1895, Mr. Ayres received the degrees in Lakotah Council, U. D., Royal and Select Masters, in Deadwood, of which he was appointed deputy master the same evening. On the 1st of January, 1881, he received the orders of knighthood in Dakota Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, in Deadwood, of which he was elected recorder in 1883, while by subsequent elections in later years he held the office for a total of six years. In 1884 he was elected junior warden of the commandery, senior warden in 1885, generalissimo in 1887, and eminent commander in 1888. June 22, 1895, he was elected grand senior warden of the grand commandery of South Dakota, was made grand captain general the following year, grand generalissimo in 1897, deputy grand commander in 1898, and grand commander on the 16th of June, 1899, serving one year. In the grand council of anointed high priests of the state, on the 11th of June, 1896, he was anointed a high priest, and is an active member of that body. In the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of the southern jurisdiction Mr. Ayres received the degrees in Golden Belt Lodge of Perfection, No. 5, on the 11th of April, 1893; Robert Bruce Chapter, Rose Croix, No. 3, April 11, 1893; Deadwood Council of Kadosh, No. 3, April 12, 1893; and Black Hills Consistory, No. 3, July 14th, of the same year, and has been an active member ever since. On October 20, 1903, he was elected knight commander of the Court of Honor. In the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine Mr. Ayres crossed the burning sands in Naja Temple, located in Deadwood, on April 14, 1893. He was elected assistant rabban in 1894 and 1895, was chosen chief rabban the following year, and illustrious potentate in 1897, while in the following year he was representative to the imperial council. He was one of the organizers and is an active member of the Masonic Veterans' Association of the state. He is identified with Deadwood Lodge, No. 508, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is an active and enthusiastic member of the Society of Black Hills

Pioneers, of which he formerly served as president; is also identified with the Deadwood Business Club and the Olympic Association, having served as a member of the directorate of each, and is identified with the State Historical Society. Reverting to his political associations, we may say that Mr. Ayres has served consecutively since 1898 as chairman of the Lawrence county Republican central committee, while he is also at the time of this writing a member and vice-chairman of the Republican state central committee. He is a man of genial nature, sincere and whole-souled, and has the esteem and confidence of all who know him, while he has a host of staunch friends in business, fraternal, political and social circles.

Mr. Ayres has been twice married. At Beatrice, Nebraska, on the 23d of April, 1885, he was united to Miss Kate Towle, daughter of Albert Towle, one of the organizers of that town, in 1857, and its postmaster for nineteen years, while his daughter Kate was the first white child born in Gage county, that state. She was born August 15, 1859, and her death occurred March 28, 1892, in Deadwood. Of the children of this union were: James Albert, born March 29, 1886, who is now a resident of Douglas, Wyoming; and Helen, born January 1, 1888, died on the 13th of the following June. On the 21st of December, 1898, Mr. Ayres wedded Miss Myrtle E. Coon, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Coon, of Omaha, Nebraska, and they have three children, namely: George Vincent, Jr., who was born August 18, 1899; Frances, born August 11, 1900, and Alice, born December 19, 1902.

COL. FRANK CRANE.—On the 14th day of December, 1855, the subject of this sketch was born in the state of Wisconsin. He was educated at Gale College, receiving from that excellent institution the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Master of Arts. At sixteen years of age he felt called to the teacher's life and began an educational career which, with few gaps, has extended over more than a quarter of a century. He taught with success in his native state until 1878, when, in company with other venturesome young men, he entered South Dakota on a prospecting tour. Soon he returned to Wisconsin, only to find unrest among old friends and surroundings. A love for South Dakota had been born in the youth's heart. Coming to Codington county, this state, in the early part of 1879, he coquetted with his fair charmer until the closing days of that summer. After spending the following winter in Wisconsin, he finally severed the cords that bound him to the Badger state and returned to South Dakota to become one of her permanent citizens.

In the spring of 1880 Colonel Crane was made city superintendent of the Watertown schools and entered immediately upon his work. At the fall election of 1882 he was elected by a handsome majority to serve the people of Codington county as their school superintendent. Convinced that he had tolerated to the full a single existence, Colonel Crane went to Sparta, Wisconsin, in 1882 and on the 26th day of December was happily married to Miss Martha Crouch. When asked why his wedding day was not on the 25th, the Colonel, with a twinkle in his eye, invariably replies, "The girl said that I should pick any day after Christmas and, of course, I chose the 26th." Beginning January 1, 1883, he held the offices of county and city superintendent until the county work became so burdensome as to require his full time. Then he resigned his city position and devoted himself entirely to the work of county supervision. So popular and successful was he in the county superintendency that the people of Codington county held him in the office for ten successive years.

It is a well-known fact that the educator is not a money maker and that many times he must do something "on the side" so that he may lay by a little store for seasons of drought. Retiring from the Codington county superintendency, Colonel Crane spent a couple of years in money getting. He dabbled in land to good effect, and still possesses some valuable real estate as a monument to his keenness and good judgment. His first real-estate deal involved the purchase of a tract of railway land. For this he was to pay in installments, the purchase price being two dollars per acre. The young pedagogue was "strapped" by his first payment, but had faith in his proposition and proceeded to break and seed the tract. The resulting crop paid for the land and in the fall it was sold for ten dollars per acre.

But the business world was not destined to permanently remove Colonel Crane from the field of education. His abilities were recognized throughout the state and he was called to serve the people in the capacity of state superintendent. In 1895 he entered upon his new work and proceeded at once to dignify and exalt the office with which he had been honored. From the political campaign of 1896—that campaign which resulted disastrously to so many Republicans—Colonel Crane came forth a handsome winner in his canvass for re-election. Through earnest effort on his part the work of the rural schools was more thoroughly systematized and general educational advancement was effected.

Early in 1899, immediately following a most successful career in office, the subject of this sketch was admitted to the bar and opened a law office at his old home in Watertown. That year he was appointed secretary of the Republican state central committee and assisted Governor Herreid, the chairman, in conducting a strenuous campaign. In 1900 Colonel Crane was selected to serve as chairman of the state committee. He and his lieutenants managed that campaign so well that the state swung from its position in the doubtful column and became Republican by fourteen thousand majority. Because of his eminent ability as a campaign manager, Colonel Crane was called to again lead the Republican forces in 1902. It was with some reluctance that he assumed the burden, but after being importuned by every candidate of the Republican ticket, he finally yielded his private interests to the public good. A surprising victory—with a Republican majority approaching twenty-five thousand—crowned his efforts. In 1904 Colonel Crane was induced to serve a third time as chairman of the Republican state central committee.

Since March, 1901, Colonel Crane has held the responsible position of clerk of the supreme court, and may be found any day busied with the work of his office. He is a man of action—one who "does things." He is a true friend and genial companion. Of splendid character, he has since boyhood been connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, at present being a faithful member of the Watertown branch of that society. He is a South Dakotan, through and through, and hopes to live his entire life on our fertile plains. He is not "going back" somewhere to end his days, but will stick to South Dakota. As a member of Governor Herreid's staff, he is properly known as "Colonel" Crane,—the people's friend.

WILLIAM WALPOLE is a native of County Kilkenny, Ireland, where he was born on the 6th of November, 1842, being a son of William and Ellen Walpole, who were both born in Ireland, being of English and Scotch lineage. Both the paternal and maternal grandfathers of the subject were signally loyal to the interests of the fair Emerald Isle and took an active part in the struggles made by the patriots to throw off the yoke of tyranny. The subject secured his educational discipline in the schools of his native land, where he remained until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when, in 1866, he came to America, realizing that here were to be had better opportunities for the attaining of independence and prosperity through personal effort. In the July of 1866 he came to the territory of Dakota and for the ensuing twelve years followed the dangerous and somewhat precarious vocation of scout and trapper, meeting with many encounters with the Indians and enduring hardships that would try the mettle of any man. He was also among the early pioneers in the Black Hills, having run an overland freighting train between Pierre and Deadwood and having had at this time numerous encounters with the Indians, who were a constant menace to life and property. Mrs. Walpole is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church. At one time while the subject was freighting from Pierre, Harry Knowlton, alias Reable George, shot and killed David Rouck on the tongue of Mr. Walpole's wagon. Knowlton was tried at Yankton and was found guilty of murder. He subsequently got a new trial and was acquitted. Since then he has served time in several prisons, but reformed and is now a Christian evangelist in San Francisco. It is but just to state that his faithful wife stuck to him through all the vicissitudes of his career. In 1879 Mr. Walpole took up his residence in Yankton county, and for a time was identified with railroad construction work, while since that he has given his attention to farming and stock-growing, in which he has been successful, while he is one of the honored pioneers of the state and popular citizens of Yankton county. In politics he gives a stanch support to the Democratic party, and both he and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church, while fraternally he is identified with the Improved Order of Red Men, Gray Eagle Tribe, No. 9.

On the 4th of March, 1878, Mr. Walpole was united in marriage to Miss Rosa A. Fagan, who was born in Dunleath, Illinois, in 1856, being a daughter of Michael and Mary Ann (Walsh) Fagan. Mr. and Mrs. Walpole have three children, Robert E., William R. and Elizabeth M.

JAMES W. FOWLER, one of the prominent and influential members of the bar of the state, was born in the city of Brooklyn, New York, on the 1st of August, 1845, and is a son of Peter and Margaret (Corcoran) Fowler, both of whom were born and reared in Kilkenny, Ireland, the Fowler family being of stanch Scottish lineage, the paternal grandfather of the subject having been born in the land of hills and heather, while the Corcoran line is traced back through many generations in Ireland, the maternal grandfather, Michael Corcoran, having been born in Kilkenny, where he passed his entire life. He was a clergyman of the Presbyterian church and was a man of high attainments and marked influence.

Peter and Margaret Fowler immigrated to the United States, in 1845, the subject, who is the only son, having been born a few months after their arrival. They remained here two years, and then returned to the Emerald Isle, where they continued to make their home until 1853, when the father again came to America, locating in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he became interested in the St. Clair Pork Packing Company, which made extensive shipments of pork to Ireland and France. He there continued to make his home until his death, which occurred in 1886, his wife passing away in 1852. They had one son and two daughters. The elder daughter, Margaret, died in 1875, in Cincinnati, and the younger is Mrs. Alice Bennett, of Rawlins, Wyoming. The subject of this review received his early education in the schools of Cincinnati, and when but nine years of age, in 1854, he left the parental home and went to Butler county, Ohio, where he worked on a farm and attended school as opportunity presented, and he continued to be engaged in farming and teaming until about 1867, usually giving his attention to freighting hogs to the Cincinnati market during the winter seasons. After leaving the farm he went to Illinois and located in Mason City, in which place and vicinity he passed the ensuing four years. While still a resident of Ohio he had given careful and assiduous attention to the study of law, making such progress that in 1867 he secured admission to the bar of the state. In 1871 he went to Nebraska, locating in Saline county, where he made his home for nine years, having been engaged in the hardware business for the greater portion of the time, while from 1877 forward to 1880 he was there established in the practice of his profession, in which he met with gratifying success. In the year last mentioned he came to the Black Hills district of South Dakota and took up his residence in Rapid City, where he was engaged in practice until the spring of 1899, when he came to Deadwood, which has since continued to be his home and professional headquarters. He is recognized as the leading corporation lawyer in this section of the state, and has won many notable victories in important litigations, among which may be noted the following: That of McGuire versus Rapid City, a case involving the powers of a municipal body, and Mr. Fowler appeared for the plaintiff, finally winning the case after it had been carried to the supreme court of the state. He appeared for the defense in the case of Humphreus versus the Fremont, Elkhorn & Missouri Valley Railroad Company, in which suit was brought for thirty thousand dollars; the lower court rendered a verdict for ten thousand dollars, but Mr. Fowler carried the case to the supreme court, which reversed the decision. In the case of Gay against the same railroad company he again appeared for the defendant, the litigation being one of great import as defining the exact legal status of a railroad and a cow, both being "without any enclosure," and the result was that the railroad company was held to be not culpable unless gross negligence was proved. Mr. Fowler is interested in a number of most promising mining properties in the Black Hills, and is secretary and treasurer of the Holy Terror Mining Company, whose properties are located at Keystone, Pennington county, the mines being now in operation and known as good producers. Mr. Fowler is a staunch Republican in his political proclivities, and while he takes a deep interest in the party cause and in the general welfare of the state he has never sought official preferment of any order. He was a member of the state constitutional convention in 1885, held in Sioux Falls. Fraternally he is identified with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Knights of Pythias and the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

On the 15th of October, 1871, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Fowler to Miss Helen Montross, who was born and reared in Pennsylvania, being a resident of Mason City, Illinois, at the time of her marriage. She is a daughter of Elijah Montross, whose grandfather was a surgeon in the command of General LaFayette during the war of the Revolution, and who remained in America after the victory was gained, locating in Vermont. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler have three children, namely: Alice, who is the wife of Fred H. Whitfield, of Rapid City; and Henlen and James W., Jr., who remain at the parental home.

EDWARD L. ABEL, president of the First National Bank of Bridgewater, was born in Springfield, the capital city of Illinois, on the 19th of November, 1860, being the only child of Oramel H. and Mary (Moore) Abel, the former of whom was born near Buffalo, New York, June 19, 1833, while the latter was born in Springfield, Illinois, on the 17th of May, 1838. The father is now a resident of Murphysboro, Illinois, the mother having died at Springfield, Illinois. As a boy Oramel H. Abel accompanied his parents on their removal to Springfield, Illinois, and he was there reared and educated, becoming a successful railroad contractor. At the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion he enlisted as a private in an Illinois regiment, being made lieutenant of his company. Later he was appointed mustering officer and was stationed for some time at Camp Butler. He was then sent to the front, being first lieutenant in his company, which formed a part of the One Hundred and Forty-fourth Illinois Volunteer Infantry, of which he was eventually made adjutant general, serving until the close of the war. He then returned to Springfield, and for a number of years served as city clerk. In 1874 he removed to Carbondale, that state, where he engaged in the banking business and where he also held the position of city clerk for several terms, besides being called to other offices of local trust. About 1887 he removed to Murphysboro, Illinois, where he has since lived retired. He is a staunch Republican in politics and was a personal friend of Abraham Lincoln, their intimacy continuing from their boyhood days until the death of the martyred President, at whose personal request the subject of this sketch received his second name, Lincoln. The father of our subject is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Grand Army of the Republic, having been commander of his post in the latter organization.

Edward L. Abel received his early education in the public schools of his native city and supplemented this by a course of study in the Southern Illinois Normal University, at Carbondale, while he was engaged in teaching school for two winters after leaving college. In 1879 he began reading law under the preceptorship of Judge Andrew D. Duff, of Carbondale, one of the most eminent members of the Illinois bar, and while prosecuting his legal studies he worked at various occupations, being dependent upon his own resources. In February, 1884, Mr. Abel was admitted to the bar of his native state, and the same spring was elected city attorney of Carbondale, being chosen as his own successor, without opposition, in the spring of 1885. During these years he was associated with the banking business in Carbondale, accepting a clerkship in 1878 and shortly afterward being made cashier of the bank. In 1887 Mr. Abel came to Bridgewater, South Dakota, being admitted to the bar of the territory in the following year, though he has never devoted much attention to the work of his profession here. Upon his arrival in his new home he purchased stock in the State Bank of Bridgewater, of which institution he was made cashier. In 1897 he was elected to the presidency of the same, and upon the reorganization of the institution as the First National Bank, in August, 1903, he was elected to the presidency of the same. In 1889 he was appointed, by Governor Mellette, a member of the board of trustees of the state penitentiary, at Sioux Falls; he has served with signal acceptability as mayor of Bridgewater, retaining this office three terms, and he is now serving his third term as a member of the board of education, of which he was president in 1902. He is a member at large and chairman of the Republican committee of the second circuit. In 1902 he was elected to represent his district in the state senate, in which he served with characteristic ability, proving a valuable member of the body. For two terms he was secretary of the South Dakota Bankers' Association, and in July, 1903, he was honored by his associates in that body by being chosen its president. He has been an active and efficient worker in the Republican party, having delivered many campaign addresses and being regarded as one of the party's most able and forceful speakers in the state. Mr. Abel is a member of Eureka Lodge, No. 72, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, of Salem; El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls; Sioux Falls Lodge, No. 262, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; Bridgewater Lodge, No. 72, Ancient Order of United Workmen; and Bridgewater Lodge, No. 3790, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 25th of December, 1883, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Abel to Miss Ella C. Smith, of DuQuoin, Illinois, and they have two children, Roy W. and Gertrude M.

JOHN H. DOBSON, postmaster at Alexandria, Hanson county, was born in the city of Beloit, Wisconsin, on the 26th of July, 1872, being a son of James and Anna L. (McCullough) Dobson, the former of whom was born in Lincolnshire, England, in 1844, and the latter in 1851. They are the parents of three children, David B., who is manager of the agricultural implement business of W. S. Hill, in Alexandria; Nettie, who remains at the parental home; and John H., who is the subject of this sketch. When the father was a lad of eleven years he accompanied his parents on their removal from England to the United States, the family locating in Rockford, Illinois, near which place he was reared to farm life, his three brothers being apprenticed to learn the trade of paper-making. James continued to devote his attention to agricultural pursuits, removing from Illinois to Rock county, Wisconsin, about 1871, and being there engaged in farming until 1885, when he came to South Dakota and located on a farm site adjoining the present thriving village of Alexandria, where he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in 1890. He was a staunch Republican, but never sought office, and his religious faith was that of the Baptist church. The mother of the subject was born on a farm near Durand, Winnebago county, Illinois, her parents having been born and reared in Scotland. She still resides in the homestead, Alexandria, having the affectionate regard of all who know her and being a devoted member of the Methodist Episcopal church, with which she affiliated after coming to this state, there having been no Baptist church in Alexandria.

The subject of this review secured his early education in the public schools of his native county, being about thirteen years of age at the time of the family removal to South Dakota, where he was reared to manhood on the home farm and in the meanwhile continuing his studies in the public schools of Alexandria, where he completed a high-school course, later supplementing this by a course in the commercial department of the university at Mitchell. In 1893 Mr. Dobson assumed a clerical position in the furniture and undertaking establishment of G. H. Montgomery, of Alexandria, and in the meanwhile gave special attention to acquiring a thorough knowledge of embalming and funeral directing, while in 1896 he took a special course of instruction in embalming under the direction of Professor Barnes, of Chicago, an authority in this art. In 1897 Mr. Dobson engaged in business upon his own responsibility, opening a piano, organ and sewing-machine house in Alexandria, and this enterprise he has since successfully conducted, also carrying a general line of musical merchandise. In 1898 he was appointed postmaster of Alexandria, under President McKinley, while in 1903 he was reappointed, under the administration of President Roosevelt. He is a zealous and uncompromising advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and he is at the present time a member of the board of education of Alexandria. He is a member of the board of trustees of the Methodist Episcopal church, and was also a member of the building committee under whose supervision the attractive new church edifice was completed in June, 1903. Mr. Dobson has risen to high rank in the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Celestial Lodge, No. 36, Free and Accepted Masons; Eastern Star Chapter; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, of Yankton, in which he has passed the thirty-second degree; and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls. He is also identified with Cypress Lodge, No. 24, Knights of Pythias, and Alexandria Camp, No. 2956, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 15th of June, 1897, Mr. Dobson was united in marriage to Miss Mary Durkee, of Alexandria, who was for several years a successful and popular teacher in the high school of this place, and of this union has been born two children, Burdette, the date of whose nativity was June 16, 1898, and Merrial Bertha, born September 11, 1903.

ROBERT T. DOTT, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in Salem, McCook county, was born in Jones county, Iowa, on the 26th of October, 1859, and is a son of Robert and Sarah J. (Peters) Dott, of whose three children he was the second in order of birth. His elder brother, Richard M., is a resident of Sioux City, Iowa, and is a prominent member of the bar of the state; and George M. is a successful dental practitioner in Salem, South Dakota. The father of the Doctor was born in Cupar, Fifeshire, Scotland, on the 10th of September, 1824, and there was reared and educated, learning the trade of tailor in his youth. In 1843, at the age of nineteen years, he came to America, and after residing about five years in Illinois he removed thence to Anamosa, Iowa, where he engaged in business, also serving as justice of the peace for several years, while for three terms he held the office of auditor of Jones county. In 1883 he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up his residence in Sanborn county, where he had taken up a tract of government land the preceding year. He gave his attention to the improvement and cultivation of his farm for about four years and then removed to the village of Alexandria, where he has since maintained his home, being at the present time county judge of Hanson county, in which office he has served several terms, being one of the influential and highly honored citizens of the county. In politics he is a staunch Republican, and his religious faith is that of the Prebyterian church, of which he and his wife are devoted and active members.

He was a member of the territorial legislature just prior to the admission of South Dakota to the Union. Fraternally he is identified with the lodge, chapter and commandery of the Masonic order. Judge Dott manifested his loyalty to his adopted country at the time of the war of the Rebellion, having enlisted in Company H, Fourteenth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and being made commissary sergeant of his regiment. In the battle of Shiloh his zeal led him into the thick of the fray. He borrowed a musket from one of his comrades and made his way to the front with his regiment, which was captured by the enemy, resulting in his being imprisoned at Macon, Georgia, for several months.

Dr. Robert T. Dott secured his early education in the public schools of Anamosa, Iowa, completing the high-school course, after which he served under his father as deputy county auditor for four years. Within this time he took up the study of medicine, having as his preceptor Dr. E. W. Gawley, of Anamosa, and in the autumn of 1881 he entered that celebrated institution, Rush Medical College, in Chicago, where he completed a thorough course in medicine and surgery and was graduated on the 20th of February, 1883, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. He then rejoined his parents in South Dakota, passing the summer on the homestead farm and also "holding down" a claim which he had entered in Aurora county. During the ensuing winter he was engaged in the practice of his profession in Shelby county, Iowa, and in the fall of 1884 he went to New York City and entered the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, of whose unexcelled advantages he availed himself by taking a post-graduate course, being graduated in this institution in the spring of 1885. He then took up his residence in Alexandria, South Dakota, where he was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession until the fall of 1888, when he removed to Mount Vernon, where he was established in practice two years, then returning to Alexandria. In 1897 the Doctor located in Sioux Falls, where he was in practice one year, coming thence to Salem in the latter part of October, 1898, and having since established in a large and remunerative practice in the community, where his friends are in number as his acquaintances, his genial personality and high professional attainments having gained to him unqualified confidence and esteem. In politics Mr. Dott gives a stanch allegiance to the Republican party, and he served as coroner of Hanson county two terms, and as superintendent of the county board of health for four years. While a resident of Alexandria he served as village clerk and alderman, occupying the respective offices one year each. He is secretary of the board of pension examiners of McCook county, and is at the present time superintendent of both county and city boards of health. The Doctor is affiliated with Fortitude Lodge, No. 73, Free and Accepted Masons, in which he was elected and installed worshipful master to serve during the year 1904; and is also identified with Pythias Lodge, No. 60, Knights of Pythias; the Modern Woodmen of America; the Modern Brotherhood of America and the Union Veterans' Union. He is examining physician for several of the leading life-insurance companies, and professionally is one of the valued and appreciative members of the South Dakota Medical Society.

On the 12th of April, 1885, Dr. Dott was united in marriage to Miss Olive Booth, of Sanborn county, this state, and they became the parents of one child, Bertram T. On the 13th of December, 1892, the Doctor consummated a second marriage, being then united to Miss Maud E. Foote, of Hanson county, this state, and they are the parents of two children, Delia M. and Robert O.

M. B. BARNHART, who is successfully established in the livery business in Salem, McCook county, was born in Ohio, on the 20th of August, 1849, being a son of A. H. and Editha (Spaulding) Barnhart. The former was a native of the state of New York, whence he removed to Ohio with his parents when he was a child, being there reared to the life of the farm and securing a common-school education. He was married in Ohio and removed with his parents to Minnesota, where he engaged in farming and also in the practice of veterinary surgery, in which he was proficient. He was a Republican in politics and both he and his wife were members of the Adventist church. The father of our subject was a valiant soldier in the war of the Rebellion, having been a member of Company B, Second Minnesota Volunteer Cavalry. He died in Freeborn county, Minnesota, in 1872, and his wife passed away in 1889. They became the parents of eleven children, of whom eight are living, all being now resident of South Dakota.

The subject of this sketch was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, and secured his early educational training in the common schools of the state of Minnesota. In Freeborn county, Minnesota, in 1871, he married Miss Sarah Padgett, daughter of John Padgett, of English extraction, and of this union five children have been born: Edith, who died at the age of twenty-two years; and Elmer, Lynn, Herbert and Cassius, who remain at the parental home. Mr. Barnhart continued to be engaged in farming in Freeborn county, Minnesota, until 1880, when he came to South Dakota and took up a homestead claim in McCook county, here developing a valuable farm, upon which he continued to reside until 1891, when he removed to the village of Salem, where he was soon afterward elected town marshal, in which capacity he served nine years and seven months. Later he served for one year as deputy sheriff of the county. After retiring from the office of marshal he established himself in the livery business, in 1901, having a good barn and an excellent equipment throughout, and he has built up an excellent business, giving the best of service and sparing no pains to meet the demands of his patrons. He is a Republican in his political proclivities, is identified with Salem Lodge, No. 28, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and both he and his wife are valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is the owner of an attractive residence in Salem and also of other realty in the town, and he has attained success through his own efforts and by honest and earnest endeavor, ever retaining the confidence and esteem of all who know him.

ISAAC J. TODD, a member of the firm of Todd Brothers, of Salem, Hanson county, was born in the city of Elgin, Illinois, which was then a small village, on the 25th of September, 1854, being a son of James and Eliza (Boyce) Todd, to whom were born five sons and five daughters, all of whom are yet living. James Todd was born in the county of Armagh, Ireland, where he was reared and educated and where he learned the trade of weaver. At the age of twenty-six years he emigrated from the fair Emerald Isle to America, locating in Ohio, where his marriage was solemnized, shortly after which event he removed to Elgin, Illinois, where he learned the moulder's trade, to which he there continued to devote his attention until about 1856, when he removed with his family to Winneshiek county, Iowa, where he took up government land and turned his attention to agricultural pursuits, eventually becoming the owner of a valuable landed estate of four hundred acres and being one of the honored and influential citizens of the county. He was the architect of his own fortunes, having come to America without financial reinforcement or influential friends and having won prosperity by hard work and good management. He was a man of inflexible integrity and most generous and kindly impulses, and after coming to the United States he aided in bringing his brothers here. In politics he was a Republican, and while in his native land was a communicant of the church of England, but became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church after coming to America. His devoted and cherished wife passed to her reward in 1900, and his death occurred in 1887.

The subject of this sketch was a child of but two years at the time when his parents removed to the pioneer farm in Iowa, and there he was reared under sturdy and invigorating discipline, his educational advantages being such as were afforded in the common schools of the locality and period. He continued to be associated in the management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-five years, when, in 1870, he came to South Dakota and located in McCook county, entering claim to a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, near Montrose. There he developed a valuable farm, and for five years he was also engaged in the buying and shipping of grain, in which line of enterprise he was very successful. In 1886 Mr. Todd was elected register of deeds of McCook county, serving one term, and in 1888, upon retiring from office, he engaged in the real-estate business, in which he has been particularly successful, being associated with his brother since 1894. The firm handle principally their own properties, being at the present time the owners of more than three thousand acres of valuable farming land in McCook and adjoining counties. Mr. Todd is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and for a number of years was a member of its state central committee. He is affiliated with Montrose Lodge, No. 48, Free and Accepted Masons; Chapter No. 73, Royal Arch Masons; Commandery No. 17, Knights Templar; the Scottish Rite consistory at Yankton, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

Mr. Todd was married September 29, 1885, to Miss Ida McCooke, of Montrose, South Dakota, and there have been born to this union six children, two boys, now dead, and four girls living, viz: Adah M., Geneva E., Elva and Nauva.

EDWARD H. WILSON, who is engaged in the practice of law in Salem, McCook county, was born in Lycoming county, Pennsylvania, on the 7th of April, 1857, a son of Evan C. and Leah (Crawford) Wilson, of whose five children four are living. Evan Wilson was likewise born in Lycoming county, where his father located upon coming to America from the north of Ireland, where he was born. Evan Wilson was reared to farm life and continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until his death, having become one of the prosperous and influential citizens of Lycoming county, where he died in 1866, at the age of forty-nine years. He was a Republican in politics and both he and his wife held membership in the Christian church. Mrs. Wilson was summoned into eternal rest in 1874, at the age of fifty-six years.

Edward H. Wilson was about nine years of age at the time of his father's death, and from that time forward he became largely dependent upon his own resources. His determination and self-reliance stood him well in hand while he was still a lad, and he secured a good common-school education, after which he entered Mount Union College, at Alliance, Ohio, where he completed the philosophical course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1880, having paid his expenses by teaching during the vacations and also having followed his vocation in securing the money with which to initiate his collegiate work. The executor of his father's estate became a bankrupt and thus he received nothing by inheritance. After completing his college course, Mr. Wilson went to Canton, South Dakota, and there entered the law office of O. S. Gifford, under whose direction he prosecuted his study of the law with such assiduity that he secured admission to the bar in 1882. In the spring of the following year he came to Salem, South Dakota, where he served his novitiate in the practical work of his profession and where he has attained distinctive prestige through his well-directed efforts, being known as an able advocate and safe and conservative counsel. Mr. Wilson is an uncompromising Republican, and for the past fourteen years has served in the exacting and responsible office of state's attorney of this district, in which position he has made an enviable record as a public prosecutor. He is a member of Fortitude Lodge, No. 34, Free and Accepted Masons; of Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, at Salem; Oriental Consistory, No. 1, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, at Yankton; and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls. He is also affiliated with Salem Lodge, No. 10, Independent Order of Odd Fellows; Lodge No. 28, Ancient Order of United Workmen; and Salem Tent, No. 12, Knights of the Maccabees. He has taken a deep interest in all that concerns the development and material prosperity of South Dakota, and was one of the first to become identified with the State Historical Society. He is not formally identified with any religious body, but Mrs. Wilson holds membership in the Presbyterian church.

On the 29th of January, 1885, Mr. Wilson was united in marriage to Miss Etta L. Young, of Morganville, New York, and they are the parents of two children, Leon P. and Laverne E., both of whom remain at the parental home.

WILLIAM HOESE, one of the honored and influential citizens of Spencer, McCook county, was born in the village of Hinton, Plymouth county, Iowa, on the 28th of March, 1868, a son of William and Henrietta (Bandt) Hoese, of whose four living children he is the youngest, the others being as follows: Clara, who is the wife of William Lerch, of Sioux City, Iowa; Louisa, who is the wife of John Gudekenst, of State Center, Iowa; and Frank, who is a resident of Merrill, that state. William Hoese, Sr., was born in Launsberg, Germany, in 1822, and the wife was born in the same place, in 1832. There he was reared to maturity, learning the trade of miller, eventually becoming the owner and operator of an old-style mill in his native land, the motive power being furnished by a wind-wheel. He was married in his native town and there two of his children were born. In 1857 he emigrated with his family to America, landing in New York City and thence coming west to Iowa City, Iowa, where he remained a short time and then removed to Ponka, Nebraska, being the first white settler in that place, being engaged in farming in that locality for the ensuing five years, having purchased government land. In 1862 he passed through Sioux City, searching for an eligible location in Iowa, and though there was no flouring mill in the little village of Sioux City at the time, he decided to locate in Hinton, Plymouth county, where he erected the first grist mill in western Iowa, being one of the first settlers in that locality and anticipating the tide of immigration by several years. Six years later he disposed of his milling property and removed to Merrill, Plymouth county, in which locality he acquired extensive farming interests, eventually becoming one of the most influential agriculturists and stock growers in that section, where he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in 1894, his devoted wife having preceded him into eternal rest by about four months. He was a stalwart Republican in his political views, and while wielding distinctive influence in his party councils, he has never been an aspirant for public office.

William Hoese, the immediate subject of this sketch, secured his early educational training in the public schools, and at the age of fourteen was sent to the Northwestern Business College, in Sioux City, Iowa, where he was graduated in 1884. He then held a clerical position in a mercantile establishment in that city for one year, at the expiration of which, at the age of seventeen years, he came to Bridgewater, South Dakota, and engaged in the hardware business, in partnership with Theodore Montague. Three years later he disposed of his interests in this line and went to Sioux Center, Iowa, where he organized the bank of Sioux Center, of which he was made president, being at the time the youngest bank president in the state, as he had not yet attained his twenty-first year. In 1890 Mr. Hoese disposed of his banking interests and came to Spencer, South Dakota, where he effected the organization of the State Bank at Spencer, of which he was sole owner and officially cashier, his father and brothers permitting the use of their names on the corps of officials in order to comply with the technical provisions of the law. Mr. Hoese successfully conducted this enterprise until the 1st of January, 1903, when he sold the business, since which time he has not actively identified himself with any other enterprise, giving his attention to his various capitalistic interests. He has ever given an unequivocal allegiance to the Republican party and has shown a zealous interest in its cause, having been a member of the county central committee ever since taking up his residence in Spencer. While in no wise ambitious for political preferment, he was nominated for the state senate in 1898 and was elected, though the normal Democratic majority in the district was three hundred and sixty-one at that time. He gave a most creditable and satisfactory service in the upper house during the ensuing general assembly and fully justified the popular confidence reposed in him. He has also served in various local offices of trust, having been mayor of Spencer in 1894, and also serving as a member of the town council, as village treasurer and as a member of the school board. He is a member of Spencer Lodge, No. 147, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, of Salem; and El Riad Temple of the Mystic Shrine, in Sioux Falls, while he is also affiliated with the local lodges of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 3d of September, 1895, Mr. Hoes was married to Miss Ida T. Janke, of Spencer, and they are the parents of two sons and one daughter, namely: William R., Frank H. and Clara T.

CHRISTOPHER G. DUNN, of Farmer, Hanson county, was born in Winnebago county, Illinois, on the 31st of July, 1858, being a son of James and Elizabeth (Bigley) Dunn, of whose nine children seven are living, namely: Joseph, a resident of the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Christopher G., subject of this review; Mary, the wife of Peter Harris, of Vancouver, British Columbia; Spencer J., a resident of Hanson county, this state; Thomas, who resides in Helena, Montana; Elizabeth, the wife of Patrick Curry, of Hanson county; and Daniel, who is likewise a resident of this county. The father of our subject was born in County Meade, Ireland, in 1829, and was there reared to the age of sixteen years, when he came to America to seek his fortunes, locating in Orange county, New York, where he remained for a number of years, within which time he was married. He finally removed to Winnebago county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming for several years, thence removing to Huston county, Minnesota, where he continued to make his home until 1884, when he came to South Dakota and purchased a relinquishment claim in Hanson county, three and one-half miles northwest of the village of Farmer, and there he continued to be engaged in agricultural pursuits until his death, which occurred in 1891. He was a consistent member of the Catholic church, as was also his wife, who passed away in 1872.

Christopher C. Dunn remained at the parental home until he had attained his legal majority, while his educational advantages were such as were afforded by the public schools. At the age of twenty-one he inaugurated his independent career, securing work on a farm. In the spring of 1881 he came west to carve out a career for himself and to gain such a measure of success as was within his power. He located in Hanson county, this state, where he took up a pre-emption claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in what is now Spring Lake township, while in December of the same year he also took up a homestead claim in Edgerton township. He thereafter continued to be actively and successfully engaged in farming and in the breeding and raising of horses for sixteen years, within which time the wisdom of his choice of location had been amply justified. In the spring of 1899 Mr. Dunn took up his residence in the village of Farmer, where he engaged in the buying and shipping of grain, while for two years he also bought and shipped live stock upon an extensive scale, then abandoning this branch of the enterprise. In 1900 he erected a modern and commodious grain elevator, which affords the best of facilities, and he is now one of the most extensive and successful grain dealers in this section of the state. In 1901 Mr. Dunn erected the Farmer Hotel, a substantial and well-equipped building, and this he leased. He is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and in 1898 he was appointed clerk of the courts, in which capacity he served one year, while for several years he was incumbent of the office of supervisor of Spring Lake township. He served four years as justice of the peace, having been the first to be elected to this position after the organization of the township mentioned. His religious faith is that of the Catholic church, and fraternally he is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen. Mr. Dunn owns a half interest in the general mercantile business conducted under the firm name of Dunn, White & Company, while he also retains possession of a half section of valuable farming land, located one-half mile north of the village. He is a royal and public-spirited citizen and well merits representation in this history.

REV. BERNARD H. BUNNING, pastor of the Roman Catholic church, Bridgewater, was born in Covington, Kentucky, February 28, 1853. His parents, Herman G. and Thecla (Groene) Bunning, natives of Hanover, Germany, came to the United States in 1849, and located at Covington, Kentucky, of which city the father subsequently became a prominent merchant and leading business man. Of the nine children that originally constituted the family of Herman G. and Thecla Bunning, two were born in the mother country, one of them dying on the voyage to America, and the births of the other seven occurred in the United States. Only two of the number are living at the present time, the subject of this review and John H. Bunning, who is now advertising manager for the large mercantile firm of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Company, of Chicago. In 1883 the parents took up their residence in South Dakota with their son, Reverend Bunning, and spent the remainder of their days in this state, the father dying in 1889, the mother in the year 1890.

Bernard H. Bunning grew to maturity under the parental roof, attended for some years the parochial school under the auspices of the Mother of God church in Covington, and shortly after his thirteenth year removed with the family to St. Meinrad, Indiana, at which place he entered the Benedictine College, with the object in view of fitting himself for the priesthood. In due time he finished his literary and theological studies, was ordained priest in 1880, and immediately after came to South Dakota and took charge of St. Mary's church in the city of Bismarck. After two years of faithful and efficient pastoral work at that place, he was transferred to Pierre, being the first resident priest in the latter city, and his pastorate there covered a period of about four years, during which time he greatly strengthened his congregation, materially and spiritually, securing a fine building site, and erecting a beautiful temple of worship and parsonage. His labors at Pierre terminating in 1886, Father Bunning was next sent to Zell, where in due time he succeeded in raising sufficient funds to build a commodious church edifice and the congregation under his leadership increased rapidly in numbers and influence. After remaining at Zell until 1890, he was transferred to Aberdeen, where he labored with great acceptance for two years, and at the end of that time took charge of the church at Parkston, continuing at the latter place during the five years following. Father Bunning's next scene of labor was the parish of Vermillion, where he ministered to a young though healthy and growing church until the summer of 1901, when he came to Bridgewater, his present field of endeavor. Since locating with the parish at this place he has added greatly to the material well-being of the church, securing at a reasonable figure the United Brethren church building for a parochial school and the fine Pritzkam residence property with its handsome and valuable grounds, which he has remodeled and converted into a sisters' boarding school. The church has greatly prospered along all kinds of activity, and the pastor has not only endeared himself to his parishioners, but has become popular with all classes and conditions of people, irrespective of church or creed.

In addition to the church edifice erected by Father Bunning, alluded to in a preceding paragraph, he built the St. Anne's church at Miller, besides greatly strengthening the congregation there, and every place where he has been stationed spiritual growth and material prosperity have followed fast upon his labors.

CHARLES K. HOWARD.—The subject of this writing is a typical western stockman, pioneer and developer, and has a record of energy, endurance, readiness for emergencies and courage in the face of danger that is inspiring in its consistency and in the success which it has achieved. He was born at Red Hook on the Hudson, New York, on May 17, 1836, and received his education there and in central New York, finishing at Hamilton College, remaining in the state until he was twenty years old. In 1856 he came west to Sioux City, Iowa, then a little town of a few rude shacks. For a time he followed steamboating on the Missouri, then in 1857 came to Pierre in this state, where he was employed by the American Fur Company. The nearest railroad station at that time was St. Joseph, Missouri, and the life of the trader was remote from civilization and full of hazard. After two years of service with the fur company he again engaged in steamboating on the Missouri for four or five years until 1863. He then went to Sioux Falls, a military post known as Fort Dakota, as post trader, and during the next three years was profitably employed there in that capacity. In 1866 the post was abandoned by the government and thrown open to settlement, and as the section was rapidly filling with settlers he continued his mercantile operations there and also had a stage line and was engaged in the cattle industry. He built the first frame house in this part of the country, and remained in business there eighteen years, employing on an average fifty men in connection with his numerous interests. He was also active and prominent in public local affairs, serving as county treasurer of Minnehaha county for fourteen years, being during the whole of this period and afterwards the leader of the Democratic party in his vicinity, although he was usually elected on an independent ticket, as party lines were not closely drawn. For forty years, however, he supported the Democratic party, leaving it only in 1896 when his convictions were strong against the platform on which Mr. Bryan was nominated for the presidency. In 1883 he sold all his interests at Sioux Falls except his cattle, which numbered some fifteen hundred head. These he brought to the Cheyenne river at what is now Smithville, fifty miles northeast of Rapid City, where he took up the ranch which has since been his home and erected a dwelling on it. He stocked it with large herds of cattle, bought here and in Texas, and entered upon the open range cattle business on an extensive scale. From that time on he has been the largest individual cattle owner in this part of the country, having usually about ten thousand head, and in managing his business he has been eminently successful. His residence is known far and wide as the finest and most modern ranch dwelling within a very extensive range of country. It is equipped with electric lights and hot and cold water furnished by his own plants, elegantly furnished throughout and supplied with every desirable modern improvement. The operations of the ranch are conducted on a scale of magnitude and by means of the most approved machinery, which is driven by steam power. Mr. Howard has personal control of all phases of his business and when at work among his men seems to be the youngest of the band. He is a whole-souled and genial man, full of business, but at the same time full of good fellowship, and is known through all the northwest, numbering among his friends many of the most noted men of the day. He was the first man to locate here and engage in the range cattle industry, and foreseeing that the range would be gradually diminished, he has prepared himself for the change, acquiring about four thousand acres of good land for his purposes. He is in every sense a true pioneer. He camped where Yankton has since grown to, consequence, built the first brick house at Sioux City, the first frame house at Sioux Falls, and trailed from Sioux City to Fort Randall when there was not a house on the plains between the two places. In his business he has always been foremost and recognized as a leader.

C. K. HOWARD.

He is now president of the Western South Dakota Stockgrowers' Association.

In September, 1866, Mr. Howard was married, at Sioux City, to Miss Jeannette Ricketts, a native of Washington, D. C. One child blessed their union, Mary J., now Mrs. Pender. Mrs. Howard died in May, 1868, and on February 5, 1890, Mr. Howard married, at Eureka Springs, Arkansas, Miss Catherine Franklin, a native of Pennsylvania.

LAWRENCE S. TYLER, president of the First National Bank of Salem, McCook county, is one of the influential and honored citizens of this section of the state, and his character and prominence are such as to eminently entitle him to recognition in this history. Mr. Tyler was born in the village of Compton, province of Ontario, Canada, on the 19th of August, 1854, a son of Damon Y. and Maria (Taylor) Tyler, to whom were born four children, namely: Lewis, who is engaged in the hardware business in Salem, this state; Leonora, who is the wife of E. E. Quiggle, of Rapid City, South Dakota; Lydia, who is the wife of Henry Seavers, of Duluth, Minnesota; and Lawrence S., who is the subject of this sketch. Damon Y. Tyler was born in the state of New Hampshire, where he was reared to maturity. As a young man he secured a position in the employ of the well-known firm of Fairbanks, Morse & Company, manufacturers of scales, in the city of Philadelphia, and while there he was married. His father had in the meanwhile removed to the province of Ontario, Canada, and he also took up his residence there, remaining but a short time and finally removing to Columbia county, Wisconsin, where he purchased a tract of railroad land and engaged in farming, to which he there continued to give his attention about ten years, at the expiration of which he took up his abode in the town of Big Spring, that county, in which vicinity he purchased a large farm. In 1867 he located in Merri-mac, Sauk county, that state, where he established himself in the mercantile business, also serving as postmaster of the town for the long period of fourteen years. In 1882 he retired from active business, and he is still residing in that place, one of the honored pioneers of the state. He is a Republican in politics and both he and his wife are members of the Baptist church.

The subject of this review attended the common schools until he had attained the age of fourteen years, when he began to depend upon his own resources, securing work on a farm and receiving the princely stipend of ten dollars a month for his services. At the age of eighteen he became identified with the construction of bridges on the line of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, in the employ of which he continued about three years. Upon attaining his majority he removed to Rock county, Minnesota, where he purchased a quarter section of land, in Magnolia township, where he was engaged in farming for the ensuing four years. In the spring of 1880 Mr. Tyler accepted a position with the firm of Peter Thompson & Company, prominent dealers in agricultural machinery and implements at Adrian, Minnesota, serving as their bookkeeper and general office manager until 1883, when he came to Salem, South Dakota, here erecting a substantial block and engaging in the hardware business, building up a large and prosperous enterprise and continuing the same about eighteen years. In 1888 he became associated with others in the organization of the McCook County State Bank, and in 1892, after failure of the Salem Bank, the fine building of the defunct institution was purchased of the receiver and the McCook County State Bank forthwith took possession of this newly acquired property, which is still utilized for the counting rooms of its successor, the First National Bank. In 1899 Mr. Tyler and Mr. S. W. Appleton, now of Sioux City, acquired the entire ownership of the state bank, of which our subject had served consecutively as president from the year 1896 up to that time. In 1901 Mr. Appleton sold his stock in the institution, which was then reorganized as the First National Bank of Salem, of which Mr. Tyler was chosen president, a position he had held with the state bank up to the reorganization, while the interested principals in the new bank include the subject and

C. J. Ives, F. H. Putnam and Thomas Brown, of Sioux Falls, and Thomas Bishop, of Salem. After the reorganization Mr. Tyler disposed of his hardware business, and the banking enterprise has grown to such proportions as to demand the major portion of his time and attention in his chief executive capacity. Mr. Tyler is the owner of one hundred and sixty acres of farming land in this county, seven hundred acres in Hand county, one hundred and sixty acres in Buffalo county and also a half interest in a fine farm of four hundred and eighty acres in the last mentioned county. He owns a controlling interest in the creamery at Salem, being manager, secretary and treasurer of the Salem Creamery Association. He is treasurer of the Salem Mill and Lighting Company, treasurer of the South Dakota Dairy and Buttermakers' Association, treasurer of the school district, and secretary of the Salem Cemetery Association, in the organization of which he was associated with George Sanderson and L. V. Schneider. He is held in the highest confidence and esteem in the county and has been called upon to serve as guardian and as administrator of important estates. Mr. Tyler is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and has ever shown a deep interest in public affairs. He has served for more than a decade and a half as member of the village council, being incumbent of this position at the present time. He and his wife are prominent and zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal church, of whose board of trustees he is secretary, being also incumbent of the office of steward. Mr. Tyler has completed the circle of York-rite Masonry, being affiliated with the following bodies: Fortitude Lodge, No. 73, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons; Constantine Council, No. 2, Royal and Select Masters; and Constantine Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, while he has also become a member of the auxiliary organization, the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, holding membership in El Riad Temple, in Sioux Falls. He is identified with Salem Lodge, No. 28, Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which he is financier.

On the 24th of January, 1877, Mr. Tyler was united in marriage to Miss Hattie Blackman, of Merrimack, Wisconsin, and to them were born three children, two of whom survive, Nellie L., the wife of Roy Palmer, of Chamberlain, South Dakota, and Grace L., who remains at the parental home.

The following obituary notice relative to the subject's mother appeared in the local press at the time of her death:

DEATH OF MRS. TYLER.—Maria Jane Tyler died at her home, in Merrimack, on Wednesday, February 17, 1904, aged seventy-three years, one month and seventeen days. She was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, December 31, 1830, and was married to Damon Y. Tyler, June 12, 1853. They removed to Wisconsin in the fall of 1854, where she has lived until called home where sorrow is no more. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn her loss. The children are Leonora E. Quiggle, Lydia Sievers, Lewis A. Tyler and Lawrence S. Tyler. Mrs. Tyler joined the Baptist church in 1858, and her Christian life had always been bright until the final call from her Heavenly Father. Mrs. Tyler was deeply interested in the cause of temperance. For eighteen years she was an active member of the Merrimack Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Though not able to attend the meetings during the latter years of her life, her heart and soul were ever in the work, and her prayers continually arose to the throne of God for the final overthrow of the alcoholic despot. But her labors of love were not confined to the ladies' organization; she cordially sympathized with every effort to elevate humanity, to regenerate those in degradation and to purify the heart filled with corroding sin. Though sickness had compelled her to remain within the walls of her cozy home much of the time for many years, her life had been an inspiration to neighbors and friends through all the period of suffering and ebbing away of the vital tide. She was always thoughtful of others, always feared that she was a burden, always longed to go and be with Jesus. Gradually the "robe of flesh" wasted and weakened, but the immortal light beamed from her face in ever increasing beauty and radiance, until the tired lids for the last time closed over "the windows of the soul." In all her pain and weariness and long night vigils she was calm and patient and heroic. She was sustained by the undying faith in her Lord and Redeemer. The great desire of her heart was to throw off this "mortal coil" which bound her to the earth so that her spirit might soar to the mansions prepared for her in the glorious realms above. She loved her Master. Her life was devoted to Him. To the limit of her strength she worked for Him. In the hour of death and in the dark and chilling waters, she leaned upon His everlasting arms, and her last faintly articulated words were, "I want to go home today."

CHARLES E. JOHNSON, postmaster of the city of Bridgewater, is the son of Joseph and Louise Johnson, and was born in Byron, Ogle county, Illinois, on the 27th day of August, 1856. His father was a native of Sweden, and when a young man married, in Europe, Miss Louise Daniels, who was born and reared in Scotland. Shortly after his marriage he came to the United States and settled in Ogle county, Illinois, where he spent the remainder of his life as a prosperous and contented tiller of the soil. Seven children were born to Joseph and Louise Johnson, five of whom survive, namely: John, of Winnebago county, Illinois; August, a business man of Chicago; Charles E., of this review; Mrs. Minnie Osborn and Laura, the last two living in the city of Chicago.

Charles E. Johnson grew up under the healthful influence of farm life, and remained at home until twenty years old, obtaining the meanwhile a fair educational training in the public schools of his native place. Leaving home at the age noted, he went to Chicago and after working about two years on the street cars of that city, spent one year with a civil engineering corps surveying a line of the Milwaukee Railroad, between the towns of Savannah and Elgin. In 1879 he went to Nebraska, where he purchased land and for two years was engaged in agricultural pursuits, disposing of his real estate at the expiration of that time and in 1881 locating at Bridgewater, South Dakota. Mr. Johnson came to McCook county when the country was new, consequently enjoyed exceptional advantages in the way of making a judicious selection of land. Purchasing a half section about four miles north of the town, he at once addressed himself to the task of its improvement and in due time had a good farm under successful cultivation, from which he soon began to realize a comfortable income. He continued agriculture and stock raising with success and profit until the spring of 1903, when he retired from farm life to enjoy the fruits of his many years of well-directed labor.

Mr. Johnson has been quite prominent in the affairs of McCook county ever since becoming a resident of the same and at different times he has been honored with important official positions, one of the first being that of township treasurer, in which he served for a period of eighteen consecutive years. A staunch Republican, he early became one of the party leaders in this county and in recognition of his valuable political services, as well as by reason of his peculiar fitness for the position, he was elected in 1893 to the upper house of the general assembly. His career as a legislator proving eminently satisfactory to his constituency, he was re-elected in 1897, being the only man in McCook county chosen the second time to the senate. Mr. Johnson was an indefatigable worker while in the legislature, served on several important committees, was influential in the general deliberations of the body, and as one of the Republican leaders succeeded in bringing about the enactment of a number of laws which have had important bearing upon the interests of the state. He is now a member of the Republican state central committee, in which capacity he has rendered valuable service to his party. He has also served on the central committee of McCook county, and as a further evidence of his faithful and efficient service he was appointed by President McKinley, in 1897, postmaster of Bridgewater, which position he still holds, having been re-appointed in February, 1902, by President Roosevelt. In addition to the offices referred to, Mr. Johnson was for nineteen years a member of the Emery township school board, during which time he labored earnestly to advance educational interests, making the schools among the best in the state; he was president of the board, during the greater part of his incumbency and in that capacity succeeded in introducing a number of reforms, erected several fine modern buildings, and brought the educational system up to its present high standard of efficiency.

Mr. Johnson was married, in 1884, to Miss Jennie Campbell, of Byron, Illinois, and is the father of two children, Margaret, a graduate of the normal department of Huron College, and Mary, who is also an educated and cultured young lady, both daughters living at home with their parents.

Fraternally Mr. Johnson is a Mason of high degree, belonging to Eureka Lodge, No. 71, at Bridgewater; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons, and Salem Commandery, Knights Templar. He is also identified with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, in both of which organizations he has held important positions.

BERNARD SLOWEY, a leading representative of the business interests of Irene, South Dakota, was born in Wisconsin, October 3, 1852, his parents being Patrick and Catherine (McCabe) Slowey, both natives of Ireland. The father was born in 1814 and was a young man when he came to the new world and took up his residence in Wisconsin, where he carried on operations as a farmer for several years with good success. In 1872 he brought his family to South Dakota and took up three hundred and twenty acres of government land in Yankton county. He made the journey overland by teams. His first home in this state was a log house with a dirt roof, and he used oxen as well as horses in breaking his land. He continued to improve and cultivate his land until he had a good farm and he continued to make his home thereon until his death, which occurred in February, 1902. His wife had died in August, 1884. Both were devout members of the Catholic church and he was a Democrat in his political affiliations.

In the family of this worthy couple were nine children, of whom Bernard is the eldest. Catherine is now the wife of Patrick Cunningham, a farmer residing in Utica, Yankton county. Mary is the wife of Michael Cunningham, also a resident of Utica. Thomas lives on the old homestead. John married Tracie Burns and is engaged in farming in Yankton county. Elizabeth is the wife of James Murray, a resident of Irene. Patrick is represented on another page of this volume. Ellen is the wife of Mat Murray, who makes his home in Yankton. Peter married Maud Cook and lives on the old homestead. All were given good educational advantages and Ellen taught school for one term. They are now well situated in life.

Bernard Slowey passed his boyhood and youth in Wisconsin and was about twenty years of age when he came with his father to Yankton county, South Dakota. Six years later he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of government land in this county, nine miles west of Irene, and he broke and improved the place, converting it into a fine farm. He was married in 1878 to Miss Isabelle McKeachie, by whom he has had eight children. Three of the number are now deceased, three others are married and two are still at home with their parents.

Renting their farms in the winter of 1902-3, Mr. Slowey and his brother Patrick moved their families to Irene, where they have erected nice homes. They also built a first-class livery and feed stable and are now in control of the best business of the kind in town. The subject is independent in politics, voting for the man rather than the party and he and his family are communicants of the Catholic church.

STENGRIM HINSETH, a practical and enterprising agriculturist of Yankton county, was born on the 27th of March, 1842, in Thronhjem Stift, Norway, in which country his parents, Ingebrigt and Maret Hinseth, spent their entire lives. In their family were nine children, the subject being the next to the youngest. He remained in Norway until after reaching man's estate and was there married in 1868 to Miss Carrie Sesager. One child was born to them in that country and in 1870 the young couple with their baby came to the new world, their destination being Yankton county, South Dakota, where Mr. Hinseth took up one hundred and sixty acres of government land two miles west of Irene. Their first home here was a little dugout, where the family lived in true pioneer style, while Mr. Hinseth converted the wild land into well-tilled fields, breaking the sod with ox-teams. The grasshoppers destroyed his crops on more than one occasion, but he steadily and persistently worked his way upward to the goal of success and is today one of the wealthiest men of his community. In 1878 he secured a timber claim of one hundred and sixty acres and has since added to his property until he now owns six hundred acres of fine land, worth fifty dollars per acre. Two hundred acres of this is devoted to pasturage, as he is extensively engaged in the raising and feeding of stock of all kinds, including horses, cattle, sheep and hogs. He is also financially interested in a creamery and elevator at Irene and a flouring mill at Volin. Upon his farm he erected an elegant frame house in 1901 and has also built a fine barn and other outbuildings, which stand as monuments to his thrift and enterprise.

Mr. Hinseth's first wife died on the 15th of September, 1877, leaving three children, and in 1878 he wedded Miss Mattie Christine Stoem, by whom he has six children. The family consists of Maret, now the wife of John Ellifson, a farmer of Yankton county; Ingeborg, deceased; Hannah C.; Albert and Olive, both deceased; Albert O., Ole S. and Ida M., at home. The children have had good school privileges, and the daughters have taken lessons on the piano. Mr. and Mrs. Hinseth are members of the Lutheran church and he affiliates with the Republican party. He has held some minor offices and gives his support to all measures calculated to promote the moral, educational and material welfare of the community in which he lives.

PATRICK SLOWEY, of Irene, was born on the 16th of January, 1865, in Wisconsin, and is a son of Patrick and Catherine (McCabe) Slowey, who are mentioned more fully in the sketch of Bernard Slowey on another page of this volume. When a little lad of seven summers the subject was brought by his parents to South Dakota and here he grew to manhood amid pioneer scenes, assisting his father in the development and cultivation of the home farm until after he attained his majority. He not only gained an excellent knowledge of agricultural pursuits but also obtained a good practical education in the common schools. At the age of twenty-six he bought one hundred and sixty acres of wild land from his father, and in due time transformed the place into a good farm. In the winter of 1902-3 he rented the farm and removed to Irene, where in partnership with his brother Bernard he has since engaged in the livery business with good success. They are also interested in raising horses and are good judges of fine stock.

On the 26th of November, 1891, Mr. Slowey married Miss Ellen Murray, and to them have been born six children. They are members of the Catholic church and he is also connected with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Improved Order of Red Men. He is not bound by party ties, but votes for the men whom he believes best qualified for office. Pleasant and genial in manner, he is very popular in social circles and is well liked by all who know him.

HERMAN FRIER, a well-known citizen of Irene, now living a retired life, is a native of the fatherland, born in Prussia, Germany, January 2, 1830, and is a son of William and Caroline (Gunter) Frier, who were life-long residents of Prussia. They had but two children and the younger, William, never came to the United States, but died in Germany.

Herman Frier was reared and educated in his native land and continued to make his home there until 1854, when he crossed the ocean and settled in Wisconsin, making his home in that state until 1870. In the meantime he was married, in 1857, to Miss Julia A. Wheeler, a daughter of John B. and Minnie (Hittenrod) Wheeler, who were natives of Saxony, Germany, and came to the United States in 1851, their remaining days being spent in Wisconsin. By occupation Mr. Wheeler was both a farmer and shoemaker. His children were John, Frank, Herman, Joseph, Sana, Eliza, Mary, Minnie and Julia. Eleven children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Frier, namely: Charles F., who is now quite well-to-do and lives in Wisconsin; Mary, deceased; Sarah, wife of William Patrick, of Kansas; Emma; Louis W. and Anna R., both deceased; Delia M.; Matilda I.; George H., who is running a dray line in Irene; Joseph A.; Arthur E., who is operating the home farm for his father; and Florence J., deceased.

Before leaving Germany Mr. Frier had learned the miller's trade, which he followed for many years after coming to this country, and he repaired and put in operation a number of mills in South Dakota, having removed to Riverside township, Clay county, in 1870. Later he was engaged in milling in Lodi for nine years. He secured one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Clay county, while he greatly improved, setting out trees and erecting a good brick residence and a barn at a cost of fifteen hundred dollars. He was one of the first settlers of that locality, the Indians being still quite numerous when he took up his residence there. His family then numbered a wife and five children, and his possessions consisted of one team of horses and a cow, but he steadily set to work to improve his fortunes and success attending his effort he is now able to lay aside all business cares and live retired, enjoying the fruits of former toil.

When his adopted country became involved in civil war Mr. Frier offered his services to the government, enlisting in 1863 in Company D, Fourteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry. This regiment reinforced the Red river expedition and took part in the battle of Tupelo, Mississippi. It then marched through Arkansas to Little Rock, and on to Missouri in pursuit of General Price, taking part in the engagement at Waynesburg. From there they went to St. Louis and proceeded thence to Nashville, where they were engaged in battle. Later they went to New Orleans and assisted in the capture of Spanish Fort, after which they proceeded to Montgomery, Alabama. While stationed in that city peace was declared and the news came of President Lincoln's assassination. Mr. Frier was confined in the hospital at Memphis, Tennessee, for some time, and at the close of the war received an honorable discharge and returned home. He is a staunch supporter of the Republican party and its principles and while residing in Clay county, South Dakota, he took quite an active part in public affairs, now serving his third term as alderman of Irene, as assessor of his township, and as school director for thirty years. He belongs to no church, being a free-thinker, but his life has been upright and honorable in all respects and no man in the community stands in higher regard than Herman Frier.

NELS C. ANDREWS, who is now acting as manager for J. H. Queal & Company, of Minneapolis, his home being in Irene, was born on the 14th of August, 1868, in Racine, Wisconsin, and is a son of Christ and Marie (Nielsen) Christensen, natives of Denmark. Coming to America in 1868 the father first settled in Wisconsin, where he made his home until 1877, and then removed to Turner county, South Dakota. There he secured one hundred and sixty acres of government land and for several years devoted his time and energies to the improvement and cultivation of his place, though by trade he is a wagonmaker, having followed that occupation in the old country. He also worked with a brother at wagon-making in Racine, Wisconsin, and to his own industry, perseverance and economy is due his success in life. In religious faith he is a Baptist and in politics is an ardent Republican. His family consists of six children, namely: Christine, now the wife of Nick Nielson, a farmer; Tillie; John, who married Minnie Olson; Mary, wife of C. F. Frederickson, a farmer of Turner county, South Dakota; Anton, who is operating the home place for his father; and Nels C., of this review.

Nels C. Andrews spent his early life upon a farm and had good educational advantages. After attending the public schools for some years he entered Sioux Falls College at Sioux Falls, in 1896, completing the scientific course and graduating with the class of 1899. For ten years he successfully engaged in teaching school in Turner county, being in charge of the city school at Viborg a part of the time, but as previously stated he now holds the position of manager for J. H. Queal & Company, at Irene, Yankton county.

In 1895 Mr. Andrews was united in marriage to Miss Christine Olson, a daughter of Christ and Marie (Nelson) Olson, who were born in Denmark and are now living in Turner county, South Dakota. Her father is a very up-to-date and prosperous farmer, being now the owner of eleven hundred and twenty acres of good farm land in this state. He has a family of five children, namely: Christine, Nels, Frank, Victor and Arthur. The sons are still at home. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. Andrews are Rubie V., Una Z., Pearl B. and Newell C.

Although comparatively a young man, Mr. Andrews has already met with fair success in life and is the owner of some town property in Irene. He is an honored member of several civic societies, belonging to the Masonic lodge at Centerville; Yankton Consistory, No. 1; the Modern Woodmen Camp, No. 2323; the Danish Brotherhood, No. 141; and the Order of Home Guardsians, No. 2. Politically he is a stalwart Democrat, and he has taken quite an active and influential part in local politics. His fellow citizens, recognizing his worth and ability, have called upon him to serve as justice of the peace, town clerk, alderman and mayor of Irene and his official duties have always been discharged in a commendable and satisfactory manner.

JAMES LINCOLN STEWART, M. D., conspicuous among the leading physicians and surgeons of Irene, is a native of Minnesota and the son of William Riley and Albina Stewart, the father born in Connecticut, and still living, hale and hearty at the age of eighty-eight, the mother also living and in her seventy-sixth year, having been born and reared in the state of New York. William Riley Stewart is the son of Marvin and Mehitabel (Clark) Stewart, the former of Scotch lineage, although a native of England, the latter a descendant of one of the earliest white families of the United States, several members of which, in an early day, intermarried with various Indian tribes. The aboriginal strain has been apparent in the family for a number of generations, and, far from being deplored, those inheriting the blood are proud of the fact, the Doctor in particular, as it has had much to do in making him a genuine American and giving him much more than ordinary interest in the land of his nativity. Albina Drew, who married William Riley Stewart, is the daughter of Gilbert and Mary (Debow) Drew, both members of old and highly respected families of York state, the former a son of Samuel and Mollie (Townsend) Drew, the latter of Garret and Elizabeth (Barnes) Debow. The most remote ancestor on the maternal side of whom the Doctor has any definite knowledge is his great-great-grandfather, Gilbert Drew, father of the Samuel Drew, who married Mollie Townsend, as noted above.

Dr. James Lincoln Stewart was born November 22, 1865, in Minnesota City, and spent his youthful years on a farm, working in the summer time and attending the public schools of winter seasons, until attaining his majority. Meantime the intellectual discipline received in the schools of his native town was supplemented by a course at the State Normal School at Winona, where he was graduated in 1886, and later he attended for some time the State University, devoting a part of the interim to agricultural pursuits and teaching, in this way earning means to defray the expenses of his collegiate training. Having decided to make medicine his life work, Dr. Stewart, after a preliminary course of reading under the direction of a competent instructor, entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Chicago, from which institution he was graduated in 1893, and immediately thereafter he began the practice of his profession at Hurly, South Dakota. After remaining eight months at that village, he sought a new and wider field in the town of Irene, at which place he is still located. The Doctor early associated himself with the progressive members of the profession, and has availed himself of every possible opportunity to enlarge his knowledge and perfect his skill, being at this time identified with the South Dakota State Medical Society, Sioux Falls Medical Association, the American Medical Temperance Association and the American Medical Association, holding at this writing the position of secretary of the South Dakota State Medical Society and serving in the same capacity with the Association of State Medical Secretaries. For several years he was a member of the legislative committee of the South Dakota Medical Society and while serving as such was instrumental in bringing about much important medical legislation. He was elected, in 1902, a member of the house of delegates of the American Medical Association, which held its sessions at Saratoga Springs, New York, in June of that year.

Dr. Stewart exemplifies in his own life the theories which he advocates and for which he has long contended, that good health can only be secured and maintained by strict observance of temperance and correct living. To this end he has always been a total abstainer from everything in the shape of intoxicants, has never used tobacco in any form, and believing tea and coffee to be harmful in their effects upon the human system, discards both beverages, besides being temperate in the use of food and abstaining from all habits and indulgences calculated in any way to interfere with the normal functions of any of the bodily powers, at the same time maintaining that serenity of mind is necessary to equanimity and harmony in the human organism. He has unbounded faith in his chosen calling and believes that when properly applied, there is no profession which is so potent in uplifting the human race physically, morally and intellectually.

Politically, Dr. Stewart yields allegiance to no party, being independent in the matter of voting and supporting the principles which in his judgment best conduce the public good. While manifesting but little interest in secret fraternal organizations, he nevertheless holds membership with the Modern Woodmen of America, Brotherhood of American Yeoman and Order of Home Guardians societies, and in religion subscribes to the Baptist faith, having been a member of the church of that name since his young manhood.

On September 19, 1893, the Doctor was united in marriage, at Hurley, South Dakota, with Miss Myra Judson, whose father, Rev. T. H. Judson, was perhaps the first Baptist missionary sent to the state. Three children have blessed this union, namely: James Earl, born July 13, 1894; Howard Monroe, June 27, 1896, and Joy Myra, whose birth occurred on February 8, 1901.

REV. HEINRICH P. UNRUH, one of the popular and successful farmers of Bon Homme county, was born in Volhynia, Ostrog, Russia, on the 25th of February, 1865, and is a son of Rev. Peter and Mary (Siebert) Unruh, both of whom were likewise born in Russia, being of German lineage and speaking the German language. Their ancestors removed from Germany into southern Russia a number of generations ago. The father of the subject was engaged in agriculture and in service as a minister of the gospel in his native land until 1874, when he emigrated thence to America, and with his family located in Hutchinson county, South Dakota, being one of the first settlers in that section, where he took up two hundred and twenty acres of government land, the same being entirely unreclaimed and located in the vicinity of Silver Lake. His equipment upon coming to the county consisted of a few household effects, a wagon, a yoke of oxen and two cows. He began his career here in true pioneer style, the original family home being a rude sod house, but in due time he brought his land under profitable cultivation and made the best of improvements on the property, becoming one of the honored and successful farmers of the county, where he and his wife still maintain their residence, residing on the old homestead which has been their place of abode for the past thirty years. He is a Republican in politics and both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite church. To them were born ten children, of whom all are living, the subject having been the second in order of birth, while five of the number were born after the removal of the family to America.

Rev. Heinrich P. Unruh was a lad of nine years at the time of his parents' immigration to the United States, and had received his early educational training in the excellent German schools of his native land, while he supplemented this by attending school as opportunity afforded after coming to South Dakota, though the advantages were of course meager in the early days, while his services were much in requisition in connection with the work of the home farm. He continued to assist his father in the management of the homestead until he had attained the age of twenty-one years, when he initiated his independent career, having received from his father a gift of eighty acres of wild land in Turner county, this state, together with a yoke of oxen. He remained on this place two years, breaking the greater portion of the land, and then, in 1888, disposed of the property and purchased his present homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, in Bon Homme county. The place was partially improved, and had a sod house, in which he continued to reside until 1901, when he erected his present commodious frame residence. Mr. Unruh cultivates three hundred and twenty acres of land, of which one hundred and sixty are rented. He receives a nice income from butter, eggs, produce and stock, and nets from seven hundred to eight hundred dollars yearly from hogs. The farm has a good orchard, is well fenced and is one of the attractive and valuable places of the county, while the subject is known as an energetic and indefatigable worker and as a man worthy of unqualified confidence and esteem, which are freely accorded him. In politics he supports the Republican party, and both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite church.

On the 18th of February, 1886, Mr. Unruh was united in marriage to Miss Lena Schultz, who was born in Russia and who is a daughter of Henry Schultz, who was one of the pioneers and successful farmers of Bon Homme county, where his death occurred in 1880. His wife is still living and resides in the home of our subject. Mr. and Mrs. Unruh have eight children, whose names are here entered, with respective dates of birth: Benjamin, February 3, 1887; Peter, October 5, 1888; Susan, May 27, 1890; Jonathan, January 30, 1892, died September 9, same year; Anthony, November 12, 1893; Elizabeth, January 19, 1896; Anna, September 17, 1897; and William, September 1, 1899.

In reference to his services as a minister of the gospel it may be said that Mr. Unruh was elected a minister by the members of the Mennonite church at Loretta, Bon Homme county, on January 4, 1889, and was confirmed and ordained on the 15th of February following by Bishop Benjamin P. Schmidt. He has since then served in the Christian ministry without salary. He works faithfully for the sake of Christianity and is greatly interested in the education of young children, having himself been a teacher of the German language for some time at Loretta.

CHRISTIAN HARTMANN is to be considered in every sense a pioneer of South Dakota and of Bon Homme county, where he is the owner of a fine landed estate and where he is held in high estimation by all who know him. He has been the architect of his own fortune, having come to America as a young man and without financial reinforcement, and having gained prosperity and independence through energy, perseverance and honest and earnest endeavor.

Christian Hartmann is a native of Oadalum, province of Hanover, Germany, where he was born on the 12th of November, 1840, being a son of Conrad and Lena (Langkap) Hartmann, who passed their entire lives in the fatherland, the former having been a wagonmaker by vocation. They became the parents of four children, of whom the subject is the youngest. Johanna is the wife of Christopher Lattamann, of Oadalum; Ludwig is a resident of Biarbaum Mill; and Henry died when twenty years of age. The subject was reared in his native land and received his educational training in its excellent schools. After leaving school he gave his attention to sugar manufacturing until 1869, when he severed the home ties and set forth to seek his fortunes in America, landing in New York and thence making his way westward to St. Louis, Missouri, where he remained ten days, after which he embarked on a Missouri river steamboat and started forth in search of a location. He came up the river to Niobrara, Nebraska, across the river from South Dakota, and in that locality he took up a squatter's claim of one hundred and sixty acres, in what is now Knox county, Nebraska, the nearest neighbor being twenty-five miles distant, while game of all sorts was abundant and the Indians much in evidence. Two years after he had taken his claim the same reverted to the government, which demanded the land for military reservation purposes. In 1873 Mr. Hartmann took up an Indian pre-emption claim in township 92, Bon Homme county, South Dakota, and later secured a homestead claim adjoining and this property is an integral part of his present estate. For several years after coming to this section Mr. Hartmann was employed by the government as engineer in a sawmill, receiving seventy-five dollars a month in recompense for his services and utilizing this income in the development and improvement of his ranch. In 1877 he went to the Indian territory, where he continued in government employ for the ensuing five years, at the expiration of which, in 1882, he came with his wife to the farm in this county and settled down to agricultural pursuits and to the raising of live stock, with which lines of enterprise he has ever since been identified. He is now the owner of twelve hundred and eighty acres of valuable land, and the place has the best of improvements, the original and diminutive log house having given place to a commodious frame residence, which he erected in 1885, the same having been the second frame dwelling built in this section of the county, while he has since remodeled and otherwise improved the building. His entire ranch is well fenced and three hundred and twenty acres are under cultivation, the balance being utilized for grazing purposes and for the raising of hay, etc. He has a large and substantial barn and other good farm buildings, has set out a grove of trees, now well matured, and the place is one of the attractive ones of the county and bespeaks thrift and prosperity. Mr. Hartmann gives special attention to the raising of cattle and horses of excellent grade, as well as hogs and sheep, having an average herd of one hundred head of cattle, and having shipped three car loads of cattle and hogs in 1903. The home is one in which are found evidences of refined taste, books, works of art, a piano, etc., adding to its attractions, while its hospitality is genial and kindly, the latch-string ever hanging out. In politics Mr. Hartmann is a staunch Republican, but has never sought or desired official preferment, though he shows a helpful interest in local affairs of a public nature. He is a member of the Lutheran church, in whose faith he was reared, and his wife is a member of the Congregational church.

At Perkins, South Dakota, on the 3d of July, 1881, Mr. Hartmann was united in marriage to Miss Lizzie Knight, who was born and reared in Duquoin, Illinois, and who was a resident of Cleardale, Kansas, at the time of her marriage, being a daughter of Albert Knight, a pioneer of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Hartmann have eight children, all of whom still remain in the home circle, though the sons and two daughters are at this time students in the State Normal School at Springfield, this county. The names of the children are here entered in order of birth: Leona, William, Mary, Ellen, Carl, Albert (died when six months old), Lassara and Grace.

ISAAC SCHMIDT, of Perkins, Bon Homme county, was born in Heinrischdorf, Russia, on the 13th of August, 1859, and is a son of Benjamin and Sarah Schmidt, who were likewise born and reared in that same province, where the father was engaged in milling, weaving and farming until September, 1874. In 1786 Catharine II of Russia invited the Mennonites in Germany to settle in Russia, granting them religious liberty. Many of them accepted the invitation and established their homes there. In 1870 strong efforts were made by Russian officials to have the edict repealed and thus make all male residents subject to military duty. Then Mr. Schmidt decided to emigrate with his family to the United States, landing in New York, and immediately afterward coming to the territory of Dakota. They remained two weeks in Yankton and then Mr. Schmidt entered claim to three hundred and twenty acres of government land in what is now township 93, Bon Homme county, and the original home of the family was a dugout of the type so common in the early pioneer epoch. He developed a good farm and he and his wife still reside on the place, being numbered among the sterling pioneers of the county and having the high regard of all who know them. He is independent in his political proclivities and both he and his wife are members of the Mennonite church, exemplifying their faith in their daily walk. They had many vicissitudes and privations to encounter in the early days of their residence in the territory, and the work of developing the farm was accomplished with meager facilities, while Mr. Schmidt found employment in various ways in order to earn the money with which to provide for his family and carry forward the improvement of his place, which is now one of the best in this section. In the family were nine children, all of whom are living and well placed in life, the subject of this sketch having been the fifth in order of birth.

Isaac Schmidt secured his early educational discipline in the denominational school of his fatherland, and was a lad of fifteen years at the time of the family immigration to America. Owing to the conditions of time and place he received but little schooling after coming to Dakota, but he has gained a broad fund of knowledge of practical order through personal application and through experience in connection with the active affairs of life. As a boy he assisted in cutting hay on the pioneer farm, utilizing a scythe for this purpose, and the first property which he accumulated though his own efforts was a cow. At the age of fifteen years he began working on the farm, for a stipend of six dollars a month, being thus engaged for three years and with his savings he purchased a pair of steers, which he used for a team. At the age of twenty years he purchased one hundred and sixty acres of wild land in township 93, this county, and this constitutes his present finely improved ranch. The land is under a high state of cultivation, is well fenced, has an orchard of twelve acres, which yields good crops, while in addition to general farming and stock raising Mr. Schmidt devotes special attention to gardening, being one of the most successful horticulturists in this section. In 1894 he erected his present attractive residence, and the other buildings on the place are of substantial order, all giving evidence of thrift and prosperity. He is independent in his political views and is essentially public-spirited and progressive, taking an interest in all that conserves the general welfare of the county and state in which he has made his home from his boyhood days and to whose development he has contributed his quota. Both he and his wife are consistent members of the Mennonite church, in whose faith they were reared.

On the 5th of May, 1878, Mr. Schmidt was united in marriage to Miss Aganela Unruh, who was born in Heinrichsdorf, Russia, on the 21st of January, 1858, being a daughter of Henry Unruh, who died in Russia. Mr. and Mrs. Schmidt have six children. Henry, who married Miss Kate Boese, and who is a successful farmer and schoolteacher of this county, having one son; and Benjamin, Annie, Bertha, Lena and Mary, who remain at the parental home. All the children receive good educational advantages, and all are proficient in music.

LYMAN BURGESS, who is now living retired in the city of Vermillion, Clay county, is a native of Whtaser, Norway, where he was born on the 16th of November, 1829, being a son of Burguf and Holberson Ingburg, his own surname being derived according to the custom of his native land. The father of the subject was a teacher by vocation, and passed his entire life in Norway, where he died in 1838. His widow, when well advanced in years, came to America in 1843, and passed the remainder of her life in the home of her son Oliver, in Fillmore county, Minnesota, her death occurring in 1857. In the family were nine children, of whom only two are now living, Oliver, who is a prominent and influential farmer of Wisconsin; and Lyman, who is the immediate subject of this review.' All of the other children died in infancy.

Lyman Burgess received his early educational discipline in his native land, and when he was but fourteen years of age, in 1843, he came to America in company with his older brother, Oliver, who was twenty-two years old at the time. They located in Dane county, Wisconsin, and there the subject found employment as clerk in a general store in the village of Janesville, while later he worked in a local wheat market. At the age of eighteen years he purchased a farm of eighty-five acres, in Dane county, that state, disposing of the property a few years later. In 1860, as a young man of thirty-one years, Mr. Burgess came to the territory of Dakota, driving an ox-team through from Wisconsin and arriving in Clay county in July of that year. Here he pre-empted one hundred and sixty acres, all being entirely wild and unimproved, while buffaloes and other wild game were abundant in the locality and the Indians frequent visitors. He erected a log house on his embryonic farm and initiated the onerous labor of reclaiming the land to cultivation, perfecting his title to the property in due course of time. This land he still retains in his possession, and it has been under cultivation for a longer period than practically any other tract in this section. He has accumulated adjoining lands, so that the area of his ranch at the present time is seven hundred acres, while it is one of the best improved and most valuable farms in the county, being situated in Fairview township, three miles from Vermillion. He erected a large and commodious residence on the farm, and also has the best type of farm buildings aside from the dwelling. In 1893 Mr. Burgess erected an attractive modern residence in the city of Vermillion, where he has since lived retired from active business, though he still maintains a general supervision of his farm, which he rents. He for many years devoted special attention to the raising of fine live stock in connection with his diversified farming, and he gave preference to the Durham breed of cattle, of which he always had many fine specimens. Mr. Burgess is a man of marked mentality and broad information, having read widely and with much discrimination, and keeping at all times in touch with the issues and questions of the day, while he has been animated by that liberality and public spirit which ever proves potent in furthering the general welfare and advancement. He is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and served for many years as a member of the board of township trustees, while for two years he was a member of the board of county commissioners. In 1861 he was elected to represent Clay county in the first territorial legislature, and he has taken an active part in public affairs in the days past, being now inclined to relegate such work to younger men, having "borne the heat and burden of the day" and played well his part as one of the founders and builders of an opulent and splendid commonwealth. It may be said that when he took up his residence in Clay county the present thriving and attractive little city of Vermillion was a mere trading post, having only a few buildings and a population of about ten individuals. Religiously Mr. Burgess is in sympathy with the creed of the Lutheran church.

On the 9th of May, 1856, in Cambridge, Wisconsin, Mr. Burgess was united in marriage to Miss Caroline Lee, who was born in Norway in 1840 and came to the United States when eleven years old, being a daughter of Eric and Agot (Johnson) Lee, natives of Norway, who were numbered among the early settlers of the Badger state. Andrew Lee, the youngest of the four children, was one of the prominent pioneers of South Dakota and one of its most distinguished and influential citizens, having served as governor of the state in 1896. He is now engaged in the general merchandise business in Vermillion and also has extensive farming and stock interests. Of the nine children of Mr. and Mrs. Burgess a brief record is given in the following and concluding paragraph of this brief sketch, entered in tribute to one of the sterling pioneers of the state.

Charlotte, who is now at the parental home, was for twelve years a successful and popular teacher in the high school at Sioux City, Iowa;

Dorothea, Hannah and Ellis are also at home; Clara is the wife of Hans J. Smith, who is engaged in the merchandise business at Akron, Iowa, and they have one son, Ralph; Grace and Pearl are at the parental home; Bergo L., who is associated with his brother-in-law, Mr. Smith, in the general merchandise business in Akron, Iowa, married Miss Louise Young, and they have two daughters, Ellen and Carlon; Eric A., who was graduated in the law department of the State University, at Vermillion, in 1889, is now a leading member of the bar of Sioux City, Iowa; he married Miss Mary Fry, and they have one son, Lyman Taylor. All of the children are college graduates, and each of the daughters received good musical training, while all have been successful teachers, Pearl at the present time taking a post-graduate course in music. -

AARON CARPENTER, who is associated with his sons under the firm name of A. Carpenter & Sons, in the ownership and operation of the Vermillion Nursery and Fruit Farm, which is located in the immediate proximity of the city of Vermillion, is a native of the old Green Mountain state and a scion of a family whose name has been identified with American history from the colonial epoch, when the original progenitors in the new world came hither from England and established a home in New England. He was born in Concord, Vermont, on the 7th of July, 1826, and thus will soon join the ranks of the octogenarians. He is a son of Jedidiah and Elizabeth (Chamberlain) Carpenter, both of whom were born and reared in New Hampshire, whence they removed to Vermont, where the father was engaged in farming until 1858, when he came to South Dakota, being one of the earliest settlers in Clay county, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death here occurring September 21, 1886, at which time he was eighty-four years of age. His devoted wife died in Vermont, in 1847, at the age of fifty-one years. They became the parents of four children, namely: Lyman, who died in Washington in 1900; Aaron, who is the immediate subject of this sketch; Mary, who is the wife of Charles Stacey, of Vermillion; and John, who died in Washington, in 1898.

In 1858 the subject's father located in Nebraska, and two years later first stepped foot on the soil of the territory of Dakota. From Dubuque, Iowa, he made the trip overland with ox-teams, and he located just across the Missouri river in Dixon county, Nebraska, where he remained until 1861, in February of which year he took up his permanent residence in Clay county, South Dakota, where he took up government land, here passing the remainder of his life. The country was on the very frontier of civilization, and Vermillion was then nothing more than an isolated trading post. The subject was reared and educated in Vermont, and was thirty years of age at the time when he came with his father to the west. In 1861 he established his permanent home in Clay county, this state, taking up one hundred and sixty acres of government land, and erecting a log house on the same, after which he turned his attention to the reclamation of a farm from the virgin wilderness, and here he has ever since maintained his home, the farm being one of the best improved and most eligibly located in the county, adjoining the city of Vermillion. In 1873 Mr. Carpenter began the propagation of fruits of various kinds, and he has since devoted special attention to this line of enterprise, while his fruit farm and nursery are among the best to be found in the state, the business ramifying into the most diverse sections of South Dakota, as well as into adjoining states, while the firm of which he is at the head enjoys the highest reputation for reliability and for the excellence of all products. The nursery department of the enterprise offers the best of products in apples, crab-apple, plum, pear, cherry and other trees, while special attention is given to the raising of scions in the small fruit-line, as well as roses, garden roots, flowering plants of varied kinds, ornamental shrubs and forest-tree seedlings, evergreens and shade trees. From the Vermillion farm in season are shipped large quantities of fruit, and the same finds a ready market at the maximum prices. In the year 1903 more than twenty thousand grafts were put out in the nursery.

In politics, Mr. Carpenter is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and he has ever taken an active interest in public affairs. He was a member of the territorial legislature for two terms—in 1867 and 1868-69—and was a member of the first board of county commissioners of Clay county, whose organization was effected in 1862. He and his wife are prominent and valued members of the United Brethren church, and have long been active in church and social affairs.

On the 21st of June, 1849, in Concord, Vermont, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Carpenter to Miss Kezia Russell, who was born and reared in Middlesex, that state, being a daughter of Rev. John M. and Sarah (Foss) Russell, her father having been a clergyman of the Baptist church. Of the four children of the subject and his wife, we offer the following information: George L. who was born on the 9th of March, 1862, is associated in business with his father, as a member of the firm of A. Carpenter & Sons, and has the practical management of the enterprise at the present time, being a careful and able business man and one who is thoroughly informed in the practical and theoretical details of fruit culture and general nursery work. He was married on the 12th of October, 1887, to Miss Mary Auther, a daughter of James Auther, of this county, and they have five children, namely: Ellen K., Arthur A., Francis M., William A. and Joseph W. He is a Republican in politics and is a progressive and loyal citizen of the state in which he has passed practically his entire life. Alba, the oldest of birth, is a resident of Fort Gamble, Washington, where he is engaged in farming; he married Emma Ridell, of Yankton, May 22, 1872, and they have two children living, Jennie May Hicks and Ethel K. Johnson. John, who was born on the 14th of October, 1869, is still at the parental home and is an active member of the firm of A. Carpenter & Sons, being an able coadjutor of his father and brother; and Carrie M. is the wife of Edward Coles, a successful farmer of this county; they have one child, George A.

HENRY L. FERRY was born in Burlington Iowa, on the 6th of September, 1838, and is a son of Silas and Flavia (French) Ferry, the former of whom was born in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, and the latter in Massachusetts. The paternal grandfather of the subject was present at the time of the great Wyoming massacre in Pennsylvania, but managed to escape with his life. His father was a native of France, and emigrated thence to America in the colonial era of our national history, locating in Pennsylvania. The parents of the subject were married in the old Keystone state, and shortly afterward removed to Olean, New York, where they continued to reside until 1837, when they started for Iowa, arriving in March of that year. They located in Burlington, and there the father engaged in draying. About 1858 he removed to the vicinity of Muscatine, that state, where he became the owner of two farms, and there he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring on the 10th of May, 1863. His wife was summoned into eternal rest on the 10th of May, 1863, both having been consistent members of the Methodist Episcopal church, while in politics he was originally a Democrat.

Henry L. Ferry was reared on the pioneer farm and early began to assist in its cultivation and improvement, while his educational advantages in his youth were those afforded in the common schools of the locality and period. He continued to assist in the work and management of the homestead farm until he had attained the age of eighteen years, when he started out on his own responsibility, passing about two years in Illinois, where he was variously employed, and then returning again to the homestead in Iowa. He was married in March, 1861, and on September 9th of the same year he enlisted as a private in Company I, Eleventh Iowa Volunteer Infantry, with which he served four years. His command was assigned to the Army of the Tennessee, and took part in many of the notable battles of the great internecine conflict through which the Union was perpetuated. He was a participant in the battle of Shiloh, the sieges of Corinth and Vicksburg, the Meridian raid and was under General Sherman in the Atlanta campaign, and in the ever memorable "march to the sea," after which his command was in the campaign through the Carolinas, and after the surrender of Lee marched on to the national capital and took part in the grand review of the victorious armies. He received his honorable discharge, at Louisville, Kentucky, on the 15th of July, 1866. After the close of the war Mr. Ferry returned to Muscatine county, Iowa, where he remained until the autumn of 1867, when he came with his wife to the territory of Dakota and entered claim to one hundred and sixty acres of government land, in Fairview township, Clay county. He labored strenuously in the development and improving of his farm, and in 1881 Mr. Ferry purchased an adjoining quarter section, and the entire farm is under effective cultivation, improved with excellent buildings and is recognized as one of the valuable places of the county. Mr. Ferry continued to reside on the homestead and to actively supervise its affairs until 1899, when he purchased an attractive residence in the city of Vermillion, where he has since lived practically retired. He and his wife have been for many years active and valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and have taken a prominent part in religious work. In politics Mr. Ferry gave his allegiance to the Democratic party until 1895, since which time he has been arrayed as a staunch supporter of the principles of the Populist party. He has twice been nominated for the state legislature, being defeated on each occasion, with the other party candidates. In 1899 he was elected a member of the board of education of Vermillion, serving four years. He was one of the first men in the state to become identified with the Grange movement, and was the leader in the order for a number of years, having been the organizer of the first grange in the state, in 1878, within which year he effected the establishing of ten such organizations in Clay. He is one of the valued members of Miner Post, No. 8, Grand Army of the Republic, in his home city, and manifests a deep interest in his old comrades in arms.

On the 26th of March, 1881, in Muscatine county, Iowa, Mr. Ferry was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Reyburn, who was born in Butler county, Pennsylvania, on the 22d of March, 1835, being a daughter of Callin and Mary (Callin) Reyburn, the former of whom was born in Pennsylvania and the latter in Virginia. Of the seven children of Mr. and Mrs. Ferry we incorporate the following data in conclusion of this review: Henrietta is the wife of Emmett C. Chapman, of Muscatine county, Iowa, and they have five children, while it should be noted in the connection that of the latter one is married, while the subject and his wife have one great-grandchild; Cora M. is the wife of M. B. Hampton, of Charles Mix county, this state, and they have seven children; Arthur V., who is a printer in Vermillion, was for seven years the editor and publisher of a weekly paper, the Monitor, at Wakonda, this county; he married Miss Cora Usher and they have five children; Collin R. is in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company, and maintains his headquarters in Vermillion; Orin S., who married Miss Della Usher, is a successful farmer of this county; Lucius, who married Miss Kate Herring, has charge of the homestead farm; and Phillip H. is in the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company. Lucius and Philip served two years each in the Philippines, having been members of Company A, First South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, and they ably sustained the family reputation for loyalty and military prestige.

REIN TALSMAN, one of the successful and prominent farmers of Bon Homme county, was born in Friensland, Holland, on the 8th of November, 1846, and is a son of Mattheus and Reintje Talsma, the former of whom passed his entire life in Holland, where he was a gardener by vocation, while the latter came to the United States in 1870 and located in Sioux county, Iowa, where she passed the remainder of her life, her death occurring in 1879. Of the five children in the family the subject of this review was the second in order of birth, while of the number all are living except two. The subject was reared to maturity in his native land, where he was afforded the advantages of the excellent national schools, after which he was engaged in carpentry until he had attained the age of twenty-two years, when, in 1868, he immigrated to America, believing that here were to be found superior opportunities for the attaining of definite success through individual effort. He had learned the trade of carpenter in Holland, and upon coming to the United States he located in Marion county, Iowa, where he followed his trade and worked on farms for the ensuing six years. At the expiration of this period, in 1874, he came as a pioneer to South Dakota, being thus numbered among those who initiated the strenuous work of development and civic progress. He made the overland journey with a wagon and team of horses and two yoke of oxen, being thus better prepared to take up the work of reclaiming new land than was the average pioneer of the period. He took up three hundred and twenty acres of government land in township 93, Bon Homme county, the tract being entirely wild, and soon after his arrival he completed the erection of a sod house of the primitive type, and he then set himself vigorously to the work of placing his land under cultivation, while during the long intervening years he has developed one of the valuable farms of the county and made the best of permanent improvements on the same, including the erection of his present handsome and commodious residence in 1899, while about the home is found a well-matured grove of trees, all of which were planted and nurtured by himself.

On the 26th of May, 1873, Mr. Talsma was united in marriage to Miss Grietje Ferwerda, who was born and reared in Holland, whence she came to America in 1873, their marriage being solemnized in the state of Iowa. The great loss and bereavement of Mr. Talsma's life came on the last of April, 1901, when his loved companion was summoned into eternal rest, at the age of forty-nine years. They became the parents of twelve children, all of whom are living except two, the names being here entered in order of birth: Reina, John, Bertha, Winnie (died at the age of five years), Matthew, Fred (a son who died in infancy), Winnie (2nd), Katie, Fred (2nd), Lucretia, Margaret and Clarence.

CARROLL F. EASTON, an honored resident of Aberdeen and for many years very closely identified with the material interests of South Dakota, was born in Lewis county, New York, August 31, 1857. His father, Francis M. Easton, a general merchant of Lowville, died when Carroll F. was about ten years old, after which the latter worked on a farm for his board, in this way spending the greater part of his time until a youth of fourteen, when he went to Philadelphia, where he earned a livelihood for some time by selling small articles on the streets of the city, subsequently discontinuing that line of business with the object in view of learning the hatter's trade. After a short experience in that capacity, he quit the shop and entered a store, accepting a very responsible position for one so young, but he discharged his duties faithfully and well and gained the confidence of his employers, who insisted that the young clerk remain with them and become permanently attached to the establishment. Not being pleased with the idea of devoting his life to mercantile pursuits, young Easton resigned his place, after less than a year's service, and in 1874 went to Lanesboro, Minnesota, where his uncle, J. C. Easton, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, had some time previously established a bank. Entering the institution in a clerical capacity, he soon demonstrated unusual efficiency, and on the death of the cashier, which occurred a little later, he was promoted to the latter position, at the same time becoming practically the manager of the bank, his uncle being absent the greater part of the time. Few young men of the age of eighteen have such a burden of responsibility resting upon them, and yet as cashier and acting president Mr. Easton managed the bank quite successfully, and the five years during which he was in charge were the most flourishing of its history.

J. C. Easton was a man of large wealth and wide influence, and in addition to owning the

Yours truly
C F Easton

Southern Minnesota Railroad, established a number of banks at different places in Minnesota and Wisconsin, one of these being the establishment referred to. At the end of five years noted above, the subject became interested in a bank at Tracy, Minnesota, starting the business with a limited capital of perhaps six hundred dollars, which he had saved, but from this small beginning the institution steadily grew in the confidence of the community until within a comparatively short time its deposits amounted to over fifty thousand dollars. Mr. Easton's previous experience in banking enabled him to manage the institution in which he was interested in an able and business-like way, but the title under which it was conducted being the same as the bank owned by his uncle, the latter objected by reason of prior right to the name. Refusing to yield to his uncle's importunities to close out the bank, he continued the business with constantly increasing success, and shortly afterwards, in partnership with two other parties, started another bank at Sioux Falls, South Dakota, which under the name of Easton, McKinney & Scougle, soon became the leading monetary institution of that city. About the same time, 1880, these parties established several branches at various points in South Dakota, the more noted of which were those at Yankton and Dell Rapids, all beginning with small capital, but gradually growing and extending their influence until becoming permanent fixtures in the respective localities. Subsequently Mr. Easton disposed of his interests in several of the Dakota banks, but kept the one at Tracy, Minnesota, which he continued to manage with success and financial profit for a period of fifteen years. In 1881 he moved to Aberdeen, organizing a banking business at Wolsey under the style of Easton, Vance & Company, and later the Bank of Davies & Easton at Bowdle. Through these institutions he handled, in addition to the general local business, a great deal of eastern capital, which was loaned at good rates of interest. Mr. Easton served five or six years as president of the First National Bank of Aberdeen, but some years after retiring from that position he disposed of all of his banking interests and turned his attention to various other lines of business. For a number of years he dealt very largely in real estate, making a specialty of farm property, which he bought and sold quite extensively, not only in South Dakota, but throughout several other western states and territories. At one time he was engaged in raising fine blooded cattle of the Hereford breed, and owned a ranch of three thousand six hundred and eighty acres of valuable grazing lands in Brown county. He bought and shipped live stock on an extensive scale, while operating this ranch, and in addition thereto was also interested in the cattle business in old Mexico, where he and C. E. Reid, also of Aberdeen, owned a ranch of fourteen thousand acres, which they managed with encouraging success for a period of ten years, selling it at the end of that time.

In his various business transactions Mr. Easton has not been actuated solely by a desire for gain, much of his endeavor being in the way of inducing a substantial and thrifty class of people to purchase homes and become permanent residents of South Dakota. He has done a great deal to advertise the advantages of the state, not in a loud, sensational manner, but in a more quiet way, based upon truthful representation with which none of the many who came here through his influence have ever found fault, but on the contrary have always found his statements verified by fact. He improved a great deal of his property before selling and in this way provided a large number of comfortable homes, which he sold to settlers on the installment plan. This plan he has found most judicious in every respect, as it redounds not only to his own financial advantage, but places the opportunity of securing a home within easy reach of the man of moderate means. He still devotes his attention to improving and selling property, also handles a great deal of farm and grazing land, and does an extensive business, second in volume to that of no other man in the city of Aberdeen similarly engaged. He is one of the wide awake, progressive men of his city, county and state, is deeply interested in public affairs, and in different official capacities, as well as in his private dealings, has always advanced public improvements and championed every laudable enterprise for the general welfare of the community. Politically he is a straight-out Republican and an untiring worker for the success of his party. He was a member of the city council and of the school board, and president of the Masonic Temple, being a thirty-second-degree Mason.

Mr. Easton was married, in 1884, to Miss Eva Burns, of Caledonia, Minnesota, and is the father of three children, Russell B., a student of Rensselaer Institute, Troy, New York; Violet, still a member of the home circle, as is also Hazel, the youngest of the family. In closing this brief review of Mr. Easton's active and eminently honorable and useful career, it is but just to observe that his life is one deserving of the greatest praise, for to him, perhaps, as much as to any one man is due the remarkable growth and prosperity of the section of South Dakota in which he resides. His name will always be conspicuous on the roll of eminent men who have conferred honor on Aberdeen and the northeastern part of the state, and the distinction accorded him of being a leader in all that concerns the material well-being of the commonwealth has been fairly and honorably earned. His prominent position in business circles he owes to his own exertions, his years of energetic labor and his untiring perseverance, combined with sound judgment, clear insight and the exercise of that executive ability which never falls short of the accomplishment of high and noble purposes. He is respected and esteemed for his many manly qualities, as well as for his remarkable influence in building up and strengthening the body politic along material and other lines, and his personal friends throughout his adopted state are numberless.

FREDERICK DAHLENBURG, one of the sterling pioneers of Bon Homme county, where he has maintained his home for thirty years, is a native of the fair old city of Berlin, Germany, where he was born on the 28th of July, 1843, being a son of John and Mary Dahlenburg, both of whom were likewise born in that city, the father having been a wagonmaker by trade and having followed the same in his fatherland until 1878, when he emigrated thence to the United States, where two of his sons had preceded him, and he located in Grant county, Wisconsin, and there both he and his estimable wife passed the remainder of their lives, his death occurring in 1880, while she passed away in 1900. They become the parents of five children, namely: Mary, who is the wife of John Ness, of Grant county, Wisconsin; Charles, who is one of the representative farmers of Bon Homme county, South Dakota; Minnie, who is the wife of Fred Jack, of Grant county, Wisconsin; Frederick, who is the immediate subject of this sketch; and Augusta, who is the wife of Charles Belz, of Lancaster, Wisconsin.

Frederick Dahlenburg was reared to maturity in his native city, in whose excellent schools he secured his early educational discipline, after which he turned his attention to army service, in which he was engaged until 1873, when he came to America, in company with his wife. They located in Grant county, Wisconsin, in April of that year and there remained until May, 1874, when they came to what is now the state of South Dakota, where our subject's brother, Charles, had located in the preceding year, and here they became numbered among the early settlers of Bon Homme county. Mr. Dahlenburg entered a homestead claim of government land, in township 93, and this one hundred and sixty acres constitutes an integral portion of his present fine landed estate. He began the improvement of his land, establishing his home in a primitive sod house, and through his indefatigable energy and good management the wild land has been transformed into a fertile and productive farm, while as prosperity has attended his efforts he has added to the area of his ranch from time to time until he is now the owner of six hundred and seventy-two acres, of which three hundred and fifty acres are under a high state of cultivation, while upon the place have been made the best of improvements, including the erection of a modern farm dwelling, and the large and substantial barn. Good fences surround and intersect the ranch, and on the place are to be found a good orchard and fine groves of shade trees, all planted by the owner. Mr. Dahlenburg secures excellent yields of wheat, oats and corn, giving special attention to the propagation of corn, and he is also one of the successful stock growers of the county, having an excellent grade of cattle and hogs, while he also raises horses for his own use. Mr. Dahlenburg is independent in his political views, and he and his wife are zealous members of the Lutheran church, and enjoy the highest degree of respect and confidence in the community in which they have so long made their home.

In his native city of Berlin, on the 28th of November, 1869, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Dahlenburg to Miss Matilda Steffien, a daughter of August Steffien, who passed his entire life in Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Dahlenburg have five children, to whom they have given excellent educational advantages, and of them we enter the following brief record: William, who is associated with his father in the management of the home farm, was married on the 19th of February, 1903, to Miss Delia Paul, who was born and reared in Linn county, Iowa; Annie is the wife of Charles Orth, who is engaged in the furniture business at Tyndall, this county; and Henry, Frederick, Jr., and Robert remain at the parental home and are attending the local school.

PHILETUS N. CROSS, of Yankton county, was born in Ohio on the 1st of August, 1833, and is a son of Philetus Cross, Sr., who was also a native of the Buckeye state. In 1840 the father took his family to Wisconsin, becoming a well known and successful farmer of that state, but he spent his last years in Minnesota, where he died at a ripe old age.

The subject of this sketch grew to manhood in Wisconsin. It was in the fall of 1869 that he came to South Dakota and took up one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Clay county, giving his time and attention to the improvement and cultivation of that place until 1883, when he sold out. He passed through all the hardships and trials incident to pioneer life and had his crops destroyed by the grasshoppers three years and by floods at other times. Throughout his active business life he has continued to engage in agricultural pursuits and is today a resident of Gayville, Yankton county, where he now makes his home.

In 1860 Mr. Cross was united in marriage to Miss Emma Jane Maxon, by whom he had eight children, and after her death he was again married in December, 1887, his second union being with Mrs. Sarah (Cronk) Blodgett, a native of Ohio. Her former husband was Myron Blodgett, one of the honored early settlers and successful farmers of Yankton county, having come here from Iowa, in the spring of 1869, and taken up government land. He died on the 16th of April, 1883, honored and respected by all who knew him. Besides his widow he left five children, one of whom is now deceased. The others are all married and nicely located.

Politically, Mr. Cross is a Republican with prohibition tendencies, being a strong temperance man, and in early life he took quite an active and prominent part in local politics, efficiently serving as county commissioner in Clay county, South Dakota, for a time. He was also a member of the territorial legislature in 1879-80 and was regarded as one of the most influential men of his community. During the dark days of the Civil war Mr. Cross offered his services to the government, enlisting in Company C, Fourteenth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, and he was holding the rank of second lieutenant when he received his discharge. He has long been an active worker in the Methodist church, and for the past sixteen years has been an evangelistic minister.

OLE NIELSEN, one of the leading and representative citizens of Yankton county, was born in Denmark on Christmas eve, December 24, 1853, and is a son of Niels and Juliana (Hanneke) Oleson, also natives of that country. The first twenty years of his life the subject spent in his native land and in 1873 came to the United States. After spending one month in Minnesota, he came to Yankton county, South Dakota, and with the interests of this state he has been actively identified ever since. In 1875 his parents and the remainder of the family removed from Denmark to South Dakota and the father now lives retired in Yankton at the age of seventy-six years, while his wife has reached the age of seventy-three years. Both hold membership in the Lutheran church, and the father votes with the Republican party. Their children are Ole, of this review; John; Dora, now the wife of Jake Nissen, of Yankton; Estine; Selia; Fred; Christian; Andrew, deceased; and Helen. All were given good school privileges and Helen, who is still at home, has become quite proficient in music. She is the only one of the children born in the United States.

In 1874 Mr. Nielsen, whose name introduces this sketch, took up one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Yankton county and constructed a dugout, which was his first home here. Two years later he offered his right to this property for a yoke of steers, but was refused and in 1902 it sold for over six thousand dollars, having devoted six or seven years to its cultivation and improvement. He then removed to Yanton, where he ran a dray line for seven years, and in 1889 bought his present farm near Mission Hill, which is an improved place of one hundred and sixty acres. He has since remodeled the residence, barns and sheds and made other improvements which add greatly to the value and attractive appearance of the place. He carries on general farming and is also engaged in the buying, feeding and sale of stock, having sixty head upon his place during the winter of 1902-3. He makes a specialty of Poland-China hogs and Percheron horses and upon his farm he raises corn, wheat, oats, timothy and alfalfa.

In June, 1880, Mr. Nielsen was united in marriage to Miss Hannah Andrasen, who is also a native of Denmark, where her parents lived and died. Unto the subject and his wife were born two children, but Julia died in infancy. Harry is now fourteen years of age and is attending school. Mr. and Mrs. Nielsen support the Lutheran church and he is a member of Mission Hill Camp, No. 7209, Modern Woodmen of America. He votes for the men whom he believes best qualified for office and takes a deep interest in school work.

HARRY H. MAUPIN, one of the representative business men and honored citizens of Egan, Moody county, is a native of the Old Dominion, having been born in the beautiful mountain town of Staunton, Augusta county, Virginia, on the 9th of March, 1868, and being a son of Junius F. and Elizabeth Maupin. In 1870 his parents removed to Washington, D. C., where his father was employed in the government printing office for twenty years. In politics he was a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party. The subject secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of the national capital and thereafter continued his studies in a private school at Standardsville, Virginia, where he completed a course in higher mathematics, history, the classics, etc., being graduated as a member of the class of 1885. After leaving school he learned the drug business in Washington, where he remained until 1888, when he came to South Dakota and located in Elk Point, Union county, where he secured employment in the drug store of J. S. Talcott. Later he removed to Sheldon, Iowa, where he was similarly engaged in the establishment of Fletcher Howard, being a registered pharmacist in both Iowa and South Dakota. In 1891 he returned to the latter state and located in Beresford, Union county, where he engaged in the drug business on his own responsibility. About two years later he sold his business to Ramsdel Brothers and then removed to Dell Rapids, Minnehaha county, where he was in the employ of M. E. Collins until the spring of 1897, when he came to Egan, where he has ever since maintained his home. For a short interval he was here employed in the drug establishment of Taylor Brothers and then purchased the business, which he has since successfully continued, having a well-equipped establishment and carrying a comprehensive stock. In 1901 he was appointed postmaster at Egan, and has since been incumbent of this office. He established and equipped the Egan Telephone Exchange and also organized the Farmers' Egan Telephone Company, of this place, having disposed of the local exchange on the 1st of October, 1903. He was for a short time editor and publisher of the Egan Express, which he sold to R. E. Hartman, the present publisher. He served for two years as justice of the peace, and has at all times been foremost in support of all enterprises tending to further the upbuilding and material prosperity of his home town and county, while in politics he is a stanch advocate of the principles and policies of the Republican party. Mr. Maupin became a member of the local lodge of the Knights of Pythias while a resident of Beresford, this state, and was elected commander of the same, while he was twice a delegate to the grand lodge of the order in the state. He is also affiliated with Tyrian Lodge, No. 100, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of Egan.

At Elk Point, this state, on the 22d of January, 1890, Mr. Maupin was united in marriage to Miss Emlura S. Morris, the only daughter of Hon. Emery Morris, who was a member of the territorial legislature in 1872, being one of the honored pioneers of the state. Mr. and Mrs. Maupin have one son, Morris Luverne, who was born on the 2d of December, 1890.

BERNART SIKMANN, a well-known resident of Yankton county, was born in Munster, Germany, on the 2d of February, 1843, his parents being lifelong residents of that country. At the age of twenty-seven years, in 1870, he left his native land and came to the United States, first locating in Dubuque, Iowa, where he spent a year and a half. He next went to Arkansas, where he remained nine months, and then returned to Iowa, making his home there until 1878, when he came to South Dakota, Yankton county being his destination. After working for others for nine months he took up one hundred and sixty acres of land eight miles north of the city of Yankton, but did not immediately turn his attention to agricultural pursuits. For two years he was employed in a brickyard and in 1875 embarked in the same line of business on his own account, operating that yard for eight years. He met with success in that undertaking and erected for himself a fine brick residence and two barns. During the flood of 1881 he lost a kiln of brick and his house was damaged to some extent, his loss amounting to about one thousand dollars. In 1882 Mr. Sikkmann bought one hundred and eighty acres of wild land in Yankton county and engaged in its operation in connection with the manufacture of brick in Yankton. He built a good residence and barns upon his place in 1892 and in July of that year took up his residence there, it being still his home, though he continues to own property in the city to the amount of about eight acres. His farm now comprises two hundred and eight acres, which with the assistance of his sons he has placed under a high state of cultivation.

On the 3d of June, 1880, Mr. Sikkmann was united in marriage to Miss Lena Mader, a daughter of Henry and Christina Mader, who were both natives of Germany, but were living in New York at the time of Mrs. Sikkmann's birth. In 1873 her father brought his family to South Dakota and entered a tract of wild land in Yankton county, soon becoming a well-known and successful farmer of this locality. He died April 23, 1894, having survived his wife for several years, she having passed away on the 15th of May, 1877. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Sikkmann have been born five children: Fred, now twenty-one years of age; Joseph, Frank, Rosa and Lillie (died July 21, 1891). All are at home and have been given good common-school educations, the daughter being still a student in the local schools. Socially the family is one of prominence in the community where they reside, and the wife and mother is a member of the Lutheran church. Mr. Sikkmann is a Democrat in politics and does all in his power to insure the success of his party.

W. L. PALMER, a prominent banker at Carthage, was born at Watertown, New York, in 1844, attended the public schools and later took a course in a commercial college at Poughkeepsie. When nineteen years old he went over to the Brooklyn navy yards and offered his services in the cause of his country. His enlistment occurred in August, 1863. In 1866 he obtained an honorable discharge and shortly thereafter engaged in the hardware business, but two years later built at Watertown the first manilla paper mill ever erected in the United States. He began the manufacture of paper flour bags on a large scale and did a thriving business in this line for a number of years, but finally decided to cast in his lot with the enterprising emigrants then swarming to the territories beyond the Missouri. It was in 1881 that he turned his face westward, stopping in Chicago, but going to South Dakota in the following year. Taking up his residence at Langfort, he established the James River Bank of Palmer, but in 1888 came to Carthage, where he founded the bank of that name and is at present the owner of the Farmers' Bank. Mr. Palmer is an ardent Republican and many prominent offices at the hands of his party have been within his reach had he not persistently declined owing to reluctance to take the time from his important business affairs. At one time he was vigorously urged by the Republican press to accept the nomination for secretary of state, and this movement was aided by prominent Republicans all over the state, but Mr. Palmer politely declined this alluring honor. He has been a member of the Grand Army of the Republic ever since its organization in 1867, and was elected commander of the South Dakota branch in 1899. He filled that office for one year and is now quartermaster general of the department.

In October, 1883, Mr. Palmer was married to Miss Stella Driscoll and they have one child, Miss Edna, a pretty and vivacious girl of fourteen summers.

PARK DAVIS, of Sioux Falls, South Dakota; one of the leading lawyers of South Dakota, was born in Athens, Windham county, Vermont, September 24, 1837, son of Elijah and Miriam Davis. His father died when the subject was quite young and left him largely dependent on his own resources for advancement. He attended Leland Seminary at Townshend, Vermont, and in 1862 was graduated from Middlebury College. He read law under Butler & Wheeler, prominent attorneys of Jamaica, Vermont; was admitted to the bar in Windham county in 1864; and in February, 1865, commenced the practice of his profession at St. Albans, Vermont, with Dana R. Bailey, under the firm name of Bailey & Davis. Later he was admitted to the supreme court, the circuit court of the United States, and the supreme court of the United States. He prospered as a general practitioner of law at St. Albans until 1879, when he removed to St. Paul, Minnesota, and, in connection with Hiram F. Stevens, of that city, successfully practiced his profession until September 1, 1881. Then he temporarily withdrew from the law and engaged with his brother-in-law in a mercantile venture at Albany, New York, under the firm name of Gray & Davis. In October, 1885, he went to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, formed a partnership with his old friend and former partner, Dana R. Bailey, and since has ranked as one of the leading lawyers of his state. In 1874 he represented St. Albans in the general assembly of Vermont and was a prominent and influential member of that body.

Mr. Davis is highly distinguished in Masonic circles. He served three terms as grand master of Masons of Vermont. His record in this important office was a brilliant one. Since coming to South Dakota he has been honored with the office of grand high priest and many other positions of honor and trust by the Masonic fraternity. He is the author of a treatise on Masonic trials and forms for procedure which have been incorporated into a monitor published by the grand lodge of Vermont.

Mr. Davis was married at Townshend, Vermont, October 27, 1863, to Delia S. Gray and they have two children, Henry P. and May L. Mr. Davis is one of Sioux Falls' leading citizens and is favorably known throughout the state. He is an able lawyer, a genial gentleman and his record as a man is without reproach.

JAMES STANAGE is one of Yankton county's native sons, for he was born here on the 11th of May, 1862, and is a worthy representative of an honored pioneer family, his parents being John and Bridget (Murnan) Stanage, both natives of Ireland. They were married, however, in Minnesota. For some years the father was in the government employ in that state, being connected with the commissary department until 1871. During the 'fifties he was sent by the government to Fort Pierre, South Dakota, and in 1861 he secured one hundred and sixty acres of government land in Yankton county, where he made his home until called to his final rest on the 22d of July, 1898. He was in several Indian raids during his connection with the army, and was a man well known and highly respected. He took an active interest in political affairs, being an ardent Democrat, and was a member of the first territorial legislature. Both he and his wife were earnest and consistent members of the Episcopal church. She is still living and continues to reside on the farm of two hundred acres left by her husband.

In the family of this worthy couple were four children: John, who now operates the old homestead and owns two other farms here; Mary and Elizabeth, who are also at home with their mother; and James, of this review. All were given good educational advantages and the daughters have engaged in teaching school for several terms.

James Stanage remained under the parental roof until he attained his twentieth year and then started out in life for himself as an agriculturist, operating a rented farm for three years. At the end of that time he purchased two hundred acres of wild land in Yankton county, which he has since broken, fenced and improved by the erection of a good house and barns. He keeps a good grade of horses, cattle and hogs, and is meeting with fair success in business.

On the 14th of October, 1885, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Stanage and Miss Kate Garvey, a daughter* of Edward Garvey, one of the early settlers and successful farmers of the county. Nine children blessed this union, namely: Katherine; Ray; George; Ethel; Frank; John, who died at the age of eighteen months; Mark; Blanch, who died at the age of sixteen months; and Leone. The older children are now in school. Mr. and Mrs. Stanage are members of the Catholic church and he is a Democrat in politics. Fraternally he is identified with Mission Hill Camp, No. 7209, Modern Woodmen of America.

ALBERT S. HARVEY is a native of the state of Minnesota, having been born in Dodge county, on the 27th of February, 1855, and being a son of Wiles and Harriet Harvey, the former of whom is now deceased, he having been a farmer by vocation. The subject's educational advantages were those afforded in the public schools of his native county, and from his youth up he has been identified almost continuously with agricultural pursuits. He continued to reside in Minnesota until 1878, when, as a young man of twenty-three years, he decided to cast in his lot with the territory of Dakota, toward which the tide of immigration had begun to set in. He arrived in what is now Moody county in March of that year, and took up a homestead claim of three hundred and twenty acres of government land, in Colman township, being one of the first to settle in that section, while the population of the county at the time was summed up in a small number of families, the land being practically all in its primitive condition and bearing slight resemblance to the condition which today obtains, with attractive villages, well-cultivated farms, churches, schools and all other evidences of an advanced civilization. Mr. Harvey began life here in a modest way, his original dwelling being a rude sod house of the sort so common in the early pioneer era, and through energy, perseverance and good management he has developed a fine farm, being now the owner of three hundred and twenty acres of most arable land, while the place is improved with good buildings and yields excellent returns for the labor expended in its cultivation. Mr. Harvey has shown a proper interest in all that has touched the general welfare and material advancement of the county, and has aided the cause of education and all other enterprises for the enhancement of the prosperity of the community, while in politics he is a staunch adherent of the Populist party.

Mr. Harvey has been twice married. In 1884 he wedded Miss Frances Scoville, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, and whose death occurred in 1889. She is survived by two children, Gilbert and Volney. On the 21st of February, 1895, Mr. Harvey married Mrs. Emily Morse, who was born in Wisconsin and who was a resident of Colman at the time of her marriage, while she is a daughter of C. L. Meeker, who was numbered among the early settlers in Moody county. Of this union has been born one child, Myrtle. One stepson and all four of the children still remain at the parental home.

CHARLES POWER, one of the representative business men of Lake county, is a native of the state of Minnesota, having been born in Fillmore county, on the 17th of August, 1858, and being a son of William and Margaret (Knox) Power, both of whom were born and reared in Ireland, while their marriage was solemnized in Ireland. The parents of the subject immigrated to America in 1854, and about 1856 took up their residence in Fillmore county, Minnesota, where they developed a farm, having been early settlers of the county. He there remained until 1868, when he died. In 1872 the mother and six children came to South Dakota. His widow is still living, at the venerable age of eighty years, and makes her home with her son, Joseph. This worthy couple became the parents of eight children, of whom six are living.

The subject of this review remained at the parental home in South Dakota until he had attained the age of twenty years, having in the meanwhile received his rudimentary educational discipline in the district schools. He then, in 1872, came as a youthful pioneer to the present state of South Dakota, and he passed the first five years thereafter in Minnehaha county, working on various farms and in the meanwhile attending school in Sioux Falls, where he completed a course in the high school. In 1879 Mr. Power came to Lake county, where he took up three hundred and twenty acres of government land and forthwith bent his energies to its reclamation and improvement. His success became cumulative, and as prosperity attended his efforts he added to his landed possessions in the county, until he is now the owner of six hundred and forty acres of valuable land, of which about five hundred are under effective cultivation, while he has made the best of improvements of a permanent nature. His farm is located in Wentworth township, two miles east of Wentworth, where he maintains his home and where he owns a considerable amount of realty aside from his elevator and attractive modern residence. Mr. Power continued to reside on his ranch until 1887, when he removed to Wentworth and established himself in business as a buyer and shipper of grain, while he later erected his present elevator in the village. He is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and takes a lively interest in local affairs of a public nature. He served three years as president of the village council of Wentworth, and was chairman of the township board for two years. Fraternally he is affiliated with Wentworth Lodge, No. 156, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and Wentworth Camp, No. 4980, Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 3d of August, 1898, Mr. Power was married to Miss Minnie Peters, who was born in West Bend, Washington county, Wisconsin, and who is a daughter of Henry and Minna (Schultz) Peters. Mr. and Mrs. Power have a winsome little daughter, Fern, who was born on the 21st of March, 1901.

ANDREW LARSON, whose farm is located seven miles from Flandreau, the attractive county seat of Moody county, is a native of Norway, where he was born in October, 1845. His parents died when he was a boy, and he was reared to maturity in his fatherland, securing his early education in the national schools, and thereafter being engaged in fishing until 1867, when he came to the United States and settled at La Crosse, Wisconsin, where he found employment in connection with the great lumbering industry of that state, continuing to make his headquarters in La Crosse for eleven years, at the expiration of which, in 1878, he came to the territory of Dakota and became one of the pioneers of Moody county, where he entered claim to one hundred and sixty acres of government land, which constitutes a portion of his present finely improved ranch. He labored sturdily and unceasingly, meeting with his quota of trials and discouragements, but his courage never flagged, and his determination and perseverance have had their reward in the good gift of prosperity and independence, for his success has kept pace with the development and progress of the country, which he has seen transformed from a wild and desolate section to one marked by all the evidences of a splendid civilization. He is the owner of six hundred and forty acres of land, the greater portion of which is under cultivation and devoted to diversified agriculture, while he has made the best of improvements of a permanent nature, including the erection of a good farm residence and a large and substantial barn, besides other requisite farm buildings, for the care of stock, produce, implements, etc.

Mr. Larson has also been very successful as a stock grower and gives preference to the short-horn type of cattle, and to the Poland-China swine. In politics Mr. Larson gives his support to the Republican party, as do also his sons. Both he and his wife are prominent and consistent members of the Lutheran church, in whose work they take an active interest.

DAVID EASTMAN, one of the prominent and influential citizens of Wilmot, Roberts county, was born in Allegany county, New York, on the 1st of June, 1847, being a son of Tilton and Ann (Palmer) Eastman, both of whom were born and reared in Steuben county. The family lineage is of English, German, Scotch and Irish extraction. The Eastmans are English, the paternal grandmother was German, the maternal grandfather, Joshua Palmer, was Irish, and his wife was Scotch. Tilton and Ann Eastman removed in 1864 to Blue Earth county, Minnesota, where he was a farmer known for integrity and ability. Both died in South Dakota. David Eastman was about seventeen years of age at the removal to Minnesota, where he grew to manhood under the effective discipline of the farm, while he attended the common schools and the graded school at Plainview. He was associated with his father until he had attained the age of twenty-five years, when he engaged in teaching at Bellevue, Minnesota, and was identified with the profession for five years, when he was for two years engaged in farming in Blue Earth county, Minnesota. In 1878 he located six miles south of the site of Wilmot where he entered government land, devoting himself to its reclamation and cultivation. In 1884 he was elected register of deeds and county clerk, remaining incumbent of the dual office for four years, having removed to Wilmot. He then engaged in the farm implement business and to the negotiating of farm loans and represented leading fire-insurance companies. In April, 1895, he was appointed deputy state commissioner of school and public lands, being elected commissioner in 1898. He rendered valuable service in this important office four years, when he retired to his pleasant home in Wilmot, where he has since given his attention principally to the supervision of farming interests, while he is president of the Farmers' State Bank of Wilmot, and also does a general real-estate business. Mr. Eastman has ever accorded allegiance to the Republican party, and was a member of the state central committee for a number of years. He was sergeant-at-arms of the state senate during the sessions of 1893 and 1895. He and his family attend the Presbyterian church and fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Dramatic Order of Knights of Khorrassan.

On the 24th of May, 1884, Mr. Eastman was united in marriage to Miss Eliza Wilson, who was born in Columbia county, Wisconsin, on the 3d of January, 1851, being a daughter of William L. and Janette Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Eastman have two daughters, Jessie May and Florence I.

WILLIAM H. PARKER was born in Danville, Pittsylvania county, Virginia, May 4, 1847. He served in the United States army from the 24th day of June, 1861, until the 26th day of October, 1866, when he resigned from the army while stationed at Fort Kearney, in the then territory of Nebraska. After leaving the army he entered the law department of Columbian College, Washington, D. C., graduating with the class of 1868. Since this time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession with the exception of three years that he was collector of internal revenue of the territory of Colorado, being appointed by President Grant. While holding the position of collector of internal revenue he resigned to accept the appointment of assistant United States attorney, and subsequently was appointed United States attorney of that territory. He removed to South Dakota in July, 1877, where he has been constantly engaged in the practice of his profession, being at the present time state's attorney of Lawrence county. He was a member of the constitutional convention that framed the constitution of South Dakota and a member of its first legislature.

O. M. OSBON, son of Joseph and Rhoda (Reed) Osbon, was born at Ripley, Ohio, May 20, 1846, but owing to the removal of his parents to Illinois, was reared and educated in the last mentioned state. His father being a farmer, the son went through the usual routine of helping on the farm during the busy season and picking up his schooling during the months of winter. Though still a boy at the outbreak of the civil conflict, Master Osbon, like all typical young Americans, was eager for "the pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war" and finally gained his desire by being allowed to enlist in October, 1862, as a member of Battery A, See nd Illinois

Light Artillery. Though only sixteen years old, he was entrusted with the charge of a number of recruits with instructions to convey them to Helena, Arkansas, a duty which he performed with promptness and fidelity. The youthful volunteer had enough danger and adventure to satisfy even the most ardent seeker after such things, inasmuch as he participated in many of the important battles of the Civil war before receiving his honorable discharge in 1865. He has not, however, escaped the perils incident to exposure and returned to his Illinois home shaking with a genuine attack of old-fashioned "chills and fever." In hope of obtaining relief from this ailment he sought the salubrious climate of Colorado, but eventually found his way to Kansas, and it was after reaching the state made famous by John Brown and the "border ruffians" that he entered the field of journalism. His first venture in this line was with the Waterville Telegraph, but in 1884 he disposed of this plant to remove to Missouri, where he spent six years in the combined occupation of farming and editing. It was in 1897 that Mr. Osbon "made his bow" to the public at Howard in the first issue of "The Spirit of Dakota," a weekly paper devoted to the best interests of Miner county and the dissemination of Republican principles. During his residence in Kansas Mr. Osbon served three terms in the state legislature and was the first mayor of Westmoreland, county seat of Pottawatomie county, in the same state. He was also commander of the Kansas department of the Grand Army of the Republic and is a member of the Knights of Pythias.

In 1873 Mr. Osbon married Miss Oral E. Reed, a native of Ripley, Ohio, and has six sons: Orman K., Will M., Kenneth A., Guy, Don and Clarence.

DANIEL BROWN, present judge of Miner county, was born in Jackson county, Indiana, February 11, 1835, and it has been his fortune to owe allegiance to five of the great commonwealths until eventually he found a permanent abiding place in the "land of the Dakotas." When Mr. Brown appeared in the scene there was no organized educational system in the Hoosier state, such schools as they had being of the primitive character supported by private benevolence, the teachers "boarding around" and taking uncertain pay from patrons of the neighborhood. It was by irregular attendance at such fountains of learning that Mr. Brown acquired the rudiments of knowledge out of the old-fashioned speller and Pike's Arithmetic. When twelve years old his father migrated to Illinois, where he purchased land in Stephenson county and lived by farming the same until 1870. At this juncture Mr. Brown abandoned the paternal homestead and removed to Republic county, Kansas, but after a residence there of two years located in Franklin county, Nebraska. He lived in this county for twelve years and then made the final migration, as the result of which he became a permanent resident of South Dakota. When Mr. Brown settled in Spink county in 1884, the population was still sparse and the country undeveloped, but conditions speedily changed for the better as emigrants continued to pour in from all parts of the world. Until 1886 his occupation had been that of farming, but about that time he entered the practice of law, which vocation he has continued up to date. In politics he had been a Democrat until the formation of the People's party, but when that movement assumed form in the west Mr. Brown became one of the active participants. In 1897 he settled in Miner county and in 1900 he was nominated and elected on the fusion ticket as candidate for judge of Miner county, and two years later was re-elected on the fusion ticket and is now serving his second term in that office.

On December 24, 1857, while residing in Illinois, Mr. Brown was married to Deborah J. Cain, who died about two years later, leaving no issue. February 6, 1861, Mr. Brown married Miss Catherine Hawk, and has had five children, of whom those living are Mrs. Jennie Craig, D. F. and C. P. Brown. Since his residence at Howard Mr. Brown has proven himself a useful and intelligent citizen. He is a student of public questions and especially well informed on the great economic issues which have divided parties so radically since the memorable campaign of 1889.

He was painstaking and industrious as a farmer, equally so in the transaction of legal business and brought to the bench a good stock of common sense as a basis for correct interpretation of the law.

JOSEPH CABALKA, a highly esteemed resident of Yankton county, was born in Bohemia in 1858 and is a son of Joseph and Katie (Vavruska) Cabalka. The parents were married in their native country and when they arrived in the new world they took up their abode in Chicago, where they remained for two and a half years. In 1870 they came to South Dakota, bringing their children with them and here the father secured a homestead claim upon which he lived until called to his final rest. He always carried on agricultural pursuits and in this manner provided a comfortable living for his family. He had six children, all of whom are yet residents of South Dakota and are representatives of its agricultural interests. The widowed mother is now living with her son Anton upon his farm in Yankton county and has attained the age of seventy years. She bore the maiden name of Rosa Czwonika.

Joseph Cabalka, whose name introduces this record, was but a young boy when the parents emigrated to the new world and with them he came to Dakota when he was but twelve years of age. He continued to attend the public schools here until he reached the age of fourteen and his educational privileges in the United States supplemented the early advantages which he had received in Bohemia. Through the summer months he assisted his father in the cultivation of the home farm and after putting aside his text-books he devoted all of his time and attention to agricultural pursuits. He has made farming his life work and is today a well-known representative of agricultural interests in Yankton county.

In the year 1886 Mr. Cabalka was united in marriage to Miss Rosie Czwonka, who was born in Poland, and by this union they have become the parents of four children: Anton, Charles, Annie and Sophia, all of whom are yet under the parental roof. The parents are communicants of the Roman Catholic church. Mr. Cabalka takes no active part in political affairs, preferring to devote his attention to his business pursuits. He has depended upon his own resources from an early age and his labor and energy have formed the foundation upon which he has built his success. He is now a well-known farmer and his property is constantly increasing in value because of the excellent care which he takes of it.

HERMAN H. GAREY, of Mount Vernon, Davison county, was born in Oswego county, New York, on the 6th of December, 1859, being a son of James W. and Susanna (Griffin) Garey, of whose three children he was the first in order of birth. He received his rudimentary education in the public schools of his native state, and when he was about ten years of age his parents removed to Iowa, where he continued to attend the district schools until he had attained the age of twenty years. He then learned the art of telegraphy, and for three years was employed as telegraph operator and station agent by the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, at various points in Iowa. In the autumn of 1888 he came to South Dakota, having previously been employed in a banking institution in the state of Nebraska for about three and one-half years. Upon coming to the present state of South Dakota he located in Mount Vernon, where he established the Davison County Bank, of which he became one of the principal stockholders, while he served as cashier of the institution until 1900, when he resigned his executive office, though still retaining his capitalistic interest in the bank. In 1892 Mr. Garey organized the Mount Vernon Milling Company and in 1896 he further manifested his progressive spirit by effecting the organization of the Mount Vernon Co-operative Creamery Company, while he was also actively identified with the organization of the Mount Vernon Merchandise Company, in all of which concerns he still retains a financial interest, while all have exercised important functions in connection with the industrial advancement of this section of the state. In 1900

Mr. Garey established himself in the real-estate business, and in the line he has built up an extensive and prosperous enterprise, to which he devotes much of his time and attention. In politics he is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, but his many business interests are so insistent in their demands that he takes no active part in political affairs. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, in which he has attained the thirty-second degree of the Scottish Rite, while he is also affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On the 24th of February, 1889, Mr. Garey was united in marriage to Miss Mary Samuels, of Mount Vernon, South Dakota, she being a daughter of John and Sarah Samuels.

JOSEPH PETERKA, a native son of Yankton county, was born here in November, 1879, and is a son of Frank and Mary (Behensky) Peterka, both of whom were natives of Bohemia. In their childhood days they left that country and came to the United States, settling with their respective families in South Dakota, where they were married. Upon his arrival here in 1869, the father secured one hundred and sixty acres of land and subsequently he purchased two more quarter sections so that at the time of his death he was the owner of a very valuable property, comprising four hundred and eighty acres. Establishing his home here in an early day he took an active part in the work of development and improvement and became an influential and leading citizen. He served as school director for many years and the cause of education found in him a warm friend. His political support was given the Democratic party and he kept well informed on the questions and issues of the day. His widow is still living on the old homestead and is now fifty-two years of age. Since her husband's death she has purchased four hundred acres of rich and arable land and her property holdings now aggregate seven hundred and twenty acres, the entire farm being utilized in the work of carrying on agricultural interests. Much of the land is cultivated and large portions are used for pasturage, for stock raising is carried on extensively on this place. Unto Mr. and Mrs. Peterka were born nine children, of whom one sister is now deceased. The others are Rudolph, John, Frank, Joseph, Mary, Charles, Rosy, Emmil and James. All are now living in this state with the exception of Frank, who has gone to Colorado for the benefit of his health. Rudolph and John are merchants in Mica, where they are carrying on general mercantile pursuits.

Joseph Peterka was educated in the public schools of this county, continuing his studies until he attained his majority and gaining a broad and comprehensive knowledge to which he is continually adding by reading and observation. When he had reached man's estate he resolved to follow as a life work the occupation to which he had been reared and continued to operate his father's old homestead. He was married to Miss Annie Hladke, of Yankton, the wedding being celebrated on the 22d of April, 1902. Mr. Peterka is a young man of good business ability and readily comprehends intricate business situations and problems. He views things from a practical standpoint and he also possesses the enterprising spirit which has been the dominant factor in the splendid development of the west.

WILLIAM J. THORNBY, one of the influential pioneers of the state and an honored citizen of Deadwood, was born in Greenwich, Washington county, New York, on the 27th of April, 1856, and is a son of James H. and Catherine (Conron) Thornby, the former of whom was born in County Armagh, Ireland, and the latter in the city of Troy, New York. The paternal grandfather of the subject likewise bore the name of James Hanna Thornby, and, like his son and namesake, was born in County Armagh, of the fair Emerald Isle. He was a member of the Inniskillen Dragoons and served under Wellington in the battle of Waterloo, while the medal for bravery which was accorded him at that time by the crown is still retained in the possession of his descendants. James Hanna Thornby, the father of the subject of this review, was reared and educated in his native land, where he remained until 1846, when he made a trip to America. At the time of the Irish rebellion of 1848 his loyalty to his oppressed fatherland led him to return and tender his services in defense of the righteous cause of his compatriots, and he was accompanied by Hon. A. L. Morrison, now collector of internal revenue in New Mexico, both being imprisoned after the overthrow of the rebellion in which they took part. They were incarcerated in Carlow jail, near the city of Dublin, where they were held for six months, at the expiration of which they received pardons. Mr. Thornby then came again to America, and located in the city of Troy, New York, where he engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes, and where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1870, while his wife passed away in 1874. Of their five children the subject is the eldest, and all are yet living, there being four sons and one daughter.

Colonel Thornby, as the subject is familiarly known, received his early educational training in the public schools of Troy, and in 1870, when about fifteen years of age, entered the foundry of Fuller & Warren, in that city, where he learned the trade of patternmaking, which he there continued to follow until 1876, when he set forth for the Black Hills, inspired by a love of adventure and a desire to learn what fortune had in store for him. He left Troy in November of that year and came through to Cheyenne, Wyoming, arriving on the 1st of December and there waiting to join the first freighting train enroute to his final destination. This train left for the Hills in March, 1877, and was known as Wade's Fast Freight. There were about three hundred men in the party and all were well armed, the majority having come from Montana, California, Missouri and Colorado, and all being attracted by the discovery of gold in the Black Hills, while it is a noteworthy fact that our subject was the only eastern man in the company. They made the trip in nineteen days and, owing no doubt to the numerical strength, were not molested by the Indians. They arrived in Deadwood in April, and here Colonel Thornby entered the employ of

A. W. Merrick, proprietor and publisher of the Deadwood Pioneer, with whom he remained two years, having been the pioneer up-gulch reporter for the paper and having full charge of its circulation in this district. The Colonel was the only man who succeeded in making the journey between Deadwood and Lead during the memorable and terrific snow blizzard of March 12-15, 1878, in which so many sacrificed their lives. The snow was five feet deep on the level and he broke the trail and carried through his papers. In May, 1879, he left the employ of the Pioneer and joined Professor Walter P. Jenney on his trip to the southern Black Hills district, where he assisted in the completion of some important geological and topographical work which the Professor had initiated in 1875, at the behest of the government. On the 15th of June, 1879, while out on an incidental expedition with Prof. W. P. Jenney, the subject and his companion located the now famous Hot Springs, which have become a popular health and pleasure resort. In that year the Colonel located in Custer, and was elected the first assessor of Custer county, serving two terms, while in 1886 he was further honored by being elected county judge, presiding on the bench for two years, with ability and marked discrimination. In 1892 he was elected to the state senate, representing the district comprised of Custer and Fall River counties, and he served in this dignified position during the third general assembly of the state legislature in 1893. In the meanwhile he had become interested in the development of the mica-mining industry in this section, and realizing the value of scientific knowledge in regard to the mining and handling of the various precious and industrial metals, he entered the State School of Mines, at Rapid City, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated in 1896. He also took a two-years course in metallurgy, and thus is specially well equipped for all kinds of work. In 1886 he was elected a member of the board of trustees of the School of Mines, serving five years in this capacity and being president of the board during the last year. In 1897 the Colonel established upon his own responsibility an assay office at Ragged

Top, Lawrence county, conducting the same one year, at the expiration of which, in 1898, when the government opened an assay office in Deadwood, he returned to this city to assume the duties of the office of melter in the office, having been appointed to the position at the start and having ever since continued to serve in the capacity, while he has gained a high reputation for his careful and accurate work. In 1893 he was one of the judges in the mining department at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, being the only such representative from any of the gold-mining states of the Northwest, while in 1882 he was appointed commissioner to the mining exposition in Denver, taking his specimens by bull train to Cheyenne, a distance of three hundred and fifty miles, and thence forward by rail to Denver. In 1890 and 1891 he had charge of the Black Hills mineral exhibits in the corn palaces in Sioux City, Iowa. The Colonel was one of the three promoters and organizers of the Black Hills Mining Men's Association in 1901 and in 1897-8 he was president of the Custer County Agricultural, Mining and Stock Raising Fair Association, which, during his regime, held two fairs in Hermosa, that county, the same having been the most successful ever held in the Black Hills district.

In politics the subject is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and takes an active part in the promotion of its cause, while fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, in which he has attained the commandery degrees, and also those of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; and also with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Woodmen of the World. He is well known throughout the Black Hills and his circle of friends is circumscribed only by that of his acquaintances.

On the 26th of July, 1894, Colonel Thornby was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Youmans, who was born and reared in Winona, Minnesota, and who comes of a staunch old Revolutionary stock. She is a niece of Prof. Edward Livingston Youmans, the founder of the Popular Science Monthly and Youman's Chemistry. She is a woman of gracious presence and fine intellectual attainments, and was a teacher in the State Normal School at Spearfish, South Dakota, for some time prior to her marriage. Of this union have been born two children, Mary Youmans and Catherine Moore.

HERMAN BISCHOFF, city treasurer of Deadwood, was born in Wittenberg, Prussia, on the 29th of May, 1849, being a son of Herman and Marie (Schuz) Bischoff, who were likewise native of the same place, the former dying when the subject was a child of about one year, while the latter passed away in 1897. Mr. Bischoff received his early educational training in the excellent schools of his fatherland, and thereafter was employed in mercantile houses in the city of Wittenberg, until 1868, when he decided to seek his fortune in America. He arrived in due course of time in the port of New York city and thence came westward to Chicago, where he secured a position in a grocery in the Haymarket Square, later made notable by the riot in which a number of brave policemen met their death. He continued to reside in the western metropolis until after the ever memorable fire of 1871, and followed up the course of the Union Pacific Railroad, which was then in course of construction toward the Pacific coast. He located in Laramie, Wyoming, where he followed various occupations until 1877, the well-known humorist, "Bill" Nye, having at that time been incumbent of the office of justice of the peace in the town. In March, 1877, Mr. Bischoff arrived in what is now the attractive city of Deadwood, South Dakota, the place at the time having been a ragged but stirring mining camp. From this point he made two freighting trips to Cheyenne, and then, in August, 1877, he joined a party of one hundred and fifty men who started forth with teams on the great stampede to the Big Horn district of Wyoming, where gold had been discovered but a short time previously. The subject took out supplies with which to open a general merchandise store in the new mining camp, but the alluring tales of the gold to be secured proved to have the most meager foundation, as has often been the case, and but few of the adventurous gold seekers met with appreciable success. After prospecting in the mountains for three or four months Mr. Bischoff returned to Cheyenne, Wyoming, from which point he engaged in freighting to Deadwood, while in 1877 he established his permanent residence in the latter place. In 1879 he here engaged in the machinery and farming implement business, in company with John Farley, the firm being pioneers in this line of enterprise. Their establishment was destroyed in the great fire which practically wiped out the town in 1879, but they resumed business and successfully continued the same until 1883, when disaster again overtook them, when they lost practically their entire stock in the flood which swept part of the city. This second misfortune practically reduced the financial resources of Mr. Bischoff to the lowest ebb, and he thus accepted the position of bookkeeper at the D. & D. smelter, and the Homestake store at Lead City and in 1890 was made deputy county treasurer, under Kirk G. Phillips, retaining this incumbency for a period of four years, at the expiration of which, in 1898, he was elected city treasurer, of which office he has ever since remained in tenure, by successive re-elections, while on two occasions no opposing candidate was entered for the office, and he has been re-elected without opposition for the fourth term.

Mr. Bischoff has been to a considerable extent engaged in the promoting of mining interests in this section, and has recently effected the organization of the Lexington Hill Gold Mining Company and the Gold and Copper Mining and Development Company, of which he is secretary, being a stockholder in each and assistant secretary of the former. He owns valuable real estate in the city, including his attractive modern residence. In politics he gives an unqualified allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with Eureka Lodge, No. 13, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is secretary at the time of this writing, and with Deadwood Lodge, No. 51, Ancient Order of United Workmen, and Dakota Lodge, No. 1, Improved Order of Red Men. He is also a valued member of the Black Hills Mining Men's Association and the Business Men's Club of Deadwood. He became an active member of the South Deadwood Hose Company, a volunteer fire company, in 1879, and is still a member, being one of the oldest in organization. During his long and faithful service he was foreman four years, secretary for six years, besides other offices, and at present he is the chairman of the board of trustees.

On the 29th of March, 1888, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Bischoff to Miss Alice Baker, a native of Missouri and a daughter of John Baker, who was postmaster of Deadwood from 1898 until 1903. Mr. and Mrs. Bischoff have four children, namely: Eugene, Madge, Ivan and Alice.

HENRY C. MUSSMAN, proprietor of the Mussman House, one of the well-equipped and popular hotels of the state, is one of the representative citizens of Chamberlain and is now a member of the state legislature from his district. He was born in Cook county, Illinois, April 25, 1857, and is a son of William and Sophia (Heitzig) Mussman, of whose four children he is the eldest of the three surviving. His sister Sophia is the widow of Frank Parker and resides in Minneapolis, Minnesota, as does also the younger sister, Mary, who is not married. The father of our subject was born in Hanover, Germany, where he was reared and educated and where he learned the trade of ship carpenter. He followed a seafaring life for many years and visited all the principal ports in the world. About 1848 he located in Cook county, Illinois, where he was engaged in farming until December, 1857, when he removed with his family to Houston county, Minnesota, where he purchased government land and became a pioneer farmer, there continuing to reside about seven years, at the expiration of which he sold his farm and engaged in the hotel business in Brownsville, that county. About eight years later he removed thence to Iowa, locating in the town of Decorah, where he continued in the hotel business until his retirement, in 1890, when he removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in December, 1899, while his devoted wife passed away in 1860. In early years he was a Democrat, but subsequent to 1875 was a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party. Both he and his wife were members of the Lutheran church and were folk of sterling character, honored by all who knew them.

The subject of this sketch remained at the parental home until he had attained the age of fourteen years, when he began to depend upon his own resources. For several years he was in the employ of the lumber firm of Knapp, Stout & Company, of St. Louis, Missouri, making his headquarters in La Crosse, Wisconsin, and being engaged principally in rafting logs down the Mississippi river to the headquarters of the company. Later he was employed about three years as traveling salesman and then took up his abode in Iowa, where he was engaged in traveling for a brewing company for three years, at the expiration of which, in 1880, he came to Running Water, Dakota, where he became interested in the business of the firm of Chester B. Dyke & Company, wholesalers and distributors of beer over a wide area of country, and also proprietors of the Riverside hotel. A disastrous fire wiped out their business in February, 1881, and shortly afterward our subject came to Chamberlain, which was scarcely a year previous a village of a few tents and no permanent buildings, and here he was engaged in the liquor trade until 1888, when he sold out his business. He was thereafter variously engaged at different points in the Union for several years. Being a machinist by trade, he worked for a time in Minneapolis, where he had charge of the Lowrey's electric-car shops, while in 1892-3 he assisted in installing the sewerage system in Grand Forks, North Dakota. In 1895 he returned to Chamberlain and assisted in the construction of the pontoon bridge across the Missouri river at this point, and during the summer of the following year he was collector of the bridge, operated on the toll system. In 1897 Mr. Mussman was appointed water commissioner of Chamberlain, in which capacity he served one year. He has been identified with the hotel business in the town for about nine years, Mrs. Mussman having assumed the management of the Arlington hotel here about a year prior to his return to Chamberlain. Later they conducted the Tremont and the Merchants' hotels, in turn, and in December, 1898, rented their present building, known as the Mussman house, and this is one of the leading and most popular hotels in the city, no pains being spared in catering to the wants of the traveling public, while Mr. and Mrs. Mussman are known as the most genial and courteous, as well as capable, hotel folk.

HENRY C. MUSSMAN.

Mr. Mussman has ever been a stalwart Republican and has taken an active interest in the party cause. In the fall of 1902 he was elected to represent the seventeenth district in the state legislature, and he is proving an able member of that body. He is identified with Sioux Falls Lodge, No. 262, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and also with the local organizations of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 24th of April, 1879, Mr. Mussman was united in marriage to Miss Mary Takal, of Decorah, Iowa, and they have five children: Mack H., who assists in the management of the hotel and who is secretary of the state fire commission; and Gertrude, Fannie, Charlotte and William, all of whom are at the parental home.

ADELBERT H. BOWMAN, M. D., one of the popular and able physicians and surgeons of the city of Deadwood, is a native of Rock county, Wisconsin, where he was born on the 27th of October, 1851, being a son of William P. and Charlotte L. (Boynton) Bowman, both of whom were born and reared in the state of New York, the former being a son of Thaddeus Bowman, who was born in Vermont, of old colonial stock, while the maternal grandfather of the Doctor was Ephraim Boynton, who was born in Massachusetts, being a descendant of one of the valiant minutemen of that state who gave so material service in the cause of independence during the war of the Revolution. This honored ancestor was Captain John Boynton, who was born in Rowley, Massachusetts, on the 8th of September, 1736, and he held the rank noted during his service in the Continental line. The original American progenitor in the line was John Boynton, who settled in Rowley, Massachusetts, in 1638, and Captain John mentioned was of the fifth generation, having been a son of Joseph, who was a son of Joseph, who was a son of Ephraim, who was a son of the original settler in Rowley. The father of the Doctor manifested the same intrinsic patriotism and loyalty during the war of the Rebellion, in which he served as a member of the First Wisconsin Heavy Artillery during the latter part of the great civil conflict. In the spring of 1866 he removed with his family to Osage, Iowa, and he and his devoted wife now reside in Spencer, that state, where they celebrated their golden wedding in 1897, while both are well preserved in mental and physical vigor, the father, at the venerable age of eighty years, being still actively engaged in the mercantile business. Of their eleven children eight are still living, the subject of this sketch having been the third in order of birth.

Dr. Bowman received his early educational discipline in the public schools of Wisconsin, and was about fifteen years of age at the time of the family removal to Iowa, where he continued to attend the public schools until 1869, when he entered the Cedar Valley Seminary, at Osage, that state, where he pursued his studies during the winter months until 1872. Later he took up the study of medicine under Dr. McAlister, of Spencer, Iowa, and in 1876 entered the renowned Rush Medical College, in the city of Chicago, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated on the 25th of February, 1879, receiving his well-earned degree of Doctor of Medicine and coming forth admirably equipped for the work of his chosen profession. He initiated his professional career in his home town of Spencer, Iowa, where he continued in successful practice until 1887, when he came to Deadwood, where he met with success from the start and where he now controls a large general practice as a physician and surgeon. The Doctor is a member of the American Medical Association, the Iowa State Medical Society, the South Dakota State Medical Society and the Black Hills Medical Association, of which he is president. In politics the Doctor is arrayed as an intelligent and loyal supporter of the principles and policies of the Republican party and fraternally he is identified with Central City Lodge, No. 22, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons; Dakota Chapter, No. 3, Royal Arch Masons; Dakota Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar; and Naja Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. At the time of the Spanish-American war the Doctor enlisted as assistant surgeon in the First South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, with which he served ten months in the Philippines, returning to his home in March, 1899.

On the 16th of October, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Bowman to Miss Ida Potter, who was born in West Springfield, Pennsylvania, being a daughter of Riley and Hulda (Austin) Potter, the former of whom was engaged in merchandizing at West Springfield at the time of his death, which occurred in 1884, while his wife passed away in 1900. Dr. and Mrs. Bowman are the parents of three children, namely: Laura L., Potter and Dorothy.

ALBERT W. COE, one of the honored pioneers and prominent business men of the city of Deadwood, is a native of Madison county, New York, where he was born on the 14th of August, 1833, being a son of Albert E. and Mary (Bridge) Coe, both of whom were likewise natives of that county, the former having been born in the same ancestral homestead as was the subject. The grandfather, who bore the name of David Coe, was a native of Middletown, Connecticut, while the name has been prominently identified with the annals of New England from the early colonial epoch. The ancestry is traced back in direct line to Roger Coe, who was burned at the stake in England, during the reign of Queen Mary, so commonly known as "Bloody Mary." The original progenitor in America was Robert Coe, who emigrated from the "tight little isle" to this country in 1634. From one of his three sons the subject of this review is directly descended. A number of representatives of the family rendered valiant service in the cause of independence during the war of the Revolution, and the subject's daughter, Miss Clara D., is thus entitled to and maintains membership in the Daughters of the Revolution. David Coe was a lad of twelve years at the time of his parents' removal from Connecticut to Oneida county, New York, where he was reared to manhood. He married at the age of twenty-one years and thereafter removed to Madison county, that state, where he engaged in agricultural pursuits and where he passed the remainder of his life. The father of the subject passed his entire life in that county; he died in 1887, and his wife passed away in 1844. They became the parents of six sons and three daughters, of whom one of the sons and one of the daughters are still living.

Albert W. Coe, who was the third child in order of birth, was reared to the study discipline of the home farm and secured his education in the common schools of the locality and period. Upon attaining his legal majority he set forth to seek his fortunes in the west. He located in what is now the city of Chicago, where he remained until 1856, when he removed to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, as one of the pioneers of the Cream City, and there continued to make his home for nearly thirty years—until the time of his removal to what is now the state of South Dakota. It may be consistently noted in the connection that a brother of his present wife was the third white child born in that city. Mr. Coe was one of the charter members of the Milwaukee board of trade and was for a number of years prominently identified with the commission business, after which he engaged in the hardware business, in which he there continued until 1883, when he came to South Dakota and located in Deadwood, where he has since maintained his home. Here he became associated with J. K. P. Miller in the grocery business, of which they continued for some time, then disposing of the enterprise and engaging in the real-estate business, of which the subject assumed control upon the death of his honored partner. He has since been identified with this line of enterprise and has been concerned in many important transactions and assisted materially in the developing of the great resources of this section of the state. Mr. Miller, with whom he was so long associated, was the promotor and builder of the Deadwood Central Railroad and the Deadwood street railway, while Mr. Coe was secretary of both companies during the building of both systems, while after their completion he held the office of manager until the properties were sold. Mr. Coe is at the present time a member of the Business Men's Club, of Deadwood, and also the Mining Men's Association, while he is a member of the directorate of the Franklin Hotel Company and the Masonic Benevolent Association. He is one of the prominent and honored members of the Masonic fraternity in the state, and is at the present time treasurer of the lodge, chapter and commandery with which he has affiliated, while he has attained the thirty-second degree in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite and is also affiliated with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. In 1897 he had the distinction of serving as grand master of the Masonic grand lodge of the state, and he is at the present time president of the South Dakota Masonic Veteran Association, having been a Mason for more than forty years.

On the 13th of July, 1854, Mr. Coe was united in marriage to Miss Emeline Gregg, who, like himself, was born and reared in Madison county, New York, and she died in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1857, leaving no children. On the 31st of March, 1859, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Coe to Miss Sarah D. Gregg, a daughter of Hendrick Gregg, who removed from Madison county, New York, to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1836, being numbered among the early settlers in that locality and being one of the honored pioneer farmers of the Badger state. Mr. and Mrs. Coe have one son, Albert G., and a daughter, Clara D. The former was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on the 18th of April, 1860, and is now associated with his father in business. On the 18th of September, 1883, he was united in marriage to Miss Agnes L. Foster, who was born in Racine, Wisconsin, being a daughter of Alfred Foster, who removed thence to Milwaukee when she was a child, so that she was reared and educated in the latter city. Of this union was born one child, Alberta, who died in infancy. Albert G. is a member of the Olympian Club, and, like his honored father, has attained the thirty-second degree of Scottish-rite Masonry, while his political faith is that of the Democratic party. The daughter, Clara D., also assists in the management of the business interests of the Coe establishment. She has been active in the affairs of the Order of the Eastern Star and has officiated as worthy matron of the local lodge.

WILLIAM S. ELDER, of Deadwood, is a native of Warsaw, Coshocton county, Ohio, where his birth occurred on the 15th of October, 1858, being the son of John G. and Jane Elder, of Ohio and Pennsylvania respectively. The father, who was also born in the county of Coshocton, still lives there and is a farmer by occupation; the mother, who before her marriage bore the name of Jane Moffatt, was born in Washington county, Pennsylvania, being descended on the father's side from a Revolutionary soldier who in an early day settled in Orange county, New York.

William S. Elder was reared in his native state, and after attending for some years the public schools entered an academy at Canonsburg, Pennsylvania, where he was prepared for college. With this training he became, in 1882, a student of Princeton College, New Jersey, and in due time was graduated from that institution, finishing the classical course and receiving his degree in the year 1886, immediately after which he accepted the position of reporter of the New York Commercial Advertiser. After one year in this capacity he resigned his position and in 1887 started for Dakota, arriving at the Black Hills on April 21st of that year, when he at once engaged in journalism, as editor of the Black Hills Weekly Herald, which paper he published from August to the following December. In 1888 Mr. Elder began reading law at Deadwood in the office of Moody & Washabaugh, the leading legal firm of the city, and one year later was admitted to the bar and began the practice of his profession. He soon obtained his share of patronage, built up a lucrative business, achieved the reputation of an able lawyer, and in addition to his legal work, took an active interest in the growth and development of the city, by encouraging all laudable enterprises calculated to promote these ends. He was elected in 1902 on the citizens' ticket to represent the second ward in the city council, and as a member of that body labored earnestly for the municipality. Mr. Elder was one of the organizers and promoters of the Black Hills Mining Men's Association, and, with such associates and co-workers as S. W. Russell, George S. Jackson, W. J. Thornby, Harris Franklin and R. H. Driscoll, who compose the personnel of the enterprise, pushed the undertaking to successful issue, being made a director and later secretary and treasurer, which offices he fills at the present time. He was also a leading spirit in organizing and building up the Imperial Gold Mining and Milling Company, which now has the largest dry crushing cyanide plant in the Hills, being president of the company, also its legal counsel. To Mr. Elder's energy and business-like methods the above enterprises owe much of the success which has characterized their history. Wide-awake, enterprising, full of enthusiasm and optimistic in all the term implies, he has demonstrated qualities of leadership and shown himself able to cope with and overcome adverse circumstances and to carry out successfully and worthily any undertaking to which he addresses himself.

Mr. Elder is positive in opinion, energetic in action, a man of honesty, independence of spirit and great executive ability to manage extensive enterprises. He is a Democrat, and since coming west he has been influential in the councils of his party, locally and throughout the state. He was secretary of the county central committee in 1892, and one year later was chosen state committeeman from Lawrence county, in both of which capacities he rendered valuable service.

Mr. Elder is a married man, his wife, who was formerly Miss Maude Eccles, of Chicago, having borne him one child, a son by the name of Duncan Elder. Mr. and Mrs. Elder are members of the Congregational church of Deadwood and move in the best social circles of the city.

JAMES C. MOODY, a member of one of the strongest law firms in the state, that of Moody, Kellar & Moody, of Deadwood, is a native of the Hoosier state, having been born in Jasper county, Indiana, on a farm near the town of Rensselaer, on the 3d of January, 1863, while in 1864 his parents came to what is now South Dakota and located in Yankton, the original capital of the territory. He secured his early educational discipline in the public schools of that city, being graduated in the high schools as a member of the class of 1882, and having in the meanwhile learned the printer's trade. Soon after leaving school he came with his father to Deadwood, where he forthwith identified himself with the newspaper business. In 1884 he effected the purchase of the plant and business of the Deadwood Pioneer, the first paper published in the Black Hills district, being associated in the purchase with William H. Bonham, the present proprietor. He continued to be identified with the publication of the Pioneer until 1888, when he disposed of his interest in the enterprise. Mr. Moody early became interested in political affairs in the territory, as his father was specially prominent in public affairs in the early days, being one of the pioneer members of the bar of the territory. He thus went through the early territorial campaigns with his father, ex-Senator Gideon C. Moody, concerning whom much specific data is entered within the pages of this publication. After the election of his father to the United States senate, in 1889, the subject left South Dakota and went to the city of Washington, where he remained for several months as a newspaper correspondent, and thence went to the territory of Oklahoma, where he was for a time engaged in newspaper business, while he also superintended the compilation and publication of the first statutes of the territory. He next engaged in literary work in Kansas City, Missouri, where he also began a careful study of the law, securing admission to the bar of that state in 1893. He then returned to Oklahoma, locating in Perry, where he was successfully engaged in the practice of his profession for three years, at the expiration of which, upon the invitation of his father, he returned to Deadwood to enter the law firm of Moody, Kellar & Moody, of which his father was the senior member. This is one of the leading firms of corporation lawyers in the state and controls a very extensive and representative practice. In 1902 the subject was elected to represent Lawrence county in the state senate, serving during the eighth general assembly and proving a valuable working member of the upper house. In politics he is a staunch Republican. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and Black Hills Mining Men's Association. He was married in 1891 to Miss May Williams, and as a fruit of this marriage they have two children, Curtis and Eleanor May.

MALCOLM CHARLES CAMPBELL, of Lead, was born in Brock township, province of Ontario, Canada, December 25, 1849, and is the son of Peter and Catherine (Macfee) Campbell, the father a farmer, contractor and millwright. When Malcolm was quite small his parents moved to Bruce county, Ontario, and it was in that part of the country that he grew to young manhood on a farm, obtaining the meanwhile a limited education by attending a few months of each winter season a school three miles distant from his home. On attaining his majority he went to Marquette, Michigan, where he worked for some time at carpentry, later finding employment in a livery stable, the two kinds of labor occupying his attention until 1873, when he changed his location to Ishpeming, where he followed contracting and building until his removal the same year to Michigamme. From the latter place he subsequently went to Lance, Michigan, where, in addition to erecting a number of dwellings and other buildings, he constructed during the fall and early winter of 1873 seventeen miles of road for the government, which being finished, he worked for some time in the Calumet and Hecla mines at Hancock. Later he built twenty-seven residences at Osceola for a mining company. In the summer of 1875 he went to Copper Harbor, where he was employed for some months building homes for another mining company, going from that town the following winter to Oconto, Wisconsin, near which place he worked in a lumber camp until the ensuing spring, when he started for Dakota.

Owing to the trouble then existing in the Black Hills, Mr. Campbell did not complete his journey, but returned to Wisconsin, where until the winter of 1876 he sold a patent right, making the city of Oshkosh his headquarters. The latter part of the above year he returned to Hancock, Michigan, where he remained until May, 1877, at which time he again turned his face westward, reaching Crook, Dakota, on the 25th of June. Immediately after his arrival, he made one of a party of five that started out on a prospecting tour, spending about one year in that capacity, during which time the little company traveled over a large section of the territory, experiencing many interesting vicissitudes and meeting with a number of thrilling adventures, also locating several valuable mining properties, which subsequently yielded rich returns. In the winter of 1877 Mr. Campbell located in Deadwood and resumed his trade, which he followed in that city until the spring following, when he engaged as carpenter and millwright with the Homestake Mining Company at Lead City. After remaining with that large and wealthy corporation until 1886, he resigned his position to take charge of the Campbell Hotel at Lead City, which he had erected three years previously, and which as originally constructed, consisted of fifteen rooms, a capacity entirely inadequate to meet the rapidly increasing demands of the traveling public. Shortly after assuming the duties of "mine host" he began adding to the building and the improvements continued until the number of apartments increased from fifteen to seventy. He made the Campbell the leading hotel in Lead City, spared neither pains nor expense in furnishing it throughout with the latest modern improvements and during the twenty years of his management it became widely and favorably known as a first-class stopping place. As a landlord, Mr. Campbell justified the expectations of the most critical and exacting of his numerous guests, being always pleasant and agreeable, and hesitating at no reasonable sacrifice for the entertainment and comfort of those seeking his hospitality.

Mr. Campbell has been an influential factor in the public affairs of Lead since locating in the city, and he is now serving his third term in the common council, having been a member of that body since about 1895. He is a Republican in politics and an active party worker, the success of the local ticket upon divers occasions being largely the result of his untiring efforts in its behalf. His fraternal relations are represented by the Odd Fellows, Elks and Pythian orders, in all of which he has held important official positions.

On the 6th day of July, 1899, Mr. Campbell contracted a matrimonial alliance with Miss Margaret McKinney, a native of Missouri, but at the time of her marriage a resident of the Black Hills. Mr. and Mrs. Campbell have an entertaining family of four children, all sons, their names in order of birth being as follows: Malcolm P., William A., Walter D. and George Albert.

HON. WILLIAM S. O'BRIEN, of the Homestake Mining Company, was born in Calais, Washington county, Maine, on the 25th of February, 1846. When four years old he was taken by his parents to Detroit, Michigan, and in 1855 accompanied the family to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he lived until the breaking out the great Rebellion. In August, 1862, although but a lad of fifteen, young O'Brien enlisted in Company A, Ninth Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, with which he shared the fortunes and vicissitudes of war until honorably discharged on the 24th of August, 1865, participating during his period of service in a number of battles and minor engagements, among the more noted of which were Nashville, Tennessee, siege of Mobile, Alabama, Tupelo and Gun Town, Mississippi. He was with General Sibley during the Indian war of Minnesota in the fall of 1862, and the summer of 1863 took part in much of the hard fighting with the savages. At the close of the war he returned to Minneapolis, but after remaining the following winter in that city, decided to go to Montana territory, where he was convinced more favorable opportunities awaited him. Accordingly he procured a wagon and an ox-team, and with his outfit started west, with Helena as an objective point. In due season he reached his destination, and from that time until 1877 he devoted his attention to mining and lumbering in Montana, Nevada, Washington and Arizona.

From Nevada Mr. O'Brien came to Dakota and after spending about seven months in the Black Hills, returned to that state, thence in 1880 to Arizona, where he continued variously employed until his removal, in 1883, to Idaho. In 1885 he again returned to South Dakota, and since that time has been almost continuously employed at the celebrated Homestake Mining Company, in the Black Hills, serving in various capacities, such as laborer, miner, sampler, time-keeper, state inspector of mines, shift boss and foreman of the mines, proving in every situation faithful to his every obligation, and at all times making the company's interests his own. His series of continued promotions from the humble position of a common laborer with pick and shovel to the high and responsible station of foreman of one of the largest and richest mining properties in the world, demonstrate the strong fiber of which the man is made and indicate the confidence and esteem in which he is held by those to whom his services have been rendered.

When the constitutional convention was called in 1890 Mr. O'Brien was a member of the house of representatives and the following year he was chosen to represent Lawrence county in the state senate. His record while a member of those latter bodies was eminently honorable, creditable to himself and satisfactory to his constituents, and his name appears in connection with some of the most important legislation of the the different sessions.

In 1894 Mr. O'Brien was furthered honored by being appointed state mining inspector, in which capacity he served the commonwealth until his resignation for the purpose of accepting the more lucrative position with the Homestake Mining Company, which he has since so ably and worthily held. He has been for many years an influential worker in the Republican party, and in the fall of 1896 was nominated sheriff of Lawrence county, but by reason of the overwhelming strength of the opposition that year failed of election, although running ahead of other candidates on his ticket.

Mr. O'Brien, on the 2d day of December, 1885, was happily married to Miss Bessie Treweek, a native of Cornwall, England, the union resulting in the birth of three interesting children whose names are Ida W., Flora B. and Elizabeth J. Mr. O'Brien is public-spirited, an expert in the great industry to which he has so long devoted his time and energies, and his popularity with all classes and conditions of people is by no means circumscribed by the narrow limits of the community in which he lives. Wherever known he is esteemed for his many admirable qualities of head and heart, and as an honorable man and upright citizen he ranks with the most enterprising and progressive of his contemporaries. He is an enthusiastic member of the Grand Army of the Republic, belonging to E. M. Stanton Post, No. 81, at Lead.

HENRY ROSENKRANZ, of Central City, was born in Germany, on October 14, 1846, and came with his parents to the United States when he was nine years old. The family settled twenty miles east of Buffalo, New York, and there the father engaged in farming. Henry lived at home until he reached the age of sixteen, attending the district schools and aiding in the work on the farm. His mother died on June 12, 1902, and his father is still living on the New York homestead, being eighty-six years old. At the age of sixteen the son went to work in a brewery in Buffalo, and after four years of faithful service there secured a position as foreman in a similar establishment at Niagara Falls. He remained there until 1868, then moved to Kansas City, Missouri, where he passed two years, again working in a brewery. In 1870 he went to Helena, Montana, and soon after his arrival at that place found employment in the mines at Unionville for a few months, then went into a distillery at Helena. In the following spring he turned his attention to prospecting in the neighborhood of that city, and during the summer joined a government survey under the direction of Professor Marsh. He was with this expedition four months when he was taken ill and returned to Helena, where he was laid up eight months. In 1872 he again went to work in a brewery, this time at Helena, remaining there so employed until 1876. In July of that year he started for the Black Hills and arrived at Deadwood on August 10th. He at once found employment in drain ditching, working at this until the next spring. He then opened a retail liquor store at Central City. In September of that year, 1877, he went with several other men on a prospecting expedition through the hills west of the town. They encountered a band of hostile Indians who killed all their horses and one man named Thomas Carr. On his return from the disastrous trip Mr. Rosenkranz started a brewery at Central City in partnership with Dan Warner, and in 1880 he bought Mr. Warner's interest and became sole owner of the plant and business. He conducted the enterprise until 1890, when he suspended operations and went into the coal and ice business, at the same time doing considerable prospecting in the vicinity of the town. The year 1893 was passed on the reservation where he had cattle, and in 1894 he reopened his saloon at Central City, continuing the business until April, 1903, when he again sold out. It is his present intention to retire from active business for a time and take a well-earned and much-needed rest, spending some time in California. He is interested in a large extent of mining property in the Black Hills, and also owns considerable real estate at Central City and Deadwood. His place is properly among the old-timers, as he was an early settler here, and he is a valued member of the Pioneers' Society of the Black Hills.

On September 5, 1873, Mr. Rosenkranz was married at Helena, Montana, to Miss Louise Kaiser, a native of California. They had four children, Lizzie, Annie, Lillian and Clara. Their mother died on December 14, 1887, and on December 31, 1889, at Lead, this state, Mr. Rosenkranz married a second wife, Miss Mary Nudrick, a native of Austria. He belongs to the Odd Fellows at Deadwood and the Red Men at Central City.

EUGENE F. IRWIN, timekeeper for the Homestake Mining Company, Lead City, South Dakota, was born in Clinton, DeWitt county, Illinois, on June 27, 1865. On the maternal side he is a direct descendant of General Putnam, of Revolutionary fame, and his great-grandfather, Hiram Smith, was an aide-de-camp on the staff of General William Henry Harrison during the war of 1812. William R. Irwin, the subject's father, is a native of Ohio, and for a number of years resided in Illinois, but in 1881 removed to Missouri, where he has since been practicing law. He served five and a half years in the United States army, participated in many of the noted campaigns of the great rebellion, and after the close of the war was stationed for some time at Ft. Laramie, Wyoming, retiring from the service with the rank of captain. Mattie M., wife of William R. Irwin, and mother of the subject, is at the present time actively engaged in Grand Army and Woman's Relief Corps circles and for the past thirty years has been prominently identified with the mission work of the Presbyterian church.

Eugene F. Irwin was reared in his native state, received his education in the public schools of Clinton and remained in Illinois until 1881, when he accompanied his parents upon their removal to Nebraska. From 1881 to 1883 he worked as an apprentice on the Waterloo Gazette, but the latter year quit the office and entered the railway service with headquarters at Blair, Nebraska. After spending a short time railroading he resigned his position and in 1884 resumed newspaper work as compositor on the Blair Pilot, in which capacity he continued about one year. Severing his connection with the Pilot office, he worked for some time with the Cromwell Lumber and Grain Company, at Craig, Nebraska, and on quitting that firm returned to railroading, which he followed at various places and in various capacities until 1893. While thus engaged, he filled the position of bill clerk in the Omaha freight office, was station agent at different points, ticket agent and train dispatcher, quitting the same at Chadron, Nebraska, on April 26th of the year noted to enter the employ of the Homestake Mining Company at Lead, South Dakota, with which large and wealthy enterprise he has since been identified as timekeeper.

Mr. Irwin's career has been varied and active and, in the main, financially successful. He has the unbounded confidence of the wealthy corporation with which he is connected and discharges the duty of his responsible post with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of all concerned, enjoying not only the high esteem of his superiors, but the kindest regard of his associates and fellow workmen as well. Mr. Irwin is a Republican in politics and ever since old enough to exercise the right of franchise has been an active worker for the success of his party. In April, 1902, he was elected mayor of Lead City and his administration of the municipal government has been satisfactory in every way to Democrats as well as Republicans.

Mr. Irwin is a zealous Mason and enjoys worthy prestige in the fraternity, having been honored with a number of important official positions. He joined the blue lodge in October, 1886; the Royal Arch degree, February, 1890; Knights Templar, July, 1890; thirty-second or Scottish Rite degree, April, 1893; Shrine, August, 1892; Order of the Eastern Star, 1891, and Royal and Select Masters, August, 1895. He has served as worshipful master of Golden Star Lodge, No. 9; high priest of Golden Belt Chapter, No. 35, Royal Arch Masons; eminent commander of Dakota Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar; grand junior warden and grand senior warden of the grand commandery of Knights Templar, of South Dakota; grand junior warden and grand master of the first veil, grand chapter, Royal Arch Masons, of South Dakota; grand royal arch captain and grand principal sojourner of the same chapter, and grand junior deacon of the grand lodge, Free and Accepted Masons. By the foregoing list it will be seen that Mr. Irwin has held many of the most prominent positions within the power of the brotherhood to bestow, his elevation to the same attesting his capability and high standing in an order where merit and not prestige is the pathway to honorable station.

Mr. Irwin was married, in Waterloo, Nebraska, July 29, 1886, to Miss Lucy M. Royce, whose ancestors were among the early settlers of northern Vermont, and whose family has long lived in that state. Three children have been born of this union, namely: Georgie D., Helen F. and Edith F., all living.

M. VINCENT MULCAHY, M. D., who is successfully established in the practice of his profession in Vermillion, Clay county, comes of staunch old Irish lineage and is a native of the dominion of Canada, having been born in the town of Orillia, province of Ontario, on the 28th of January, 1868. He is a son of Thomas and Mary (Collins) Mulcahy, the former of whom was born in Ireland, whence he came to Canada in his youth, and he is still living there. His wife was a native of Canada and of Irish descent, and there her death occurred in 1875. Dr. Mulcahy completed the curriculum of the public schools in his native town, being graduated in the Orillia high school as a member of the class of 1885. He then entered the medical department of the University of Toronto, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated in 1889, while in the same year he completed a course in the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons, in the same city, receiving license to practice in the province of Ontario. To further advance himself in the knowledge of his profession the Doctor took a post-graduate course in the New York Polyclinic Institute in the year 1890, which fact is indicative of his devotion to his profession and his desire to keep in close touch with all advances made in the same. In 1890 he entered upon the practice of medicine at Smith Falls, Canada, where he remained one year, at the expiration of which he came to South Dakota and established himself in practice at Elk Point, Union county, where he built up a successful practice, there continuing his residence until 1898, when he located in Vermillion, where he now controls an excellent and representative practice. In 1897 he took a second post-graduate course in the Polyclinic Institute in New York City. He served as superintendent of the board of health of Union county while a resident of Elk Point, and he is at the present time medical examiner for the New York Life Insurance Company, the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, the Northwestern Life Insurance Company, of Milwaukee, and others of importance. He holds membership in the South Dakota State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, while fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, in which he has passed the capitular degrees; the Knights of Pythias, and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

On the 2d of October, 1892, Dr. Mulcahy was united in marriage to Miss Laura Fox, of Orillia, Canada, and she died on the 23d of February, 1898, leaving one child, Vera. On the 2d of July, 1901, the Doctor consummated a second marriage, being then united to Miss Bertha Chamberlain, of Pasadena, California.

JOHN BAGGALEY, of Deadwood, is a native of Bucks county, Pennsylvania, born June 26, 1849, in the town of New Hope, where his parents, Francis and Ann (Mulcaster) Baggaley, settled about two years prior to the date of his birth. Francis Baggaley, a native of England, was by occupation a flax dresser, his father having been a manufacturer of pottery on an extensive scale in the county of Yorkshire. The Mulcasters, for several generations, were miners, the family still holding large coal interests in various parts of England and Wales. Francis Baggaley moved from Pennsylvania to Connecticut when the subject of this sketch was quite small, thence to Andover, Massachusetts, and still later to New York city, where his death occurred in 1890; his wife dying in January, 1883, in Albany, New York.

John Baggaley, as already indicated, was a child when his parents moved to Connecticut and Massachusetts, and his first educational experience was in the schools of Andover, in the latter state, where he acquired a fair knowledge of the branches constituting the prescribed course of study. At the age of fifteen he laid aside his books and entered a newspaper office, to learn the printer's trade, but after serving a short time gave up the business and started out to make his fortune by other means. When about seventeen years of age he left home and went to Missouri, where he worked at different places as a farm hand during the ensuing six years, at the expiration of that time joining his parents at Galesburg, Illinois, to which place they had in the meanwhile removed. From 1872 to 1877 he operated an express business at Galesburg, but in April of the latter year he came to Deadwood, South Dakota, from which place he started out on a prospecting tour.

Mr. Baggaley devoted about nine years to prospecting, during which time he traveled over various parts of the territory, acquiring a practical experience in mining and meeting with the vicissitudes which usually attend people engaged in this not always successful search after hidden wealth. In the main, however, he was reasonably fortunate as he succeeded in locating several valuable properties, which ultimately resulted greatly to his advantage, besides organizing and promoting a number of mining enterprises from which he received a liberal income. He became a stockholder of the Iron Hill Mining Company, of which, for the past twelve years, he has been secretary and treasurer. About one hundred and twenty-five men were employed and the property was among the most productive mining properties in the Black Hills country prior to the low price of silver.

In 1886 Mr. Baggaley discontinued promoting as a specific work, and since that time has devoted his attention principally to the brokerage and commission business, later adding real estate, in all of which lines he has a large and lucrative patronage. He has a wide correspondence with all sections of the Union, by means of which he has induced men of capital to invest their surplus in the Black Hills and other parts of South Dakota. In connection with his regular business, he has recently been dealing in curios of all kinds, for which there is always a great demand by tourists, his stock of these articles being large, valuable and representing much labor and expense in the collecting.

Mr. Baggaley served as treasurer of Deadwood from 1896 to 1898, inclusive, and proved a capable and popular official. As a Republican he is interested in politics, but is more of a business man than a politician, devoting his attention closely to his interests, with the result that he is now the possessor of a fortune of considerable magnitude, which through his energy is being continually augmented. Mr. Baggaley was initiated into the Odd Fellows order at Galesburg, Illinois, in 1876, and has been actively identified with the fraternity ever since, being at this time a leading member of Eureka Lodge at Deadwood. Years ago he united with the Baptist church, and began the earnest Christian life which he has since lived, being one of the pillars of the congregation worshipping in Deadwood. He was the first clerk and treasurer of the church in this city, both of which positions he held for a number of years, and since about 1898 he has been a deacon, besides contributing liberally of his means to the support of the gospel, both at home and in other places.

The domestic life of Mr. Baggaley dates from 1870, on August 22d of which year he was united in the bonds of wedlock with Miss Jennie Evans, daughter of Edward and May Evans, of Brookfield, Missouri, where the ceremony was solemnized. The children born of this union, three in number, are May E., who married J. C. Gregory, editor of the Auburn Argus, Auburn, Washington; Maud A., wife of A. H. Stillwell, the subject's business associate, and George F., who is also a partner of his father in the latter's various enterprises. Thus in a somewhat cursory way have been set forth the leading facts and characteristics in the life of an enterprising, broad-minded man, who has indeed been the architect of his own fortune and who, standing four square to every wind that blows, exercises a wholesome influence upon the community of which he has been a respected and honored citizen.

COL. JOHN L. JOLLEY, of Vermillion, Clay county, is a native of the city of Montreal, Canada, where he was born on the 14th of July, 1840, being a son of James and Frances (Lawlor) Jolley, both of whom are now deceased. In 1846, when he was a lad of six years, his parents removed to the city of Hamilton, Ontario, and there he secured his early educational training in a private school. In 1853 the subject began working at the trade of harnessmaking, in the employ of his father, and thus continued until May 1, 1857, when he removed to Portage City, Wisconsin, where he began the study of law the following year, prosecuting his technical reading with much zeal and being admitted to the bar of the state in October, 1861.

On August 21, 1862, Mr. Jolley enlisted as a private in Company C, Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, with which he proceeded to the front, and he continued in active service until the close of the war, having participated in many important engagements and having risen to the rank of second lieutenant of his company, receiving his honorable discharge as such, at Mobile, Alabama, on the 4th of July, 1865. He then returned to the north and took a short course of study in the Eastman Commercial College, in the city of Chicago. On the 10th of July, 1866, John L. Jolley came to the territory of Dakota and became one of the pioneers of the present flourishing city of Vermillion, Clay county, where he established himself in the practice of his profession, in which he has ever since continued, having gained distinctive prestige in the same and being one of the oldest practitioners in this section of the state. He is a stalwart advocate of the principles of the Republican party and has long been a prominent figure in its local ranks, wielding much influence in its councils in the state. In 1884 he was delegate from the territory to the national Republican convention, which nominated James G. Blaine for the presidency, and he has been frequently a delegate to the territorial and state conventions. He was four times elected a member of the territorial legislature and twice represented his county in the state legislature, after the admission of South Dakota to the Union. In 1891 he was elected to congress, to fill the unexpired term of the late Hon. John R. Gamble. In 1877 Mr. Jolley was chosen as the first mayor of the city of Vermillion, and in 1885 he was again called to the chief executive office of the municipality. He was a member of the state constitutional convention of 1889 and at all times has been recognized as a citizen of utmost loyalty and highest public spirit. Fraternally he manifests his abiding interest in his old comrades in arms by retaining membership in Miner Post, No. 8, Grand Army of the Republic.

On the 20th of April, 1874, near the city of Dubuque, Iowa, was solemnized the marriage of John L. Jolley to Miss Harriet J. Grange, and they are the parents of three children, viz: Frances, who is the wife of Hon. Charles H. Dillon, a prominent member of the bar of Yankton, this state; Charles W., who is a successful farmer of Clay county, and Mary L., who remains at the parental home.

DANA REED BAILEY, one of the distinguished members of the bar of Minnehaha county, and county judge, is a native of the old Green Mountain state, having been born in Montgomery, Franklin county, Vermont, on the 27th of April, 1833. He was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm and after completing the curriculum of the district schools, he continued his studies in Leland Seminary, at Townshend, Vermont, and finally completed his education in Oberlin College, Oberlin, Ohio, in 1858. He taught three terms in the district schools, was for six months an instructor in a select school, and later was a teacher in the Beekman school, at Saratoga Springs, New York, for one year. In June, 1856, Judge Bailey began reading law and in the following year entered the office of the late Chief Justice Royce, of the supreme court of his native state, under whose preceptorship he continued his technical reading for some time. He then entered the Albany Law School, at Albany, New York, where he was graduated in April, 1859. In the following month he entered upon the practice of his chosen profession, locating in Highgate, Vermont, being there established in practice until the 1st of September, 1864. In that place he held for two years the office of town agent and for an equal period was trustee of the United States reserve fund. He was also deputy collector of the United States customs at Highgate, having charge of the office for three years and three months, while for six months he acted as special agent of the war department. In 1863 he was appointed secret aid of the United States treasury department, serving in this capacity for three years. On the 1st of September, 1865, Judge Bailey opened a law office in St. Albans, Vermont, and on the 3d of the following February he entered into a professional partnership with Park Davis, while a year later H. C. Adams became a member of the firm. The subject was a delegate to the Republican national convention in 1868, and was a member of the state central committee of the party in Vermont two years. He served two years as state's attorney of Franklin county, and in 1870 was elected a member of the state senate, being chosen as his own successor two years later and serving with marked ability and distinction, having been chairman of the judiciary committee, while by vote of the joint legislature he was appointed one of a committee of five to investigate the Vermont Central Railroad, which investigation was not concluded until July, 1873. He was for two years a member of the board of school directors of St. Albans.

In 1869 Judge Bailey became identified with the interests of the west, having, in 1871, laid out the town of Baldwin, St. Croix county, Wisconsin, of which he was the original proprietor. He there built the Matchless flouring mills and was the owner of three sawmills and half-owner of two grain elevators. He had in the meanwhile taken up his permanent abode in the town and for a decade was there engaged in the manufacture of flour and lumber and in farming and merchandising as well. For several years he maintained a large herd of high-grade shorthorn cattle, selling the same in 1877, in the Chicago market, for the highest average price offered for any herd in the United States in that year.

In 1874 Judge Bailey removed to Baldwin, St. Croix county, Wisconsin, where he served three years as president of the municipal council, as treasurer one year and as school director for seven years. In 1877, at the Republican district convention, he was nominated by acclamation for the state senate, as representative of the twenty-fourth senatorial district, comprising seven counties, and in the county in which he resided he received in the ensuing election all the votes cast, with the exception of fifty-seven, the total vote being three thousand one hundred and thirty-one, while the Republican nominee for the lower house of the legislature had only ninety-nine majority in the county. He was chairman of the judiciary committee in the senate during the session of 1879. In 1880 the Judge was elected a member of the board of county commissioners of St. Croix county, and was re-elected in each of the two succeeding years, resigning his position on the 19th of December, 1882, at which time he was also chairman of the board, and on the 21st of the same month he arrived in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where he has ever since maintained his home. From the time of his arrival until March, 1884, he had charge of the Dakota business of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Milwaukee, and on the 11th of the month last mentioned he opened a law office here, in the Masonic Temple, being the first tenant to occupy rooms in the new building, and here he actively resumed the practice of his profession. In January, 1886, he formed a co-partnership with Park Davis, who had been his professional colleague in Vermont many years previously, and in 1888 William H. Lyon became a member of the firm, which was known as Bailey, Davis & Lyon, and which held a foremost position among the legal associations of the territory and state during the entire time of its existence. Judge Bailey served as city attorney of Sioux Falls from 1885 until 1889, and on the 21st of August, 1890, upon the resignation of Charles O. Bailey, he was appointed state's attorney for Minnehaha county, retaining this office, by subsequent re-elections, until 1895, when he resumed the private practice of his profession. In November, 1900, he was elected county judge of Minnehaha county, serving for a term of two years and being then re-elected, in 1902, for a second term of equal duration. In the territorial days the Judge was for two years a member of the Republican central committee of the territory, and in 1895-6 he was a member of the state agricultural board. In 1899 he edited and published a history of Minnehaha county, a valuable contribution to the history of the territory and state in the field covered, and the work is considered authoritative, gaining distinctive commendation from those most capable of judging its true merits. Judge Bailey has ever been a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party and has been prominent in its councils in the three states in which he has lived and labored so effectively. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order.

WILLIAM C. NOTMEYER, register of deeds of Hughes county, was born in the city of Bismarck, North Dakota, on Christmas day, 1877, being a son of Henry L. and Nellie (Inman) Notmeyer, both of whom were born in Ohio. At the time of the Mexican war Henry L. Notmeyer offered his services to his country, but failing to secure a commission he engaged in a survey in Kansas and during the winters of those early years he was with Colonel W. F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) on expeditions in hunting buffaloes on the great western plains, the animals being shipped to the markets in Cincinnati and St. Louis. At the opening of the Civil war he enlisted as a member of the Fifty-second Regiment Indiana Volunteer Infantry and served until victory had crowned the Union arms, participating in the battles of Vicksburg, Shiloh and many other of the famous battles incidental to the great civil conflict. In an early day he came to what is now North Dakota and located in the frontier village of Bismarck, where he remained until 1881, when he came with his family to Pierre, the attractive little capital city of South Dakota, where he engaged in the grocery business. Here he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1894. He was well known to the old-timers of the territory, was a man of inflexible integrity and had a host of friends in the two great commonwealths which originally constituted the extensive domain of the territory of Dakota. His wife died in the year 1880 at Bismarck; of their three children, two are living. Prior to settling in Bismarck he had been a scout in Kansas, during the Indian troubles, having been appointed to this position by Colonel Cody, who was chief of scouts at the time.

The subject of this sketch received his educational training in the public schools of Pierre, and thereafter was for several years employed as bookkeeper in the cattle and loan establishment of March Brothers. On the 28th of April, 1898, he enlisted as a private, and was later promoted to sergeant, in Company A, First South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Colonel A. S. Frost, being mustered in at Sioux Falls and thence proceeding with the command to San Francisco, where they embarked at once for Manila, making the voyage by way of Honolulu. Their first engagement with the insurgents occurred on the 4th of February, 1899, in Manila, the conflict continuing on the following day, while on the 23d of the same month they had other spirited engagements on the outskirts of the city, while they were again engaged with the natives on the 28th. On the 4th and 5th of May they moved out and captured the town of San Fernando, where they remained on provost duty until May 24th, when they again were in battle, as were they also on the 25th, this being the last active engagement in which the regiment took part. They then returned to Santa Mesa, three miles distant from Manila, where they recruited before returning, remaining there stationed about four weeks, at the expiration of which they were again called into the field and kept on duty until they returned to San Francisco, by way of Japan, having been mustered out on the 5th of October, 1899. Mr. Notmeyer while thus in service well upheld the military prestige gained by his honored father, and was always found at the post of duty.

After the close of his military career he returned to his home in Pierre, and was instrumental in the organization of Troop B, First Squadron, South Dakota Cavalry, National Guard, located at Pierre, of which troop he was made first lieutenant. In November, 1900, he was elected register of deeds of Hughes county, in which capacity he has since continued to serve, having been chosen as his own successor in 1902. He is a real-estate dealer to some extent and also contracts for the construction of cement sidewalks, curbing, etc., being associated with the cement firm of Stover & Engelsby, and fraternally is identified with the Knights of Pythias, the Knights of the Maccabees and the Brotherhood of American Yeomen. He is a very active member of Pierre's volunteer fire department, and has served several years as first assistant chief. Religiously he is member of the First Methodist church of the capital city.

On the 16th of May, 1900, Mr. Notmeyer was united in marriage to Miss Arlie B. Pond, who was born in Fond du Lac county, Wisconsin, and who is a daughter of Albert A. Pond, now a well-known citizen and business man of Pierre.

MORITZ ADELBERT LANGE, deputy superintendent of public instruction in the state of South Dakota, was born at Smith Mills, Chautauqua county, New York, on the 28th of January, 1855, and is a son of Moritz Jacob Lange, who was born in Grossenheim, kingdom of Saxony, Germany, on the 5th of March, 1824, and who came to America in 1848, with the renowned Franz Sigel, who rendered so brilliant service in defense of the Union during the war of the Rebellion. The maiden name of the subject's mother was Margaret J. Dawley, and she was born in Gowanda, Cattaraugus county, New York, on the 25th of October, 1835, being of stanch English lineage. The original ancestors in the new world settled on Long Island in 1700, and a collateral relative was Ethan Allen, of historic fame. In 1856 the parents of our subject came to the west and took up their residence in Decorah, Winneshiek county, Iowa, being numbered among the pioneers of the Hawkeye state, where the father engaged in farming and where both he and his wife passed the remainder of their lives. Moritz A. Lange was a mere infant at the time of the family removal to Iowa, where he was reared to manhood, having completed the curriculum of the graded schools of his home town and having then engaged in teaching, by which means he earned the funds which enabled him to avail himself of higher educational advantages. He was graduated in Stanford Seminary, at Stanford, Iowa, in 1872, and thereafter completed the normal course in the Decorah Institute, in Decorah, being graduated as a member of the class of 1874. He continued his residence in Iowa until 1878, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and cast in his lot with the pioneers of McCook county, where he filed entry on the west half of section 26, range 102, township 55, perfecting his title in due course of time and improving the property, which he retained in his possession until 1902, when he disposed of the same, receiving forty dollars an acre, though he is still a land holder in the county. He promptly identified himself with the industrial and public affairs of the county, having served as county surveyor for the decade from 1880 to 1890, while in 1892 he was again chosen as incumbent of this office, serving one year. He has taken a prominent part in educational work from the early days to the present, having been county superintendent of schools from 1882 to 1894, while in 1895 he was appointed institute conductor, in which office he did an admirable work. In 1897 he was appointed deputy superintendent of public instruction for the state, and in 1903 he was again appointed to this office, of which he is in tenure at the time of this writing, giving practically his entire time and attention to his executive duties and enjoying marked popularity in the educational circles of the state. In politics he has ever given an unflinching allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is affiliated with Eureka Lodge, No. 71, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Bridgewater, this state; Salem Chapter, No. 34, Royal Arch Masons, at Salem; and Capital City Chapter, No. 39, Order of the Eastern Star, at Pierre, where he has maintained his home since 1903.

In Decorah, Iowa, on the 2d of April, 1879, Mr. Lange was united in marriage to Miss Eva May Punteney, who was born on the 2d of January, 1861, and they have one son, Moritz Arthur, who was born September 14, 1880, and who was married to Miss Susie May Evans, on the 11th of November, 1902.

JOHN E. MALLERY, one of the representative business men of the city of Pierre, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in the village of Waukau, Winnebago county, Wisconsin, on the 10th of December, 1858, and being a son of Ebenezer J. and Jane E. (Silsbee) Mallery, both of whom were born in the state of New York, whence they came to Wisconsin and became numbered among its pioneer settlers. They are still both living, the father being a farmer by vocation and a man of prominence and influence in his community. The subject received his early educational discipline in the public schools of his native town, completing a course in the high school and supplementing this by a thorough course in the Janesville Commercial College, at Janesville, Wisconsin. After leaving school he secured employment as a school teacher in Winnebago county, Wisconsin, and he continued to reside in Wisconsin until 1882, when he came to South Dakota, where he has since made his home, and he has built up an excellent business in Pierre, being known as a loyal and progressive citizen. In politics he accords a staunch allegiance to the Republican party, though he has never been an aspirant for office, and fraternally he is identified with Tent No. 8, Knights of the Maccabees, while both he and his wife are valued members of the Congregational church in their home city.

On the 23d of February, 1881, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Mallery to Miss Nancie Shove, who was born in Waukau, Wisconsin, on the 4th of February, 1858, being a daughter of Francis and Mary (Hallows) Shove, who are now both dead, Mr. Shove having been for many years engaged in the farming business in Waukau. Mr. and Mrs. Mallery have three daughters, all of whom remain beneath the home roof and all of whom are popular in the social circles of the capital city, their names being as follows: Blanche J., Jennie P. and Miriam I.

IRA L. NICHOLS, of Elk Point, Union county, has the distinction of being a native of the old Buckeye state, having been born in Belmont county, Ohio, on the 12th of June, 1853, and being a son of Balaam and Abigail (Hatcher) Nichols, the former a farmer by vocation. After duly availing himself of the advantage of the common schools of his native state Mr. Nichols continued his studies for some time in Washington and Jefferson College, at Washington, Pennsylvania, and later entered Franklin College, at New Athens, Ohio, where he was graduated in 1879, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. For about three years he was successfully engaged in teaching in the public schools of Ohio, and then took up the study of the law at St. Clairsville, Belmont county, under the preceptorship of the well-known firm of A. H. and W. Mitchell. In 1882 he came to the present state of South Dakota and took up his residence in Elk Point, where he was admitted to the bar, becoming one of the early practitioners in the county and having soon gained distinctive precedence as an able and discriminating trial lawyer and counselor. He has remained continuously in practice, and has had to do with much important litigation during the intervening years. He has ever accorded a staunch allegiance to the Republican party, and on its ticket, in 1884, he was elected state's attorney of Union county, while the same preferment came to him again in 1888, 1900 and 1902, so that he is incumbent of this important office at the time of this writing. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, being affiliated with the lodge and chapter of the same in his home town.

On the 2d of July, 1881, Mr. Nichols was united in marriage to Miss Mary Emma Hewetson, of St. Clairsville, Ohio, and they have three children.—Charles B., Albert H. and Nellie C.

HIRAM C. SHOUSE, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of his profession in Plankinton, merits consideration in this work as one of the able physicians and surgeons of the state. He was born in Johnson county, Indiana, August 10, 1844, being a son of Lewis and Sarah (Kelly) Shouse, of whose eleven children only four are living, namely: David, Louisa and Harrison, all of whom are resident of the state of Illinois; and Hiram C., whose name initiates this paragraph. The father of the Doctor was born in Germany, in 1800, and the mother was a native of Ireland. Lewis Shouse emigrated to America, in company with one of his brothers, when eighteen years of age, resided for a time in Kentucky and thence made his way to Indiana, where he engaged in teaching in the common schools, having thus devoted his attention to pedagogic work in one building for the long period of eighteen years, while later he was engaged in farming, while for several years prior to his death he was engaged in merchandising, his death occurring in 1883, while his wife passed away in 1867, both having been members of the Campbellite or Christian church, while in politics he was first a Whig and later a Republican.

Dr. Shouse was reared on the home farm and in his youth received a good common-school education. At the age of seventeen years, in July, 1861, he tendered his services in defense of the Union, enlisting in Company G, Eleventh Illinois Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until late in the following year, when he received his honorable discharge. In 1864 he re-enlisted, becoming a member of Company C, One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Illinois Infantry, and receiving his discharge in October of that year, after which he continued in the government employ for some time as forage master. On the 15th of February, 1862, the Doctor was severely wounded in the engagement at Fort Donelson, being injured in the leg, arm and hand. After the close of the war he returned home, where he remained until January 1, 1867, when he entered the Illinois Soldiers' College, at Fulton, Illinois, where he was graduated in 1871, with the degree of Bachelor of Science. In the same year he was matriculated in the Hahnemann Medical College, in Chicago, having previously devoted three years to reading medicine under the direction of Dr. A. O. Blanding, of Lyons, Iowa, while he was prosecuting his studies in the Soldiers' College. He was graduated in medicine in the spring of 1873, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He soon afterward located in Davenport, Iowa, where he built up a large and remunerative practice. In 1885 he came to Plankinton, South Dakota, with the intention of remaining but a brief interval, but the outlook appeared so favorable that he determined to take up his permanent residence here, and the success that has here attended his professional endeavors has amply proved the wisdom of his choice, for he controls a very large and representative practice and has the esteem of all who know him. He is public-spirited and progressive, is independent in his political views, voting in support of men and principles meeting the approval of his judgment, and in 1900 he was a delegate of the People's party national convention, while he has frequently served as delegate to state and county conventions, though invariably refusing to permit his name to be used in connection with nomination for office. He and his wife are zealous members of the Baptist church. He is a member of the South Dakota State Medical Society, is superintendent of the county board of health and fraternally is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Home Guardians, the American Yeomen and the Fraternal Brotherhood, being examining surgeon for the local lodges of each of these orders and also for the New York Life Insurance Company.

HIRAM C. SHOUSE, M. D.

MRS. H. C. SHOUSE.

On the 14th of October, 1874, Dr. Shouse was married to Miss Jennie Jacobs, of Fulton, Illinois, and of their eleven children eight are living, namely: Alice J., a graduate of the Sioux Falls University, class of 1893, who was for four years superintendent of schools for Aurora county, being the youngest incumbent of such office ever known in the history of the state, is now the wife of B. J. Thompson, of Denver, Colorado; Willis D. is a member of the class of 1905 in the law department of the State University; James B. is instructor in mathematics in the high school at Red Wing, Minnesota, having graduated from the literary department of the State University, class of 1891; Arthur C. is a student in the State University; Aion W. is a graduate of the Plankinton high school, and will enter the university in 1904; and Kara, Raymond and Gerald are attending the public schools, the Doctor making it a special effort and ambition to afford all of his children the best possible educational advantages. Mrs. Dr. Shouse departed this life January 4, 1904, at the age of forty-seven years, and at the time the following mention was made in the local paper:

On last Friday morning the sad news was passed around that Mrs. H. C. Shouse had answered the last summons and but the earthly remains were left of one of Plankinton's most respected residents, a noble Christian mother and wife. The final summons came late Thursday evening, after an illness extending over a period of a year. The cause of her illness baffled the most expert medical knowledge and she suffered greatly until within a short time of her death when all pain left her and, with it, hope for the saving of a useful life.

To the members of the bereaved family the most sincere sympathy is extended, and, in conclusion we can but echo the following sentiments expressed by Rev. Janes in his remarks concerning the dead woman:

"Death has invaded our community and taken from us one of heaven's choicest gifts, a devoted Christian mother and a virtuous woman.

"What can we say in honor of our departed sister and loved one, but to tell of her patient toiling, her unselfish devotion, her daily sacrifice to her home and family which was dearer to her than any other earthly thing. All those among her large circle of acquaintances understand as well as the speaker, how much of her thought and labor was given to the interest of her children, how anxiously she watched over them and how earnestly she sought to promote their moral and intellectual development. When those faithful mothers leave us here we wonder if there is not a larger place awaiting them in the world beyond.

"Our departing sister had the larger part of her family here, but some had preceded her to the better world and were there waiting to give her welcome. She went out from one home where there were tears and sorrow into another where there was gladness."

MARTIN E. CURRAN, one of the most honored citizens of Fort Pierre, was born in Port Washington, Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, on the 22d of February, 1849. His father, Thomas Curran, who was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, whence he accompanied his parents on their removal to America, became one of the pioneers of Wisconsin, where he died when our subject was a boy of about eight years, the mother surviving a number of years. The subject passed his early youth in Columbia county, Wisconsin, where he received his educational training in the common schools. He learned the carpenter's trade, to which he continued to devote his attention in Wisconsin until coming to South Dakota, in 1883. He took up his residence in Fort Pierre and turned his attention to contracting and building, meeting with success in this vocation, in which he has ever since been concerned, being one of the reliable and straightforward business men of the town and one whose name is a synonym of absolute integrity. Upon the organization of Stanley county, in 1890, he was elected its treasurer, serving three years and giving a most satisfactory administration of fiscal affairs, while in the same year he was elected city treasurer, of which position he remained incumbent for six consecutive years, while for an equal period he held the office of treasurer of the school district, being a member of the board of education and one of its most progressive and valued workers for nine years, within which time was erected the fine union school building in Fort Pierre, his influence having been most potent in bringing this improvement to a satisfactory issue, so that the building stands in a sense as a monument to his enterprise and public spirit. Within late years his hearing has become quite seriously impaired and he has thus refused to accept further nomination for public office though he still maintains the deepest interest in all that concerns the progress and material and civic prosperity of his home town and county as well as the state of his adoption. He is a man of broad information, having read widely and with marked discrimination and having an excellent library of the best standard literature. He is well known in the county and has the unqualified respect of all classes. In politics he is a staunch Republican and fraternally is identified with the Masonic order and the Ancient Order of United Workmen, while in 1884 he was one of the organizers of the local lodge of Good Templars in Fort Pierre, taking an active part in its work until the organization lapsed, after a period of about three years.

At Stevens Point, Wisconsin, on the 16th of June, 1873, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Curran to Miss Charlotte E. Coleman, who was born and reared in that state, and they have four living children, Harry, Richard, Clinton and Wallace. Harry, the eldest of the children, enlisted in the Thirty-fourth Regiment of United States Volunteers, with which he went to the Philippines, serving nineteen months and being mustered out in the city of San Francisco. In April, 1901, he was in the state of Washington, and since that time his parents have lost all trace of him, causing to fall upon them a great burden of grief and constant anxiety.

E. R. SCHMIDT, of Tea, Lincoln county, South Dakota, is a native of Germany and was born February 22, 1853. He was brought to America when quite young, and lived with his parents until young manhood, the meanwhile attending at intervals the public schools of Wisconsin, where he lived until 1873. In the latter year he accompanied the family to Lincoln county, South Dakota, where he married Miss Emma Erb, and immediately thereafter moved into a half section of land in Perry township, where he carried on agriculture and stock raising with encouraging success until the year 1895, when he disposed of his farm and took up his residence in the village of Tea. Since the latter year Mr. Schmidt has been proprietor of a general store in the above town, and he now commands an extensive and lucrative patronage, being one of the most enterprising and successful business men in the northwest part of Lincoln county. He carries a full stock of merchandise demanded by the general trade, manages his affairs with excellent judgment and occupies a prominent place in commercial circles.

ALONZO A. COTTON, M. D., who is successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery at Vermillion, Clay county, is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born in Cedar county, on the 28th of October, 1861, and being a son of Luzerne and Mary A. (Dwigans) Cotton, the former of whom is now engaged in the real-estate business at Jennings, Louisiana, while the latter died at Jennings in 1889. The Doctor received his early educational training in the public schools of Iowa City, and then entered the state university, in the same city, where he completed the scientific course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1884, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science. He was then matriculated in the homeopathic medical department of the same great institution, where he completed the prescribed technical course and was graduated in 1886, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In January of the following year he engaged in the active practice of his profession in Sioux City, Iowa, where he remained for the ensuing five years, after which he was in practice at Dixon, Nebraska, for one year, removing thence to Vermillion, South Dakota, in 1893, and having here been specially successful in the up-building of a large and representative practice. In politics the Doctor is a staunch Republican, but so exigent are the demands placed upon his time and attention by his professional duties that he has not found it expedient to take an active part in political affairs, though he is essentially loyal and public-spirited in his attitude. He is a member of the lodge and chapter of the Masonic fraternity in his home city of Vermillion, and both he and his wife are valued members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

At Newton, Iowa, on the 17th of September, 1886, Dr. Cotton was united in marriage to Miss May E. Lyon, who was born and reared in that state, and they are the parents of six children, namely: Earl L., Carl, Schuyler, Daniel L., Alonzo and Cornelia M. Mrs. Cotton is a graduate of the class of April, 1886, of Drake University (medical department), Des Moines, Iowa, and she and Mr. Cotton combine the practice of medicine. Dr. Cotton is a member of the Homeopathic Medical Society of South Dakota, and the Quadri-state Homeopathic Society, the headquarters being at Sioux City; also the American Institute of Homeopathy, it being the national society. Mrs. Cotton is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, Ladies of the Maccabees and the Degree of Honor. Mr. Cotton is also a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, the Woodmen of the World, Modern Brotherhood of America, Yeomen and other kindred societies.

L. K. LORD, president of the First National Bank of Parker, Turner county, is a native of the state of Connecticut, having been born at Stafford Springs, on the 31st of December, 1851, and being a son of John K. and Sarah (Spellman) Lord, the former of whom was born in Maine and the latter in Connecticut, while both families have long been identified with the annals of New England history. The father of the subject was a contractor by vocation, and both he and his wife died in the state of Connecticut.

L. K. Lord was reared to manhood in his native state, in whose public schools he secured his early educational training. He continued his residence in Connecticut until 1883, when he came to the west and located in the state of South Dakota, where he was engaged in the grain business. He was one of the projectors and organizers of the First National Bank of Parker, which was founded in 1887 and of which he has been president since then. It is one of the popular and substantial financial institutions of the state, basing its operations on a capital of twenty-five thousand dollars, while its deposits have now reached the notable aggregate of nearly two hundred thousand dollars. Mr. Lord devotes the major portion of his time and attention to the executive duties devolving upon him in this connection and to the management of his other capitalistic and industrial interests.

On the 29th of October, 1872, Mr. Lord was united in marriage to Miss Nettie M. Converse, who was likewise born in his native town of Stafford Springs, Connecticut, being a daughter of Orrin and Marietta Converse. Mr. Lord is a Mason, having attained the Royal Arch degree, and also belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Knights of Pythias. In 1902-3 he was president of the South Dakota Bankers' Association.

SAMUEL EDGAR FOREST, cashier of the First National Bank of Britton, Marshall county, is a native of the city of Brooklyn, New York, where he was born on the 23d of April, 1865, being a son of Samuel A. and Lydia E. (Mortimer) Forest, the former of whom was born in England and the latter in the state of New York, while they are now living in St. Paul, Minnesota, moving there from Brooklyn in 1886, the father being a merchant by vocation. The subject of this sketch was reared to manhood in his native city, in whose public schools he secured his early educational discipline, while in 1880 he entered the celebrated Polytechnic Institute of that city, where he completed the collegiate course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1884. He initiated his business career in 1884, when he entered the employ of the Standard Oil Company, in New York city. He remained with that company for three years. In 1887 he came west to St. Paul, and in 1889 to Britton, South Dakota, and engaged in the lumber and coal business in the firm of Hamilton & Forest. He served as county treasurer of Marshall county in 1896. He was one of the organizers of the Citizens' Bank, of which he was cashier, but when the Citizens' was succeeded by the First National Bank he continued as cashier of the latter.

In politics Mr. Forest is a member of the Republican party. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, belonging to the chapter and commandery, and the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; also to the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the local organization of the Mutual Benefit Association.

On the 24th of January, 1900, Mr. Forest was united in marriage to Miss Frances C. Hall, who was born in Canandaigua, New York, being a daughter of S. P. and Mary Hall. They have one daughter, Margaret Elizabeth.

JOHN ALBERT CLEAVER, a representative business man and popular citizen of Huron, Beadle county, was born in Havana, Mason county, Illinois, on the 28th of October, 1860, being a son of Hiram R. and Isabelle (Wilburn) Cleaver, the father being a druggist by vocation and being long one of the prominent business men of Havana. The subject received his early educational training in the public schools of his native town and later continued his studies in the Presbyterian College, at Lincoln, Illinois. Upon leaving school he initiated his business career by securing a position as bookkeeper for a firm of retail implement dealers, in Havana, Illinois, and in 1881 he engaged in the same line of enterprise on his own responsibility, in his native town of Havana. In 1884 he entered the employ of the A. J. Hedges Header Company, in the capacity of traveling representative, and he came to the territory of Dakota in the interest of the company, and, as he states the case, he "managed to get mixed up in the Highmore cyclone in 1885 and was scared out of a year's growth." He passed the winter of 1886-7 in South America, as a representative of the same company, which was succeeded by the Acme Harvester Company in 1891, and Mr. Cleaver facetiously remarked to the writer that he "went with the assets," passing the years 1891 and 1892 in Lincoln, Nebraska, as the local representative of the company, while during the ensuing two years he was in the home office of the company, at Pekin, Illinois, while in 1895 he returned to South Dakota and took up his residence in Huron, where he has since maintained his home, being the general agent of the same company for this state.

In 1898 Mr. Cleaver was elected mayor of Huron, his administration proving so acceptable that he has ever since been retained at the head of the municipal government, by successive yearly elections. Fraternally he is identified with Huron Lodge, No. 26, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is past master; Huron Chapter, No. 10, Royal Arch Masons, of which he is past high priest; Lacottah Commandery, No. 6, Knights Templar, in which he is captain of the guard at the present time; South Dakota Consistory, No. 4, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite; and El Riad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, at Sioux Falls. He is one of the prominent and popular members of the time-honored fraternity, and in 1900 and 1901 served as the grand master of the Masonic grand lodge of the state. He also is affiliated with Huron Lodge, No. 17, Ancient Order of United Workmen, of which he is past master workman. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church in Huron. While a resident of Illinois Mr. Cleaver was for five years a member of the National Guard of the state.

On the 27th of December, 1882, Mr. Cleaver was united in marriage to Miss Effie Pierce, of Havana, Illinois, she being a daughter of John and Mary Pierce.

JAMES H. DWYER, one of the leading business men of Clay county, is a native of the state of Illinois, having been born on a farm near Woodstock, on the 10th of April, 1850. His boyhood days were filled with arduous work on the farm, and he secured such educational advantages as were afforded in the district schools, which he attended in an irregular way until he had attained the age of fourteen years. By this time he had grown dissatisfied with home and farm life and determined to set forth to seek his fortunes and prove his independence, though but a mere boy. He made his way to Fond du Lac, Wisconsin, where he secured employment in a sawmill, receiving two dollars a week and board in compensation for his services. He was thus employed for one summer and then went to Chicago, Illinois, where he secured work in the Tremont House, which was then the leading hotel of the city. He was an attache of this hostelry for two years, after which he was employed one year in the Briggs House, from which he went to the Hyde Park hotel, which was then a summer resort, located seven miles distant from the center of the city. It is interesting to note in the connection that the fine hotel of the same name and in nearly the same location is now in the very heart of the finest residence district of the south side division of the great western metropolis. Mr. Dwyer was employed there until 1869, when he came to what is now South Dakota, making his way to Clay county and here taking up a homestead claim of government land, in April, 1871. He forthwith began to improve his land and place it under cultivation, and he continued to there devote his attention to farming and stock growing until 1887, when he removed to the village of Wakonda, where he engaged in the hardware business, beginning operations with a capital of nine hundred dollars. With the growth and development of this section his business has steadily expanded in scope and importance and is now one of the leading enterprises of the sort in this section, his trade being derived from a wide area of territory naturally tributary to the thriving town. An evidence of the success which he has attained is that afforded by the fact that he is now worth about thirty thousand dollars. He was mayor of the town for two years, but has never been ambitious for public office. His political allegiance is given to the Democratic party, and his religious faith is that of the Catholic church, in which he was reared. In 1895 Mr. Dwyer became a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, while at the present time he holds the office of worthy advisor.

On the 22d of December, 1874, Mr. Dwyer was united in marriage to Miss Margaret Colagau and they are the parents of six children, whose names, in order of birth, are as follows: Mary (now Mrs. E. W. Babb), Lizzie, Thomas, Ella, Harry and Leowa.

MORRIS J. CHANEY, who, since 1893, has been engaged in banking at Wakonda, South Dakota, was born in Ogle county, Illinois, October 1, 1858, the son of Osborn and Amanda (Rice) Chaney, the father for many years a successful lumber merchant of the county noted. The subject spent his youthful years under the parental roof and after obtaining his preliminary education in the public schools of his native place, entered the East high school in the city of Rockford, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1878. Following his graduation, Mr. Chaney devoted two years to teaching and at the expiration of that time went to Iowa, locating in 1880 at Newell, Beuna Vista, where for a period of thirteen years he was engaged in farming and stock raising, making a specialty of fine cattle. He met with most encouraging success as an agriculturist and stock man, and during the time mentioned succeeded by close attention and good management in accumulating a handsome capital, with which, in 1893, he established a bank in Wakonda, South Dakota, where he has since lived and prospered.

Mr. Chaney is essentially a self-made man, and his career since beginning life upon his own responsibility has been creditable in every respect. The bank of which he is now proprietor and executive head is one of the popular and successful financial institutions, not only of Clay county, but in the southeastern part of the state, being liberally patronized by the leading business men of Wakonda, and proving a great stimulus to the industrial and commercial interests of a large section of the surrounding country. Since locating at Wakonda he has manifested a lively interest in the growth and prosperity of the place, giving his encouragement and material aid to enterprises making for the common good and using his influence to further all laudable measures tending to the moral, as well as the material welfare of his fellow men. His fraternal relations are represented by the Modern Woodmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and for the past twenty years he has been a regular attendant of the Congregational church, though originally a Baptist in belief. By reason of there being no church of the latter denomination where he has spent the last twenty-three years of his life, he has given a generous support to other religious bodies, being a devout believer in Christianity and always endeavoring to exemplify its beauty and great value in his daily walk and conversation.

On the 18th day of November, 1886, at Portageville, New York, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Chaney with Miss Helen McFarline, of that place, the union being blessed with three children, namely: Florence C., Dorothy L. and Morris A. Mr. and Mrs. Chaney, with their children, constitute a happy household and the family is one of the most highly respected in Wakonda. Politically Mr. Chaney votes the Republican ticket and while deeply interested in the welfare and success of his party and widely informed relative to the leading questions and issues of the day, he is too much immersed in business to become a politician or to seek the honors and emoluments of office.

HARRY ELMER PHELPS, the present able and popular incumbent of the office of state's attorney of Marshall county, was born in Hillsdale, Mills county, Iowa, on the 23d of June, 1876, and is a son of Phineas and Fanny V. (Fogg) Phelps, the former of whom was born in New Hampshire and the latter in Maine, while the ancestry is of mingled English, Scotch and Welsh strains. When the subject was a child his parents removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, and in the public schools of that fair city he received his early educational training, being graduated in the South high school in June, 1895, after which he was matriculated in the law department of the University of Minnesota, in the same city, completing the prescribed technical course and being graduated on the 2d of June, 1898, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, and being duly admitted to the bar of the state. He initiated the active work of his profession in Minneapolis, where he was engaged in practice one year, at the expiration of which, in March, 1900, he came to Britton, South Dakota, where he has since won recognition and distinctive prestige in his profession, while he has proved a very discriminating and capable public prosecutor, having been elected state's attorney of Marshall county in November, 1902. In politics he accords an uncompromising allegiance to the Republican party and is an active worker in its behalf in the various campaigns. Fraternally he is identified with the local lodges of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On the 13th of June, 1901, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Phelps to Miss Vivian E. Furber, who was born in Owatonna, Minnesota, on the 31st of January, 1875, being a daughter of Charles M. Furber, of Britton, South Dakota.

JOHN EDMUND McDougall, a representative citizen of Britton, Marshall county, as the name implies, comes of stanch Scottish lineage on the paternal side, and he is a native of Prince Edward Island, having been born in the village of Campbellton, on the 24th of February, 1860. He is a son of John and Grace (Mercerau) McDougall, the former of whom was born on Prince Edward Island, while the latter was a native of New Brunswick. The paternal grandparents of the subject were of pure Scotch lineage, being representatives of the sterling clan McDougall, of the highlands of the fair land of hills and heather. Both were born in Scotland, whence they emigrated to America about the year 1820, settling in Malpeque, Prince Edward Island, and there passing the remainder of their lives. The mother of the subject represented the Scotch, Irish and French strains, her father having been a Scotchman. She died when our subject was but thirteen years of age, and his father subsequently married Miss Jennie McLean, five sons and four daughters having been born of the first union and one son to the latter union. The father died in the month of May, 1902.

John E. McDougall was reared on the homestead farm and received his educational discipline in the public schools of his native place. He remained at home until he had attained the age of twenty years, having in the meanwhile learned the carpenter's trade. At the age noted he went to Maine and thence to Massachusetts, being absent about nine months, after which he returned home, where he remained a few months, at the expiration of which, on November 23, 1880, he started for the west, locating in Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he engaged in the work of his trade. In November, 1883, he went to Norton, Massachusetts, where was solemnized his marriage to Miss Isabel R. Munro, and six weeks later he returned, with his bride, to Minneapolis. In August, 1884, a son was born to them, Edward James, who was graduated in June, 1904, from Pittsburg Academy, Minnesota, and is now at home. On the 26th of December, 1884, Mrs. McDougall was summoned into eternal rest, her remains being interred in Maple Hill cemetery, Minneapolis. On the 25th of May, 1886, Mr. McDougall left Minneapolis and came to Britton, Marshall county, South Dakota, where he has ever since maintained his home. During his residence in Minneapolis he followed his trade, having been for three years foreman for the firm of McCleary & Quigley, and thereafter having been independently engaged in contracting and building, in which line of enterprise he has successfully continued in Britton, many evidences of his skill and ability being found here. He has ever accorded an unwavering allegiance to the Republican party, in whose ranks he has been an active and valued worker, having been a member of the state central committee for two years, and also having served as a member of the county central committee, while in 1896 he was president of the Republican club of Marshall county. In May, 1904, he was nominated by the Republican party for lieutenant governor. In 1900 he was captain of a Roosevelt rough-rider company, which had a membership of seventy-five and which was much in evidence during the campaign of that year. In November, 1900, Mr. McDougall was elected to represent his county in the lower house of the state legislature, having been the first Republican elected to this office in the county in four years. His record was such that a further manifestation of popular appreciation was given in the election of November, 1902, when he was elected senator from the thirty-second district, comprising the counties of Marshall and Day, being thus a member of the upper house during the eighth general assembly, in 1903, and being made chairman of the appropriation committee, while he was also assigned to other important committees, proving an efficient working member of the deliberative body and still farther fortifying himself in popular esteem. On the 14th of October, 1884, Mr. McDougall united with the Andrew Presbyterian church, in Minneapolis, and in 1887 was admitted by letter to the First Presbyterian church of Britton. He organized a Sunday school in the church in January of that year, and continued as its superintendent for the long period of ten years, at the expiration of which he resigned, and during the ensuing four years refused to accept the position again, though urged to do so. In January, 1901, however, he again resumed the duties of the superintendency, and has since continued to fill the office, his earnest and zealous labors being greatly appreciated, while he is also active in the other departments of church work.

In July, 1883, Mr. McDougall became a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and in January, 1888, he was primarily instrumental in the organizing of Britton Lodge, in Britton, having been its first noble grand and having represented the same in the grand lodge of the state. He is also affiliated with the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he was worshipful master for two years, while he has also served as treasurer and chaplain of the same. He is identified with the Royal Arch Masons, and also with the local organizations of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and Mutual Benefit Association. On the 3d of August, 1901, he was mustered into the South Dakota National Guard and on the same day was elected captain of Company A, Third Regiment, located in Britton, while on the 1st of April, 1902, he was promoted to the office of major of the First Battalion of this regiment, of which office he remains incumbent at the time of this writing.

On the 13th of June, 1893, Mr. McDougall consummated a second marriage, being then united to Miss Nettie A. Marsh, of Britton. She was born in Kalamazoo, Michigan, and is a daughter of George J. and Amanda Melvina Marsh. Her mother is dead, while her father resides near Kalamazoo, Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. McDougall have two children, Tyrrell Glenn, who was born on the 29th of March, 1894, and Portia Lois, who was born on the 24th of November, 1896.

GEORGE BINGHAM, who is presiding with ability on the bench of the county court of Marshall county, is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born in the city of Buffalo, New York, on the 8th of December, 1865, and being a son of Stamford and Mary (Boddy) Bingham, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter in England, while they came to America when young. Stamford Bingham was engaged in law practice in the city of Buffalo at the time of the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, and he promptly tendered his services in defense of the Union, going to the front with a New York regiment of volunteers and proving a loyal and valiant soldier. He was severely wounded while in the army and never recovered from the effects of this injury, his death occurring in the city of Buffalo, in 1870, his wife dying in the same year at Buffalo, while of their three children two are yet living.

Judge Bingham passed his youthful years on a farm in Minnesota and early became inured to hard work, while his educational privileges were confined to the public schools. He remained in his native state until 1877, when he removed to Minnesota, where he remained until 1886, when he came to South Dakota and located in Marshall county. In 1889 he began the reading of law in the office and under the direction of H. R. Turner and J. H. McCoy, showing marked powers of application and assimilation and being so well fortified in technical knowledge as to gain admission to the bar of South Dakota in 1892. He began the practice of his profession in Britton, where he has ever since maintained his home, and he gained distinctive success and prestige as an able trial lawyer and counselor, securing a representative clientage and continuing in active practice until November, 1900, when he was elected county judge of Marshall county, making an excellent record on the bench and being chosen as his own successor in the election of 1902, for a second term of two years. In politics he gives a stanch allegiance to the Republican party and is a prominent figure in its local councils, while he is known as a progressive and public-spirited citizen commanding the high regard of all who know him and are appreciative of sterling character. In 1902 Judge Bingham established in Britton the Marshall County Bank, and of the same he is cashier at the time of this writing, being the principal stockholder, while the institution has been successful from the time of its inception.

In March, 1891, Judge Bingham was united in marriage to Miss Eva Chadwick, who was born in Iowa, being a daughter of Henry J. and Mary (Thom) Chadwick, who are now residents of Marshall county, South Dakota. Judge and Mrs. Bingham have five children, Charles, Stella, George, Webster and Marion.

WILLIAM R. DONALD, editor and publisher of the Marshall County Sentinel, of Britton, Marshall county, comes of stanch Scottish lineage and is a native of the fair Emerald Isle, having been born in Newry, County Down, Ireland, on the 8th of November, 1854, and being a son of Robert and Katherine Donald, both of whom were likewise born in Ireland, where they passed their entire lives, the father having been a coachman to a gentleman.

The subject was reared to maturity in his native town and received his early educational discipline in the excellent national schools, while in 1870, at the age of sixteen years, he entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade in Newry, becoming a skilled artisan in connection with the "art preservative of all arts." He continued to reside in Ireland until 1871, when he came to Canada in August, and resided at St. Mary's, Perth county, Canada, until 1882, when he came to Andover, South Dakota, remaining there until June, 1886. In the latter year he located at Langford, where he continued until 1902, and then came to Britton and purchased the Sentinel, which he has since conducted. In politics he has ever accorded staunch allegiance to the Democratic party; fraternally is identified with the Modern Woodmen of America, the Modern Brotherhood of America, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Royal Neighbors of America. He and his wife are both zealous and valued members of the Presbyterian church.

On the 20th of November, 1895, Mr. Donald was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Anders Byer, who was born at Bound Brook, New Jersey, on the 4th of January, 1864, being a daughter of Charles and Rosa Byer. Mr. and Mrs. Donald have no children.

DAVID L. PRINTUP, of Britton, Marshall county, is a native of the old Empire state of the Union, having been born in Fultonville, Montgomery county, New York, on the 29th of December, 1857, and being a son of Lieutenant Colonel William H. Printup, United States army, who was likewise born in the state of New York, being a scion of the sturdy Holland Dutch stock who early settled in the Mohawk valley. The subject secured his early educational discipline in the district school of his native town, later attended the Fort Edward Collegiate Institute, at Fort Edward, and the high school at Schoharie, New York, and in June, 1877, he entered the United States Naval Academy, at Annapolis, Maryland, where he was graduated in June, 1881, while his post-graduate degree was received in June, 1883. He was honorably discharged from the United States navy in the month and year last mentioned, as midshipman, having served in this capacity on naval vessels from July, 1881, up to that time, in European, Asiatic and North and South American waters. In August, 1883, Mr. Printup came to what is now the state of South Dakota, and in February, 1885, he took up his permanent abode in Britton, where he was engaged in the business of driving deep wells until 1887, when he was appointed deputy register of deeds, in which capacity he served until 1890, inclusive, in which year he was elected register, serving from 1891 to 1894, inclusive, and giving an admirable administration of the affairs of the office. In 1895 he was elected cashier of the state bank of J. Voak & Company, of Britton, and in 1896-7 was the local representative of the Perkins Brothers' Company, of Sioux City, a printing and publishing firm. In January, 1898, he engaged in his present business enterprise with E. A. Cooper, in which he has been very successful, having handled a large amount of city and farming property, grazing lands, etc., while he has made a specialty of the extension of financial loans on approved real-estate security, and is the representative of a number of the leading fire and life insurance companies and gives careful attention to collections. He is an out-and-out Republican, unswerving in his allegiance and never diverted by heretical movements in the party ranks, while he is one of the local leaders in party affairs, being chairman of the Republican central committee of Marshall county at the time of this writing, and having shown much skill in the manoeuvring of his forces. He is identified with the Odd Fellows lodge and Daughters of Rebekah degree, and also with the Knights of the Maccabees, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the United Commercial Travelers.

He attends the Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Printup is a member.

On the 26th of April, 1890, Mr. Printup was united in marriage to Miss Manon H. Gamsby, who was born in Dodge Center, Minnesota, on the 17th of October, 1867, being a daughter of Ralph and Rosalthea Gamsby. Mr. and Mrs. Printup have one child, a winsome little daughter, Dorothy. Mrs. Printup was appointed by Governor Herreid as a member of the ladies' auxiliary board of conventions and charities, to fill a vacancy, and was then appointed for a full term.

EDWARD C. TOY, one of the representative business men of Andover, Day county, was born on a farm near Columbus, the beautiful capital city of the state of Ohio, on the 18th of December, 1857, and is the youngest of the seven living children born to Harrison and Rebecca (Brobeck) Toy, the former being of English and the latter of German descent. Harrison Toy enlisted as a soldier in an Ohio regiment of volunteers soon after the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion and was in active service for three years, receiving his honorable discharge and returning to his home, where he died a few days later, as the result of injuries and hardships endured while in the army. The subject was a lad of about seven years at the time of his father's death, and passed his boyhood days principally on the home farm, while his educational training was secured in the public schools of Mount Vernon, Ohio, where he completed a partial course in the high school. He early became inured to the sturdy work of the farm, and after leaving school was successfully engaged in teaching for several terms, also clerking in a store, and being thus engaged until he had attained the age of twenty-one years. In 1880 he went to Kansas City, Missouri, where he was associated with his brothers Frank, John and Seymour in the general store business until the latter part of the year 1884. In the spring of 1885 he came to Andover, Dakota territory, and here has ever since maintained his home. He became identified with farming interests and also established himself in the general merchandise business, to which latter he is now giving his entire time and attention, though he is still the owner of an excellent farm in the county. In politics he has ever accorded an unqualified allegiance to the Republican party, and was continuously incumbent of some one or other of the village and county offices until his election to the state senate, in 1899, since retiring from which dignified and responsible position he has not permitted his name to be used in connection with nomination for any office. He and his wife are prominent members of the Methodist Episcopal church in their home town and enjoy the utmost popularity in the social affairs of the community.

On the 13th of June, 1886, Mr. Toy was united in marriage to Mrs. Olive J. Curtice, of Andover, who was born in Stewartville, Minnesota, being a daughter of William Smith, a representative citizen of that place. Mr. and Mrs. Toy have two children, Victor and Horace, aged respectively fifteen and nine years at the time of this writing, in May, 1904.

PHILIP A. GROSS, of Webster, Day county, is a native of Sweden, where he was born on the 23d of May, 1865, being a son of Benjamin and Johanna Gross, of whose four children he was the second in order of birth. The subject was reared in his fatherland and there received his educational training in the well-equipped national schools. At the age of sixteen years he emigrated to America and located in Hutchinson, Minnesota, where he was employed until the spring of 1884, when he went to Illinois, where he passed the summer. He then returned to Minnesota and there remained until the autumn of 1885, when he came to Day county, South Dakota. In the following year he purchased relinquishment claims and turned his attention to farming, developing and improving his property and continuing to be successfully identified with agricultural pursuits until the autumn of 1892, when he rented his ranch and took up his residence in the town of Webster. Here he found employment in connection with the management of the lumbering business conducted by H. O. Frank, with whom he remained in this capacity for two years, after which he was for six years employed by Mr. Frank in the buying and shipping of grain. He then entered into the employ of the Miller Elevator Company, and they have since conducted a most prosperous business, the concern having a well-equipped elevator and controlling a large and important business. Mr. Gross is a man of indefatigable industry and it may be noted in this connection that during his eleven years' residence in Webster he has never lost a day's pay, having always been found at his assigned post. He is the owner of a valuable farm of three hundred and twenty acres, one mile distant from Webster, and is also the owner of village property, having four dwellings in Webster and renting three of the same, as does he also his farm.

In his political proclivities Mr. Gross is a staunch adherent of the Republican party, and takes a deep interest in public affairs of a local nature. He is a member of the city council of Webster, and in 1904 was made the nominee of his party for the office of sheriff of the county. Fraternally he is identified with the lodge and encampment of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and also with the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 7th of June, 1890, Mr. Gross was united in marriage to Miss Emma Olsen, who was born in Sweden, and they have five children, Vina, Cora, Mabel, Herman and Dewey.

JOHN J. McCAUGHEY, one of the leading business men of Aberdeen, being president and general manager of the Aberdeen Hardware Company, is a native of the state of New Jersey, having been born in the historic old town of New Brunswick, Middlesex county, on the 11th of June, 1857, and being a son of Robert and Agnes (Cummings) McCaughey, the former of whom was born in County Antrim, Ireland, about twelve miles distant from the city of Belfast, on the 12th of March, 1833, while his wife was born in the same locality, on the 12th of January, of that year. The paternal grandfather of the subject was a weaver and a designer of shawl patterns, and removed from Paisley, Scotland, in which city he became one of the leading designers of the famous Paisley shawls, to Ireland in the fall of 1832, just prior to Robert McCaughey's birth. The latter and a younger brother were born in Ireland and two older brothers and two sisters in Scotland. From Ireland he immigrated with his family to America and located in the city of Philadelphia, where he was associated with two of his sons, John and William, in the manufacturing of shawls. About 1858 or '9 the grandparents moved to Wisconsin, near Madison, there continuing to reside until the close of their long and useful lives. Robert McCaughey was a child at the time of the family immigration to the United States, and in his youth he learned the tanner's trade, continuing to follow the same in New Jersey until 1860, when he came west and joined the family near Madison, Wisconsin. He was there engaged in farming until the autumn of 1875, when he removed to Kasson, Dodge county, Minnesota, where he devoted his attention to farming for the ensuing five years, at the expiration of which he came to the present state of South Dakota, being among the first to file claim to government land in township 120, range 62, Spink county, making entry on the 28th of May, 1880, while he did the first plowing in said township. June 11, 1880, he and his son John J. first filed on land in range 63, but this filing was rejected, as the land had not as yet been thrown open, and thus each of them secured claims in range 62. In the spring of 1881 the remainder of the family came to the county from the old home in Minnesota, and the land secured here in the early pioneer epoch is still retained by the family, the same being located in LaPrairie township and being well improved and under effective cultivation.

John J. McCaughey received his educational training in the public schools of Wisconsin, and accompanied his parents on their removal to Minnesota and eventually to South Dakota, as noted. He remained on the farm until the spring of 1884, when he accepted a position as traveling salesman for farming machinery, being thus engaged for one year, at the expiration of which he established himself in the implement and farming machinery business at Northville, Spink county, where he continued operations two years. He then disposed of his interests in that line, and thereafter was engaged in the buying and shipping of grain until the autumn of 1896, when he became traveling representative of the Acme Harvester Company, of Pekin, Illinois, covering a very considerable territory in the northwest and being thus engaged until the spring of 1899, when he and W. G. Wells purchased the hardware business of E. O. Mead, of Aberdeen, which was thereafter continued under the firm name of Wells & McCaughey until the 1st of January, 1902, when the subject effected the purchase of his partner's interests and forthwith organized the Aberdeen Hardware Company, which was duly incorporated under the laws of the state. He became president and general manager of the company and has since remained incumbent of this important dual office, while he is directing the business of the concern with consummate discrimination and ability. The company utilize a store fifty by one hundred and forty-two feet in dimensions, with basement, and also have a large warehouse located on the line of the Chicago, Minneapolis & St. Paul Railroad. They carry a full and comprehensive stock of heavy and shelf hardware, stoves, ranges, paints, oils, glass, etc., while in addition to controlling a large and representative retail business their jobbing trade is one which is far ramifying and constantly expanding. In politics Mr. McCaughey is stanchly aligned with the Republican party, but has had no ambition for official preferment. He has attained to the thirty-second degree of Scottish-rite Masonry and is also affiliated with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 11th of June, 1884, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McCaughey to Miss Nettie L. Austin, who was born in Minnesota, being a daughter of Philip B. Austin, who was one of the honored pioneers of LaPrairie township, Spink county, where he located in 1881, there continuing to reside until 1900, when he removed to the city of Aberdeen, where his death occurred August 26, 1903. Mr. and Mrs. McCaughey have one son, Lester, who is employed in the establishment of which his father is the head.

MICHAEL F. BOWLER, a representative business man of Groton, Brown county, was born in Sparta, Wisconsin, on the 15th of October, 1871, and is a son of William and Bridget (Maloney) Bowler, both of whom were born in Ireland. As a young man William Bowler emigrated from the Emerald Isle to America, remaining for a number of years in the eastern states and then removing to Wisconsin and settling near Sparta, where he engaged in farming, having been one of the pioneers of that section and having attained definite success. His devoted wife passed away in 1896, and he is now living practically retired in the city of Sparta. Of the nine children in the family eight are living at the present time, the subject of this review having been the sixth.

Michael F. Bowler was reared on the home farm and duly availed himself of the advantages of the public schools, after which he completed a course of study in the Northern Indiana Normal School and Business College, at Valparaiso. Shortly after leaving school, in 1882, he came to South Dakota and joined his two brothers, Patrick and John A., at Groton, the elder of the two having been here established in the implement business at the time. This brother, John A., was one of the pioneers of the state, and was one of the first to engage in business in Groton, where he continued to maintain his home until 1894, when he removed to Sioux Falls, where he has since resided, being president of the Western Surety Company, of that city. The subject assumed charge of the business in Groton after the removal of his brother and has since continued the same most successfully, handling all kinds of farming machinery and implements and having a trade extending over a wide radius of country. The enterprise is still conducted under the name of his brother, who was the pioneer implement dealer of the town, and who is still associated in the business. The subject also carries on operations most successfully in the handling of real estate in Brown county, and also is agent for a number of the leading insurance companies. He is the owner of a stock farm of two hundred and sixty-five acres, twenty-two acres of the property being within the corporate limits of Groton, and he makes a specialty of raising the Chester White swine and registered Hereford cattle. Mr. Bowler is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party and is one of the leaders in its local ranks. In 1894 he was appointed postmaster of Groton by President Cleveland and was reappointed under President McKinley in 1897, the appointment having originally been made by Cleveland, but the commission not having been sent forward until after President McKinley was installed in the presidential chair. His term expired in 1898.

On the 30th of August, 1898, Mr. Bowler was united in marriage to Miss Mabel Robinson, who was born in Minnesota, being a daughter of Franklin C. Robinson, now a representative citizen of Groton. Mr. and Mrs. Bowler have three children, namely: Maurice Clifford, Marvin Edwin and Margaret Jane.

GUSTAVUS C. THORP, deceased, who was one of the leading citizens of Britton, was born in Monmouth county, New Jersey, on the 24th of December, 1847, being a son of Alexander and Martha Thorp, who were likewise born and reared in that state, where the respective families were founded in an early day, the lineage on the paternal side being of stanch English origin. Mr. Thorp secured his early educational training in the public schools and supplemented this by a course of study in the academy at Hightstown, New Jersey. When about twenty-three years of age he secured a position as United States revenue officer in Virginia, and later he engaged in the manufacture and sale of illuminating oils in New York city, having been secretary of the New York Refining Company from 1880 to 1885. In November, 1886, he came to what is now the state of South Dakota, and located in Britton, Marshall county, where he continued to make his home during the remainder of his life, save for an interval passed in North Dakota, as will be noted. Upon locating in Britton he established himself in the real-estate business, having confidence that this section of the Union would experience a rapid development as its attractions and magnificent natural resources became more fully known. He succeeded in building up a most prosperous enterprise in this line of business, showing marked discrimination and initiative power. He continued to be identified with this business until the time of his death, which occurred on the 11th of May, 1901. From 1891 to 1894 Mr. Thorp was an incumbent of the responsible office of inspector of immigration for North Dakota, having headquarters at Pembina, that state, and his work in that department was highly commended by the commissioner of immigration. Mr. Thorp at all times manifested a lively interest in the public affairs of his town, county and state, and his aid and influence were extended in support of all measures tending to conserve progress and material prosperity. He was a stalwart and zealous adherent of the Republican party and was an influential factor in its councils in South Dakota, representing his county repeatedly in both territorial and state conventions and having done much to promote the party cause. He will be remembered as one of the loyal and progressive citizens who were influential in molding public opinion and directing civic affairs in the state during its infancy. His death was deeply deplored by public men throughout the commonwealth, while his loss was felt as a personal bereavement by the wide circle of loyal friends whom he had gathered about him. Mrs. Thorp became associated with her husband in the real-estate business and after his death continued the enterprise with marked success, largely extending its ramifications during the years 1901-2, when there was marked activity in transaction in realty. She still controls a satisfactory and profitable enterprise and is recognized as a woman of exceptional executive ability and mature judgment. She retains her home in Britton, where her circle of friends is coincident with that of her acquaintances.

On the 24th of September, 1876, Mr. Thorp was united in marriage to Miss Chestina S. Greene, who was born in Oxford, Maine, on the 13th of May, 1849, being a daughter of Jonas and Louisa Greene. Her father was a man of prominence in the old Pine Tree commonwealth, and served for several terms as a member of the state senate. Mr. and Mrs. Thorp became the parents of one son, Walton W., who was graduated in the law department of the University of Minnesota, as a member of the class of 1904. He is at present adjutant, with rank of lieutenant, of the First Battalion, Third Regiment, South Dakota National Guards.

WILLIAM T. CLARK, one of the representative business men and popular citizens of the thriving town of Bath, Brown county, was born in Randolph, Columbia county, Wisconsin, on the 6th of March, 1864, being a son of Samuel and Julia (Howse) Clark, and there he was reared to the sturdy discipline of the farm, while he received his educational training in the public schools, having been graduated in the high school at Cambria, Wisconsin, as a member of the class of 1882. At the age of eighteen years he began teaching in the district schools during the winter terms, while he continued to assist in the work of the home farm during the summer seasons, following this plan until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, at which time, in the autumn of 1887, he came to Bath, South Dakota, as a teacher in its public schools, while later on he devoted two winters to pedagogic work at other points in the county. In 1888 he opened a hardware store in Bath, and later became associated with William Fisk and added a grocery department, while in 1893 he became sole owner of the business, which is extended to include all lines of general merchandise demanded in connection with his trade. In 1898 Matthew Kerr became a partner in the enterprise, and so continued until his death, three years later, since which time the subject has again remained in sole control, having purchased the interest of his deceased partner. Mr. Clark carries a stock reaching an average valuation of about eight thousand dollars, while his annual business has attained an annual average of about fifteen thousand dollars. Mr. Clark is also manager of the Farmers' elevator at Bath, the same having been purchased in 1901 by a stock company composed of farmers in the vicinity, each owning a small block of stock. This company ships from its elevator about sixty-five thousand bushels of wheat each year and its interests are ably handled by the subject, who is himself a stockholder, while he is also the owner of a well-improved farm of one hundred and sixty acres, one and one-half miles southeast of the town. Mr. Clark takes a deep interest in political affairs and gives his allegiance to the Republican party, being frequently a delegate to local and state conventions. Fraternally he is a prominent member of Bath Lodge, No. 117, Ancient Order of United Workmen, which he has represented in the grand lodge of the state.

On the 27th of November, 1886, in his native town of Randolph, Wisconsin, Mr. Clark was united in marriage to Miss Jennie Phelps, who was likewise born and reared in that state, and they have two children, Ruby and Carl.

THOMAS M. STUART, register of deeds of Marshall county, and a well-known stock grower, was born at Colerain, Londonderry county, Ireland, on November 18, 1855, the son of John and Jane M. Stuart, both natives of Londonderry county. The father was for years a linen merchant at Colerain, and there died in 1894. His widow still resides on the old homestead.

Thomas M. Stuart received a collegiate education at Queen's College, Belfast. Leaving college he served an apprenticeship with a wholesale dry-goods house at Belfast. In 1874 he came to the United States, and for six months clerked in a large mercantile house at Indianapolis, Indiana.

In 1880 he engaged in the importation of woolen goods, which he distributed from New York city, Cleveland, Indianapolis, Minneapolis and other centers. He was engaged in this line of business until 1890, when, his health failing, he came to South Dakota and in 1892 engaged in farming and stock raising in Marshall county. In 1902 he was elected by the Republican party to the office of register of deeds. Mr. Stuart continues his farming and stock raising, making a specialty of shorthorn cattle and Arabian horses. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, Degree of Honor and Brotherhood of American Yeomen organizations.

Mr. Stuart married Genevieve Kingsbury, who was born in Pennsylvania, the daughter of Benjamin Kingsbury, an oil man of that state. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart are members of the Presbyterian church.

JOHN J. REES is a native of Wales, having been born on the 21st of January, 1839, and being a scion of stanch old Welsh stock. His paternal grandfather, George Rees, was a farmer of Pembrokeshire, as was also the maternal grandfather, John Johns. The subject was the eldest of the four children born to William and Elizabeth (Johns) Rees, the latter of whom died when he was but nine years of age, while his father later contracted a second marriage. In 1852, when the subject of this sketch was a lad of twelve years, his father came with his family to America and settled near Utica, Oneida county, New York, where he engaged in farming, a vocation which he had followed in his native land. He remained in the old Empire state until 1857, when he removed with his family to Portage county, Ohio, where he passed the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1860, after which the members of the family became scattered, the home being broken up.

John J. Rees secured his preliminary educational training in the schools of his native land, and after coming to the United States continued his studies in the common schools as opportunity afforded, while he early began to render his father effective assistance in the work of the farm. He continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until the outbreak of the war of the Rebellion, when he showed his loyalty to the country of his adoption by tendering his services in defense of the Union. On the 21st of April, 1861, he enlisted as a member of Company F, Seventh Ohio Volunteer Infantry, this being one of the first regiments recruited and sent into the field from Ohio, in the three-months service. After the expiration of his original term Mr. Rees re-enlisted, for three years, and thereafter continued at the front until physical disability compelled his retirement from the service. Upon being mustered in his regiment was sent to Benwood, West Virginia, and the year 1861 was passed in that state. He participated in the battle of Cross Lanes and in December of that year the regiment moved to Romney, West Virginia, where it lay in camp until the following March. In the spring of 1862 the subject took part in the battles of Winchester and Port Republic, and later was in the engagement at Cedar Mountain and in the second battle of Bull Run. Soon afterward he suffered a severe attack of malarial fever, and he never fully recovered from the effects of the disease, his disability finally becoming such that he received his honorable discharge on the 4th of March, 1863. He thereupon returned to his home in Ohio, where Governor David Tod gave him a captain's commission in the Home Guard, in which he served until the close of the war. He purchased a farm of fifty acres in Ohio and gave his attention to its cultivation, in so far as his health would permit. In 1867 he leased a tract of coal land and continued to engage in coal mining and farming for the ensuing thirteen years, meeting with excellent success.

In the spring of 1883 Mr. Rees disposed of his property in Ohio and came as a pioneer to what is now the state of South Dakota. Locating in Edmunds county, he entered claim to the southwest quarter of section 15, Powell township. He secured pre-emption and tree claims at this time and later a homestead, the three tracts constituting one body, and by hauling lumber and supplies from Aberdeen, thirty-five miles distant, was able to erect a good house and establish a comfortable home, his provisions in this line being far better than those of the average pioneers of the section and period. At that time no other buildings were to be seen from his home, and to the east of his place there were but a few shanties to indicate the claims of the new settlers. Mr. Rees is now the owner of a finely improved landed estate of four hundred and eighty acres, and also leases additional land, having control of and cultivating all of section 15, Powell township.

From the early days Mr. Rees has been a prominent figure in local affairs of a public nature, and he was one of the first to be elected justice of the peace in the county, while in 1898 he was given a distinctive token of popular esteem in being elected to represent his district in the state legislature, while his fidelity and able service in the capacity gained to him unqualified commendation on the part of his constituency. He is a staunch supporter of the Republican party, having voted for Abraham Lincoln and having never since wavered in his fealty to the "grand old party." He has served many times as a member of the Republican central committee of Edmunds county and has rendered effective aid in the various campaigns in the county.

In 1863 was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Rees to Miss Mary A. Thomas, a daughter of John W. Thomas, of Talmage, Ohio, in which state she was born and reared. Of their children we enter the following brief record: William is engaged in the grain business at Ipswich, the county seat of Edmunds county; Frank is engaged in the general merchandise business in that place; Arthur; George, and Hattie. Ida and Edith remain at the parental home.

JOEL W. PARKER.—Most consistently may we enter memoir in this work to one who stood as one of the honored citizens and pioneer business men of Sioux Falls, and who through the long years of an active and useful life ever retained the high regard of his fellow men, by reason of his sterling attributes of character. Joel Webster Parker was born on a farm in Oneida county, New York, on the 28th of March, 1817, being a son of Joel and Mary (Benham) Parker, the former of whom was born in Berkshire county, Massachusetts, and the latter in Hartford, Connecticut, while both families, of English extraction, were early established in America, having been founded in New England in the colonial epoch of our national history. The paternal grandmother of the subject was a cousin of the renowned lexicographer, Noah Webster. Mr. Parker was educated in the common schools of the old Empire state, where he was reared to maturity on the homestead farm and where he continued to maintain his residence until about 1836, when he removed to Ohio, where he remained until 1841, when he numbered himself among the pioneers of Illinois, where he was engaged in the merchandise business, selling goods from a wagon, as was the general custom of the locality and period, the major portion of the mercantile business of the section being accomplished by this method. In 1852 he opened a general store in Warren, Jo Daviess county, that state, where he built up a prosperous enterprise, there continuing operations until 1868, when he removed to Hillsboro, Vernon county, Wisconsin, where he was engaged in the same line of enterprise until 1875. He then removed to Millston, Jackson county, that state, where he established himself in the mercantile and lumber business, continuing operations there until 1879, when his health became so impaired as to prompt his removal to what is now the state of South Dakota, in the hope of recuperating his energies under the invigorating climatic conditions. He accordingly disposed of his business in Wisconsin and took up his abode in Sioux Falls, which was then a small and straggling frontier town. Here he engaged in the retail lumber business in company with his son, James W., concerning whom specific mention is made on another page of this compilation. The enterprise was originally conducted under the firm name of J. W. Parker & Son, and upon the admission of James W. Leverett to the firm the title was changed to the Sioux Falls Lumber Company, under which name the business has since been continued, his son being now at the head of the concern.

JOEL WEBSTER PARKER.

In 1886 Mr. Parker disposed of his interest in this enterprise and thereafter devoted his attention to the management of his various capitalistic and property interests. He was always found in the forefront as a progressive citizen, lending his influence and tangible aid in the promotion of all measures tending to conserve the material upbuilding and the civic advancement and prosperity of his home city and state, while his circle of friends was ever coincident with that of his acquaintances. One who has all of reason to appreciate him and his sterling character has spoken of him as follows: "He was a most kindly, lovable, Christian gentleman, and all of his friends and acquaintances are the better for having known him."

Mr. Parker did much for the material advancement of Sioux Falls, having erected a number of good buildings and having been a generous subscriber to public enterprises. In politics he gave his allegiance and stanch support to the Prohibition party, and thus showed in a significant way, as did he in all the relations of life, that he had the courage to stand holdly forward as an advocate of and worker for those principles which he believed to be right. He was humanity's friend, and as such did all in his power to uplift his fellow men and enrich their lives, this spirit, not less than definite principle, accounting for the exalted attitude which he maintained in political matters. He was an uncompromising foe to the liquor traffic, as was he to all else that tends to lower the standard of human ideals, and his labors in the moral field, in which he taught not less by personal example than by precept and kindly admonition, were such as to justify the revering of his memory for all time to come. While Mr. Parker thus took an active concern in public affairs, he never sought or desired the honors or emoluments of office, and withheld himself from the contentions and turbulence of active political affairs. He was one of the zealous and influential members of the Freewill Baptist church of Sioux Falls, and was a deacon in the same at the time of his death, having rested from his labors and passed forward to the life eternal on the 14th of April, 1893, at the venerable age of seventy-six years. He was a distinct man, one of forceful individuality and one whose life counted for good in an ever-widening angle of beneficent influence.

On the 26th of February, 1845, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Parker to Miss Mary W. Colburn, who died on December 6th of the following year, without issue. On the 23d of July, 1848, he was united in marriage to Miss Rebecca Brown Colburn, who survives him. She was born in Sacket Harbor, New York, being a daughter of Charles and Rebecca Colburn and a lineal descendant of Rev. Samuel Whiting, of Lynn, Massachusetts, who came from England to America in 1636. Mrs. Parker still resides in Sioux Falls, surrounded by a wide circle of devoted friends and sustained and comforted by the gracious and hallowed memories of the past and the hope of the future reunion with the loved and devoted husband by whose side she walked down the pathway of life for so many years. She became a member of the Presbyterian church prior to her marriage, but afterward attended the Freewill Baptist church, of which her husband was a member, formally identifying herself with the same and becoming an active factor in the church work. Mr. and Mrs. Parker became the parents of seven children, namely: George and Mary E., who are deceased; Carrie A.; James W., who is individually mentioned elsewhere in this work; Jessie R., wife of Rev. J. C. Mitchell, pastor of the Unitarian church of Lebanon, New Hampshire; Fannie C., and Sarah, who is deceased.

CHARLES ALBERT LUM, well-known citizen of Aberdeen, South Dakota, and treasurer of the Aberdeen Mill Company, was born at Utica, New York, October 23, 1849, the son of Charles L. and Cornelia (Battel) Lum, both of tives of New York state, and both now deceased.

Charles A. Lum was reared at Ogdensburg, St. Lawrence county, New York, to which point his parents removed from Utica. In 1869 he went to St. Joseph, Missouri, where for fifteen years he held the position of cashier in a large wholesale and jobbing house. In July, 1885, he came to Aberdeen and became interested in the milling business, and has since continued. He was for a time secretary and treasurer of the Dakota telephone lines.

Mr. Lum married Anna Elliott, the daughter of Charles Elliott, of Louisville, Kentucky, and to this union two sons and one daughter have been born, namely: Elliott, Berenice and Robert. Mr. Lum is a member of the Masonic order, and he and family belong to the Episcopal church.

JAMES H. SHEPARD, who occupies the chair of chemistry in the State Agricultural College at Brookings, is a native of the state of Michigan, having been born in Lyons, Ionia county, on the 14th of April, 1850, a son of Daniel E. and Lydia M. (Pendell) Shepard. His grandparents in the paternal line were Seth and Ruth (Perry) Shepard, natives of the state of Vermont, and John Shepard, the eminent jurist of New York, was of the same family line. The father of the subject was one of the sterling and honored pioneers of Michigan, and at the time of his death, in 1855, he was engaged in farming at Pewamo, that state, being survived by his widow and their two sons, James H., the immediate subject of this sketch, and William E. The latter was imbued with the spirit of adventure and in 1870 he went on a prospecting tour for gold in British Columbia, and nothing has since been heard from him or the members of his party. There was a great uprising of the Indians in that section at the time and it is supposed that the valiant little party suffered death at the hands of the savages.

Professor Shepard was but five years of age at the time of his father's death and he was then placed in the home of his paternal uncle, W. Proctor Shepard, of Maple Rapids, Michigan, with whom he remained two years. At the expiration of this period he became an inmate of the home of his maternal uncle, Henry Pendell, while two years later he found a permanent home with Albert W. Reynolds, an influential farmer and capitalist, residing near Concord, Jackson county, Michigan. He remained with Mr. Reynolds until he was able to depend upon his own resources, having attended the public schools until he had attained the age of eighteen years. He then entered Albion College, at Albion, Michigan, paying his expenses through his own efforts and there continuing his studies for three years. After completing his sophomore year, classical course, he became principal of the schools at Athens, Calhoun county, that state, retaining this incumbency one year, after which he was matriculated in the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he completed the scientific course and was graduated as a member of the class of 1875, receiving at the time the degree of Bachelor of Science. Soon afterward he was chosen superintendent of the public schools at Holly, Michigan, where he remained two years, after which he held a similar position in the city of Marquette, that state, for an equal length of time. The next two years he was superintendent of the schools at Saline, that state, and then he passed a year in post-graduate work in his alma mater, the University of Michigan. He next became the instructor in natural sciences in the seminary at Ypsilanti, Michigan, this being practically the first high school ever established in the United States. He remained there for seven years, doing most efficient work and then, in 1888, came to Dakota. While a resident of Ypsilanti Professor Shepard published a text-book on chemistry, and the same is now used by the best schools in the Union, having passed through a number of revisions at his hands. It is used in three or four hundred colleges and normal schools and in more than one thousand high schools, while the work was republished in England, by the Isbisters, and is now being used in Europe. It has practically superseded every text-book on the subject which was in the market at the time of its introduction. At the time when Professor Shepard prepared the text for this able work he was a young man and comparatively unknown in the field of science, and his manuscript was first put through the test of being submitted to expert criticism in three of the great educational institutions of America, Yale, Harvard and Johns Hopkins University, and the favorable reception which has been accorded indicates the technical superiority of the work. After coming to Brookings, South Dakota, he issued an abridged course in chemistry, and this book has been extensively used in smaller and more elementary schools. In autumn of 1888 Professor Shepard took up the supervision of the chemical department of the State Agricultural College of South Dakota, the institution having at that time been maintained under the supervision of the still undivided territory of Dakota. In that year he equipped the laboratory and did the first work in analytical chemistry ever done in the state. For a time he was at the head of the departments of physics and pharmacy, continuing in charge of the same until the growth of the department of chemistry demanded his entire attention. In the meanwhile he had given special time and attention to training two young men for the special work of the other two departments mentioned, and they still remain in charge of the same, being numbered among the valued instructors of the college. Professor Shepard was vice-president of the institution for ten years and for five years was director of the government experiment station here maintained. He was for two years director of farmers' institutes in the state, and in 1901 received the appointment of state engineer of irrigation, of which office he is still incumbent. Within the last fifteen years he has issued many publications on the water, soils, crops, etc., of the state, in which line his services have been of inestimable value, while at the same time he has consecutively given his personal supervision to the work of the chemical department of the college and that of chemistry in the local experiment station. At the time of this writing he is giving special attention to investigation and experimentation in connection with the nitrogen control of the cereals, while under his direction are being carried on the milling and analyzing of the macaroni wheats, which the United States department of agricultural is introducing in the state. He is also employed as a chemical expert for the state dairy and food commission and acts in the same capacity for the state in those cases requiring his services.

He is the owner of a quarter section of valuable land, one mile east of the college, and there he is giving special attention to the breeding of Duroc Jersey swine, Shropshire sheep and Jersey cattle, all stock being thoroughbred and registered, having one of the finest herds of Duroc Jersey swine in the northwest, while he is also growing the macaroni seed wheat for the government experiments.

In politics Professor Shepard is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Republican party, and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, in which he has attained the Knights Templar degree, being a charter member of the commandery in Brookings. He holds membership in the American Association of Natural Sciences and also in the Society of Official Agricultural Chemists of the United States. He and his family are members of the Presbyterian church of Brookings, in which he is an elder and teacher of the bible class in the Sunday school, this being one of the largest classes in the state. His wife also is active in the church work, having been formerly secretary and treasurer of the Central South Dakota presbytery.

On the 28th of June, 1888, Professor Shepard was united in marriage to Miss Clara R. Durand, who was born in the city of Ypsilanti, Michigan, on the 30th of May, 1867, being a daughter of Seneca and Helen R. (Phelps) Durand, the lineage in the agnatic line tracing back to staunch French extraction. Seneca Durand was a son of Samuel W. and Catherine (Oren) Durand, the former of whom was born in Burlington, Vermont, in 1806, while he later became a resident of the state of Pennsylvania, where he held a position as superintendent of masonry in the employ of the state. He later became a pioneer of Geauga county, Ohio, where he was for a time engaged in mercantile pursuits, later becoming a drover. He was a prominent figure in the political affairs of Ohio, having been the first Democratic member of the state legislature from the Western Reserve. Seneca Durand was born in Pennsylvania, in 1832, and was a child at the time of his parents' removal to Ohio, where he received his educational training. In 1858 he married Helen R. Phelps, of Westfield, New York, daughter of L. F. and Cornelia M. (Dustin) Phelps. His wife died on the 15th of October, 1902, at the home of the subject of this sketch. They were the parents of three children, namely: DeLacy, who is a railroad man, residing in Lansing, Michigan; Samuel, who died at the age of two years; and Clara R., who is the wife of Professor Shepard, of this sketch. To Professor Shepard and wife have been born the following children: Helen Bernice, born in Ypsilanti, Michigan, July 25, 1889; Albert Durand, born June 27, 1891, and James Henry, Jr., born April 12, 1896.

DYER H. CAMPBELL, the able and popular sheriff of Brookings county, is a native of the old Keystone state of the Union, having been born in the town of Edinboro, Erie county, Pennsylvania, on the 28th of November, 1858, a son of John W. and Susan (Walker) Campbell, the former of whom was likewise born in that county, in 1817, being a son of John and Mary (Laughrey) Campbell, who were natives of Scotland, the grandfather having emigrated thence to America in the early part of the seventeenth century. He located in Pennsylvania, where he devoted the remainder of his life to agricultural pursuits. The father of the subject was likewise identified with the great basic art of agriculture and was also engaged in the mercantile business in Edinboro, while he served two terms as a member of the Pennsylvania legislature. In 1865 he removed with his family to Olmstead county, Minnesota, where he was engaged in farming for the ensuing three years. In 1869 he removed to the town of Rochester, that county, where he was for six years an attache of the office of register of deeds. He served as justice of the peace and held other offices of local trust and responsibility, his death occurring in Rochester in 1887, while his widow was summoned into eternal rest in 1892, at Moorhead, Minnesota. Of their three children we enter the following brief record: John V. is a resident of Erie, Pennsylvania; Martha J. became the wife of Arthur G. Lewis, of Moorhead, Minnesota, and is now deceased, and Dyer H. is the immediate subject of this sketch.

Dyer H. Campbell was seven years of age at the time of his parents' removal from Pennsylvania to Minnesota, and there he attended the district schools until the family located in Rochester, where he continued his studies in the public schools for two or three years. At the age of fifteen years he initiated his independent career, securing a position in a meat market in Rochester, and being thereafter employed in the same and in a grocery about three years. He then secured a position in an abstract insurance office, in which he remained until 1881, when he came to Brookings, Dakota, having been married about two years previously. Upon arriving in Brookings he secured a position in what was then the Brookings County Bank, but is now the First National Bank, where he held the office of assistant cashier until the institution was re-organized, as the First National Bank, in 1883, from which time forward he continued to retain the position of assistant cashier until the 1st of January, 1903, when he resigned his office to assume the duties of the shrievalty, having been elected sheriff of the county in November of the preceding year, as the candidate of the Republican party. Sheriff Campbell served for fifteen terms as city treasurer of Brookings, while for seventeen years he was secretary of the Brookings Building and Loan Association. For the past twenty years he has been identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and is one of its prominent representatives in the state, being at the present time grand master of the grand lodge in South Dakota. He is also a member of Brookings Lodge, No. 24, Free and Accepted Masons, as well as of the Modern Woodmen of America and other fraternal bodies of auxiliary character. He has served four years as chief of the fire department of Brookings, and has been chosen as incumbent for another term of two years. He is one of the wheelhorses of the Republican party in the county, and is chairman of the county central committee at the time of this writing, while he has been a delegate to various state and county conventions of the party. He and his family attend the Presbyterian church.

On the 9th of November, 1879, Mr. Campbell was united in marriage to Miss Emma Haber, a daughter of George and Melissa Haber, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter in the state of Ohio, and of this union have been born six children, namely: Walter, who is serving as deputy sheriff; Bertha is the wife of E. F. McCarl; Arthur, Martha and Horace, who remain at the parental home; and Harriet, who died at the age of one year.

JAMES G. HOPKINS, of Keystone, was born on January 12, 1870, at Lexington, McLean county, Illinois, and is the son of Joseph and Louisa (Hemline) Hopkins, the former a native of Indiana and the latter of Illinois. In the spring of 1877 the father came to the Black Hills, leaving his family on the farm in Illinois, and arriving at Rockerville in March. He remained there until the following spring, then located at Rockford where he engaged in mining and prospecting. In June, 1881, his family joined him at Rockford, and they all lived at that place until the spring of 1885, when he bought a ranch near Custer on which they settled. The son had but limited opportunities for schooling, and they were found chiefly at Rockford. When he reached the age of thirteen he went to Deadwood and found employment in the mines. By industry and capacity he gradually rose through mine and mill work to the position of amalgamator, and in 1889 went to Hill City in the employ of the Harney Peak Mining and Milling Company. Before the end of the year the parents also moved to Hill City where they have since had their home. Mr. Hopkins worked for the Harney Company two years, and at the end of that period opened a butchering business in partnership with Mr. Van Allen and under the firm name of Van Allen & Hopkins. At the end of the first year he sold his interest to his partner and went to Oregon under contract with a mining company operating in the eastern part of the state. Six months later he left the service of this company and returned to Hill City, arriving in November, 1892. He again went to work for the Harney Peak Company and the following spring came to Keystone as amalgamator in the Keystone mill, a position he held until the fall of 1894. He then engaged with the Holy Terror Company as amalgamator, being the first man employed as such by that company, which was started about that time. Later he worked in the mines until he was disabled by an accident in the spring of 1897, and after recovering from the effects of this he was employed on a hoisting engine until June, 1900, when he resigned to take his place as manager of the Haves & Hopkins Supply Company, of Keystone, which he had organized in the preceding October. This company conducts an extensive business in general merchandise, and carries as complete a stock of goods as can be found in the city. The volume of its business is large and its patrons are among the best classes of the people. Mr. Hopkins is also interested in the cattle industry in company with his brother on a ranch near Custer, and has some valuable mining property. He is a Knight of Pythias and a Modern Woodman, with membership in the bodies at Keystone.

On May 19, 1889, Mr. Hopkins was married at Hill City to Miss May E. Wakefield, a native of Illinois, who died on October 20, 1894, at the birth of her only child, Ira M. On January 3, 1897, he married a second wife at Keystone, Miss Alice A. Hayes, also born in Illinois. They have three children, Earl A., Hazel and Joseph.

JOHN H. LUND, county judge of Day county, and a representative member of the South Dakota bar, is a native of Norway, where he was born March 31, 1859. He was an infant of nine months when his parents, Helge and Inga Lund, came to America. The parents first settled in Columbia county, Wisconsin, from where they removed to Emmet county, Iowa, in 1867. Judge Lund passed through the common schools, and then entered Luther College at Decorah, Iowa, where he was graduated in 1884, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. In 1885 he went to Campbell county, South Dakota, and in 1886 he left his claim in that county and went to Aberdeen, and entered the law office of M. J. Gordon, subsequently chief justice of the state of Washington. After two years as a student in Judge Gordon's office he was admitted to the bar on April 4, 1888. On the 19th of June, 1888, Judge Lund located in Webster. In 1894 he was elected state's attorney for Day county, and in 1896 was re-elected to the same office. In 1900 he was elected county judge of the county, and was re-elected in 1902, and at the present time is the nominee of the Republican party for another term of the same office.

JOSEPH HARE, owner and editor of the Keystone Republican, a publication devoted to the mining interests of the Black Hills in South Dakota, was born in 1853, at Franklin Center, province of Quebec, Canada, and is the son of William and Alice Hare, natives of Portadown, County Armagh, Ireland. At the age of fourteen Mr. Hare enlisted in the Canada militia, and was at the last Fenian raid at Trout River Lines in 1867. He served in his command seven years, being a first lieutenant at the age of eighteen. He moved to Franklin Grove, Illinois, in 1874, and after a residence of two years at that place, migrated to Boone county, Nebraska, where he passed nine years. He engaged in the newspaper business at Cedar Rapids, Nebraska, owning a one-half interest in the Era of that town. In 1885 he moved to Box Butte county, in that state, and founded the town of Hemingford there, establishing at the same time the Hemingford Gleaner, the first newspaper in the county. In 1889 he located at Hill City, South Dakota, and established the Hill City Tin Miner. He also became postmaster of the town and rendered efficient service to its people in this capacity for four years. In 1895 he located the Bismarck ranch, since which time he has lived on this ranch and at Keystone, purchasing the Recorder at the latter place in 1902. He has always been a Republican in politics, and has given his party faithful and helpful service from his early manhood.

On September 11, 1873, at Hemingford, province of Quebec, Mr. Hare was united in marriage with Miss Louisa S. McFee, a native of that town. They have seven children, Donald M., Alicia L., William, Lyle, Charles, Stella and Madeline.

THE HEGEMAN FAMILY.—The interesting pages of American history would not be complete if the biographer failed to mention John, Adrian and Peter Hegeman, the three brothers who, in an early day, came to Dutchess county, New York, from Holland, being direct lineal descendants from William, Prince of Orange. This notable and interesting family were of that staunch and hardy pioneer class who were known well in every community with which they came into touch, for their integrity and simplicity of truthful uprightness. After a limited residence in Dutchess county, they moved into Saratoga and Albany, New York.

Adrian Hegeman, the second brother of this interesting family, was the great-grandfather of the branch of this family now located in South Dakota, and was married to Bashaba Palmer, in New York. His life was spent in canal building, boating and shipping, and he was the father of eight children, whose names are given in order of their birth: Cornelius, Micah, Peter, John, Esther, Sallie, Peba and Jane, four boys and four girls. The old Dutch burial ground of Clifton Park, New York, contains the remains of both Adrian and Bashaba Hegeman, who died at Half Moon, Saratoga county.

John Hegeman is the grandfather of the Dakota branch, and was married to Ere Johnson in 1818. By hard labor and careful management they, in time, became known as among the most thrifty of the local families where they then resided, having also come from Holland and settled in Saratoga, New York, where the father, John Hegeman, was actively engaged in farming, milling and lumbering for a number of years.

His wife departed this life in the year 1854, and he in the year 1860, in the county of Fulton, New York. The names of the children of John Hegeman are as follows: Peter J., John A. (died in infancy), Margaret (also died in infancy), Caroline, Hezekiah, Bethsheba, Martha A., Micha and Hannah, nine children in all.

Peter J. was also father of nine children, Adrian (died in infancy), Magdaline (died in infancy), Eva A., Peter J., Daniel (died in infancy), Eva Ann, John A., Jennie, and Sarah C., who is the wife of John H. Hendricks.

Hezekiah Hegeman was the father of George and Hezekiah, Jr., both of whom reside in the city of Schenectady, New York.

Martha Hegeman was married to James H. Roberts, of Fulton county, New York, and to this union were born the following children: Netta, Minnie, John and Ella. Micah Hegeman is the father of two children, Julia and Roy, now deceased, while Hannah, the youngest sister, married Darius Baker, and to them were born five children, namely: Nellie, Carrie, Bennie, Alice and Hannah.

Peter J. Hegeman is the father of the South Dakota lineage of the Hegeman family, and grew to manhood in the state of New York, where he married Miss Catharine Allen, who was a daughter of Daniel Allen, a native of Scotland. Catharine Allen's mother, Magadaline Houghtaling, was what was known as Mowhawk Dutch, of New York, and her mother was a daughter of Lord Etherington.

The Allens came as early settlers into the state of New York and were of Scotch descent. Daniel Allen was one of seven sons, and the Houghtalings are still residents of New York state, and are a thrifty and well-to-do people.

Peter J. Hegeman was married in Perth, New York, and afterwards settled in Gloversville, the same state, engaging actively in the occupations of farming and manufacturing, in which city he lived until 1864, when he moved to Sparta, Wisconsin, and there again engaged in manufacturing until the year 1878, when he moved to Brookings county, South Dakota, and settled eight miles east of where the town of White is now located, taking up one hundred and sixty acres of land as a homestead, and also a tree claim, remaining upon said land and cultivating it for eight and one-half years, after which time he moved to White and there lived a retired life until the year 1892, in which year his wife Catharine passed away upon the 27th day of May. His home having been broken by the hand of death, he then removed to the town of Brookings and made his home with his daughter, Mrs. Eva A. Wright, where he died, October 16, 1900.

Peter J. Hegeman was a man who lived an upright, honorable life, and was well spoken of by his fellow citizens, thus going down to his grave in peace, and showing that the ancestral teaching of the Hegeman family, which tenaciously clung to the religion of the Methodist Episcopal church, had not been taught to him in early childhood in vain. The above statements will, however, only appear too modest when we state that under urgent and peculiar circumstances Peter Hegeman walked to Brookings, twenty-three miles, in order to be present and to aid in the organization of a Masonic lodge in that place, he having previously become a member of the above order in Gloversville, New York, in the year 1860.

CLARENCE A. BARTLETT, editor and publisher of the daily and weekly Capital Journal, at Pierre, was born in West Vienna, Oneida county, New York, on the 20th of June, 1850, and is a son of Aldis and Mary (Chisholm) Bartlett, the former of whom was born in Vermont, of English descent, while the latter is of Scotch ancestry and was born in the state of New York, where their marriage was solemnized. The Bartletts were numbered among the early Puritan settlers of the New England colonies, and the great-grandfather of the subject of this review was a soldier in the Continental line during the war of the Revolution and was a brother of Josiah Bartlett, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The Chisholm family was established in America in the early part of the nineteenth century, the founders of the same in the new world having come hither from Scotland. In 1865 Aldis Bartlett removed with his family to Minnesota and located in Fillmore county, where he and his wife still maintain their home, being numbered among the honored pioneers of that section.

The subject of this sketch received his early educational training in the public schools of Fillmore county, having completed a course in the grammar school at Preston, and having thereafter been a student in Curtis College, in the city of Minneapolis. In 1880, when twenty-one years of age, he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and became ticket agent and cashier for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad at Pierre, while in the same year, as deputy county treasurer, he opened the first set of books for Hughes county. In 1886 he was transferred to the city of Deadwood as agent for the Fremont & Elkhorn Railroad and the Northwestern Express, Stage & Transportation Company, remaining a resident of that city until 1890, and having in the meanwhile accumulated a nice sum through judicious speculations in mining properties. In the year last mentioned he returned to Pierre, and here made notable investments, having erected two substantial business blocks and also other buildings and thus identifying himself permanently with the capital city. In 1900 he effected the purchase of the Capital Journal, which was established in 1881, being the oldest paper in this section of the state, as previously noted, and of this he has ever since continued as owner, publisher and editor, both the daily and weekly editions being models in their line and exerting much influence in local and state affairs of a public nature. In politics Mr. Bartlett has ever been a radical adherent of the Republican party, in whose cause he has rendered most effective service in a personal way and through the medium of his paper. In January, 1893, he was appointed deputy county treasurer, in which capacity he continued to serve for eight consecutive years, while in November, 1900, he was elected treasurer, being chosen as his own successor in the election of November, 1902, so that at the time of this writing he has been consecutively identified with the administration of the fiscal affairs of the county for the long period of twelve years. Fraternally he is a member in good standing of the local organizations of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons and the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 15th of September, 1894, Mr. Bartlett was united in marriage with Miss Elsie M. Gleason, who was born in the city of Chicago, Illinois, on the 2d of December, 1871, being a daughter of Alonzo and Sarah Gleason. Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett have six children, namely: Aldis, Eveline, Elsie, Elwin, Cora and Ella.

TRUELS MADSEN, an extensive and successful stock grower of Stanley county, but who maintains his home in the city of Pierre, is a native of Kolding, Denmark, where he was born on the 14th of December, 1850, being a son of Lawrence and Magedlene Madsen, the former of whom devoted his attention to a woolen mill in the fatherland until 1869, when he came to America, in company with his wife, and located in Yankton, territory of Dakota, where he engaged in the stock business, remaining a resident of that county until 1882, when he joined his only son, the subject of this sketch, in whose home he passed the remainder of his long and useful life, his death occurring in 1894. His devoted wife passed away in 1898, and of their two children one is yet living, being a resident of America.

Truels Madsen received his early educational training in his native land, where he remained until he had attained the age of twenty-two years, when he came to America and joined his father, arriving in Yankton on the 12th of August, 1872. Shortly afterward he initiated his independent career, though he was hardly more than a boy at the time. He located on the James river, in Hudson county, where he took up land, and in that locality he continued to be actively engaged in farming and stock raising until the spring of 1881, his energy and good management bringing him due success. He then came to Pierre, where he has since made his home and headquarters, though he passes much of his time on his ranch, which is located twenty-two miles to the west of Pierre, on the Bad river, so that an ample supply of water is afforded. He runs from one to two thousand head of cattle, principally graded Hereford, while he also has a large band of sheep upon the ranch each season, while he raises draft and road horses in large numbers. He is a man of strong individuality, and his genial and generous qualities are in harmony with his sturdy physique, the significance of this statement being patent when we note that he weighs two hundred and thirty-five pounds. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of the Maccabees.

On the 14th of December, 1870, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Madsen to Miss Caroline M. Olson, who, like himself, was born in Denmark and who accompanied him on his emigration to America. Of this union have been born eleven children, and the family circle has not been broken by the hand of death. The names of the children in order of birth, are as follows: Kruse, Marie, Hannah, Laura, Margaret, Nellie, Lawrence, Christenia, Allis, Carrie and Truels.

RICHARD W. MATHIESON, one of the prominent and honored citizens of Fort Pierre, Stanley county, was born in Colesburg, Delaware county, Iowa, on the 5th of August, 1849, and is a son of Robert and Ann (Wood) Mathieson, the former of whom was born in Scotland, where records extant trace the lineage back through thirty-four generations, while the latter was born in England. The father of the subject was killed in the Indian massacre at Spirit Lake, Iowa, in 1857, his devoted wife surviving him by several years. The subject came with other members of the family, including his widowed mother, to the territory of Dakota in the spring of 1862, settling first in Bon Homme county and removing thence, in the fall of the same year, to Yankton, which was the family home for several years, Mr. Mathieson having completed his early educational training in the public schools of that city. In 1863 he entered upon an apprenticeship at the printer's trade in the office of the Union and Dakotan, a paper published in Yankton, and on the 29th of February of the following year he enlisted in Company B, First Dakota Cavalry, of which William Tripp was captain, and in the same year accompanied his regiment on the expedition to the Yellowstone river, under General Sully. In 1865 he took part in the expedition to Devil's Lake, and was mustered out of the service in November of that year, at Sioux City. Thereafter he was for some time employed at his trade, and also identified with early surveying work in the territory. Thereafter he conducted a wood yard and farmed and freighted four miles below Yankton for about five years. In the spring of 1871 he went to Colorado, where he was engaged in prospecting and mining during the major portion of the next eighteen months. In 1873 he made a trip up the Missouri river with a mule-team and assisted in the erection of Fort Lincoln, and in 1874 had charge of the sutler's teams in General Custer's expedition to the Black Hills. There he panned out about fifty cents, in gold dust, which he brought back with him, the amount being sufficient to prove to others that gold was to be found in that section. In September, 1874, he was associated with another man in the building of a skiff, in which they came down the Missouri river from Bismarck to Yankton. In March, 1875, Mr. Mathieson went to the Black Hills with a stock of merchandise, and disposed of the same, returning to Yankton in the fall. He then purchased teams and engaged in freighting to the Black Hills, making the enterprise a most profitable one and continuing the same until 1882, when he disposed of his outfit and purchased a stock of general merchandise in Fort Pierre, in company with his brother, George D., while they also purchased a bunch of cattle and engaged in the raising of stock. After two years the partnership was dissolved, the subject taking the cattle while the brother retained the store as his share. In 1887 our subject removed his cattle to the range on the Cheyenne river, and when the reservation of that name was opened up he took up his residence in Fort Pierre, where he has since maintained his home, while simultaneously he removed his cattle to a ranch at the Bad river, at the mouth of the Grindstone river, where he has since continued to be engaged in stock growing on an extensive scale. Mr. Mathieson has ever taken a deep interest in the civic and material development and progress of the state of which he is a sterling pioneer. He served one term as a member of the board of commissioners of Stanley county and one term as mayor of the city of Fort Pierre. Fraternally he is affiliated with the following named bodies: Hiram Lodge, No. 123, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, at Fort Pierre; Pierre Chapter, No. 22, Royal Arch Masons, in the capital city of the state; De Molay Commandery, No. 3, Knights Templar, in Yankton; and Lodge No. 75, Ancient Order of United Workmen, at Fort Pierre.

On the 28th of August, 1884, Mr. Mathieson was united in marriage to Miss Clara B. Pratt, who was the adopted daughter of David Pratt. She was born in Anoka, Minnesota, on the 14th of March, 1862, and is a daughter of Jonathan L. and Emily Nash, who died when she was a child. Of the children of Mr. and Mrs. Mathieson we enter the names, with respective dates of birth: Maud E., July 28, 1886; Kenneth W., June 19, 1890; Donald E., December 19, 1897.

FRED. W. DRICKEN, an able and representative member of the bar of South Dakota, being now engaged in the practice of his profession in White, Brookings county, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born in West Bend, Washington county, on the 2d of September, 1875, and being a son of William and Caroline (Seibert) Dricken. William Dricken came to South Dakota and located in Brookings county, as a pioneer.

Judge Dricken was a child of about three years at the time of his parents' removal to this state, and he passed his boyhood days on the homestead farm, in Afton township, where he secured his preliminary educational discipline in the district schools, later continuing his studies in the public schools of White, which he attended until he had attained the age of sixteen years. In 1893 he entered the Northern Indiana Normal School, at Valparaiso, Indiana, from which institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Science.

He was educated in the law, in the law department of the celebrated University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, and was admitted to the bar of South Dakota, September, 1897, and forthwith established himself in the practice of his profession in White. His intrinsic loyalty and patriotism, however, soon led him to lay aside for a time the work of his profession, for in the spring of the following year he enlisted as a private in Company G, First South Dakota Volunteer Infantry, with which he shortly afterward proceeded to the Philippine Islands, where he remained in service for the following eighteen months. He was twice promoted for bravery and meritorious service and was recommended for a third promotion, having been mustered out with the rank of sergeant. He participated in all the engagements in which his regiment took part, and with the others of his command made a record which reflects lasting honor upon his state. He returned to his home in the autumn of 1899 and the next day after his arrival reopened his office in White and resumed the work of his profession, in which he has been eminently successful, gaining a prestige which many an older practitioner might well envy. He now practices before the United States district and circuit courts and has presented not a few important cases in the former. In 1900 he was elected county judge, and so ably exercised his functions on the bench that he was chosen as his successor in the fall of 1902, for a term of two years, so that he remains in tenure of the dignified and responsible office at the time of this writing. Politically the judge was reared in the faith of the Republican party, and he has never wavered in his allegiance to the same, while he has taken an active part in furthering the party cause and has been a delegate to various state, congressional and county conventions. He is affiliated with the Masonic order and with the Order of the Eastern Star, of which last his wife likewise is a member.

On the 29th of July, 1902, Judge Dricken was joined in marriage to Miss Mabelle A. Brown, who was born in Chicago, and who is a daughter of Dexter G. Brown, a prominent citizen of Aberdeen, South Dakota. Mrs. Dricken is a communicant of the Episcopal church.

JOHN T. POTTER, of Keystone, is a native of Boston, Massachusetts, where he was born on September 14, 1847. He is the son of William E. and Elizabeth (Lewis) Potter, the former also a native of Boston, and the latter of historic Plymouth, in the same state. They were descendants of old colonial families, active and prominent in the early history of New England, the members of which bore their parts creditably in the affairs of that section in peace and war. The father's American ancestors came to this country and settled at Concord, Massachusetts, in 1635 and the mother's to Plymouth in 1630. The paternal great-grandfather was a soldier in the Revolution, participating in the siege of Boston and many other important engagements, and in subsequent wars members of both families have served their country with efficiency and manly courage. Both families have maintained their homes in Massachusetts from the time of their first arrival on American soil. Mr. Potter's father was a bookkeeper and accountant in Boston, and there the son grew to the age of twenty years and was educated for mercantile life. In 1877 he came west to Earlville, Iowa, and during the next two years was engaged in merchandising there. In 1879 he returned to Boston and entered the service of a large wholesale house, first in the establishment and later as traveling salesman. In 1880 he came to Fort Meade to take a position in the post trader's store, and he remained there employed in the store until the post tradership was abolished in 1883, when he came to Sturgis and opened a dry-goods and gents' furnishing store of his own. The town had then only a village organization, and soon after his arrival there he was elected chairman of the board of trustees. When the place was incorporated as a city he became its first mayor. In the fall of 1890 he was elected to the state senate on the Republican ticket, thus becoming a member of the second state legislative assembly. In the ensuing sessions of the body he demonstrated that he had legislative capacity of a high order, shrewdness in the management of public business and a wide knowledge of the needs of the state and his section in particular. He has always been prominent in public and social affairs at Sturgis, and is recognized on all sides as one of the leading and most useful citizens of the community. He has long been active in Freemasonry, and while living at Fort Meade organized a Masonic lodge at Sturgis, which he served four years and a half as its worshipful master. He was successful in trade at Sturgis and conducted a large business. In 1891 he sold out and went to Chicago, where he secured employment with Carson, Pirie, Scott & Company, wholesale dry-goods merchants, with whom he remained until 1901. He then returned to this state and locating at Keystone, taking charge of the Keystone Trading Company as manager. This company was formed by the consolidation of the Bee Hive, owned by J. C. Haines, and the Stone-Pinney Company's store, which had been doing business at Keystone for a number of years. By the consolidation and necessary enlargement of the stock the Keystone Trading Company became the largest general merchandising establishment in this part of the Hills. It is incorporated, with J. O. Haines, of Rapid City, as president and Mr. Potter as secretary, treasurer and manager, the latter being also one of the principal stockholders. He is enterprising and progressive, makes a study of the needs of his trade and is diligent in providing for them, and always enforces the upmost integrity and fair dealing on the part of his employes toward his patrons. In fraternal relations he is an enthusiastic Freemason, belonging to lodge, chapter, council and commandery in the fraternity, and taking a leading part in the work of each.

On September 5, 1865, Mr. Potter was married at Boston, Massachusetts, to Miss Fannie F.

Trott, a native of that city. By virtue of his ancestry and through his own desire Mr. Potter is an honored member of the Sons of the Revolution at Boston, Massachusetts.

JOHN F. MURPHY, of Rapid City, one of the most enterprising and progressive of South Dakota's citizens, is a native of Ireland, born on June 20, 1835, and remained in his native land until he reached the age of eighteen years. In 1853 he came to the United States and settled at Cincinnati, where he served an apprenticeship in a foundry. After completing this he worked at his trade there and at St. Louis for a number of years. In 1858 he started for Pike's Peak overland, in company with one other man, they having a wagon and two yoke of oxen. When they reached Denver they found hard times and the people suffering great hardships. There was no work and food was extremely scarce, many persons being almost in a starving condition. They sold their wagon and oxen and Mr. Murphy tried to go down the Platte river, in a boat, but was wrecked near where Columbus now stands. He then took the stage for Omaha, and from there he went to St. Joseph, where he secured work at his trade. When Mr. Gregory, the discoverer of gold in Colorado, ordered machinery for a stamp mill Mr. Murphy cast it. This was the first stamp mill that went into the state, and it is much to his credit that it was well made and did its work in a satisfactory manner. He worked at his trade in St. Joseph until the beginning of the Civil war, when he went to Cincinnati and after working at his trade for awhile opened a foundry of his own there. This he continued to operate for four years. The plant was then destroyed by fire, and soon after that Mr. Murphy returned to St. Joseph and began an enterprise in the lumber business, which continued for a year, after which he dealt in grain and produce up and down the Missouri for a time, following this with pork packing at Brownville for four years. The winter of 1874-5 he passed on the board of trade in Chicago, dealing in pork. Being stricken with the gold fever in the spring of 1875, he started with seven others for the Black Hills. They proceeded as far as the Red Cloud agency, hidden in freight wagons so as to escape the vigilance of the soldiers who were ordered to prevent everybody from entering the Hills. When the agency was reached Mr. Murphy took a contract to furnish wood for it and enrolled his companions as choppers. They spent a week there cutting down trees when observers were looking, and at other times were busy making pack saddles. When everything was ready they started north over an unknown country; but they reached Hot Springs in safety and then went on to Custer City. Claims were located on French Creek and later on Spring Creek, but before the end of the year General Crook ordered them out of the country. Mr. Murphy went to Sidney and bought the Calamity Jane mine, which was named after the renowned woman cowboy and Indian fighter, and was located two miles and a half from Custer. After wintering at Brownville, Nebraska, he started again for the Hills, arriving at Custer City in February. He brought a sawmill, which had been brought to Custer, the first ever set up in that section, and when the stampede to Deadwood started he closed the mill down. He had then a number of oxen, and buying others and some wagons, he engaged in freighting between Cheyenne and Deadwood, continuing this work until 1880, when he moved the mill to Rawhide Buttes, Wyoming. During the next two years he ran his sawmill and selling it in 1883, he went to Laramie, Wyoming, where he bought a large flock of sheep which he brought into the Hills, placing them on Battle creek near the site of the present town of Hermosa. In the spring of 1884 he took up a ranch on the creek about four miles from Hermosa, and since then this has been his home ranch. It comprises four thousand acres, for all of which he has deeds. Since the death of his wife, in 1891, he has lived much of the time at Rapid City, with his daughter, Mrs. Robert Boyd. Since starting with sheep in 1863 he has devoted his attention almost exclusively to this branch of the stock industry, and is now the oldest and most extensive sheep grower in the state. The Mills brothers ran sheep in this country before he came, but they are gone and he is now the patriarch of the business in this part of the world. His flocks cover one hundred and fifty miles of territory, north and west, many large bands being leased out on shares; and in addition to his home ranch he has extensive tracts of land elsewhere in various places. Although never taking an active part in partisan politics, he is public-spirited and enterprising for the welfare of the community, and is highly respected by all who know him.

On January 14, 1868, Mr. Murphy was married, at St. Joseph, Missouri, to Miss Mary Ryan, a native of Ireland, who came to this country with her parents in childhood. She died on April 11, 1892, leaving four children, Mary E., now Mrs. Robert Boyd, Paul C., Catherine C. and Dolly Agnes. Paul is associated with his father in business, the firm name being John F. Murphy & Son.

J. GEORGE LAMPERT.—Having come to the Black Hills region in his childhood and passed the greater part of his life in this section, J. George Lampert, of Keystone, one of the rising and prominent young business men of that portion of the state, is thoroughly imbued with the spirit of the west and in full sympathy with the enterprise and aspirations of its people. He was born on March 13, 1871, at Oshkosh, Wisconsin, and is the son of Jacob and Lena (Kresse) Lampert, the former a native of Switzerland and the latter of Germany. In 1875 the family moved to Stevens Point, Wisconsin, and in 1881 came to South Dakota, arriving at Rapid City in June. Mr. Lampert was ten years old at that time, and had been without much opportunity for schooling in his previous residences, so he received his scholastic training mainly in the schools of that town, also taking a course of special instruction in the State School of Mines, located there. Thereafter he was employed in a merchandising establishment at Rapid City until 1892, when he moved to Hill City and secured work in mills for three years, coming to Keystone in the fall of 1895. He at once secured an engagement with the Holy Terror Mining Company to work in its mill and in that and the Keystone mill was employed as an amalgamator until February 11, 1902. At that time he bought stock in the Hayes-Hopkins Supply Company, and took a position in the store as assistant secretary and treasurer of the company. He is an active and zealous member of the Masonic order, the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, in lodges at Keystone. On June 25, 1902, at Keystone, he was married to Miss Edna M. Clifford, a native of Nebraska.

GEORGE A. CLARKE, of Keystone, Pennington county, was born April 3, 1849, at the bustling little city of Newcastle, Pennsylvania, and he is the son of Frederick J. and Maria L. (Sayward) Clarke, descendants of old New England families, the former being a native of Connecticut and the latter of Massachusetts. In 1856 the family moved to Mount Pleasant, Iowa, where George grew to manhood and was educated. After leaving school he engaged in the grain business at that place until 1874. He then went to Atchison, Kansas, and after a residence of two years there, came to the Black Hills, arriving at Custer on May 4, 1876. He was in business at various places in the Black Hills until 1878, then moved to Rapid City, where for awhile he was occupied in the lumber industry and later followed merchandising, remaining there until 1893. In that year he closed out his interests at Custer and located at Keystone, which was a new camp at that time. Here he opened an assay office, and being an experienced and well-qualified assayer, he soon built up a lucrative business, which he is still conducting. He is well known throughout the Hills as one of the progressive and representative men of Keystone, and having been studious and observant in his profession, has made valuable contributions to the scientific and technical knowledge of his section. He has a rare and valuable collections of fossils taken from the Bad Lands, which show the sort of animal life prevalent in that part of the country during the prehistoric ages. In addition to his work as an assayer he is extensively interested in mining, being president of the Red Canyon Stucco Company, which he helped to organize and which has one of the largest and most valuable deposits of gypsum in the United States. He is also secretary of the Mt. Aetna Mining and Milling Company.

On October 4, 1874, Mr. Clarke was married, at Washington, Kansas, to Miss Susan Seidenbender, a native of Iowa. They have two children, Charles A. and Grace C. The son is an engineer by occupation and resides most of the time at Keystone. The daughter is the wife of a Mr. Graham.

WILLIAM BIRD, a representative farmer and stock grower of Spink county, is a native of Waukesha county, Wisconsin, where he was born on the 23d of October, 1843, being the seventh in order of birth of the nine children of William and Elizabeth Bird. The father of the subject was born in England, whence he came to America in 1842, becoming one of the pioneer farmers of Waukesha county, Wisconsin, where he passed the residue of his long and useful life, his wife likewise dying in that state, while of their children five are still living. The subject was reared to the sturdy discipline of the pioneer farm and early began to assist in its reclamation and cultivation, remaining at home until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he gave prompt evidence of his loyalty and patriotic ardor, by responding to President Lincoln's first call for volunteers. In April, 1861, he enlisted as a private in Company K, First Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry—Colonel Starkweather and Captain Fairchild—and was mustered into service in the following month. He proceeded with his command to the front, and, crossing the Potomac with Paterson at Williamsport, took part in the battle of Falling Water, continuing on active duty until the expiration of his three-months term of enlistment. In August, 1862, he re-enlisted, becoming a member of Company E, Twenty-third Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, commanded by Colonel Guppy, and with his regiment he marched from Covington, Kentucky, to the city of Louisville, where they embarked on a transport packet boat for Memphis, Tennessee, and thence continued onward, under General Sherman, to Haines Bluff, in rear of Vicksburg, taking part in the engagements at that point and then returning and participating in the conflict at Arkansas Post. In this engagement Mr. Bird received a severe wound and was sent to the hospital in the city of St. Louis, where he received his honorable discharge, in August, 1863. He then returned to Wisconsin, where he devoted his attention to grain buying, in Iowa county, until 1881, when he came to South Dakota and took up a homestead claim of government land, six miles southeast of the present town of Mellette, where he has ever since devoted his attention to general farming and stock growing, in which he has met with distinctive success, making a specialty of raising of the shorthorn type of cattle. He has since added an entire section to his ranch, so that he now has a well-improved and valuable landed estate of eight hundred acres. In politics he has ever given his allegiance to the Republican party, with which he identified himself at the time of its organization and in 1891 he was elected to represent his district in the state senate, proving a valuable working member of the deliberative body of the legislature and being honored with a reelection in 1893, thus serving two consecutive terms. He is at the present time treasurer of the school board of his district and is loyal to all duties of citizenship. Religiously he is affiliated with the Methodist Episcopal church.

On the 21st of December, 1892, Mr. Bird was united in marriage to Miss Annie Meigs, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, being a daughter of Gardner Meigs, a well-known resident of the Badger state. They have three children, Lavinia E., Mary R. and Geneva A., all at the parental home.

BENJAMIN M. MITCHELL, an enterprising and prosperous pioneer of the Black Hills and other portions of the northwest, is a native of Portsmouth, Ohio, born on March 19, 1843, and is the son of Walter and Matilda (Masters)

Mitchell, natives of Maryland. Benjamin's paternal grandfather came to America in company with the great-grandfather of Gen. Robert E. Lee, Mr. Lee securing land in Virginia and Mr. Mitchell in Maryland. The father of Benjamin was a farmer and moved to Kentucky and later to Ohio in the early days, and in the latter state he was occupied in farming until his death. The son grew to the age of twenty and was educated in his native state. In February, 1863, he enlisted in defense of the Union in the Twelfth Missouri Cavalry, in which he served to the end of the Civil war, being most of the time in the Army of the Mississippi. He was mustered out of the service at Fort Leavenworth on March 9, 1866, and after a short visit to his Ohio home, settled in Linn county, Missouri, where he remained busily engaged in farming until 1874. He then went to Denver, Colorado, and after passing two years there, came to the Black Hills in the spring of 1876, arriving at Deadwood on May 9th, having prospected all the way up from Custer. He continued his activity in this line on his own account in and around Deadwood until the spring of 1880, when he moved to what is now Keystone. That year he and others located the "Bullion" claims, which promise to be the best paying property in the Hills, and also the "Columbia," which is full of promise. Mr. Mitchell has put in twenty-three years prospecting and mining in this section of the country and is one of its oldest settlers. He is known and esteemed throughout the whole mining country of the northwest, is an active Republican in politics, a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and a highly estimable and universally admired citizen.

CAPTAIN NATHANIEL POPE, of Keystone, Pennington county, was born on March 27, 1839, at St. Louis, Missouri, and is the son of William and Eliza (Douglas) Pope, the former a native of Kentucky and the latter of Missouri. His forefathers came to America in colonial days and several members of the family were soldiers in the Revolutionary war. His maternal grandparents were among the first settlers in Missouri and aided in bringing that great state into being. He grew to the age of twenty in his native city and received his education in its public schools. In 1859 the family moved to Springfield, Illinois, where they were living at the beginning of the Civil war. Volunteering in defense of the Union in that memorable contest, he received a staff appointment as captain, and when his uncle, Gen. John Pope, applied to President Lincoln, who was a friend of the family, to have his nephew assigned to duty on his staff while he was in command of the Army of Virginia, the request was granted and the captain served on his uncle's staff during the whole time of his command of that part of the Federal forces. In the spring of 1864 General Sully applied to have the captain go with him on an expedition up the Missouri to quiet the Indians, and he was attached to this expedition and its works are matters of history. It fitted out at Sioux City with three thousand men and proceeded up the river to the site of old Fort Rice, which General Sully then built. Captain Pope was in command of the Prairie Battery, and on the trip he met Father De Smet who gave him his first information of the prevalence of gold in the Black Hills. They had a number of engagements with the Indians, one of which, in the Bad Lands at the headwaters of the Little Missouri, was disastrous to the savages, but the whites escaped with small losses. Captain Pope was mustered out of service at Fort Leavenworth in February, 1866, and in the spring of that year he went to Montana. Locating at Fort Benton, he followed merchandising for a year and was then appointed agent for the Indians on the upper Missouri. After four years' service in that capacity, he was appointed by President Grant, in the fall of 1870, superintendent of Indian affairs in New Mexico. He held this position three years, after which he remained in the territory two more, engaged mostly in mining. In 1875 he went to California, where he passed four years mining, then went to Fort Keogh on the Yellowstone in Montana. There he was manager of a large post trader and general store until the fall of 1880, when he came to Deadwood in this state. A year later he moved to Harney, a mile and a half from Keystone, where he conducted a store two years and afterward engaged in prospecting and mining. Since 1884 he has lived at what is now Keystone, which he helped to found, there being no town at the point when he settled there, and has been continuously connected with the mining industry in this section. For three years he was bookkeeper for the old Keystone Mining Company, and in 1902 accepted a position in the office of the Holy Terror Mining Company, which he still holds. He has a number of mining claims of his own which are full of promise. Fraternally, he belongs to the Grand Army of the Republic.

ANDREW G. WILLIAMS, who has been a resident of Gettysburg, Potter county, for the past score of years, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in Portage, Columbia county, Wisconsin, on the 12th of February, 1861, and being a son of O. P. and Mary A. Williams, his father a real-estate and insurance agent. He secured his educational training in his native town, where he duly availed himself of the advantages afforded by the public schools, and continued his residence in Wisconsin until 1880, when he came to what is now the state of South Dakota and took up his residence in Gettysburg in 1884, where he now controls a large and flourishing real-estate business, his books showing at all times most desirable investments in town property and farming and grazing lands. He is one of the popular and public-spirited citizens of Gettysburg and a man of much force and initiative ability. Fraternally he has attained the thirty-second degree in Masonry, belonging to Aberdeen Consistory.

ARTHUR C. VAN METRE.—It is with feelings of respect and admiration that the writer essays the task of entering a brief memoir of one of the earliest pioneers of the great territory of Dakota, a man of distinct individuality, intrepid courage, exalted integrity and noble generosity.

—Arthur C. Van Metre, who lived up to the full tension of the early life on the great western frontier, whose life was one of adventure and many vicissitudes and who left his impress on the history of the territory and state. We can not do better than to quote somewhat fully from an article concerning him which appeared in the Stock Journal of Fort Pierre at the time of his death: "Arthur C. Van Metre, familiarly known as 'Van,' is no more. Sunday morning (January 18, 1903), while walking along the road on Bad river, he fell into the arms of Carl Mathews, who was with him, and died almost instantly, aged sixty-four years, nine months and sixteen days. He was born at Winchester, Virginia, on the 2d of April, 1837, and there attended school until he had attained the age of eleven years, when he went to Missouri, where he remained with relatives until he was sixteen, when he joined the General Harney expedition as teamster and went to Fort Leavenworth, being with him on the Platte and coming to Dakota in 1855, when only seventeen years old. In the following year he assisted in building the old fort, which stood about four miles north of the present site of the city of Fort Pierre. He married Mary Aungie, a five-eighths Sioux Indian girl, in Sioux City, Iowa, on November 28, 1858, and located on the Vermillion river, Dakota, where the town of Vermillion now stands. It was then but an Indian village and it was there that his eldest daughter was born. She was the first white child born within the limits of the territory of Dakota, but history has not hitherto recorded the fact, because of the Indian blood in her veins. He built the first ferry on the Vermillion and transferred all the government troops as well as the Indians. He coveted for his children what circumstances had denied to him personally, and saw that they were all well educated. His son John T. was admitted to the bar in 1890 and was the first man of Sioux extraction ever given that distinction.

"During his early years in Dakota he endured all kinds of hardships. He was thoroughly conversant with Indian life and customs and was present at the signing of the treaty opening the Sioux reservation, at the Cheyenne river agency, in 1889. It was through his influence that Chasing Crow, a full-blooded Sioux Indian, from Bad river, signed the bill when the hostile Indians threatened to kill the first man who put his name to the treaty. He acted as interpreter at that time, as he was well acquainted with the language of the Sioux. He was a very successful manager of his affairs and was at one time one of the wealthiest men in Clay county. He was one of the founders of Vermillion and was an active participant in many of the transactions which are recorded as a part of our state history. Arthur C. Van Metre was one of the noble characters who, leaving the advantages and benefits of civilization behind, plunged into the unknown regions of the new west. To all who knew him there is a feeling of sadness for the loss of a dear friend."

A. C. Vanmeter

It may be said farther in connection with the subject's life here in the pioneer era that he was with General Harney in his various movements in the west until 1857, and during much of the time he was the driver of the General's private ambulance. He was appointed to carry the government express for the government from Sioux City, Iowa, to Fort Randall, Dakota, and in the connection met with many hazardous experiences and hardships, often holding out in the accomplishment of his purpose when old and more experienced men quailed from the ordeal. On one occasion he was compelled to kill his horse and lie by its side in order to keep from freezing, while he often found it necessary to hide in the brush to avoid the hostile Indians. His wife was a daughter of Henry Aungie, who was of three-fourths Indian blood, his ancestry being French on the paternal side. He was an interpreter for the American Fur Company, and his wife was a half-breed Indian, her ancestry being Scotch on the paternal side. Mr. and Mrs. Van Metre became the parents of five children, namely: Viola, who is the wife of Lewis D. Bentley, of Evans, this state; Jane E., who is the wife of Charles W. Waldron, of Fort Pierre; Alvira K., who is the wife of William P. Oakes, of Fort Pierre; John Todd, who was named in honor of General Todd, and is a lawyer by profession, ritory and state. He served as one of the early being located at White Earth agency, in Minnesota, in the government employ, while he was sent by the government to attend the golden jubilee of the late lamented Queen Victoria; and Charles Luther, who is a successful farmer and stock grower on the Bad river, Fort Pierre being his postoffice address. Mr. Van Metre was devoted to his wife and children, who were ever the objects of his most solicitous care and unqualified affection, and while he was a typical frontiersman his noble characteristics were most gratefully shown in his home life. In 1858 he located in Vermillion, being the first white settler in Clay county, and he there engaged in farming and trading, while at one time he was there engaged in the livery business. In 1876 he went to the Black Hills, upon the discovery of gold, and was one of the owners of the first mill established in this section for the handling of the ore. He established a freighting business to Deadwood and bought and sold supplies on his own account. He lost heavily in these ventures, by reason of the unsettled condition of affairs in the hills, one of the powerful companies causing him to be unable to continue his operations in opposition. After returning to Vermillion, in 1878, he disposed of a portion of his landed interests in Clay county and moved to Brule county, where he engaged in trading and stock growing, soon recouping his fortunes to a considerable extent. In 1882 he located in Pierre, and in the same year went to Montana with his sons and sons-in-law on a buffalo hunt, and on the expedition several hundred of the animals were killed, while the subject had his sight nearly destroyed by the premature discharge of his rifle. In 1883 he returned to Dakota and took up his abode in Fort Pierre, establishing a ranch on the Bad river and continuing to be engaged in stock raising and trading until his death, which resulted from heart disease, his wife having passed away on the 15th of July, 1894, a true-hearted, noble woman and one who was ever his faithful and loyal companion and helpmeet. Mr. Van Metre was a Democrat of the old school and rendered much service to his party in the territories of Clay county and in 1879 was elected to the same office in Brule county, while fraternally he was identified with the Masonic order, being affiliated with the lodge at Vermillion. In concluding this brief memoir we quote from an appreciative estimate written by his long-time friend, John L. Jolley, at the time of the death of the subject: "Good bye, Van! The memories of the many happy hours your old friends have passed in your genial company will live while life lasts. All is good that we can remember about you. The world at large may not sing your praises, but in the heart of hearts of all the old settlers of both Dakotas you have a place, and each old friend, in the quiet of his home, will shed many burning tears when he learns that our old happy, merry, brave, honest, gallant, kind, generous, chivalrous and unselfish 'Van' is no more."

WILLIAM J. LILLY, formerly assistant master mechanic for the Homestake Mining Company, at Lead, and now engaged with an English mining company at El Oro, Mexico, is a native of England, and may almost be said to have been born to his business. His life began on December 26, 1859, and he is the son of Richard and Ann (Clark) Lilly, also English by nativity. His mother died when he was yet a child, and when he was ten years old his father emigrated to the United States, leaving him in the care of relatives in his native land. There he received the greater part of his education, remaining until 1874, when he joined his father in the Lake Superior mining regions, where the parent was master mechanic for a large mining company. He went to work in the mechanical department of the mines under the direction of his father, with whom he remained three years. In 1878 he came to the Black Hills, arriving in May. Here he prospected and worked at placer mining on his own account three years, then for a number of years was employed by various mining companies putting up machinery and running shops. In 1888 he took a course of training at Bryant & Stratton's Business College, Chicago, and at its conclusion returned to the Hills and again went to work in the mining industry. Since then he has taken a course in mechanics with the Scranton Correspondence Schools. In 1890 he made a prospecting trip through Oregon and Washington, and in 1891, being back in the Hills, engaged in mechanical work for different companies for nearly a year. In June, 1892, he again entered service in the Homestake Company, working in the machine shops and putting up machinery. In December, 1901, he was promoted assistant master mechanic, a position which he filled most acceptably in every respect, until recently, when he resigned his position with the Homestake Company, and accepted a position as master mechanic for the El Oro Mining and Railway Company, a large English firm, operating extensively in the republic of Mexico. He is well educated, an excellent penman, a skillful draughtsman, and in other respects is well qualified for his work, having acquired facility in it by technical study and active practice. Throughout the communities where he has resided he is well esteemed for his business capacity, his active and helpful interest in public affairs and his genial and companionable social qualities.

On August 30, 1892, at Spearfish, this state, Mr. Lilly was married to Miss Bina Faartoft, a native of Denmark. They have two children, Arthur R. and Edna M. Mr. Lilly is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, belonging to the camp of the order at Lead.

FRED DE KRAFFT GRIFFIN, the able editor and publisher of the Walworth County Record, at Selby, has the distinction of being a native of the national capital, having been born in the city of Washington, D. C., on the 16th of January, 1862, and being a son of Robert C. and S. Adelaide Griffin, both of whom were likewise born and reared in that city. The lineage on the paternal side is traced back to Lawrence Griffin, who settled near Leonardtown, Maryland, in 1742, having emigrated from England, his native land.

Baron J. C. P. de Krafft, the maternal grandfather of the subject, assisted L'Enfant in laying out the city of Washington, and his son, Lieutenant de Krafft, was with Decatur at Tripoli, as a member of the United States navy. The Baron's grandson, Rear Admiral de Krafft, of the United States navy, died within recent years, having well upheld the prestige of the honored name which he bore.

The subject was reared in his native city, in whose public schools he received his early educational discipline, having been graduated in the high school as a member of the class of 1878. He initiated his association with the "art preservative of all arts" on the 1st of January, 1881, when he secured a position in the office of the Evening Critic, of Washington, while from 1884 to 1887 he was employed in the treasury branch of the government printing office. In July of the latter year he came to the present state of South Dakota and located in Bangor, Walworth county, and on the 18th of the following September he became the editor and publisher of the Central Dakotan, the name of which was changed to the Walworth County Record in 1890, since which time he has continued the publication under that title, while the office and general headquarters of the paper were removed from Bangor to Selby in 1900. In his political proclivities Mr. Griffin is a stalwart supporter of the Republican party, and personally and through the columns of his paper he has done much to further its success in the state, being one of the party leaders in his section and having served for several terms as chairman of the Walworth county central committee, while for six terms he was a member of the Republican state central committee. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Knights of the Macca-bees, and both he and his wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church.

On the 10th of February, 1882, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Griffin to Miss Emma B. McNelly, who likewise was born and reared in Washington, D. C., being a daughter of Arthur and Mary McNelly. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin have seven children, the first two having been born in the capital city and the others in Walworth county, South Dakota, their names, in order of birth, being as follows: Charles, Evelyn, Fred, Arthur, Elton, Clifford and Edwin.

HON. SYLVESTER JONES CONKLIN

was born in Penn Yan, Yates county, New York, May 5, 1829, and is of Holland-Dutch descent on his father's side and Welch and French on the side of his mother. His father died when he was but four years of age, leaving the widow without other means than her own labor to support three children, of which the subject was the eldest. At the age of twelve years he was apprenticed to a shoemaker and tanner; at the age of sixteen years he had mastered both trades and worked as a journeyman until he was eighteen years of age, when he went into the business of tanning and shoemaking for himself. In 1856 he left the shoe-bench and took the stump for John C. Fremont, then the first Republican candidate for the presidency. The defeat of Fremont nearly broke his heart and in January, 1857, he disposed of his business and settled in Waterloo, Wisconsin. There he studied law and was admitted to practice in the circuit and supreme courts of that state, and also in the district, circuit and supreme courts of the United States. In 1859 he was elected to the Wisconsin state legislature and served one term. He enlisted for service during the Civil war and served in the several capacities of regimental quartermaster, post quartermaster, post commissary, and judge advocate of a general court martial. He was mustered out at Leavenworth in December, 1865, and at once resumed the practice of his profession, being again elected to the Wisconsin legislature in 1869. He accepted an appointment in the United States revenue service, in which he served over four years, and then engaged in journalism in Waterloo, Wisconsin, until the spring of 1879. In April of that year he removed to Watertown, South Dakota, and established the Dakota News. Five years later he sold that paper to Hon. A. C. Mellette, and established Conklin's Dakotan, also at Watertown, for which he obtained a large circulation in both South and North Dakota. He continued its publication until 1866, when he was so severely injured in a railroad accident in Sioux Falls that for a year and a half he was unable to attend to his paper and was compelled to suspend its publication. His recovery was slow, but eventually he regained in a measure his former health and usefulness. At the first organization of the South Dakota Press Association he was chosen its president and was twice thereafter re-elected to the same position, and, although the demand was almost unanimous, he declined further election.

During his long residence in South Dakota, Mr. Conklin has persistently refused to hold office, but he has ever taken a deep pride in the military affairs of his state, and, seeing that they were at a low ebb and that the state militia had practically ceased to exist, he accepted the appointment he now holds, being commissioned adjutant general of the state by Governor Herreid on the 9th of March, 1901. He was induced to undertake these duties because he firmly believed that he could organize a militia that would compare favorably with other states possessing like opportunities and means. Since that time he has recruited a state guard composed of twenty-nine companies, and has held two battalion encampments, one at Yankton and the other at Aberdeen, and three annual encampments of all arms. During this time he has, as required by law, discharged the duties of adjutant general, quartermaster general and chief of ordnance and commissary. Governor Herreid, in his biennial message to the legislature of 1903, speaking of the reorganization of the militia, said: "For this work I selected a man whom I knew, from a long personal acquaintance, to be pre-eminently qualified by education, experience and individual force of character for the manifold duties devolving upon the adjutant general. On March 9, 1901, thoroughly aware of the difficulties to be encountered, Hon. S. J. Conklin accepted the appointment, and from that day until this hour he has, with singular energy and enthusiasm, devoted all his time to the service of the state. How well he has succeeded, even beyond the most sanguine expectations of his friends who prevailed upon him to undertake the work and who expected success, will be manifested by a careful perusal of the report of his department."

Now, at the age of seventy-five years, General Conklin is possessed in a remarkable degree of the energy and executive ability which has characterized his entire history. He is manifestly a self-educated and self-made man, for while the record of his life shows that he had little opportunity for schooling, his ability as a writer and speaker tell the story of toiling hours in manhood's years while others slept, to acquire the store of knowledge with which he has been armored for every occasion and every duty he has undertaken to perform.

General Conklin was married in 1848, to Miss Mary Wait, and three children were born to this union, namely: Alice, Emmet F. and Charles A. Mr. Conklin was again married, in 1884, to Miss Mattie Greenslate, and again, in 1895, to Mrs. Anna Duff. Fraternally the General is a Mason, having attained to the thirty-second degree in the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite.

NICHOLAS J. SCHLACHTER, a popular and progressive business man of Gettysburg, Potter county, is a native of the state of Wisconsin, having been born on a farm in Sheboygan county, on the 9th of October, 1865, and being a son of Thomas and Martha Schlachter, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in the old country. The father of the subject took up his residence in Wisconsin in the early 'fifties, being one of the pioneers of Sheboygan county, and in the Badger state he continued to maintain his home until 1883, when he located in Sully county, South Dakota, where he has since been engaged in farming and stock raising. In his family were four sons and five daughters, all of whom are living except two, the subject having been the fifth child. Nicholas J. Schlachter secured his educational training in the public schools of his native county, and at the age of fourteen years entered upon an apprenticeship at the carpenter's trade, becoming a thoroughly skilled artisan. He accompanied his parents on their removal to South Dakota, and during the first year was engaged in freighting from Pierre to the Black Hills, after which he worked at his trade in Deadwood, while in the fall of 1883 he assisted in the erection of the court house in Pierre. The following spring he went to Fairbank, Sully county, where he engaged in contracting and building on his own account, his success there being excellent during the period when the town was booming, and after the reaction came he was for a few months employed as clerk in the store of Allen & Heale, at Fairbank. The following year he engaged in dealing in horses, and in 1887 he put in a crop of wheat on his father's ranch, the venture proving a failure, as the crop was destroyed by hail. He then took up his residence in Gettysburg, where he has ever since maintained his home. The town of Fairbank had by this time fallen into decadence, and he there purchased twenty-seven buildings and removed a part of them to the prosperous village of Gettysburg, where he disposed of the same at a profit after putting them into good order on lots which he had purchased for the purpose. He thereafter was actively engaged in business as a contractor and builder for several years, and about three-fourths of the business and residence buildings in the town stand as monuments to his skill. In 1895 he erected the present attractive high-school building. In 1896 Mr. Schlachter established himself in the lumber business, and he has been an independent operator in this line ever since, having successfully held his ground against the encroachments of the various combines and having built up a large and prosperous business, as is evident when we note the fact that he handles annually an average of about one hundred thousand dollars' worth of dressed and plain lumber. He is an excellent judge of values, has exceptional facilities and has given a service to patrons which has begotten the utmost confidence in his integrity and his absolute fairness in all his dealings. He is the owner of a number of pieces of valuable real estate in the town, and is known as one of its most progressive and public-spirited citizens. In 1900, convinced of the value of creamery facilities in the county, through the promotion of the dairy interests, he erected a modern creamery in Gettysburg and another at Onida, in Sully county, these being the first in the two counties. For a time his labors were attended with but questionable success, but his courage and his confidence in ultimate success never wavered, and he has been able to find both amply justified. At Gettysburg he receives the cream from Sully county as well as from Potter county, and during the summer months he turns out about twelve thousand pounds of butter a week, disposing of the product in the markets of Chicago and New York. While other ventures of the sort have proved failures he has brought to bear that energy and good management which have made for definite success, and he receives the product from about ten thousand cows, which fact indicates the value of the undertaking to the farmers of this section. In politics he is stanchly arrayed in support of the principles and policies of the Republican party, and while never ambitious for public office he has served several terms as a member of the village council. Fraternally he is identified with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

In January, 1894, Mr. Schlachter was united in marriage to Miss Matilda Van Wald, of Gettysburg. She was born in Wisconsin, in which state she was reared, being a daughter of Len and Mattie Van Wald. Of this union have been born two sons, Guy and Leo.

ABRAHAM D. GRIFFEE, register of deeds of Potter county, is a native of the state of Iowa, having been born in the city of Oskaloosa, on the 21st of September, 1861, and being a son of Abraham and Nancy (Higgenbotham) Griffiee, the former of whom was born in Virginia and the latter in Ohio, while their marriage was solemnized in the state of Ohio. The Griffiee family is of German extraction and was founded in the old and patrician state of Virginia in the early colonial era, with whose history the name has been prominently identified. The father of the subject was reared and educated in Virginia, and as a young man removed thence to Ohio, where he maintained his residence for a few years, and then about 1840, made the long overland journey to Iowa with team and wagon, being accompanied by his wife and their three children, the other four of the children in the family having been born in the Hawkeye state. He became one of the pioneers of Mahaska county, where he reclaimed and improved a valuable farm, and there he continued to reside until his death, which occurred in 1886. He became a man of prominence and distinctive influence in the community and passed away in the fullness of years and well-earned honors. His devoted wife was summoned into eternal rest in 1899, and of their children all are still living, the subject of this review having been the sixth in order of birth.

Abraham D. Griffee was born in the town of Oskaloosa, Iowa, and from his sixth year was reared on the farm and in his youth was accorded the advantages of the excellent public schools of his native state, completing a course in the high school at Oskaloosa. He continued to be associated in the work and management of the home farm until 1884, when he came to South Dakota and took up land in Faulk county, whose organization had been effected about a year previously. Upon this pre-emption claim he made good improvements, the place being eligibly located near the village of Seneca, and there he continued to be engaged in farming and stock growing until 1893, while he still retains possession of the property, which has greatly appreciated in value in the intervening years. In the year mentioned he came to Gettysburg, the official center of Potter county, and here engaged in the grain business, owning an interest in the elevator here, and he continued to be identified with this line of enterprise for the ensuing five years, at the expiration of which he disposed of his interests in the same and turned his attention to the lumber business, at which he was engaged until 1900. In 1900 he was elected to the office of register of deeds of Potter county. He gave an able and systematic administration of the office and was chosen as his own successor in the fall of 1902, for a second term of two years. He manifests a lively interest in public affairs and is an uncompromising Democrat in his political adherence, having been an active worker in the party cause. Mr. Griffee is a man of ability and has been successful in his business affairs since casting in his lot with the people of South Dakota. In addition to his landed interests in Faulk county he is also the owner of valuable realty in Potter county. Fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, Knights of Pythias, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Modern Woodman of America and Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On the 2d of February, 1886, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Griffee to Miss Mary E. Douglas, who was born and reared in Lonaconing, Maryland, being a daughter of Capt. John W. and Ellen Douglas, and a sister of Herbert Douglas, who is now an official of the Crow Creek Indian reservation. Mr. and Mrs. Griffee have one daughter, Rhea, who was born on the 19th of July, 1887.

OLIVER ELTON MESICK, one of the leading business men of Gettysburg, is a native of the Badger state, having been born in Princeton, Green Lake county, Wisconsin, on the 30th of June, 1861, and being a son of David S. and Elizabeth Jane (Moore) Mesick, both of whom were born and reared in the state of New York. The Mesick family is of staunch Holland Dutch extraction, and the original progenitors in America, located at Troy, in the state of New York, in the early colonial epoch, while representatives of this sterling Knickerbocker family were numbered among the earliest settlers in the vicinity of the present capital city of Albany. The Moore family, of Scottish extraction, was likewise early established on American soil. The father of the subject removed from New York to Wisconsin in 1856, becoming one of the pioneers of Green Lake county, where he improved a valuable farm, upon which he continued to reside until his death, in October, 1901, at the venerable age of seventy-three years. His wife died in April, 1897, on the home farm. They became the parents of five children, of whom four are living, the subject of this review having been the third in order of birth.

Oliver E. Mesick was reared to the sturdy discipline of the home farm, and was afforded the advantages of the excellent public schools of his native state, having completed a course in the school at Princeton, Wisconsin, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1880. In 1893 he was matriculated in the law department of the University of Minnesota, where he completed the prescribed course and was graduated in 1895, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, while he was admitted to the bars of Minnesota and South Dakota in the same year.

After graduating from the high school Mr. Mesick engaged in teaching in the public schools of Wisconsin, proving successful in his pedagogic efforts and continuing the same until 1883, when he came to South Dakota and located in Potter county, being one of the very first settlers in the county, which was not formally organized at that time, while he was the first to pay taxes in the county, and still holds as a souvenir the first receipt for taxes issued by the county, the same bearing date of January, 1885. He filed on a tract of four hundred and eighty acres of government land five miles southeast of the present village of Forest City, and forthwith instituted the improvement of his claim, while he also engaged in teaching school at irregular intervals until 1893, having been principal of the public schools in Gettysburg during the last three years of his service in this line. In the year mentioned he entered the law department of the University of Minnesota. After leaving the University he returned to Gettysburg and here established himself in the practice of his profession, in which he met with gratifying success, and he served during 1897-98 as state's attorney of the county. Prior to entering the law school he had become interested in the agricultural implement business in Gettysburg, being associated with August Maas, under the firm name of Mesick & Maas, the enterprise being carried on by Mr. Maas during the subject's absence while in the university.

Upon his return he divided his attention between his professional work and his implement business, and the latter so rapidly increased in scope and importance that he found it expedient to practically withdraw from the practice of law that he might give his entire attention to his business interests. In 1901 he purchased Mr. Maas' interest in the business, which he has since individually continued, carrying a large and complete stock of agricultural implements and machinery, and owning the three commodious warehouses utilized in the connection, while he also owns and operates the large grain elevator near the tracks of the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad, and he also does a large business in the handling of coal, being the leading dealer of the county. His office building he still owns and utilizes, while he is the owner of other realty in the county in addition to the properties noted. He retains his original pre-emption claim, and also three other quarter sections adjoining, and the family improved ranch is devoted to general farming and stock growing. In politics Mr. Mesick gives an unwavering allegiance to the Republican party, and fraternally he is affiliated with Gettysburg Lodge, No. 83, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, of which he is worshipful master at the time of this writing; he is also a member of the Modern Woodman of America. He is a member of the Baptist church and his wife belongs to the Congregational church.

On the 17th of September, 1902, Mr. Mesick was united in marriage to Miss Minerva C. Carter, who was born and reared in Wisconsin, being a daughter of Louis and Margaret Carter, who now maintain their residence in Ripon, Wisconsin.

SAMUEL E. ATKINSON, who is numbered among the progressive and representative citizens of Gregory county, is a native of Toledo, Tama county, Iowa, where he was born on the 24th of August, 1869, being a son of William and Margaret (Guthrey) Atkinson. The former was born in Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, near the old homestead of President Buchanan, and as a youth he assisted in planting trees on this historic place. William Atkinson lived a life of signal usefulness and honor and attained the venerable age of eighty-four years, his death occurring in 1891. The mother still lives with her daughter at Little Rock, Iowa. The father of the subject was reared to manhood in the old Keystone state and was there employed in rolling mills and in the great steel works in the city of Pittsburg for a number of years. In 1868 he removed to Tama county, Iowa, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits until 1885, when he removed to Brown county, Nebraska, where he took up a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres, developing and improving a good farm and there continuing to reside until about two years prior to his death, when he took up his abode in Little Rock, Iowa, where he passed the residue of his life in the home of his only daughter, Mary, who is now the wife of Romance E. Botkin, of Little Rock, she having been their third in order of birth in a family of four children, all of whom are living. James resides in Mt. Vernon, South Dakota, and Hamilton is a resident of Remsen, Iowa, the subject of this review being the youngest of the children. The parents were worthy members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in politics the father was a staunch Republican.

Samuel E. Atkinson received his educational training in the public schools of Iowa and Nebraska, and continued to assist in the work and management of the home farm until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when he began an apprenticeship at the barber's trade, in Coleridge, Nebraska, continuing to follow this as a vocation for two years, after which he became identified with the real-estate and loan business, in which he has since successfully continued, having been established at various places and having been a resident of South Dakota since 1901. In 1901 he established himself in this business in Fairfax, where he was the first to establish the enterprise of making loans on farming properties in the county, having in the year 1901 placed one hundred and sixty thousand dollars on lands. Here he has also built up an excellent business in the general handling of real estate, while he is the owner of valuable town property and has represented on his books at all times many desirable investments. In his political proclivities he is a stalwart Democrat, and fraternally is identified with the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 22d of December, 1887, Mr. Atkinson was united in marriage to Miss Gertrude M. Jones, who was born in Toulon, Stark county, Illinois, on the 15th of October, 1872, being one of the eight children of Reuben S. and Martha (Taylor) Jones, the father being a successful farmer of the county mentioned. Mrs. Atkinson was reared and educated in the schools of Illinois and Nebraska, where he was successfully engaged in teaching for eight years, while she is also an accomplished musician and has acted as church organist and choir leader in the various towns in which she and her husband have lived since their marriage. Both belong to the Methodist Episcopal church of Fairfax. One child, a girl, was born June 27, 1899, but died in infancy.

JAMES B. CLARK, member of the firm of Clark & Sparling, dealers in general merchandise in Gettysburg, was born on a farm in Harrison county, Ohio, on the 1st of December, 1846, being a son of Joseph and Sarah (Dunlap) Clark, both of whom were born in Pennsylvania, while both died in Ohio, where the father gave his attention to agricultural pursuits until the time of his demise. His grandfather was of English lineage and came to America prior to the war of the Revolution, in which he served as a loyal soldier in the Continental line.

The subject was reared on the homestead farm and was afforded the advantages of the common schools. He continued to be associated in the work and management of the home farm until 1878, when he removed to Nebraska, becoming a pioneer farmer of Pawnee county, where he remained until April, 1883, when he came to South Dakota to repeat his pioneer experiences in Potter county. He filed entry on one hundred and sixty acres of government land, twelve miles southwest of the present attractive village of Gettysburg, and there improved a valuable farm, on which he was actively engaged in diversified agriculture and stock raising until 1890, when he was elected to the office of register of deeds, while at the expiration of his term he was re-elected as his own successor, thus serving four consecutive years and giving a most acceptable administration. Upon retiring from office he established himself in the general merchandise business in Gettysburg, and has ever since been prominently and successfully identified with this line of enterprise. He continued the business individually until March, 1903, when he admitted John E. Sparling to partnership, under the firm name indicated in the opening paragraph of this sketch, Mr Sparling being the husband of his eldest daughter and the subject of a personal sketch on another page of this work. In politics Mr. Clark is a staunch adherent of the Republican party; and fraternally he is identified with the Masonic order, in which he has attained the thirty-second degree of the Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite, being affiliated with Aberdeen Consistory.

On the 26th of April, 1876, Mr. Clark was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Jameson, who was born and reared in Harrison county, Ohio, being a daughter of William and Sarah Jameson, and they are the parents of three daughters, namely: Maud C., who is the wife of John E. Sparling, associated in business with the subject; Nellie, who is a clerical employe in the Potter County Bank, of which her father is a stockholder; and Elizabeth, who is at the time of this writing assistant principal of the public schools at Redfield, Spink county.

EDWIN M. STARCHER, president of the Gregory County State Bank, at Fairfax, Gregory county, is a native of West Virginia, having been born in Ripley, Jackson county, on Christmas day of the year 1863, and being a son of Jacob L. and Marian G. (Webb) Starcher, the former of whom was likewise born in Jackson county, that state, in 1832, while the latter was born in the city of Charleston, West Virginia, at that time having been still an integral portion of the Old Dominion state. The father of the subject was reared and educated in his native state and is a man of high intellectuality and marked business acumen. In his earlier years he was a successful teacher, having been thus engaged in different places, while he also followed mercantile pursuits as a young man, being now identified with this line of enterprise in Ripley, West Virginia, where he was also engaged in the banking business for some time. He has accumulated an estate of four hundred thousand dollars, the same representing the results of his own efforts since the close of the Civil war. He was a staunch Union man during that crucial epoch and was sheriff of his county at the time, and he is a staunch Democrat in politics. He visited various portions of the great northwest in a very early day, having been with a government surveying party which made its way up the Red river through what is the present state of South Dakota, the same being then on the very frontier of civilization. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and both he and his devoted wife are communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church. They have only two children, the elder of whom, Floyd, is now a resident of the city of Richmond, Virginia.

When the subject was a child of six years his parents removed to the state of Minnesota, and located in Hastings, in whose public schools he secured his early educational training. In 1880 he entered the Northwestern Ohio Normal University, at Ada, where he continued his studies for one year. He then entered the law department of Washington and Lee University, at Lexington, Virginia, and was there graduated in June, 1888, coming forth well equipped for the practice of his chosen profession. Shortly after his graduation Mr. Starcher came to South Dakota and located in the town of Wheeler, Charles Mix county, where he established himself in the practice of law, and that he soon gained popularity and professional prestige is evident when we revert to the fact that within the first year of his residence here he was elected state's attorney of his county, of which office he remained incumbent for two years, proving an able and discriminating prosecutor. This was before the admission of the state, and he served as the last district attorney and first state's attorney in that county, being in office at the time of the admission of the state to the Union. He continued in the active practice of his profession in that county for a period of ten years, at the expiration of which, in 1898, he took up his residence in Fairfax, where he has since maintained his home. In his youthful days he was employed in a drug store and gained a thorough knowledge of the business, being now a registered pharmacist. He has been consecutively engaged in the drug business ever since he came to South Dakota, and thus it may be seen that he is distinctively a man of affairs, having a great capacity for work and that of a successful order, both in professional and business lines. When he took up his residence in the present thriving little city of Fairfax, in 1898, the county had not yet been organized, and he was prominently identified with public affairs here from the start. He is a staunch advocate of the principles of the Democratic party, and as a candidate of the same he was elected the first county judge of Gregory county, to which dignified position he has since been three times re-elected, being incumbent of the office at the present time and having made an enviable record on the bench, as has he also in the active practice of his profession. He has also served for four years as city attorney, having been the first and only occupant of the position in this city. He is the owner of the only drug store here, is president of the Gregory State Bank and is the owner of valuable realty in the village and county. As if all these interests were not sufficient to tax his powers of supervision, Judge Starcher is also engaged in the abstract business, having an excellent system of records and being the pioneer in this line in the county. He and his wife are communicants of the Episcopal church, and fraternally he is affiliated with the Masons, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 11th of November, 1901, was solemnized the marriage of Judge Starcher to Miss Marian B. Helenbolt, who was born in Minnesota, being a daughter of Harry and Mary E. (Blake) Helenbolt, who removed to Nebraska when she was a child, her father being now one of the successful farmers of that state.

JOHN E. SPARLING, of Gettysburg, Potter county, being a member of the general merchandise firm of Clark & Sparling, is a native of "merrie old England," having been born in the town of Barwick-in-Elmet, Yorkshire, on the 27th of October, 1870, and being a son of George and Sarah (Dyson) Sparling, who were born and reared in the same locality. The father and the subject came to America in 1883, and reached Spink county, South Dakota, in April of the same year, where they remained about two years and then removed to Potter county, where the father of the subject was engaged in farming until 1889, when he removed to Gettysburg and engaged in the hardware business. In 1894 he removed to Bowdle, Edmunds county, South Dakota, and in 1899 he took up his abode in Marshall, Minnesota, where he has since devoted his attention to the implement business. The subject received his early educational training in his native town and after coming to the United States continued his studies in the public schools of South Dakota, as opportunity permitted. He was associated with his father in the general merchandise and implement business until the spring of 1899, and thereafter he was engaged in the implement business in Bowdle, Edmunds county, this state, until the spring of 1903, when he became associated with his father-in-law, Mr. Clark, in the mercantile business in Gettysburg, as noted in the initial paragraph of this article. He is independent in politics and has attained the thirty-second degree in Scottish-rite Masonry, being identified with the consistory at Aberdeen, and with the temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine at Sioux Falls, while he also holds membership in the Knights of Pythias, the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 6th of May, 1896, Mr. Sparling wedded Miss Maud C. Clark, daughter of James B. Clark, of Gettysburg, and they are prominent in the social circles of their home town, enjoying marked popularity in the community.

SAMUEL WOODARD COSAND, a representative citizen of Potter county, was born on a farm in Boone county, Indiana, on the 27th of June, 1843, being a son of Samuel and Mary Cosand. The father was born in North Carolina. The original progenitor of the Cosand family in America was the great-grandfather of the subject, who was born and reared in France and who was one of the valiant soldiers who accompanied General Lafayette when he came to this country to assist the struggling colonists in their war for independence. He continued to serve under the noble general mentioned until victory had crowned the colonial arms, and then located in North Carolina, where a grateful government presented him with a large grant of land. The father of our subject was reared to manhood in his native state, where he continued to make his home until 1820, when he came west to Indiana, making the trip with a team and small wagon and thus conveying all of his worldly effects. He was one of the pioneers of Boone county, where he reclaimed a farm in the midst of the sylvan wilderness, and there he and his devoted wife passed the remainder of their lives, the father passing away on June 6, 1863, and the mother on April 16, 1876. The eldest son, Robert, served as a soldier in an Indiana regiment during the war of the Rebellion, and is now living in Indiana.

The subject of this sketch was reared on the pioneer homestead in Indiana, early becoming inured to hard work, while his educational advantages in his youth were necessarily somewhat limited. Alert in his mentality and appreciative of the value of knowledge, this deprivation did not constitute a serious handicap, and through strenuous personal effort and application he rounded out in due time what may well be designated as a liberal education. On the 16th of July, 1862, at the age of nineteen years, Mr. Cosand signalized his intrinsic loyalty and patriotism by enlisting as a private in Company D, Seventy-second Indiana Mounted Infantry, commanded by Colonel A. O. Miller. He was mustered in at Indianapolis and thence proceeded with his regiment to Louisville, Kentucky, where they were assigned to Wilder's brigade, in the Army of the Cumberland. They were sent to Tennessee and soon led the advance against General Bragg, through Hoover's Gap, where they had a severe engagement, being attacked, just after passing through the gap, by Hardy's entire corps. This was the first occasion during the war that the new Spencer rifles were brought into active service, and they proved disastrous to the enemy, the four regiments holding their position until the regular infantry came up to reinforce them, the same night, and each man had fired three hundred rounds in the engagement. The regiment continued to serve under General Thomas until after the battle of Jonesburg, having taken part in the battle of Chickamauga, where has recently been created a handsome monument in memory of the brigade of which the subject was a member. After the battle of Nashville they were organized into a cavalry corps and placed in the command of General Wilson, under whom they served in Georgia, having a number of spirited engagements. With the others of his regiment, Mr. Cosand was honorably discharged, on the 6th of July, 1865. He then returned to Indiana, where he remained a brief interval, after which he went to Iowa, where he engaged in teaching school, and also in farming and dealing in live stock. In 1870 he returned to Indiana, having in the meanwhile made a careful and comprehensive study of the law, and he was admitted to the bar of his native state, after which he located in Warsaw, Indiana, where he was engaged in the practice of his profession until 1879, when he located in Burlington Junction, Missouri, where he was engaged in practice for two years, after which he returned to Indiana, where he remained until 1883, when he came to Potter county, South Dakota, which was organized in that year, and took up a tree claim of one hundred and sixty acres, and also filed on another claim of one hundred and sixty acres. In 1885 he was elected state's attorney of the county, being the first incumbent of the office in the county, and holding the position two years, after which he returned to his ranch, four miles south of Gettysburg, where he continued to devote his attention to farming and stock raising until March, 1894. In 1898 he served again as state's attorney, filling out the unexpired term of Mr. Medbury, who died while in office. In 1890 Mr. Cosand was a candidate for attorney general of the state, on an independent ticket, but met defeat with the rest of the ticket. In 1900 he was again elected to the office of state's attorney, serving two years, since which time he has devoted himself to the practice of his profession in Gettysburg and to the supervision of his fine ranch. His farm, which is the original tree claim, is well improved and under a high state of cultivation, while he is also the owner of valuable realty in Gettysburg, where he has maintained his home since 1894. In politics he is an independent and fraternally is identified with Meade Post, No. 32, Grand Army of the Republic, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

On the 15th of November, 1871, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Cosand to Miss Mary J. Dormire, who was born and reared in Union county, Indiana. She died on the 8th of August, 1882, and is survived by two children, Carl, who is residing in Gettysburg, and Nellie, who is now the wife of Grant M. Lambert, who is farming six miles south of Gettysburg. On the 15th of November, 1883, the subject consummated a second marriage, being then united to Miss Elizabeth Cisco, who was born in Shelby county, Ohio, being a daughter of William and Percilla (Bowersox) Cisco. This marriage was the first one solemnized in Potter county.

MATTHEW OWENS, who has charge of the business of the Tuttle Lumber Company at Humboldt, Minnehaha county, claims as the place of his nativity the old Pine Tree state, having been born in Franklin county, Maine, on the 5th of June, 1852, and being a son of Thomas and Abigail (Tarr) Owens, the former of whom was born in County Wicklow, Ireland, while the latter was born in Maine. The father of the subject was reared and educated in the Emerald Isle, where he remained until he had attained the age of twenty-three years, when he emigrated to America, where he believed better opportunities were afforded for the attaining of success through individual effort. He located in the state of Maine, where his marriage occurred, and in 1852 he removed thence with his family to Wisconsin, becoming one of the pioneers of Lafayette county, that state, where he continued to reside until 1864, when he located in Wabasha county, Minnesota, where he continued to be identified with agricultural pursuits until his death, his wife also passing the closing years of her life in said county. Of their twelve children five are yet living, the subject of this sketch having been the ninth in order of birth.

Matthew Owens passed his boyhood days in Wisconsin and Minnesota, where he secured such educational advantages as were afforded in the public schools, in the meanwhile assisting his father in the work of the farm. At the age of twenty-one years he secured employment in a hardware store at Plain View, Minnesota, and there learned the tinner's trade, to which he gave his attention until 1879, when he came to the present state of South Dakota and cast in his lot with its pioneers. He arrived at his destination on the 22d of July and shortly afterward filed entry upon a homestead claim in Buffalo township, Minnehaha county, retaining the property in his possession for two years and then exchanging the same for a farm about a mile distant from the same. There he continued to be engaged in farming and stock growing for the ensuing two years, at the expiration of which he removed to Madison, Lake county, where he followed the work of his trade for the following four years, within which time he assisted in the erection of the normal school building and other large structures. He thereafter devoted his attention to the cultivation of his farm until 1891, when he took up his residence in Montrose, McCook county, and there engaged in the hardware business. In the following year he sold his farm, and in December, 1893, his hardware establishment was destroyed by fire, entailing practically a total loss, with no insurance indemnity, and under these adverse conditions he found it expedient to again resume work at his trade, which he there followed for two years. In 1898 Mr. Owens came to Humboldt and accepted his present position in charge of the local interest of the Tuttle Lumber Company, in which connection he has accomplished an excellent work in extending the scope of the business, while he is also a stockholder in the Farmers' Bank and the owner of good town property. In politics Mr. Owens is arrayed in support of the principles of the Populist party, and he has shown a deep interest in public affairs and in the furthering of the cause of his party. He has held various township and school offices, and in 1890 was candidate on the independent ticket for representative of his district, making a spirited canvass, but meeting defeat with the remainder of the ticket. He is identified in a fraternal way with the local lodge of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, and also with that of the Ancient Order of United Workmen.

On the 13th of October, 1875, in Minnesota, Mr. Owens was united in marriage to Miss Augusta Fricke, who was born in the state of New York, of stanch German lineage, and of their children we enter the following brief record: Earl G. died at the age of nine years; Mabel I. completed her education in a normal school at Winona, Minnesota, and is now a successful teacher in the public schools of Minneapolis, Minnesota; Alfred E., who was born in the original sod house built by his father on section 3, Buffalo township, on the 30th of December, 1880, a winter memorable in the annals of the state by reason of its extreme severity, was a young man of fine character and marked ability, and a most promising life was cut short by his death, at Lead, in the Black Hills, on the 22d of March, 1904; Mattie was graduated in the state normal school in Madison, as a member of the class of 1904, and remains at the parental home, as do also the younger daughters, Annie and Minnie.

THOMAS H. AYRES, president of the Gas Belt Land and Abstract Company, with headquarters at Pierre, was born on a farm four miles from Akron, Summit county, Ohio, on the 3d of October, 1865, and is a son of Homer C. and Emma T. (Fessenden) Ayres, who removed to Osceola, Iowa, when he was a child. There the subject attended the public schools until he had attained the age of fifteen years, and his further discipline was secured under those conditions which have been consistently designated as offering the advantages of a liberal education, that is, he thoroughly learned the printer's trade. In 1884, at the age of eighteen years, he came to the territory of Dakota, and began the publication of a paper known as Plain Talk, in Vermillion, Clay county, continuing its publication until 1891 and making it a potent factor in local and political affairs. He then went to North Dakota and assumed the editorial management of the North Dakota Independent, at Grand Forks, the same being the official organ of the Farmers' Alliance of the state. During the campaign of 1892 he was secretary of the Populist state central committee of North Dakota, Governor Shortridge and the other candidates on the fusion state ticket being elected. He was later associated with W. R. Bierly in the publication of the Daily Grand Forks News, but in 1893 returned to Vermillion and resumed the publication of Plain Talk, being thus engaged until August, 1901, when he sold the plant and business to W. R. Colvin, the present owner and publisher. On the 12th of January, 1897, Mr. Ayres was appointed secretary to Governor A. E. Lee and retained this incumbency during that executive's two terms. In 1900 he did special newspaper work during the session of the legislature, and in July, 1901, he here engaged in the real-estate business, in which he individually continued operations until December, 1901, when he associated himself with John I. Newell in the organization of the Gas Belt Land and Abstract Company, which is incorporated for ten thousand dollars and which already controls a large and important business and which is exerting distinctive influence in furthering the progress of this section of the state,

Mr. Ayres having been president of the company from the time of its inception. In February, 1903, he was chosen a member of the Pierre capital committee and is taking a most active interest in the work of the committee in connection with strenuously maintaining the claims of Pierre against other towns which are striving to wrest the capital from the city. Fraternally he is identified with the Knights of Pythias.

